Appeal brought on 3 October 2009 by Evropaïki Dynamiki - Proigmena Systimata Tilepikoinonion Pliroforikis kai Tilematikis AE against the order of the Court of First Instance (Fourth Chamber) delivered on 2 July 2009 in Case T-279/06: Evropaïki Dynamiki - Proigmena Systimata Tilepikoinonion Pliroforikis kai Tilematikis AE v Banque centrale européenne BCE

(Case C-401/09 P)

Language of the case: English

Parties

Appellant: Evropaïki Dynamiki - Proigmena Systimata Tilepikoinonion Pliroforikis kai Tilematikis AE (represented by: N. Korogiannakis and M. Dermitzakis, Δικηγόροι)

Other party to the proceedings: European Central Bank

Form of order sought

The applicant claims that the Court should:

Set aside the decision of the Court of First Instance;

Annul the decision of the European Central Bank to evaluate the applicant's bid as not successful and award the contract to the successful contractor;

Order ECB to pay the applicant's legal and other costs and expenses incurred in connection with the initial procedure, even if the current Appeal is rejected as well as those of the current Appeal, in case it is accepted.

Pleas in law and main arguments

The appellant submits that the defendant's objection of inadmissibility, submitted together with the defence, should have been declared inadmissible due to the fact that it does not comply with article 114 of the rules of procedure of the CFI which expressly provides that such an objection must be submitted "by a separate document". The appellant also submits that, by accepting the objection of inadmissibility and failing to comment on the appellant's arguments with respect to the objection, the CFI infringed article 36 of the Statute of the Court of Justice.

In the appellant's view the CFI was wrong when it held that European Dynamics, because its bid was unacceptable, had no legal interest in seeking review of the decision of the contracting authority. The appellant also argues that the CFI erred by considering that it was necessary for the appellant to obtain an Arbeitnehmerüberlassungsgenehmigung (AÜG) in order to offer its services lawfully.

Finally the appellant submits that the CFI failed to apply the relevant legal provisions concerning the duty of the contracting authority to provide reasons for its decision.

Questions referred

Must the provisions of Directive 2004/18/EC [1] on the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts, public supply contracts and public service contracts that are referred to in section 10 [of the order for reference] be interpreted as precluding a temporary grouping of undertakings, the members of which include a State agency of the kind described in section 12 [of the order for reference], from taking part in a tendering procedure for the award of a contract for a service such as the documentation, dissemination and implementation of the 'Homogeneous System of Visual Identity of the Cultural Sites and Institutions: Cultural Heritage of Sardinia', the subject of the tendering procedure advertised by the Sardinia Region?

Are the provisions of Italian law contained in Article 3(22) and (19) of the Public Contracts Code, enacted by Legislative Decree No 163/2006 (which provide, respectively, that 'the term "economic operator" shall include a contractor, supplier, service provider or a group or consortium of these' and 'the terms "contractor", "supplier" and "service provider" shall mean any natural or legal person, or body without legal personality, including a European Economic Interest Group (EEIG) formed pursuant to Legislative Decree No 240 of 23 July 1991, which "offers on the market", respectively, the execution of works or a work, the supply of products or the provision of services'), and in Article 34 of that Public Contracts Code (which lists the entities allowed to participate in public procurement procedures) contrary to Directive 2004/18/EC if interpreted as restricting participation in tendering procedures to professional providers of such services and as excluding public entities the primary objects of which are not-for-profit, such as research?

Action brought on 7 July 2009 - Commission of the European Communities v Republic of Cyprus

(Case C-251/09)

Language of the case: Greek

Parties

Applicant: Commission of the European Communities (represented by: C. Zadra and I. Khatzigiannis)

Defendant: Republic of Cyprus

Form of order sought

declare that the Republic of Cyprus has failed to fulfil its obligations under Articles 4(2) and 31(1) of Directive 93/38/EEC [1] and Article 1(1) of Directive 92/13/EEC; [2] order the Republic of Cyprus to pay the costs.

Pleas in law and main arguments

The Arkhi Ilektrikou Kiprou (Electricity Authority of Cyprus) is stated to have infringed Directives 93/38/EEC and 92/13/EEC in the course of the tendering procedure under reference number 40/2005 which related to a contract for the design, supply and construction of the fourth unit of the Vasilikos Power Station.

The Commission submits that the infringement of Articles 4(2) and 31(1) of Directive 93/38 is due to the grounds for rejection of the complainant's tender and acceptance of that of the other tenderer on the basis of a criterion which was not referred to clearly in the call for tenders.

So far as concerns the infringement of Directive 92/13, a measure relating to procedure, the Commission submits (i) that, inasmuch as the contracting authority itself created by its conduct a state of uncertainty as to the interpretation to be given to the grounds which resulted in the rejection of the complainant's tender, it infringed Directive 92/13 as interpreted in the light of the objective of effectiveness pursued by that directive, and (ii) that the contracting authority cannot give reasons for its decision by simply referring to the evaluation reports.

Is an arrangement by which a municipal contracting authority concludes with a private undertaking in the form of a company which is separate from it a contract establishing a new undertaking in the form of a share company, on an equal share basis both in terms of ownership and of power of control, from which the municipal contracting authority commits itself, when setting up the company, to purchasing occupational health and wellbeing services for its own staff, on an overall assessment, an arrangement which must be put out to tender, on the ground that the general contract is a contract for the procurement of services within the meaning of Directive 2004/18/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council on the coordination of procedures for the award of public supply contracts and public service contracts[1], or is the arrangement to be regarded as the establishment of a joint venture and the transfer of the business activity of a municipal enterprise to which that directive and the consequent obligation to put out to tender are not applicable?

Should any significance in this case also be attached

(a) to the fact that the City of Oulu, as a municipal contracting authority, has undertaken to acquire in return for consideration the services referred to above over a four-year transitional period, after which the municipal contracting authority intends, according to its decision, once again to put out to tender the occupational health care services it requires;

(b) to the fact that, prior to the arrangement in question, most of the turnover of the municipal enterprise that was part of the City of Oulu organisation came from occupational health care services other than those produced for the City's own employees;

(c) to the fact that the founding of the new company has been organised with the intention of transferring as a capital contribution the activity of the municipal enterprise, which comprises the production of occupational health care services both for the City's employees and for private customers?

(Case T-514/09)

Language of the case: English

Parties

Applicant: De Post NV van publiek recht (Brussel, Belgium) (represented by: R. Martens and B. Schutyser, lawyers)

Defendant: European Commission

Form of order sought

the annulment of the decision of the Publications Office of the European Union to award the contract referred to in the invitation to tender No 10234 "Daily transport and delivery of the Official Journal, books, other periodicals and publications" (OJ 2009/S 176-253034) to "Entreprises des Postes et Télécommunications Luxembourg" and not to the applicant, as notified to the latter on 17 December 2009;

in the event that, at the time of the rendering of the judgment, the Publications Office would have already signed the contract with Entreprises des Postes et Télécommunications Luxembourg pursuant to invitation to tender No 10234, a declaration that this contract is null and void;

an award of damages as compensation for the loss that the applicant has incurred as a consequence of the contested decision, provisionally estimated at EUR 2 386 444,94, to be increased by the moratory and compound interest as from the date of the filing of this application;

an order that the European Commission pays the costs of the proceedings, including the expenses for legal counsel incurred by the applicant.

Pleas in law and main arguments

By means of its application, the applicant seeks on the one hand, the annulment of the decision of the Publications Office of the European Union (hereinafter "the Publications Office") of 17 December 2009, to award the contract referred to in the invitation to tender No 10234 "Daily transport and delivery of the Official Journal, books, other periodicals and publications" (OJ 2009/S 176-253034), to Entreprises des Postes et Télécommunications Luxembourg (hereinafter "Post Luxembourg") and, consequently, not to award the contract to the applicant and, on the other, compensation of an estimated amount of 2.386.444,94 EUR for the damages allegedly suffered by the applicant following the rejection of its tender.

In support of its application, the applicant puts forward a single plea in law, consisting of four parts.

The first and only plea in law raised by the applicant points at the alleged infringement by the Publications Office of the principles of transparency and equal treatment of tenderers contained in Article 15 TFEU and in Article 89 of Council Regulation (EC, Euratom) No 1605/2002 of 25 June 2002 on the Financial Regulation applicable to the general budget of the European Communities (hereinafter "the Financial Regulation")[1], to the infringement of the obligation to award the contract on the basis of an evaluation of the selection criteria contained in Article 100(1) of the Financial Regulation, to its failure to adequately state the reasons for its decision (breach of Article 296 TFEU) and to the several manifest errors of assessment it has allegedly made, thus invalidating its decision that the tender of Post Luxembourg, and not that of the applicant, is the economically the most advantageous tender.

In the first part of the plea in law, the applicant claims that the Publications Office has failed to base its decision on an evaluation of the selection and award criteria, in breach of Article 100 (1) of the Financial Regulation.

In the second part of the plea in law, the applicant argues that the Publications Office has applied various sub criteria in its evaluation of the tenders that were not contained in the tender specifications and has thus violated the principle of transparency as laid down in Article 15 TFEU and Article 89 pf the Financial Regulation.

In the third part of its plea, the applicant claims that the Publications Office has applied the open-ended technical award criteria in an inconsistent manner, effectively removing all transparency from the evaluation process.

In the fourth part of its plea, the applicant contends that the Publications Office, in violation of Articles 15, 296 TFUE, 89 of the Financial Regulation as well as the general procedural requirements of the duty to state reasons and of transparency, has not provided an adequate an unequivocal statement of reasons for its evaluation of the tenders, the motivation of the decision allegedly being contradictory and vitiated by manifest errors of assessment.

Further, the applicant submits that since the contested decision is vitiated by breaches of European law, the Publications Office has committed a fault and is thus liable under Article 340 TFUE. In fact, the applicant claims that due to the decision to award the contract to Post Luxembourg instead of the applicant, the latter has incurred a serious loss, consisting of a chance to have the contract awarded to it and of all the expenses made by it relating to the preparation and the drafting of the tender, as well as in defending its position.

(Case T-468/09)

Language of the case: German

Parties

Applicant: JSK International Architekten und Ingenieure GmbH (Frankfurt am Main, Germany) (represented by: J. Steiff and K. Heuvels, lawyers)

Defendant: European Central Bank

Form of order sought

Annul the ECB's award decision of 6 August 2009 and the decision on the complaint of 14 September 2009 by the body within the ECB responsible for review proceedings; declare that (i) the annulled award decision is to be replaced by the award of the contract to the applicant, (ii) in the alternative, that the procedure by which the contract was awarded is to be repeated from the moment tenderers were invited to submit bids, this time to include JSK's bid, (iii) in the final alternative, to repeat the procedure by which the contract was awarded from the very beginning;

only in the alternative - and only if, as is not likely, the applications under 1 and 2 above are dismissed - award the applicant damages in the amount of its positive interest (lost profit), provisionally estimated to amount to EUR 900 000; in the alternative, in the amount of its negative interest (cost of preparing the tender), provisionally estimated to amount to EUR 80 000;

order the defendant to pay the costs of the proceedings and the extrajudicial costs necessarily incurred by the applicant in taking the appropriate legal action (lawyers' fees and expenses);

grant the applicant unrestricted access to the files, which has been denied to date.

Pleas in law and main arguments

By its claims, the applicant takes issue with, on the one hand, the decision of the ECB's award committee of 6 August 2009 to reject the bid submitted by the applicant in response to the call for tenders in respect of coordination and site management tasks relating to the new ECB building in Frankfurt am Main (T109 Bauleiter), and, on the other hand, the decision of the body within the ECB responsible for review proceedings of 14 September 2009 to reject the applicant's complaint brought against that award decision. In the alternative, the applicant has applied for damages.

In support of its application, the applicant submits, first, that the award decision contains errors because of a conflict of interests. In this respect, the applicant alleges that there has been an infringement of the principle of good administration within the meaning of Article 41 of the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union.

Second, the applicant submits that the failure to consider its bid constitutes an error of law and takes issue with the fact that its bid was excluded on grounds of inadequacy and low quality.

Finally, the applicant claims that procedural rights were infringed with respect to transparency and the right to legal protection, such as an infringement of the right of access to the file.

Language of the case: Italian

Parties

Applicant: Agriconsulting Europe SA (Brussels, Belgium) (represented by: F. Sciaudone, R. Sciaudone and A. Neri, lawyers)

Defendant: Commission of the European Communities

Form of order sought

Annul the contested decision.

Order the Commission to pay compensation for the damage suffered.

Order the Commission to pay the costs of the proceedings.

Pleas in law and main arguments

The applicant in the present action is a leading management consultancy providing technical advisory services for international development projects. It is bringing an action against the Commission's decision in connection with the award of Lot No 11 in contract notice EuropeAid/127054/C/SER/multi (OJ S 128 of 4 July 2008) not to include among the six economically most advantageous bids that submitted by the consortium of which the applicant was the leading participant and to award that lot to other tenderers.

The applicant puts forward the following pleas in support of its application for annulment:

distortion of the evidence and the factual circumstances. The contested decision rejected the applicant's bid on the basis that the 'declarations of exclusivity' of three experts in its bid were also to be found in other bids and it was therefore necessary to exclude them from the evaluation. That conclusion is vitiated in so far as it failed to take account of the experts' statements denying that some of those declarations had any value, on the one hand, or actually claiming that they were false, on the other;

misinterpretation of the consequences to be drawn from the non-compliance of the 'declarations of exclusivity' and infringement of the principle of legal certainty, in so far as the defendant imposed the penalty laid down for cases in which more than one declaration of exclusivity is signed on all the tenders, without considering the role and responsibilities of the company or the expert; infringement of legal requirements, of the principle of sound administration and the principal of proportionality, in so far as the defendant failed to exercise the power conferred on it to request clarification where there is some ambiguity concerning some aspect of the tender before confirming that errors exist which may affect the validity of a tender.

The applicant,which also submits that there has been infringement of the obligation to state reasons, seeks, in addition, compensation for the damage suffered on grounds of non-contractual liability for unlawful acts or, in the alternative, for lawful acts.

Action brought on 22 October 2009 - Berenschot Groep v Commission

(Case T-428/09)

Language of the case: English

Parties

Applicant: Berenschot Groep BV (Utrecht, Netherlands) (represented by: B. O'Connor, solicitor)

Defendant: Commission of the European Communities

Form of order sought

declare the application admissible;

annul unreasoned decision of the Commission of 11 August 2009 not to rank the tender submitted by the applicant as one of the seven most economically advantageous tenders and in consequence no to retain the consortium led by the applicant in respect of the service tender procedure "Multiple Framework contract to recruit short-term services in the exclusive interest of third countries benefiting from European Commission External Aid";

enquire into the conduct of the tender and the exercise of the vigilance in relation to tenderers suspected of fraud;

annul the decision of 21 October 2009;

make any additional order which the Court considers necessary;

order the Commission to pay the costs.

Pleas in law and main arguments

In the present case, the applicant seeks the annulment of the defendant's decision not to retain the bid it submitted as a part of consortium in response to a call for an open tender (EuropAid/127054/C/SER/multi) for service provision for "Multiple Framework contract to recruit short-term services in the exclusive interest of third countries benefiting from European Commission External Aid"[1]. Furthermore, the applicant seeks annulment of the Commission decision of 21 October 2009 granting partial access to the evaluation reports regarding the said tender procedure.

In support of its claims the applicant puts forward the following pleas in law.

First, it submits that the evaluation committee did not assess properly the experts included in the applicant's tender. In its view, the evaluation committee made a manifest error of assessment by marking the experts of the consortium led by the applicant unreasonably. Furthermore, the applicant argues that the evaluation committee and the Commission did not provide any explanation on the grading system for individual curriculum vita nor did they explain why the applicant's experts have scored so poorly. If the evaluation committee used no objective criteria when making its assessments, the Commission has not ensured that the principles of equal treatment of the tenderers, transparency, fair competition and good administration have been complied with. The evaluation report provided by the Commission on 21 October 2009 did not remedy the lack of information, as it was limited to the presentation of the final scores obtained by the applicant.

Second, the applicant claims that the Commission infringed Article 7(1) of Regulation 1049/2001[2] in that it did not respond to the applicant's request to access the documents in the time-limits set by this article. It also contends that the Commission infringed the principle of good administration, as the evaluation report has not been provided timely enough to enable the applicant to properly exercise its rights under Article 230 EC.

Third, the applicant submits that the Commission has not complied with its obligations under Article 94 of the financial regulation[3] and under Decision 2008/969[4] in that it did not take steps to protect the integrity of the Community's budget by not excluding the tenderers suspected of fraud from the award of the contract in question.

Pleas in law and main arguments

The measures are actionable, for they are decisive and definitive in nature and have binding effect, and the parties have capacity to bring proceedings.

Both measures are marred by:

Absolute lack of powers: the defendant is not the 'pouvoir adjudicateur' (the contracting authority), because there is no contractual provision whatsoever to support the defendant's conduct. The defendant thus not only lacks powers, but also any competence in these proceedings.

Breach of essential procedural requirements, in particular, the duty to state reasons: as provided for in Article 253 of the Treaty, reasons must be given for Community measures. In accordance with the case-law, the reasoning must be express, clear, coherent and relevant. The measure may not be implied or based on tacit grounds, nor may it be clothed in obscurity. There must be no contradiction between the grounds or between the grounds and the enacting terms. The contested decisions lack any grounds whatsoever. There is also a breach of the essential procedural requirement of an indication of the legal remedies.

infringement of the rules of the Treaty, that is to say, of Articles 211 to 219, of the defendant's own internal regulations and of the principle 'pacta sunt servanda'.

Defendant: Publications Office of the European Union

Form of order sought

— Annul the OPOCE's decision to reject the bids of the applicant, filed in response to the open call for tenders No 10017 "CORDIS" Lot B "Editorial and Publishing Services" and Lot C "Provision of New Digital Information Services" and to select the bid of the applicant filed in response to the open call for tenders No 10017 "CORDIS" Lot E "Development and Maintenance of Core Services", for the award of the above procurement contract as third contractor in the cascade mechanism (OJ 2008/S 242-321376 as amended by OJ 2009/S 40-057377), communicated to the applicant by a letter dated 9 June 2009 and all further related decisions of the OPOCE including the one to award the respective contracts to the successful contractors;

— order the OPOCE to pay the applicant's damages suffered on account of the tendering procedure in question for an amount of EUR 7 215 405 (EUR 5 291 935 for Lot B, EUR 975 000 for Lot C and EUR 948 470 for Lot E);

— order the OPOCE to pay the applicant's legal and other costs and expenses incurred in connection with this application, even if the current application is rejected.

By means of this application the applicant seeks the annulment of the decision of OPOCE to: a) reject the bids of the applicant, filed in response to the open call for tenders No 10017 "CORDIS" Lot B "Editorial and Publishing Services" and Lot C "Provision of New Digital Information Services", b) select the bid of the applicant filed in response to the open call for tenders No 10017 "CORDIS" Lot E "Development and Maintenance of Core Services", for the award of the above procurement contract as third contractor in the cascade mechanism (OJ 2008/S 242-321376 as amended by OJ 2009/S 40-057377).

The applicant claims, first, concerning Lot B, that the treatment between tenderers was discriminatory, since one of the members of the winning consortium did not comply with the exclusion criteria and should, accordingly, have been found to be in serious breach of its contractual obligations towards the Commission. Moreover, the applicant claims that Articles 93(1)(f) and 94 of the Financial Regulation [1] and the principle of good administration have been infringed by the contracting authority and that the Commission should have imposed sanctions provided for by Article 96 of the Financial Regulation and Articles 133a and 134b of its Implementing Rules [2].

Second, the applicant claims that the contracting authority has failed to disclose the relative merits of the successful tenderer.

Third, the applicant submits that the Commission has made several manifest errors of assessment while evaluating its tender and submits that it has infringed the principle of equal treatment while introducing new award criteria not specified in the Tender Specifications ("TS"). Furthermore, the applicant contends that the contracting authority infringed Article 148(1) and (3) of the Implementing Rules, as well as the principle of good administration.

Concerning Lot C, the applicant submits that the treatment between tenderers was discriminatory since one of the members of the third in the cascade mechanism consortium did not comply with the exclusion criteria and should have been found to be in serious breach of previous contracts. Secondly, the applicant claims that the contracting authority has failed to disclose the relative merits of the successful tenderer and has infringed the Principle of good administration.

Concerning Lot E, the applicant argues that one of the members of the winning consortium did not comply with the exclusion criteria because it should have been declared in serious breach of a previous contract and that another one of the members of the same consortium should have been excluded from all tenders for two years because it was found guilty for illegal activities. Moreover, the applicant contends that one of the members of the winning consortium uses non WTO/GPA [3] contractors, infringing the TS of the call for tenders, the principles of transparency and of non discrimination, as well as Articles 106 and 107 of the Financial Regulation. The applicant contends that non WTO/GPA member companies should neither be allowed, nor participate to European Institutions' Call for tenders directly or indirectly, nor undertake as a subcontractor any work falling under the Financial Regulation or Directive 2004/18/EC [4].

Finally, the applicant claims that the contracting authority failed to state reasons conducted several manifest errors of assessment, introduced new award criteria not specified in the TS and infringed while evaluating its tender and that of another tenderer the principle of equal treatment.

Dans l'affaire T-319/09,

Pro humanum, établie à Varsovie (Pologne), représentée par M^e^ H. Izdebski, avocat, partie requérante,

Commission européenne,

partie défenderesse,

ayant pour objet une demande de constatation de l'existence, en raison de la violation des dispositions de la directive 2004/18/CE du Parlement européen et du Conseil, du 31 mars 2004, relative à la coordination des procédures de passation des marchés publics de travaux, de fournitures et de services (JO L 134, p. 114), d'irrégularités dans la procédure d'appel d'offres PO/200905/WAR, concernant les services d'accueil pour le centre d'information de la représentation de la Commission européenne en Pologne (JO 2009/S 26036813), dans le cadre de laquelle l'offre soumise par la partie requérante a été rejetée par la décision de la Commission du 26 mai 2009,

LE TRIBUNAL (première chambre), composé de M^me^ I. Wiszniewska-Białecka (rapporteur), président, MM. F. Dehousse et H. Kanninen, juges, greffier : M. E. Coulon,

rend la présente

Ordonnance

Procédure et conclusions de la partie requérante

1 Par requête déposée au greffe du Tribunal le 10 août 2009, la partie requérante a introduit le présent recours.

2 Elle conclut à ce qu'il plaise au Tribunal constater l'existence d'irrégularités dans la procédure d'appel d'offres PO/200905/WAR, concernant les services d'accueil pour le centre d'information de la représentation de la Commission européenne en Pologne, dans le cadre de laquelle l'offre soumise par la partie requérante a été rejetée par la décision de la Commission du 26 mai 2009.

3 Aux termes de l'article 111 du règlement de procédure du Tribunal, lorsque le recours est manifestement irrecevable, le Tribunal peut, sans poursuivre la procédure, statuer par voie d'ordonnance motivée.

4 En l'espèce, le Tribunal s'estime suffisamment éclairé par les pièces du dossier et décide, en application de cet article, de statuer sans poursuivre la procédure.

5 En premier lieu, dans la mesure où le présent recours doit être compris en ce sens que la partie requérante demande au Tribunal de déclarer que la procédure d'appel d'offres PO/200905/WAR était entachée d'irrégularités, il convient de rappeler qu'il n'existe pas de voie de droit permettant au juge de rendre un jugement déclaratoire visant à déclarer une procédure d'appel d'offre comme étant entachée d'irrégularités.

6 En second lieu, dans la mesure où le présent recours doit être compris en ce sens que la partie requérante demande au Tribunal d'annuler la décision de la Commission du 26 mai 2009 rejetant son offre soumise dans le cadre de l'appel d'offres PO/200905/WAR, il y a lieu de rappeler que, aux termes de l'article 230, cinquième alinéa, CE, le recours en annulation doit être formé dans un délai de deux mois à compter, suivant le cas, de la publication de l'acte attaqué, de sa notification au requérant ou, à défaut, du jour où celui-ci en a eu connaissance. Conformément aux dispositions de l'article 102, paragraphe 2, du règlement de procédure, le délai de recours doit être augmenté d'un délai de distance forfaitaire de dix jours.

7 Selon une jurisprudence constante, ce délai de recours est d'ordre public, ayant été institué en vue d'assurer la clarté et la sécurité des situations juridiques et d'éviter toute discrimination ou traitement arbitraire dans l'administration de la justice, et il appartient au Tribunal de vérifier, d'office, s'il a été respecté (voir, notamment, arrêts de la Cour du 23 janvier 1997, Coen, C–246/95, Rec. p. I-403, point 21, et du Tribunal du 18 septembre 1997, Mutual Aid Administration Services/Commission, T–121/96 et T–151/96, Rec. p. II–1355, points 38 et 39).

8 En l'espèce, il ressort des éléments du dossier que l'acte attaqué a été notifié à la partie requérante le 26 mai 2009. Conformément aux dispositions mentionnées au point 6 ci-dessus, le délai pour l'introduction d'un recours en annulation contre cette décision a expiré deux mois et dix jours après cette date, soit le 5 août 2009.

9 Il s'ensuit que le recours en tant qu'il vise à l'annulation de la décision de la Commission du 26 mai 2009, déposé au greffe du Tribunal le 10 août 2009, a été introduit hors délai.

10 Par lettre du greffier du Tribunal du 13 octobre 2009, la partie requérante a été invitée à présenter ses observations sur le respect du délai de recours.

11 Par lettre du 19 octobre 2009, la partie requérante a invoqué l'article 11, paragraphe 3, des Instructions au greffier (JO 2007, L 232, p. 1) pour demander la « restitution » du délai de recours. Les difficultés rencontrées pour identifier un avocat en mesure de la représenter devant le Tribunal, ainsi que ses moyens financiers limités, constitueraient des circonstances exceptionnelles au sens de cet article.

12 À cet égard, il y a lieu de constater que l'article 11, paragraphe 3, des Instructions au greffier ne trouve pas à s'appliquer au délai de recours dans la mesure où cette disposition concerne une prorogation d'un délai fixé par le greffier et non pas d'un délai prévu à l'article 230, cinquième alinéa, CE.

14 Il résulte de l'ensemble des considérations qui précèdent que le recours doit être rejeté comme étant manifestement irrecevable, sans qu'il soit nécessaire de le signifier à la partie défenderesse.

15 La présente ordonnance étant adoptée avant la notification de la requête à la partie défenderesse et avant que celle-ci n'ait pu exposer des dépens, il suffit de décider que la partie requérante supportera ses propres dépens, conformément à l'article 87, paragraphe 1, du règlement de procédure.

Par ces motifs,

LE TRIBUNAL (première chambre)

1) Le recours est rejeté.

2) Pro humanum supportera ses propres dépens.

Form of order sought

annul the Commission's decisions to select the bids of the applicant, filed in response to the open Call for Tenders EAC/01/2008 for external service provision for educational programmes (ESP-ISEP) Lot 1 "IS Development and Maintenance" and Lot 2 "IS Studies, Testing, Training and Support" (OJ 2008/S 158-212752) second contractor in the cascade mechanism, communicated to the applicant by two separate letters dated 12 May 2009 and all further related decisions of Commission including the one to award the respective contracts to the successful contractors;

order the Commission to pay the applicant's damages suffered on account of the tendering procedure in question for an amount of EUR 9.554.480;

order the Commission to pay the applicant's legal costs and expenses incurred in connection with this application, even if the current application is rejected.

Pleas in law and main arguments

In the present case, the applicant seeks the annulment of the defendant's decision to select its bids, submitted in response to a call for an open tender for external service provision for educational programmes (ESP-ISEP) (EAC/01/2008), as second contractor in the cascade mechanism and to award the respective contracts to the successful contractors. The applicant further requests compensation for the alleged damages in account of the tender procedure.

In support of its claims, the applicant puts forward the following pleas in law.

First, the applicant claims that the defendant infringed the principles of good administration and equal treatment as it failed to observe the exclusion criteria provided for by Articles 93(1) and 94 of the financial regulation[1] by not excluding from the tender proceeding one of the members of the winning consortium being in breach of its contractual obligations to the defendant. By doing so, the defendant infringed as well Articles 133a and 134 of the implementing rules[2].

Second, the applicant submits that the defendant infringed Article 100(2) of the financial regulation as it failed to properly state reasons. In the applicant's opinion, the comments given by the Commission were generic, misleading and vague.

Third, the applicant contends that the Commission has illegally extended the validity of the tenders in violation of Article 130 of the financial regulation and in violation of the principles of good administration, transparency and equal treatment.

Form of order sought

annul the EASA's decisions to select the bids of the applicant, filed in response to the open Call for Tenders EASA.2009.OP.02 Lot 1, Lot 2, Lot 3 and Lot 5 on ICT services (OJ 2009/S 22-030588) as second and third contractor in the cascade mechanism, communicated to the applicant by four separate letters dated 12 May 2009, 8 July 2009, 13 July 2009 and 15 July 2009 and all further related decisions of EASA including the one to award the contract to the successful contractors; order the EASA to pay the applicant's damages suffered on account of the tendering procedure in question for an amount of EUR 6.100.000;

order the EASA to pay the applicant's legal costs and expenses incurred in connection with this application, even if the current application is rejected.

Pleas in law and main arguments

In the present case, the applicant seeks the annulment of the defendant's decision to select its bids submitted in response to a call for an open tender for ITC services (EASA.2009.OP.02) as second and third contractor in the cascade mechanism and to award the contract to the successful contractors. The applicant further requests compensation for the alleged damages in account of the tender procedure.

In support of its claims, the applicant puts forward the following pleas in law.

First, the applicant claims that the defendant infringed the principle of good administration and equal treatment as it failed to observe the exclusion criteria provided for by Articles 93(1) and 94 of the financial regulation[1] by not excluding from the tender proceeding one of the members of the winning consortium being accused by national authorities and even accepting to be guilty for illegal activities and specifically for fraud, corruption, bribery, in the context of contract awarded from public authorities in the European Union and internationally, as well as for falsifying its books and one other winning contractor being in serious breach of its contractual obligations in its relations with the European Commission. By doing so, the defendant infringed as well Articles 133a and 134 of the implementing rules[2] and Article 45 of directive 2004/18/CE[3].

Furthermore, the applicant invokes the defendant's alleged professional misconduct arising from the potential usage of non WTO/GPA subcontractors by one of the winning tenderers.

Second, the applicant submits that the defendant committed manifest errors of assessment and that it failed to state reasons in breach of the financial regulation and its implementing rules as well as in breach of directive 2004/18/CE3 and of Article 253 EC. It states that the defendant also infringed the principle of equal treatment as one of the winning tenderers had not complied with the tender specifications.

(Case T-277/09)

Language of the case: English

Parties

Applicant: Trasys (Woluwe-Saint-Lambert, Belgium) (represented by: M. Martens and P. Hermant, lawyers)

Defendant: Commission of the European Communities

Form of order sought

Annul the Commission Decision, notified to the applicant by a letter dated 9 June 2009, rejecting the applicant's tender for Lots C and E in the call for tender No 10017 and awarding contract to the successful contractors;

Order the Commission to pay the costs.

Pleas in law and main arguments

In the present case the applicant seeks the annulment of the defendant's decisions to reject its bid submitted for Lots C and E in response to a call for an open tender for support of the Publications Office and its CORDIS unit in the provision of publishing and communication services[1] and to award the contract to the successful contractor.

In support of its claims the applicant puts forward four pleas in law.

First, the applicant contends that the defendant infringed the principle of transparency laid down in Articles 100 and 89(1) of the financial regulation[2] by unreasonably limiting access to essential information and in consequence depriving the applicant of the opportunity to gain a proper understanding of the method used to evaluate the tenders and of the reasons why its tender was rejected.

Second, the applicant alleges that its bid has been subject to a tender assessment methodology which is contrary to the principles set out in Article 89(1) of the financial regulation such as the principles of equal treatment and transparency.

Third, it claims that the tender specifications were not clear enough and that the last clarifications were provided too late by the contracting authority and, as a consequence, the applicant was not in the position to plan its tender and to take into account the way in which the assessment would be made.

Fourth, the applicant submits that its bid has been subject to an unreasonable and disproportional evaluation by the contracting authority leading to the errors of assessment which vitiate the final decision.

Form of order sought

annul the Commission's decision to reject the bid of the applicant, filed in response to the open Call for Tenders AO 10186 for the "Production and dissemination of the Supplement to the Official Journal of the European Union: TED website, OJS DVD-ROM and related Offline and Online media" (OJ 2009/S 2-001445), communicated to the applicant by a letter dated 7 April 2009, and all further decisions of the Commission including the one to award the contract to the successful contractor;

order the Commission to pay the applicant's legal costs and expenses incurred in connection with this application, even if the current application is rejected.

Pleas in law and main arguments

In the present case the applicant seeks the annulment of the defendant's decision to reject its bid submitted in response to a call for an open tender for services of production and dissemination of the Supplement to the Official Journal of the European Union: TED website, OJS DVD-ROM and related Offline and Online media (AO 10186) and to award the contract to the successful contractor. The applicant further requests compensation for the alleged damages in account of the tender procedure.

In support of its claims the applicant puts forward following pleas in law.

First, the applicant claims that the defendant committed various and manifest errors of assessment and that it refused to provide any justification or explanation to the applicant in breach of the financial regulation[1] and its implementing rules as well as in breach of directive 2004/18[2] and of Article 253 EC. It states that the Commission never informed the applicant on the relative merits of the winning tenderer as it was obliged, despite the applicant's written request. In the applicant's opinion the comments given by the Commission were vague, unsubstantiated and telegraphic and do not constitute reasonable motivation. The applicant further argues that the Commission corrected ex-post the motivation of the contested decision after the evaluation committee reviewed its report and decided to remove a comment regarding the successful tenderer.

Second, the applicant claims that the defendant infringed Articles 106 and 107 of the financial regulation as well as the principles of transparency and of non-discrimination by not excluding tenderers relying on work performed in non WTO/GPA countries; should it allow this participation, the applicant contends that it should proceed on a fair, transparent and non-discriminatory manner, clarifying the selection criteria it would use for excluding certain companies or accepting others.

Third, the applicant claims that the defendant committed manifest errors of assessment in respect of the applicant's bid in comparison with other tenderers and that it failed to state reasons as the negative considerations given by the evaluation committee in respect to the applicant's bid were vague and unsubstantiated.

Action brought on 8 June 2009 - Evropaïki Dynamiki v Commission

(Case T-236/09)

Language of the case: English

Parties

Applicant: Evropaïki Dynamiki - Proigmena Systimata Tilepikoinonion Pliroforikis kai Tilematikis AE (Athens, Greece) (represented by: N. Korogiannakis and M. Dermitzakis, lawyers)

Defendant: Commission of the European Communities

Form of order sought

annul Commission's decision to reject the bid of the applicant, filed in response to the open Call for Tenders RTD-R4-2007-001 Lot 1 for the "On-site development expertise (intra-muros)" and for Lot 2 "Off-site development projects (extra-muros) (OJ 2007/S 238-288854) communicated to the applicant by two separate letters dated 27 March 2009 and all further decisions of the Commission including the one to award the contract to the successful contractor;

order the Commission to pay the applicant's damages suffered on account of the tendering procedure in question for an amount of EUR 69.445.200 (33.271.920 for Lot 1 and 36.173.280 for Lot 2);

order the Commission to pay the applicant's legal costs and expenses incurred in connection with this application, even if current application is rejected.

Pleas in law and main arguments

In the present case the applicant seeks the annulment of the defendant's decisions to reject its bid submitted in response to a call for an open tender for external service provision for development, studies and support of information systems (RTD-R4-2007-001-ISS-FP7) both for Lot 1 for the "On-site development expertise (intra-muros)" and for Lot 2 "Off-site development projects (extra-muros) and to award the contract to the successful contractor. The applicant further requests compensation for the alleged damages in account of the tender procedure.

In support of its claims the applicant puts forward following pleas in law.

First, the applicant claims that the defendant committed various and manifest errors of assessment and that it refused to provide any justification or explanation to the applicant in breach of the financial regulation[1] and its implementing rules as well as in breach of directive 2004/18[2] and of Article 253 EC.

Second, the applicant claims that the defendant infringed the financial regulation by obliging tenderers to extend their tenders against their will. In addition, the applicant argues that even if one assumed that the defendant had right to do so, quod non, it was in violation of the principles of good administration, transparency and equal treatment that it decided to proceed with the completion of the award process even after the expiration of the extension as, in the applicant's opinion, no contract can be signed when one or more tenders are not valid anymore.

Third, the applicant claims that the outcome of the procedure laid down by the call for tenders was distorted by leakage of information associated with an attempt to impede the applicant from exercising its rights.

Further, the applicant puts forward specific arguments in respect of each lot.

In respect of the Lot 1, the applicant claims that the defendant infringed the principles of equal treatment and of good administration as it failed to observe the exclusion criteria provided for by Articles 93(1) and 94 of the financial regulation regarding one of the members of the winning consortium which was in breach of its contractual obligations to the defendant. Furthermore, the applicant submits that the winning tenderer was allowed illegally to use resources from companies based in non WTO/GPA countries and that this practice is illegal.

In respect of the Lot 2, the applicant argues that the defendant should not allow tenderers subcontracting to non WTO/GPA countries to participate in the biding proceedings; should it do so, the applicant contends that it should proceed on a fair, transparent and non discriminatory manner, clarifying the selection criteria it would use for excluding certain companies or accepting others. Therefore, in the applicant's opinion, the defendant applied particularly discriminatory approach failing to describe the selection criteria it used to select tenderers. Furthermore, it submits that the defendant failed to observe the exclusion criteria provided for by Articles 93(1) and 94 of the financial regulation and Articles 133a and 134 of the implementing rules and Article 45 of Directive 2004/18 and intending to exclude from public procurement companies that have either been condemned or that have been involved in illegal activities such as fraud, corruption, briberies and professional misconduct. The applicant submits that in the present case the winning tenderer has acknowledged its involvement to the above activities and has been condemned by the German courts.

Finally, the applicant also claims that the defendant committed several manifest errors of assessment in respect of both lots and regarding the quality of the tenderer's proposal for the overall management of the service, for ordering services and for delivery of services as well as the tenderer's technological proposal in the domain of the lots.

(Case T-216/09)

Language of the case: Italian

Parties

Applicants: Astrim SpA (Rome, Italy) and Elyo Italia Srl (Sesto San Giovanni, Italy) (represented by: M. Brugnoletti, lawyer)

Defendant: Commission of the European Communities

Form of order sought

Annul the Commission's decision which found to be incomplete the bid submitted by the applicant group in response to call for tenders No 2008 - C04 005 for a contract to provide services covering the maintenance of the Joint Research Centre, [1] communicated by letter of 27 March 2009 and supplemented by a communication of 3 April 2009, together with all subsequent and related decisions, including the decision to award the tender to other undertakings.

In the alternative, annul point 17 of call for tenders No 2008 - C04 005, in so far as it laid down a general criterion for elimination from the tendering procedure.

Order the Commission to pay the costs.

Pleas in law and main arguments

The applicants in this case seek the annulment of the decision by which the Commission eliminated the bid they submitted in response to call for tenders No 2008 - C04 005 for a contract to provide services covering the maintenance of the Joint Research Centre and awarded the contract to other companies.

The applicants put forward three grounds in support of their application:

By the first ground, the applicants submit that the Commission infringed point 17 of the invitation to tender, Articles 92 and 89 of Council Regulation No 1605/2002 [2] and the principles of transparency and equal treatment in so far as it decided to exclude the applicants' bid on the basis of the incorrect assessment that it was incomplete since a number of prices were not stated, whereas the applicant group deliberately chose to offer a price of zero.

By their second ground, the applicants maintain that adequate reasons are not given for the elimination provision, in so far as point 17 of the invitation to tender does provide for automatic elimination where one part of the bid has not been completed but simply provides that elimination is possible, leaving the Commission free to decide whether or not to eliminate the tenderer. Since such a decision is discretionary, adequate reasons must be given for it, which was not the case as regards the elimination provision adopted by the Commission.

By the third ground, which is relevant only in the event that the Court does not uphold the first two grounds, the applicants seek the annulment of point 17 of the invitation to tender on the ground that it infringes Articles 92 and 89 of Council Regulation No 1605/2002 in so far as that point lays down a general elimination criterion.

ORDER OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE SIXTH CHAMBER OF THE COURT OF FIRST INSTANCE

9 July 2009 (1)

In Case T-180/09,

Lionbridge International, established in Dublin (Ireland), represented by C. Thomas, C. Kennedy-Loest, Solicitors and N. Pourbaix, lawyer, applicant,

Commission of the European Communities, represented by M. Wilderspin and E. Manhaeve, acting as Agents, defendant,

APPLICATION for annulment of the Commission decision to exclude the applicant from the award of the contract concerned by the call for tenders
'B-Brussels - Translation of documents relating to the policies and administration of the European Union' (OJ 2008/S 219494 219517), following a finding by the contracting authority of grave professional misconduct.

1 By letter lodged at the Registry of the Court of First Instance on 24 June 2009, the applicant informed the Court in accordance with Article 99 of the Rules of Procedure of the Court of First Instance that it wished to discontinue proceedings and requested, pursuant to Article 99 of the Rules of Procedure, that each party bears its own costs.

2 By letter lodged at the Registry of the Court on 7 July 2009, the defendant informed the Court that it had no objection to the discontinuance and that it agreed with the applicant's request that each party bears it own costs.

3 The first subparagraph of Article 87(5) of the Rules of Procedure provides that a party who discontinues or withdraws from proceedings shall be ordered to pay the costs if they have been applied for in the observations of the other party on the discontinuance.

4 The third subparagraph of Article 87(5) of the Rules of Procedure provides that, where proceedings are discontinued and costs are not applied for, the parties are to bear their own costs. In the present case, the defendant agreed with the applicant's request that each party bears it own costs.

5 The case will therefore be removed from the register and having regard to the fact that the defendant did not request the applicant to bear the entire costs of the proceedings, each party shall bear its own costs.

On those grounds,

THE PRESIDENT OF THE SIXTH CHAMBER OF THE COURT OF FIRST INSTANCE

hereby orders:

1. Case T-180/09 is removed from the register of the Court of First Instance.

2. Each party shall bear its own costs.

Action brought on 19 February 2009 - Evropaïki Dynamiki v Commission

(Case T-86/09)

Language of the case: English

Parties

Applicant: Evropaïki Dynamiki - Proigmena Systimata Tilepikoinonion Pliroforikis kai Tilematikis AE (Athens, Greece) (represented by: N. Korogiannakis and P. Katsimani, lawyers)

Defendant: Commission of the European Communities

Form of order sought

annul the Commission's decision to reject the bid of the applicant, filed in response to the open Call for Tender MARE/2008/01 for the "Provision of computer and related services, including the maintenance and development of DG MARE information systems"[1] communicated to the applicant by letter dated 12 December 2008 and all further related decisions including the one to award the contract to the successful contractor;

order the Commission to pay the applicant's damages suffered on account of the tendering procedure in question for an amount of EUR 2 520 000;

order the Commission to pay the applicant's legal costs and expenses incurred in connection with this application, even if the current application is rejected.

Pleas in law and main arguments

In the present case the applicant seeks the annulment of the defendant's decision to reject its bid submitted in response to a call for an open tender MARE/2008/01 for the "Provision of computer and related services, including the maintenance and development of DG MARE information systems" and to award the contract to the successful contractor. The applicant further requests compensation for the alleged damages on account of the tender procedure.

In support of its claims the applicant puts forward four pleas in law.

First, it argues that the defendant infringed the principle of equal treatment as it failed to observe the exclusion criteria provided for by Articles 93(1) and 94 of the financial regulation[2] regarding one member of the winning consortium and it discriminated against the applicant by not offering it access to all the available technical documentation and the source code which was only available to the incumbent contractor. The applicant further considers that the weighting ration for the application of the award criterion of the "most economically advantageous offer" practically neutralised the impact of the effect of the price in breach of the provisions of the financial regulation. Moreover, the applicant claims that the defendant based the evaluation of its offer on different criteria than those presented in the tender specifications, thus infringing the obligation of transparency.

Second, the applicant contends that the defendant failed to provide sufficient motivation of its decision in particular regarding quality criteria 2 and 3 in violation of the principle of transparency.

Third, the applicant raises doubts as to the fact that the members of the evaluation committee acted despite being in conflict of interests and therefore in violation of a procedural requirement.

Fourth, the applicant claims that the defendant committed several manifest errors and misused its power of assessment.

Pleas in law and main arguments

In the present case the applicant seeks the annulment of the defendant's decision to reject its bid submitted in response to a call for an open tender UCA-218-07 for the provision of "Technical maintenance - help desk and on site intervention services for the PC's, printers and peripherals of the general secretariat of the Council" and to award the contract to the successful contractor. The applicant further requests compensation for the alleged damages in account of the tender procedure.

In support of its claims the applicant puts forward four pleas in law.

First, it argues that the defendant committed several manifest errors of assessment concerning: the absence of certification of the winning tenderer, the absence of NATO security clearance of the personnel of the winning tenderer, the fact that the winning tenderer did not dispose of the personnel offered, the qualifications of the personnel of the winning tenderer as opposed to those of the applicant, the knowledge transfer marks and the evaluation of the number of staff proposed by the tenderers.

Second, the applicant claims that the defendant failed to observe its obligations for equal treatment of the candidates and transparency.

Third, it submits that the call for tender included numerous inconsistencies and inaccurate information.

Last, the applicant contends that the defendant infringed its obligation to motivate its acts.

order the Commission to pay the applicant's legal costs and expenses incurred in connection with this application, even if the current application is rejected.

Pleas in law and main arguments

The applicant further requests compensation for the alleged damages in account of the tender procedure.

In support of its claims the applicant puts forward four pleas in law.

First, it argues that the Commission infringed the principle of equal treatment by introducing a posteriori the criteria which were unknown to the tenderers and by using a discriminatory evaluation formula.

Second, the applicant contends that the evaluation committee did not provide sufficient motivation of its decision.

Third, the applicant submits that the Commission failed to observe essential procedural requirements by introducing a complementary evaluation committee.

Fourth, the applicant claims that the defendant based its evaluation of the applicant's tender on unfounded considerations and assumptions thus committing serious and manifest errors of assessment and misusing its power.

order the Commission to pay the applicant's legal costs and expenses incurred in connection with this application, even if current application is rejected.

Pleas in law and main arguments

In the present case the applicant seeks the annulment of the defendant's decision to reject its bid submitted in response to a call for an open tender VT/2008/019 - EMPL CAD A/17543 for the informatics services and products in the context of the EESSI (Electronic Exchange of Social Security Information) project and to award the contract to the successful contractor. The applicant further requests compensation for the alleged damages in account of the tender procedure.

In support of its claims the applicant puts forward four pleas in law.

First, it argues that the winning tenderer enjoyed a privileged treatment from the Commission in the context of numerous other contracts and that it was favoured in the case of the present call for tenders. Further the applicant claims that it was systematically discriminated by the defendant in the same context.

Second, the applicant submits that the Commission failed to observe the rules concerning the exclusion criteria of the tender specifications and therefore infringed Articles 93 and 94 of the financial regulation[2] and Articles 133a and 134 of its implementing rules as well as Article 45 of Directive 2004/18/EC[3].

Third, the applicant claims that the defendant committed several manifest errors of assessment in evaluation of the applicant's tender by the Evaluation Committee.

Form of order sought

annul EMSA's decision to reject the tender from the Joint Venture Oil Combat (JVOC) constituted by the applicants and to award the contract to the successful contractor; declare that the contract signed between EMSA and the successful contractor pursuant to procurement procedure EMSA/NEG/3/2008 is null and void; award damages as compensation for the loss that JVOC has incurred as a consequence of the contested decision, provisionally estimated at 725 500 EUR, to be increased by the moratory interest as from the date of the filing of this application;

order that the Commission pay the costs of the proceedings, including the expenses for legal counsel incurred by JVOC.

Pleas in law and main arguments

In the present case the applicants seek the annulment of the defendant's decision to reject their bid submitted in response to a call for a tender EMSA/NEG/3/2008 (Lot 2: North Sea) regarding the service contracts for stand-by oil recovery vessel(s)[1] and to award the contract to the successful contractor. The applicant further requests compensation for the alleged damages in account of the tender procedure.

In support of their claims, the applicants put forward four pleas in law.

First, they argue that by refusing to provide the applicants with the information they requested regarding the reasons for rejection of the bid submitted by them and on the characteristics and relative advantages of the bid of the successful contractor the defendant infringed Article 135(2) of the Regulation[2], Article 253 EC and the essential procedural requirements of duty to state reasons and of respect for the rights of defence. The applicants further claim that the defendant failed to suspend the signature of the contract with the successful tenderer pending the exchange of relevant information with the applicants by which it violated Article 105(2) of the financial regulation[3] and Article 158a(1) of the Commission Regulation N° 2342/2002[4].

Second, the applicants submit that the defendant committed manifest errors of assessment while evaluating the bid submitted by the successful tenderer by which it infringed the principles of equal treatment and non-discrimination as stated in Article 89 of the financial regulation.

1 (a) Must Article 1(1) and (3) and Article 2(1) and (6) of Directive 89/665/EEC [1] be interpreted as meaning that they have not been complied with if the legal protection to be afforded by national courts in disputes relating to tendering procedures governed by European law is impeded by the fact that conflicting decisions may arise under a system in which both administrative courts and civil courts may have jurisdiction with respect to the same decision and its consequences?

(b) Is it permissible in this context for the administrative courts to be confined to forming an opinion and ruling on the tendering decision, and if so, why and/or under what conditions?

(c) Is it permissible in this context for the Algemene wet bestuursrecht (Netherlands General Law on Administrative Law), which, as a rule, governs applications for access to the administrative courts, to exclude such applications in the case of decisions concerning the conclusion of a contract by the contracting authority with one of the tenderers, and if so, why and/or under what conditions?

(d) Is the answer to Question 2 of relevance in this context?

2 (a) Must Article 1(1) and (3) and Article 2(1) and (6) of Directive 89/665/EEC be interpreted as meaning that they have not been complied with if the only procedure for obtaining a rapid decision is characterised by the fact that it is in principle geared to a rapid mandatory measure, that lawyers have no right to exchange views, that [no] evidence is, as a rule, presented in other than written form and that statutory rules on evidence are not applicable?

(b) If not, does this also apply if the decision does not lead to the final determination of the legal situation and does not form part of a decision-making process leading to such a final decision?

(c) Does it make a difference in this context if the decision is binding only on the parties to the proceedings, even though other parties may have an interest?

3. Is it compatible with Directive 89/665/EEC for a court, in interim relief proceedings, to order the contracting public authority to take a tendering decision which is subsequently deemed, in proceedings on the substance, to be contrary to tendering rules under European law?

4 (a) If the answer to the previous question is in the negative, must the contracting public authority be deemed liable in that regard, and if so, in what sense?

(b) Does the same apply if the answer to that question is in the affirmative?

(c) If that authority is required to pay damages, does Community law set criteria for determining and estimating those damages, and if so, what are they?

(d) If the contracting public authority cannot be deemed liable, is it possible, under Community law, for some other person to be shown to be liable, and on what basis?

5. If it in fact appears to be impossible, or extremely difficult, under national law and/or with the aid of the answers to the above questions to attribute liability, what must the national court do?

Judgment

1 By its appeal, Evropaïki Dynamiki – Proigmena Systimata Tilepikoinonion Pliroforikis kai Tilematikis AE ('Evropaïki Dynamiki') seeks to have set aside the judgment of the Court of First Instance of the European Communities of 10 September 2008 in Case T-59/05 Evropaïki Dynamiki v Commission ('the judgment under appeal'), by which the Court of First Instance:

– dismissed the action brought by Evropaïki Dynamiki for annulment of the decision of the Commission of the European Communities of 23 November 2004 not to accept the tender submitted by the appellant in the tendering procedure for the provision of development, maintenance and related support services for the financial information systems of the Directorate-General for Agriculture (DG AGRI), and to award the contract to the successful tenderer ('the decision at issue');

– ordered the Commission to bear its own costs and to pay one fifth of the costs incurred by

Evropaïki Dynamiki, and – ordered Evropaïki Dynamiki to bear four fifths of its costs.

Legal context

2 The award of service contracts by the Commission is governed by the provisions of Title V of Part One of Council Regulation (EC, Euratom) No 1605/2002 of 25 June 2002 on the Financial Regulation applicable to the general budget of the European Communities (OJ 2002 L 248, p. 1) ('the Financial Regulation') and by the provisions of Title V of Part One of Commission Regulation (EC, Euratom) No 2342/2002 of 23 December 2002 laying down detailed rules for the implementation of the Financial Regulation (OJ 2002 L 357, p. 1) ('the Implementing Rules'). That body of provisions is based on the Community directives on the subject, in particular, in the case of public service contracts, Council Directive 92/50/EEC of 18 June 1992 relating to the coordination of procedures for the award of public service contracts (OJ 1992 L 209, p. 1), as amended.

3 Article 100 of the Financial Regulation provides:

'1. The authorising officer shall decide to whom the contract is to be awarded, in compliance with the selection and award criteria laid down in advance in the documents relating to the call for tenders and the procurement rules.

2. The contracting authority shall notify all candidates or tenderers whose applications or tenders are rejected of the grounds on which the decision was taken, and all tenderers whose tenders are admissible and who make a request in writing of the characteristics and relative advantages of the successful tender and the name of the tenderer to whom the contract is awarded.

However, certain details need not be disclosed where disclosure would hinder application of the law, would be contrary to the public interest or would harm the legitimate business interests of public or private undertakings or could distort fair competition between those undertakings.'

4 Article 149(2) of the Implementing Rules provides:

'The contracting authority shall, within not more than 15 calendar days from the date on which a written request is received, communicate the information provided for in Article 100(2) of the Financial Regulation.'

Background

5 The facts are set out in paragraphs 10 to 33 of the judgment under appeal, as follows:

'10 The applicant [Evropaïki Dinamiki] is a company incorporated under Greek law, active in the area of information technology and communications.

11 By a contract notice of 24 March 2004, published in the Supplement to the Official Journal of the European Union (OJ 2004 S 59) under reference 2004/S 59-050031, the Commission issued a call for tenders relating to development, maintenance and support services for financial information systems of the Directorate-General for Agriculture (DG AGRI). The outcome of that tender process was to be the signing of a framework contract for a period of 36 months, renewable for a period of 12 months.

14 Section 9 of the tender specifications, relating to the evaluation of tenders and award of the contract, is worded as follows:

"9. Evaluation of tenders and award of the contract

9.3. Evaluation of tenders – award criteria

The Commission will award the contract after comparing the tenders in the light of the following criteria:

9.3.1. Award criteria

– Quality of the tenderer's proposal in terms of completeness, clarity and concision, relevance of information and documentation provided, lack of ambiguity (20%);

– The proposed methodology and the organisation of the services to cover the needs of the Commission/DG AGRI; in particular, the measures proposed to ensure the timely availability of adequate resources for the proposed skills, and an effective and efficient project management and communication with the DG AGRI (40%);

– The quality control of the delivered services and the guarantees offered to respect the proposal (40%).

The assessment of each individual quality criterion should be at least 50% of the maximum scoring set for that criterion. Those [tenders] which will not receive these minimum scorings shall be rejected.

The overall assessment (sum of points for all criteria) should be at least 65 points out of 100. Those offers which will not receive this minimum overall scoring shall be rejected, even if they received the minimum scoring for each individual criterion.

9.3.2. Price criteria

9.4. Award of the contract

The contract will be awarded to the tender with the highest Performance/Price ratio (best value-for-money procedure) …"

16 On 25 March 2004 the applicant expressed its interest in taking part in the call for tenders in question and asked to be sent the contract tender documents. Those documents were sent to the applicant on 30 March 2004.

17 By registered post of 14 April 2004 the applicant sent to the Commission an initial request for clarification in respect of some of the specifications in the tender documents.

18 On 16 April 2004 the applicant sent to the Commission a second and third request for additional clarification relating to the selection and award criteria set out in the tender specifications.

19 The Commission replied to those requests by letter of 20 April 2004.

20 On the same day, in the light of the Commission's reply, the applicant requested additional clarification.

21 The Commission replied to that request by letter of 21 April 2004.

22 On the same day, the applicant sent to the Commission a fresh request for clarification.

23 The Commission replied to the applicant's final request by e-mail on 22 April 2004, stating that it could not answer the questions put to it because they had arrived after the date fixed for that purpose in section 7.6 of the tender specifications, namely six days before the closing date for submission of tenders.

24 On 26 April 2004, the deadline for receipt of tenders, the applicant, in consortium with Software AG Belgium SA … , submitted a proposal in the tendering procedure at issue.

25 The 12 tenders received by DG AGRI were examined by an evaluation committee set up for that purpose and comprising 6 officials from 4 Directorates–General of the Commission. The contract was awarded on the criterion of which offer was the best value–for–money. The evaluation committee checked that the tenders submitted satisfied the exclusion and selection criteria and then declared the 12 tenders to be eligible for the award phase. Of the 12 tenders, only 2, which did not obtain the minimal total score of 65 points required by the tender specifications, were eliminated. The results of the evaluation as regards the applicant's tender and that of the successful tenderer, showing the points awarded on each quality criterion, and the weighted prices of each of those tenders, can be presented as follows:

Tenderer	Weighted price (EUR)	Points out of 100	Points/price (rounded to four decimal places)	Rank
IBM [Belgium SA]	393.03	90.70	0.2308	1

26 By letter of 23 November 2004, sent on 30 November 2004, the Commission informed the applicant of the result of the evaluation of its tender and of the fact that it had not been successful in so far as it "did not achieve the highest quality/price ratio according to which the [contract] was awarded".

27 By fax and registered letter of 2 December 2004 the applicant asked the Commission to provide it, within 15 calendar days from receipt of its request, with the following information:

– the identity of the successful tenderer, and of any partners or subcontractors and, where appropriate, the percentage of the market to be allocated to it or them;

– the score awarded on each award criterion concerning the applicant's technical offer and that of the successful tenderer;

– the content of the evaluation committee's report;

– information as to how the applicant's tender compared with that of the successful tenderer and, in particular, the scores awarded to the applicant's financial offer and that of the successful tenderer.

28 By letter in reply of 10 December 2004, sent on 13 December 2004, the Commission informed the applicant that the successful tenderer was IBM Belgium SA … , and that ARHS Developments SA was the subcontractor. The Commission annexed an extract from the evaluation committee's report relating to the applicant's tender and that of the successful tenderer, while stating that, in order to protect the legitimate business interests of other tenderers, it was not possible to send to it a complete copy of that report, which contained information relating to other tenders which had been submitted but had been unsuccessful. The annexed extract from the evaluation committee's report indicated the points obtained by the applicant and the successful tenderer on each of the quality criteria in the light of which the tenders had been assessed. The annexed extract also contained the general observations of the evaluation committee arising from comparison of the applicant's tender with that of the successful tenderer, in the following terms:

"[The applicant's offer is a] good but rather general offer, more a collection of best practices than tailored to the specific aspects of DG AGRI addressed by the tendering specifications (notably, the guarantees offered to cope with the business aspects of financial systems)."

29 As regards the successful tender, the evaluation committee considered that it was a "very good offer, concise and clear" and that it covered well "both technical and business aspects". The committee added:

"The offer conveys the assurance of the ability of the tenderer to cope successfully with the challenges in the field of financial [IT systems] at DG AGRI."

30 By fax and registered letter of 29 December 2004 the applicant requested from the Commission more precise information as to why its tender had been rejected and the contract awarded to another tenderer. The applicant also set out certain comments and objections on the process of evaluation of its tender and of that of the successful tenderer, in the light of the quality criteria, and taking account of the information given by the Commission in its letter of 10 December 2004.

31 By fax and registered letter of 30 December 2004 the applicant sent to the Commission certain information on the financial standing of ARHS Developments which it had obtained through market research conducted in the interim. The applicant asked the Commission to open an investigation to check and confirm that information and, if appropriate, to take it into consideration in the tendering procedure at issue.

32 By letter of 13 January 2005 the Commission informed the applicant that it acknowledged receipt of its letters of 29 and 30 December 2004, while adding that the questions raised needed to be examined carefully and that a reply would be provided within the following six weeks.

33 By letter dated 26 January 2005, sent on 7 February 2005, the Commission replied to those letters. The applicant acknowledged receipt on 9 February 2005.'

The action before the Court of First Instance and the judgment under appeal

6 By application lodged at the Registry of the Court of First Instance on 2 February 2005, Evropaïki Dynamiki sought the annulment of the decision at issue and an order that the Commission should pay the costs.

7 The Court of First Instance dismissed that action as being unfounded and ordered the appellant to bear four fifths of its costs.

Forms of order sought by the parties before the Court

8 By its appeal, the appellant claims that the Court should:

– set aside the judgment under appeal;

– annul the decision at issue, and – order the Commission to pay the costs of the appeal and, even if it is dismissed, the costs of the proceedings at first instance.

9 The Commission contends that the Court should:

– dismiss the appeal, and

– order the appellant to pay the costs relating to the appeal and confirm the judgment under appeal concerning the costs relating to the proceedings before the Court of First Instance.

The appeal

10 In support of its appeal, Evropaïki Dynamiki puts forward two pleas in law, the first alleging a failure to state reasons and the second, which is divided into two parts, alleging an error of law.

The first plea

Position of the parties

11 The appellant claims that the Court of First Instance refused to recognise an evident discrepancy between the award criteria as set out in section 5.2 of the evaluation committee's report and those mentioned in section 5.4 of that report. By treating that difference as a typographical error, acknowledged as such by the Commission, and by holding that it had no effect on the decision taken by the evaluation committee, the Court of First Instance relied solely on a simple unilateral oral declaration made at the hearing by an agent of the Commission, who obtained that information from an official of DG AGRI present at that hearing, and who was not a member of the evaluation committee. That assertion is not supported by any evidence and no such evidence can be deduced from the evaluation committee's report, which actually demonstrates the contrary. Consequently, the Court of First Instance infringed its duty to state reasons by not explaining the basis on which it relied in order to hold that the evaluation committee had applied the three qualitative award criteria which had been defined in advance and set out in the tender specifications in accordance with the requirements of the legislation.

12 The Commission states that the criteria used by the evaluation committee, notwithstanding the typographical error affecting in that respect section 5.4 of evaluation committee's report, were those mentioned in section 5.2 of that report. Those criteria are identical to those included in the document sent to the members of the evaluation committee explaining the method to be followed for the selection of tenders and subsequently adopted in the form of a table in section 5.4 of that report. The Court of First Instance was thus correct to take as its basis the explanations supplied by the Commission and therefore correctly stated the reasons for its decision in paragraph 112 of the judgment under appeal.

Findings of the Court

13 It is apparent from the documents before the Court that there is a patent error in the evaluation committee's report at issue. The award criteria set out in section 5.2 of the non-confidential version of that report are not the same as those referred to in section 5.4 of that same report.

14 In that regard, the Commission maintained before the Court of First Instance, as well as in paragraphs 4 to 7 of its response before the Court of Justice, that that difference resulted from a simple drafting error and that the three subparagraphs of section 5.4 of that report, mentioning the incorrect evaluation criteria, were not those which were determinative in the evaluation of the tenders. The table set out in section 5.4 of the report, following the incorrect subparagraphs, which includes the scores awarded to each tender for each of the qualitative criteria and their weighting, clearly shows that those criteria, as well as their weighting, correspond to those which are set out in section 5.2 of the evaluation committee's report at issue and to paragraph 9.3.1 of the tender specifications.

15 The Court of First Instance accepted the Commission's contention, in paragraphs 112 and 113 of the judgment under appeal, by holding that that typographical error was of no relevance, since the evaluation committee had applied the three qualitative award criteria which had been determined in advance and set out in the tender specifications in accordance with the requirements of the legislation.

16 In accordance with the case-law of the Court, it is for the Court of First Instance alone to assess the value which should be attached to the items of evidence adduced before it (see Case C-136/92 P Commission v Brazzelli Lualdi and Others [1994] ECR I-1981, paragraph 66, and Case C-362/95 P Blackspur DIY and Others v Council and Commission [1997] ECR I-4775, paragraph 29).

17 The Court of First Instance cannot, subject to its obligation to observe general principles and the Rules of Procedure relating to the burden of proof and the adducing of evidence and not to distort the true sense of the evidence, be required to give express reasons for its assessment of the value of each piece of evidence presented to it, in particular where it considers that that evidence is unimportant or irrelevant to the outcome of the dispute (see Case C-237/98 P Dorsch Consult v Council and Commission [2000] ECR I-4549, paragraph 51).

18 It does not appear that the Court of First Instance, by holding that the error in section 5.4 of the evaluation committee's report was of no relevance as regards the procedure for the award of the public services contract at issue, failed to comply with that obligation.

19 The award criteria were recorded in paragraph 9.3.1 of the tender specifications, then in paragraph 3.3 of the method of evaluation intended for the evaluation committee and, finally, in section 5.2 of the evaluation committee's report. In application of those criteria, a summary table of the tenders and the ranking of the tenderers, in which the appellant came in fourth place, were drawn up by the evaluation committee in section 5.4 of the evaluation report, precisely where reference is made to the incorrect evaluation criteria. It follows that the Court of First Instance was correct to hold that the typographical error in section 5.4 was of no relevance as regards the tender procedure.

20 Consequently, the appellant's complaint that the Court of First Instance relied solely on an oral declaration made at the hearing by an agent of the Commission on the basis of information obtained from an official of DG AGRI of the Commission present at the hearing, and who was not a member of the evaluation committee, has no basis.

21 In any event, an agent of the Commission appointed in accordance with the first sentence of Article 19 of the Statute of the Court of Justice represents the Commission at the hearing before the Court of First Instance and, on that basis, may, at that hearing, make statements on behalf of that institution. For the purposes of assessing the value of such a statement, there is nothing to be gained by making enquiries as to the source, within that institution, from which that agent obtained the information.

22 In the light of the above, it must be held that, by holding that the appellant had not succeeded in establishing to the requisite legal standard that the Commission had committed a manifest error of assessment and, thus, that the typographical error in section 5.4 of the evaluation committee's report had not affected the procedure for the award of the contract in question, the Court of First Instance correctly stated the reasons for its decision.

23 Consequently, the present plea must be rejected as unfounded.

The second plea

The second part of the plea

– Position of the parties

24 In the second part of its second plea, which should be examined first, the appellant criticises the finding of the Court of First Instance that the evaluation committee's statement of reasons rejecting its tender, which was sent to it by letter of the Commission dated 10 December 2004, was adequate. The lack of detail relating to the scores and the few general comments from the evaluation committee's report did not enable the appellant to prepare its defence satisfactorily.

25 The Commission submits that the Court of First Instance did not err in law by holding that the extracts from the non-confidential version of the evaluation committee's report specifying the name of the successful tenderer, the relative advantages of its tender in the light of the three quality criteria, the details of the calculation by which the quality/price ratio of the tenders was determined, their ranking and the general observations comparing the appellant's tender with that of the successful tenderer constitute adequate reasons for the rejection of the appellant's tender. In addition, the fact that the reasons given were succinct and that, initially, the entire report was not communicated, but that fuller explanations were provided subsequently, does not call into question the adequacy of those reasons.

– Findings of the Court

26 It should be noted that the Commission's letter of 10 December 2004, as the Court of First Instance states in paragraphs 126 to 129 of the judgment under appeal, provides information on several points in reply to the appellant's request for detailed explanations, namely the name of the successful tenderer and of the subcontractor, the advantages of the successful tender in comparison with that of the appellant in the light of the three qualitative award criteria laid down in the tender specifications and the comparison of the tenders with regard to price. The information communicated was presented in the form of three tables. The first table enables the appellant's tender to be compared with that of the successful tenderer in the light of the qualitative criteria and their weighting. The second table analyses, by way of a written summary, the appellant's tender in comparison with that of the successful tenderer. The third table analyses the quality/price ratio of the appellant's tender, by comparing it with the successful tender.

27 Thus, it is apparent from that letter of 10 December 2004 that the appellant's tender had not been ranked, on any of the three qualitative criteria set out in the tender specifications, ahead of the successful tender. In addition, it is apparent from the third table that, in the final ranking, the appellant's tender was placed in fourth position.

28 Consequently, it must be held that the information communicated by the Commission to the appellant satisfies the requirements laid down in Article 100(2) of the Financial Regulation and Article 149(2) of the Implementing Rules.

29 The Court of First Instance therefore correctly applied the relevant provisions.

30 The second part of the second plea must therefore be rejected as unfounded.

The first part of the plea

31 In the first part of its second plea, the appellant objects that the Court of First Instance, while finding that the Commission was late in replying to its additional requests of 29 and 30 September 2004, by letter dated 26 January 2005, actually sent on 7 February 2005, held that that delay had not affected the appellant's rights of defence with respect to the decision at issue. Consequently, by holding that that plea did not amount to a sufficient reason for annulling that decision, despite a flagrant breach of the duty of diligence and the principle of good administration, the Court of First Instance failed to apply the relevant provisions of Community law and the principles of transparency and equal treatment.

32 The Commission states that the late reply which it gave to the appellant, although constituting a breach of the duty of diligence and good administration, nevertheless did not affect the appellant's rights of defence with respect to the decision at issue. All the necessary information was communicated to the appellant before the expiry of the period within which it could challenge that decision. Consequently, in the opinion of the Commission, the Court of First Instance did not err in law as it is alleged to have done.

33 The Court of First Instance held in paragraphs 151 to 158 of the judgment under appeal that, by not replying to the appellant's requests of 29 and 30 December 2004 within a reasonable period of time, the Commission had failed in its duty of diligence and good administration. However, the finding of such a breach, in the view of the Court of First Instance, did not suffice to render the decision at issue unlawful nor to have it annulled, in so far as the Commission's delay in replying to the appellant's requests did not affect the appellant's rights of defence with respect to that decision.

34 Since, as was held in paragraphs 26 and 28 of this judgment, the Commission's letter of 10 December 2004 provided the information requested, the appellant's subsequent requests of 29 and 30 December 2004 and the Commission's reply of 26 January 2005 do not play any role in the consideration of the substance of the case.

35 Therefore, although the Commission failed in its duty of diligence and good administration by being late in replying to those requests, the fact remains that the appellant already had the necessary information in order to protect its rights of defence with respect to the decision at issue.

36 The first part of the second plea must therefore be rejected as unfounded.

37 In those circumstances, the appeal must be dismissed in its entirety as unfounded.

Costs

38 Under Article 69(2) of the Rules of Procedure, which applies to appeal proceedings by virtue of Article 118 thereof, the unsuccessful party is to be ordered to pay the costs if they have been applied for in the successful party's pleadings. Since the Commission has applied for costs to be awarded against Evropaïki Dynamiki and the latter has been unsuccessful, Evropaïki Dynamiki must be ordered to pay the costs.

On those grounds, the Court (Eighth Chamber) hereby:

1. Dismisses the appeal;

2. Orders Evropaïki Dynamiki – Proigmena Systimata Tilepikoinonion Pliroforikis kai Tilematikis AE to pay the costs.

Form of order sought

The appellant claim that the Court should:

Set aside the decision of the Court of First Instance;

annul the decision of the Commission (DG Agriculture) to evaluate the applicant's bid as not successful and award the contract to the successful contractor;

order the Commission to pay the applicant's legal and other costs and expenses incurred in connection with the initial procedure, even if the current Appeal is rejected as well as those of the current Appeal, in case it is accepted

Pleas in law and main arguments

The appellant bases its appeal against the judgment T-59/05 of the Court of First Instance on the following grounds:

It is submitted that the Court of First Instance committed a breach of procedure by refusing to recognise an evident discrepancy between the award criteria as set out in section 5.2 of the EvCo Report and those mentioned in section 5.4 of the same Report and by misinterpreting the relevant procedural rules on the burden of proof. More specifically, the Court of First Instance does not refer to any evidence in support of its qualification as "typographical error" of an obvious discrepancy, and no such evidence can by any means be deduced from the content of the Evaluation Report itself.

Further, the judgment fails to observe the consequences of the Commission's infringement of its duty of diligence and of the principle of good administration. Since the Court of First Instance, despite observing that the Commission infringed the rule of law, did not proceed into annulling the Commission's Decision on this ground, the Court of First Instance undoubtedly failed in applying the relevant provisions.

It is submitted that the Court of First Instance also failed to apply the relevant provisions on the duty of the contracting authority to provide reasons, which would lead it to annul the award decision; only scores and some general comments from the Evaluation Report have been submitted to the Appellant by the letter of 10th December 2004. In this sense the Court of First Instance distorted the evidence adduced before it, and for this reason its judgment should be annulled.

Judgment

1 By its application, the Commission of the European Communities asks the Court to declare that, by reason of the rules on time-limits in the national legislation regulating the exercise of the right of tenderers to judicial review in public procurement procedures and by failing to notify the award decision to the complainant in the procurement procedure in question, Ireland has failed to fulfil its obligations, concerning the applicable time-limits, under Article 1(1) of Council Directive 89/665/EEC of 21 December 1989 on the coordination of the laws, regulations and administrative provisions relating to the application of review procedures to the award of public supply and public works contracts (OJ 1989 L 395, p. 33), as amended by Council Directive 92/50/EEC of 18 June 1992 (OJ 1992 L 209, p. 1) ('Directive 89/665'), as interpreted by the Court, and, concerning the lack of notification, under Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665, as interpreted by the Court, and Article 8(2) of Council Directive 93/37/EEC of 14 June 1993 concerning the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts (OJ 1993 L 199, p. 54), as amended by European Parliament and Council Directive 97/52/EC of 13 October 1997 (OJ 1997 L 328, p. 1) ('Directive 93/37').

Community legislation

2 Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665 provides:

> 'The Member States shall take the measures necessary to ensure that, as regards contract award procedures falling within the scope of [Council Directive 71/305/EEC of 26 July 1971 concerning the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts (OJ, English Special Edition 1971 (II), p. 682)], [Council Directive 77/62/EEC of 21 December 1976 coordinating procedures for the award of public supply contracts (OJ 1977 L 13, p. 1)], and [Directive] 92/50/EEC, decisions taken by the contracting authorities may be reviewed effectively and, in particular, as rapidly as possible in accordance with the conditions set out in the following Articles and, in particular, Article 2(7), on the grounds that such decisions have infringed Community law in the field of public procurement or national rules implementing that law.'

3 Under Article 2(1) of Directive 89/665:

> 'The Member States shall ensure that the measures taken concerning the review procedures specified in Article 1 include provision for the powers to:
>
> (a) take, at the earliest opportunity and by way of interlocutory procedures, interim measures with the aim of correcting the alleged infringement or preventing further damage to the interests concerned, including measures to suspend or to ensure the suspension of the procedure for the award of a public contract or the implementation of any decision taken by the contracting authority;
>
> (b) either set aside or ensure the setting aside of decisions taken unlawfully, including the removal of discriminatory technical, economic or financial specifications in the invitation to tender, the contract documents or in any other document relating to the contract award procedure;
>

4 Article 8(2) of Directive 93/37 provides:

> 'Contracting authorities shall promptly inform candidates and tenderers of the decisions taken on contract awards, including the reasons why they have decided not to award a contract for which there has been an invitation to tender or to start the procedure again, and shall do so in writing if requested. They shall also inform the Office for Official Publications of the European Communities of such decisions.'

National legislation

5 Order 84A(4) of the Rules of the Superior Courts, in the version resulting from Statutory Instrument N° 374 of 1998 ('the RSC'), provides that:

> 'An application for the review of a decision to award or the award of a public contract shall be made at the earliest opportunity and in any event within three months from the date when grounds for the application first arose unless the Court considers that there is good reason for extending such period.'

Background to the dispute and pre-litigation procedure

6 The National Roads Authority ('the NRA') is a public authority responsible for the construction and maintenance of roads in Ireland.

7 SIAC Construction Limited ('SIAC') is a limited liability company established in Ireland, which carries on business in the construction sector.

8 The NRA published a call for interest in the Official Journal of the European Communities on 10 July 2001 to design, build, finance and operate the Dundalk Western Bypass. The contractor was required to establish a public-private partnership with the NRA and to operate that section of motorway for approximately 30 years.

9 In December 2001, four candidates were invited to proceed to negotiations.

10 Of those four candidates, two were selected in April 2003 to proceed to more intensive negotiations: these were a consortium called EuroLink, of which SIAC formed part, and a consortium called Celtic Roads Group ('CRG').

11 On 8 August 2003, the NRA invited EuroLink and CRG to submit a best and final offer.

12 By letter of 14 October 2003, EuroLink was informed that the NRA had decided to designate CRG as the preferred tenderer. That letter from the NRA pointed out that this was not a rejection of the offer submitted by EuroLink. The letter explained that the NRA would proceed with discussions with CRG, potentially leading to the award of the contract for the project in question. However, if such discussions were to terminate without a contract being awarded, the NRA reserved the right to invite EuroLink to enter into discussions with it in place of CRG.

13 On 9 December 2003, the NRA decided to award the contract in question to CRG.

14 On 5 February 2004, the NRA signed the contract with CRG. A notice to that effect was displayed on the NRA website on 9 February 2004. The contract award notice was published in the Official Journal of the European Union on 3 April 2004.

15 On 8 April 2004, SIAC brought an action for damages before the High Court of Ireland. It complained, inter alia, first, of the selection of the negotiated procedure and, secondly, of certain irregularities which, in its view, had occurred at the stage of introducing and evaluating the best and final offers. With regard to limitation periods, SIAC claimed that the date on which the period for bringing an action began to run was the date on which the contract with CRG was signed, that is to say, 5 February 2004.

16 The High Court took the view that the relevant grounds for bringing the action arose on the date on which the consortium to which SIAC belonged was informed of the identity of the preferred tenderer, namely 14 October 2003. SIAC, it ruled, ought to have brought its action no later than three months after that date, in accordance with Order 84A of the RSC. The High Court, by its judgment of 16 July 2004, accordingly dismissed SIAC's action as being out of time.

17 SIAC submitted a complaint to the Commission. The latter sent a letter of formal notice to Ireland on 10 April 2006, to which that Member State replied on 30 May 2006.

18 On 15 December 2006, the Commission sent an additional letter of formal notice to Ireland, which replied on 21 February 2007.

19 As it was not satisfied by the explanations which it had received, the Commission sent Ireland a reasoned opinion on 1 February 2008, inviting that Member State to take the measures necessary for compliance within a period of two months. Ireland replied to that reasoned opinion on 25 June 2008.

20 As it considered that reply to be unsatisfactory, the Commission brought the present action.

The action

The first head of claim

21 By its first head of claim, the Commission alleges that the NRA did not inform the unsuccessful tenderer of its decision awarding the contract for the design, construction, financing and operation of the Dundalk Western Bypass.

Arguments of the parties

22 The Commission submits that notification of the public contract award decision to the unsuccessful candidates and tenderers is required under Article 8(2) of Directive 93/37. It also submits that, in the context of Directive 89/665, complete legal protection presupposes an obligation to inform candidates and tenderers of the award decision.

23 The communication to EuroLink, by letter from the NRA of 14 October 2003, of the fact that CRG had been designated as the preferred tenderer was not, the Commission contends, tantamount to a rejection of the offer submitted by EuroLink. That letter cannot therefore be regarded as constituting the notification of the award decision provided for in Directive 89/665 and in Article 8(2) of Directive 93/37.

24 Since it is common ground that SIAC did not receive notification of the final award of the contract at issue, the requirements of those provisions were not complied with.

25 Ireland accepts the obligation on Member States to ensure prompt notification to candidates and tenderers of decisions taken on contract awards. It argues that it has faithfully transposed Article 8(2) of Directive 93/37, which lays down that obligation, into its domestic legal order. The Commission, moreover, is not claiming that the relevant Irish legislation does not comply with the requirements of Community law.

26 With regard to the contract relating to the Dundalk motorway bypass, Ireland accepts that communication of the preferred tenderer to EuroLink on 14 October 2003 does not constitute notification of the decision to award the contract.

27 Ireland claims, however, that, as is apparent from the judgment of the High Court of Ireland of 16 July 2004, it was, as of 14 October 2003, clear to SIAC that a decision had been taken to award the contract. SIAC must have been aware that the NRA was engaged in the process necessary to conclude a contract with CRG. In Ireland's view it follows that, in the circumstances of the present case, no injustice was caused by the lack of notification of the final decision to award the contract.

28 Ireland submits that, as its national law faithfully transposes the Community rules on notification of decisions concerning the award of public contracts, Ireland cannot be considered to have failed in its obligations under Community law on the basis of a single incident of non-notification.

Findings of the Court

29 Article 8(2) of Directive 93/37 requires contracting authorities to inform candidates and tenderers promptly of the decisions taken on contract awards. Notification to unsuccessful candidates and tenderers of the public contract award decision is mandatory under that provision.

30 That same obligation also arises under Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665, inasmuch as the possibility of bringing an effective action against award decisions can be ensured only if all candidates or tenderers are informed in good time of those decisions (see, to that effect, judgment of 24 June 2004 in Case C-212/02 Commission v Austria, paragraph 21, and Case C-444/06 Commission v Spain [2008] ECR I-2045, paragraph 38).

31 It is not disputed that in the present case the NRA never officially informed EuroLink of its decision to award the contract in question to CRG.

32 The announcement of the award on the NRA's website on 9 February 2004 and the publication thereof on 3 April 2004 in the Official Journal of the European Union cannot adequately rectify that failure.

33 That information was released into the public domain after the signature of the contract on 5 February 2004. In order to make effective legal protection possible for the candidates or tenderers, however, they ought to have been informed of the NRA's award decision in good time before the contract was concluded (see, to that effect, Commission v Austria, paragraph 21, and Commission v Spain, paragraph 38).

34 The NRA thus failed in its obligations under Article 8(2) of Directive 93/37 and Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665 to provide information in regard to the contract in question.

35 Referring in this connection to the NRA's letter of 14 October 2003, Ireland submits that in the present case SIAC nevertheless did not suffer any injustice. In its view, after that date, SIAC must have been aware that the NRA was in the process of signing a contract with CRG.

36 That argument cannot be accepted.

37 First of all, the NRA did not, by its letter of 14 October 2003, notify the definitive decision to award the contract in question. It merely indicated that it had selected CRG as the preferred tenderer. The NRA even stated that, in the event that the discussions between it and CRG did not lead to the award of a contract, it reserved the right to enter into discussions with EuroLink in place of CRG. At that stage, Eurolink had not been definitively ruled out as a potential candidate for the contract and could legitimately take the view that the procedure for the award of that contract had not been completed.

38 Secondly, and in any event, the finding that a Member State has failed to fulfil its obligations is not bound up with a finding as to the damage flowing from that failure (Case C-263/96 Commission v Belgium [1997] ECR I-7453, paragraph 30, and Joined Cases C-20/01 and C-28/01 Commission v Germany [2003] ECR I-3609, paragraph 42).

39 Lastly, Ireland argues that the national legislation at issue satisfies the information obligations which are imposed by the Community legislation. In those circumstances, a single incident of failure to notify a decision concerning the award of a public contract cannot justify a finding that the Member State in question has failed to fulfil its obligations under Community law.

40 That argument also cannot be accepted.

41 Without its being necessary to rule on the assertion that the national legislation at issue transposes adequately the relevant requirements of Community law, suffice it to recall that, according to settled case-law, an action for failure to fulfil obligations makes possible not only an examination of the compatibility of a Member State's laws, regulations and administrative provisions with Community law but also a determination that there has been an infringement of Community law by the national bodies in a specific individual case (see, concerning the award of public contracts, Joined Cases C-20/01 and C-28/01 Commission v Germany, paragraph 30, and judgment of 15 October 2009 in Case C-275/08 Commission v Germany, paragraph 27).

42 It follows that the first head of claim is well founded.

The second head of claim

43 The Commission's second head of claim consists of two parts. First, the Commission argues that the national legislation in question gives rise to uncertainty as to which decision must be challenged through legal proceedings. It maintains, secondly, that that legislation is unclear on how periods within which proceedings must be brought are to be determined.

The first part of the second head of claim

44 The Commission states that it is difficult for tenderers to know which decision by the contracting authority they have to challenge and on which date the period for challenging that decision begins to run. The Commission argues that that uncertainty is attributable to the wording of Order 84A(4) of the RSC and its uncertain interpretation.

45 The Commission asserts that the expression 'a decision to award or the award of a public contract' used in Order 84A(4) of the RSC refers to decisions which may be challenged and that that provision makes no reference to earlier interim decisions taken by the contracting authority. In its judgment of 16 July 2004, the High Court took the view that that provision applies not only to the decision to award a contract or to the award of such a contract, but also to decisions taken by contracting authorities in respect of public procurement procedures.

46 In the Commission's view, the national legislation in question appears not to be in line with the fundamental principle of legal certainty and the requirement of effectiveness envisaged by Directive 89/665, which is an application of that principle, since tenderers are left in uncertainty as to their situation when they intend to bring an action against an award decision taken by a contracting authority in a two-stage procedure in which the final award decision is taken after a tenderer has been selected.

47 The Commission argues that it must be made clear to tenderers whether Order 84A(4) of the RSC applies not only to decisions to award contracts, but also to interim decisions taken by a contracting authority during the tendering procedure, including those concerning the selection of the preferred tenderer.

48 Ireland points out that Article 1 of Directive 89/665 requires Member States to ensure that there are effective legal remedies against all decisions taken by contracting authorities in public procurement procedures and not only against decisions to award contracts in those procedures. In Ireland's view, the Irish courts interpret and apply Order 84A(4) of the RSC in accordance with those requirements. The High Court's judgment of 16 July 2004 in particular states clearly that that provision allows proceedings to be brought against any decision taken by contracting authorities in a public procurement procedure, which is entirely consistent with Article 1 of Directive 89/665.

49 With regard to the date from which the period for challenging an interim decision by a contracting authority begins to run, Ireland observes that Directive 89/665 requires that it be possible for decisions taken by contracting authorities to be reviewed rapidly. An application can be examined expeditiously only if both parties to the dispute are obliged to act quickly in the relevant proceedings. That objective could not be attained if the parties were allowed to await formal notification of the award decision before bringing proceedings, even though they have all the elements of fact and law necessary for bringing such an action.

50 Ireland submits that, if a tenderer could simply await notification of a formal decision not to award it the contract in question, despite knowing that it was not going to be awarded the contract, as found by the High Court in the case which gave rise to its judgment of 16 July 2004, significant delay would ensue for the review of all decisions by contracting authorities.

– Findings of the Court

51 The Court has already held that Directive 89/665 does not preclude national legislation which provides that any application for review of a contracting authority's decision must be commenced within a period laid down to that effect and that any irregularity in the award procedure relied upon in support of such application must be raised within the same period, if it is not to be out of time, with the result that, when that period has passed, it is no longer possible to challenge such a decision or to raise such an irregularity, provided that the period in question is reasonable (Case C-241/06 Lämmerzahl [2007] ECR I-8415, paragraph 50 and case-law cited).

52 That case-law is based on the consideration that the full implementation of the objective sought by Directive

89/665 would be undermined if candidates and tenderers were allowed to invoke, at any stage of the award procedure, infringements of the rules of public procurement, thereby obliging the contracting authority to restart the entire procedure in order to correct such infringements (Lämmerzahl, paragraph 51).

53 On the other hand, national limitation periods, including the detailed rules for their application, should not in themselves be such as to render virtually impossible or excessively difficult the exercise of any rights which the person concerned derives from Community law (Lämmerzahl, paragraph 52).

54 Order 84A(4) of the RSC provides that 'an application for the review of a decision to award or the award of a public contract' must be made within a specified period.

55 However, as occurred in the dispute which gave rise to the High Court's judgment of 16 July 2004, the Irish courts may interpret that provision as applying not only to the final decision to award a public contract but also to interim decisions taken by a contracting authority during the course of that public procurement procedure. If the final decision to award a contract is taken after expiry of the period laid down for challenging the relevant interim decision, the possibility cannot be excluded that an interested candidate or tenderer might find itself out of time and thus prevented from bringing an action challenging the award of the contract in question.

56 According to the Court's settled case-law, the application of a national limitation period must not lead to the exercise of the right to review of decisions to award public contracts being deprived of its practical effectiveness (see, to that effect, Case C-470/99 Universale-Bau and Others [2002] ECR I-11617, paragraph 72; Case C-327/00 Santex [2003] ECR I-1877, paragraphs 51 and 57; and Lämmerzahl, paragraph 52).

57 As observed by the Advocate General in point 51 of her Opinion, only if it is clear beyond doubt from the national legislation that even preparatory acts or interim decisions of contracting authorities at issue in public procurement cases start the limitation period running can tenderers and candidates take the necessary precautions to have possible breaches of procurement law reviewed effectively within the meaning of Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665 and to avoid their challenges being statute-barred.

58 Accordingly, it is not compatible with the requirements of Article 1(1) of that directive if the scope of the period laid down in Order 84A(4) of the RSC is extended to cover the review of interim decisions taken by contracting authorities in public procurement procedures without that being clearly expressed in the wording thereof.

59 Ireland disagrees with this finding, contending that the application of such a period for challenging interim decisions corresponds to the objectives of Directive 89/665, in particular the requirement of rapid action.

60 It is true that Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665 requires Member States to ensure that decisions taken by contracting authorities may be reviewed effectively and as rapidly as possible. In order to attain the objective of rapidity pursued by that directive, Member States may impose limitation periods for actions in order to require traders to challenge promptly preliminary measures or interim decisions taken in public procurement procedures (see, to that effect, Universale-Bau and Others, paragraphs 75 to 79; Case C-230/02 Grossmann Air Service [2004] ECR I-1829, paragraphs 30 and 36 to 39; and Lämmerzahl, paragraphs 50 and 51).

61 However, the objective of rapidity pursued by Directive 89/665 must be achieved in national law in compliance with the requirements of legal certainty. To that end, Member States have an obligation to create a legal situation that is sufficiently precise, clear and foreseeable to enable individuals to ascertain their rights and obligations (see, to that effect, Case C-361/88 Commission v Germany [1991] ECR I-2567, paragraph 24, and Case C-221/94 Commission v Luxembourg [1996] ECR I-5669, paragraph 22).

62 The abovementioned objective of rapidity does not permit Member States to disregard the principle of effectiveness, under which the detailed methods for the application of national limitation periods must not render impossible or excessively difficult the exercise of any rights which the person concerned derives from Community law, a principle which underlies the objective of ensuring effective review proceedings laid down in Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665.

63 The extension of the limitation period under Order 84A(4) of the RSC to interim decisions taken by contracting authorities in public procurement procedures in a manner which deprives the parties concerned of their right of review satisfies neither the requirements of legal certainty nor the objective of effective review. Interested parties must be informed of the application of limitation periods to interim decisions with sufficient clarity to enable them effectively to bring proceedings within the periods laid down. The failure to provide such information cannot be justified on grounds of procedural rapidity.

64 Ireland submits that the Irish courts interpret and apply Order 84A(4) of the RSC in conformity with the requirements of Directive 89/665. This argument refers to the significant role played by case-law in common-law countries such as Ireland.

65 It should be noted in this regard that, according to the Court's settled case-law, although the transposition of a directive into domestic law does not necessarily require the provisions of the directive to be reproduced in precisely the same words in a specific, express provision of national law and a general legal context may be sufficient, it is nevertheless necessary that that legal context be sufficiently clear and precise as to enable the parties concerned to be fully informed of their rights and, if necessary, avail themselves of those rights before the national courts (judgment of 29 October 2009 in Case C-474/08 Commission v Belgium, paragraph 19 and case-law cited).

66 Order 84A(4) of the RSC, however, does not satisfy those requirements inasmuch as it allows national courts to apply, by analogy, the limitation period which it provides for challenges to public contract award decisions to challenges to interim decisions taken by contracting authorities in the course of those procurement procedures, in respect of which no express provision was made by the legislature for that limitation period to apply. The resulting legal situation is not sufficiently clear and precise to exclude the risk that concerned candidates and tenderers may be deprived of their right to challenge decisions in public procurement matters handed down by a national court on the basis of its own interpretation of that provision.

67 It follows that the first part of the second head of claim is well founded.

The second part of the second head of claim

68 The Commission points out that Order 84A(4) of the RSC requires actions to be brought 'at the earliest opportunity and in any event within three months'. The Commission takes the view that that formulation leaves tenderers in uncertainty when they consider exercising their right under Community law to bring proceedings against a decision of a contracting authority. Indeed, tenderers would discover what interpretation will be given to the formulation 'at the earliest opportunity' only after their action has been brought and the competent court has exercised its discretion in interpreting that provision. Such a situation runs counter to the principle of legal certainty.

69 That provision, it continues, also creates a further uncertainty as to the question of the cases in which the three-month limitation period will be applied, and as to that of the other cases in which that period will be shorter because it was possible to bring an action at an earlier opportunity.

70 The Commission accordingly submits that Order 84A(4) of the RSC lacks clarity and gives rise to legal uncertainty. The Commission considers that, in view of the obligation to respect the principle of legal certainty, the applicable period has to be a fixed one which can be interpreted in a clear and foreseeable manner by all tenderers.

71 Ireland replies that, to date, no Irish court has dismissed, as being out of time, any action challenging a decision of a contracting authority made in the course of a public contract award procedure which was brought within the three-month limitation period but not at the earliest opportunity. Ireland takes the view that any such interpretation could not be upheld, since the expression 'in any event' indicates that any action brought within three months will be within time. Moreover the High Court of Ireland has expressly held that, where appropriate, the three-month limitation period will be extended.

72 Ireland observes that Order 84A(4) of the RSC gives the Irish courts the discretion to extend the period within which proceedings must be brought. The grant of discretion to a court by a legislative provision is a legitimate option available to the Member States when regulating periods for bringing proceedings. The Member States are not obliged to establish immutable limitation periods.

– Findings of the Court

73 Since Directive 89/665 pursues an objective of rapid action, it is legitimate for a Member State, in implementing that directive, to require interested parties to be diligent in bringing actions for review.

74 However, the wording of Order 84A(4) of the RSC, which provides that all relevant applications 'shall be made at the earliest opportunity and in any event within three months' gives rise to uncertainty. The possibility cannot be ruled out that such a provision empowers national courts to dismiss an action as being out of time even before the expiry of the three-month period if those courts take the view that the application was not made 'at the earliest opportunity' within the terms of that provision.

75 It is not possible for parties concerned to predict what the limitation period will be if this is left to the discretion of the competent court. It follows that a national provision providing for such a period does not ensure effective transposition of Directive 89/665.

76 Ireland asserts, by way of reply to such a inference, that no Irish court has dismissed an action relating to public procurement as being out of time on the ground that it was not brought 'at the earliest opportunity'.

77 Suffice it to point out in this regard that, in order to determine whether a directive has been adequately transposed, it is not always necessary to establish the actual effects of the legislation transposing it into national law; the situation is different if the legislation itself harbours the insufficiencies of transposition (see, to that effect, Case C-392/96 Commission v Ireland [1999] ECR I-5901, paragraph 60).

78 Ireland explains that Order 84A(4) of the RSC confers discretion on the Irish courts to extend the periods for bringing proceedings.

79 That provision provides for the application of the period laid down therein 'unless the Court considers that there is good reason for extending such period'.

80 Admittedly, such a provision in itself, independently of its context, must be recognised as a valid implementation of Directive 89/665. In a field such as public procurement, in which procedures can be complex and the facts may vary widely, the opportunity granted by the national legislature to national courts to extend, on grounds of fairness, the periods within which actions must be brought may be in the interests of the proper administration of justice.

81 However, the possibility for national courts to extend periods for bringing actions, as provided for in Order 84A(4) of the RSC, is not such as to compensate for the shortcomings in that provision, having regard to the clarity and precision which Directive 89/665 requires in respect of the system of limitation periods. Even if the candidate or tenderer concerned takes into account the possibility that periods may be extended, it will still not be able to predict with certainty which period will be accorded to it for the purpose of bringing proceedings, in view of the reference to the obligation to bring an action at the earliest opportunity.

82 Consequently, the second part of the second head of claim is well founded.

83 In the light of the foregoing, it must be held that,

– by reason of the fact that the NRA did not inform the unsuccessful tenderer of its decision to award the contract for the design, construction, financing and operation of the Dundalk Western Bypass, and

– by maintaining in force Order 84A(4) of the RSC, in so far as it gives rise to uncertainty as to which decision must be challenged through legal proceedings and as to how periods for bringing an action are to be determined,

Ireland has failed – as regards the first head of claim – to fulfil its obligations under Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665 and Article 8(2) of Directive 93/37 and – as regards the second head of claim – to fulfil its obligations under Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665.

Costs

84 Under Article 69(2) of the Rules of Procedure, the unsuccessful party is to be ordered to pay the costs if they have been applied for in the successful party's pleadings. Since the Commission has applied for costs to be awarded against Ireland and the latter has been unsuccessful, Ireland must be ordered to pay the costs.

On those grounds, the Court (Third Chamber) hereby:

1. Declares that:

– by reason of the fact that the National Roads Authority did not inform the unsuccessful tenderer of its decision to award the contract for the design, construction, financing and operation of the Dundalk Western Bypass, and

– by maintaining in force Order 84A(4) of the Rules of the Superior Courts, in the version resulting from Statutory Instrument N° 374 of 1998, in so far as it gives rise to uncertainty as to which decision must be challenged through legal proceedings and as to how periods for bringing an action are to be determined,

Ireland has failed – as regards the first head of claim – to fulfil its obligations under Article 1(1) of Council Directive 89/665/EEC of 21 December 1989 on the coordination of the laws, regulations and administrative provisions relating to the application of review procedures to the award of public supply and public works contracts, as amended by Council Directive 92/50/EEC of 18 June 1992, and Article 8(2) of Council Directive 93/37/EEC of 14 June 1993 concerning the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts, as amended by European Parliament and Council Directive 97/52/EC of 13 October 1997 and – as regards the second head of claim – to fulfil its obligations under Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665, as amended by Directive 92/50;

2. Orders Ireland to pay the costs.

by reason of the fact that the National Roads Authority did not inform the unsuccessful tenderer of its decision to award the contract for the design, construction, financing and operation of the Dundalk Western Bypass, and

by maintaining in force Order 84A(4) of the Rules of the Superior Courts, in the version resulting from Statutory Instrument No 374 of 1998, in so far as it gives rise to uncertainty as to which decision must be challenged through legal proceedings and as to how periods for bringing an action are to be determined,

Ireland has failed - as regards the first head of claim - to fulfil its obligations under Article 1(1) of Council Directive 89/665/EEC of 21 December 1989 on the coordination of the laws, regulations and administrative provisions relating to the application of review procedures to the award of public supply and public works contracts, as amended by Council Directive 92/50/EEC of 18 June 1992, and Article 8(2) of Council Directive 93/37/EEC of 14 June 1993 concerning the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts, as amended by European Parliament and Council Directive 97/52/EC of 13 October 1997 and - as regards the second head of claim - to fulfil its obligations under Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665, as amended by Directive 92/50;

2. Orders Ireland to pay the costs.

OPINION OF ADVOCATE GENERAL
KOKOTT delivered on 29 October 2009 1

Case C–456/08

Commission of the European Communities
Ireland

(Failure of a Member State to fulfil obligations – Public works contracts – Directives 93/37/EEC and 89/665/EEC – Obligation of the contracting authority to inform an unsuccessful tenderer of the award decision – Review procedures under national law – Effective legal protection – Decisions open to challenge – Limitation periods – Length of the period – Requirement to bring proceedings 'at the earliest opportunity')

I – Introduction

1. This action for failure to fulfil obligations gives the Court an opportunity to develop its case-law on the remedies available to unsuccessful tenderers in public procurement procedures.

2. First, the Commission criticises Ireland on the ground that in a specific individual case an Irish authority, awarding a road construction project, did not inform the unsuccessful consortium of tenderers of the final award decision.

3. Second, the Commission and Ireland dispute whether the time-limits laid down in Irish procedural law are formulated sufficiently clearly, precisely and predictably to enable effective review of the decisions of contracting authorities.

4. As regards the second issue, the present case has points of contact with Case C–406/08 Uniplex (UK), in which I also deliver my Opinion today.

II – Legal context

A – Community law

5. The Community law context of the present case is defined by Directives 93/37/EEC (2) and 89/665/EEC. (3)

6. Article 8(2) of Directive 93/37, as amended by Directive 97/52/EC, (4) contains the following provision:

'Contracting authorities shall promptly inform candidates and tenderers of the decisions taken on contract awards, including the reasons why they have decided not to award a contract for which there has been an invitation to tender or to start the procedure again, and shall do so in writing if requested. They shall also inform the Office for Official Publications of the European Communities of such decisions.'

7. Article 1 of Directive 89/665, as amended by Directive 92/50/EEC, (5) (6) provides:

'1. The Member States shall take the measures necessary to ensure that, as regards contract award procedures falling within the scope of Directives 71/305/EEC, 77/62/EEC, and 92/50/EEC … decisions taken by the contracting authorities may be reviewed effectively and, in particular, as rapidly as possible in accordance with the conditions set out in the following Articles and, in particular, Article 2(7) on the grounds that such decisions have infringed Community law in the field of public procurement or nation[al] rules implementing that law.

2. Member States shall ensure that there is no discrimination between undertakings claiming injury in the context of a procedure for the award of a contract as a result of the distinction made by this Directive between national rules implementing Community law and other national rules.

3. The Member States shall ensure that the review procedures are available, under detailed rules which the Member States may establish, at least to any person having or having had an interest in obtaining a particular public supply or public works contract and who has been or risks being harmed by an alleged infringement. In particular, the Member States may require that the person seeking the review must have previously notified the contracting authority of the alleged infringement and of his intention to seek review.' (7)

B – National law

8. As regards national law, first the Irish European Communities (Award of Public Authorities' Contracts) Regulations 2006 (8) ('the APAC Regulations') and second the Irish Rules of the Superior Courts (9) ('the RSC') are relevant to the present case.

9. Regulation 49 of the APAC Regulations reads, in extract, as follows:

'(1) As soon as practicable after reaching a decision about entering into a public contract or framework agreement or admission to a dynamic purchasing system, a contracting authority shall inform candidates and tenderers of the decision by the most rapid means of communication possible (such as by electronic mail or by telefax). …

(5) A contracting authority shall not enter into a public contract with a successful tenderer unless at least 14 days have elapsed since the date on which tenderers were informed of the contract award decision in accordance with paragraph (1).

10. Order 84A(4) of the RSC (10) provides as follows:

'An application for the review of a decision to award or the award of a public contract shall be made at the earliest opportunity and in any event within three months from the date when grounds for the application first arose unless the Court considers that there is good reason for extending such period.'

III – Facts and pre-litigation procedure

11. The Irish National Roads Authority ('NRA') is an authority responsible for the construction and maintenance of roads in Ireland.

12. On 10 July 2001 the NRA published in the Official Journal of the European Communities a call for interest in the design, building, financing and operation of the Dundalk Western Bypass motorway. The contractor was to establish a public-private partnership (11) with the NRA and operate the motorway for a period expected to be 30 years.

13. In December 2001 the NRA invited four interested parties to proceed to negotiations. In April 2003 the NRA selected two of them to proceed to more intensive negotiations, namely the EuroLink consortium and the Celtic Roads Group consortium. On 8 August 2003 the NRA invited those consortia to submit a 'best and final offer'.

14. By letter of 14 October 2003, EuroLink was informed by the NRA that it had decided to select Celtic Roads Group as the preferred tenderer. The letter pointed out, however, that EuroLink's offer had not been rejected. If the further discussions with Celtic Roads Group did not lead to the award of a contract, the NRA reserved the right to invite EuroLink to enter into discussions with it in place of Celtic Roads Group.

15. On 9 December 2003 the NRA decided to award the contract to Celtic Roads Group. The contract was signed on 5 February 2004. From 9 February 2004 a notice to that effect was displayed on the NRA website, and a notice of the award was also published in the Official Journal of the European Union on 3 April 2004.

16. On 8 April 2004 SIAC Construction Limited ('SIAC'), an undertaking which belonged to the unsuccessful EuroLink consortium, brought an action for compensation in the High Court of Ireland, based on various alleged defects in the award procedure.

17. By judgment of 16 July 2004, (12) the High Court dismissed the action as out of time. Contrary to the view taken by SIAC, the High Court considered that SIAC must have known the grounds for its claim at the latest by 14 October 2003, when EuroLink was informed by the NRA of the identity of its preferred tenderer. In accordance with Order 84A(4) of the RSC, SIAC should have brought its action at the latest three months from that date.

18. SIAC thereupon complained to the Commission. In its complaint it alleged inter alia that it had not been informed at any time by the NRA of its award decision.

19. Following that complaint, the Commission first sent the Irish authorities an administrative letter on 15 November 2004, asking for further information on the facts. Ireland's answer of 25 April 2005 was not capable of dispelling the Commission's doubts. A letter of formal notice was thereupon sent by the Commission to Ireland on 10 April 2006, and a supplementary letter of formal notice on 15 December 2006, to which Ireland replied by letters of 30 May 2006 and 21 February 2007 respectively.

20. Since, however, Ireland's explanations still failed to satisfy the Commission, it issued a reasoned opinion within the meaning of the first paragraph of Article 226 EC on 1 February 2008, and required Ireland to take the necessary steps to comply with the reasoned opinion within two months. On 25 June 2008 Ireland replied to the reasoned opinion, stating inter alia that an amendment to the national laws, regulations and administrative provisions was being considered in the course of the transposition of Directive 2007/66. However, that answer too did not appear to the Commission to be adequate.

IV – Forms of order sought by the parties and procedure before the Court

21. By a pleading of 14 October 2008, received at the Court on 20 October 2008, the Commission brought the present action against Ireland under the second paragraph of Article 226 EC.

22. The Commission asks the Court to:

– declare that, by way of the rules on time-limits in the national legislation regulating the exercise of the right of tenderers to judicial review in public procurement procedures and by failing to notify the award decision to the complainant against that award decision, Ireland has failed to fulfil its obligations, concerning the applicable time-limits, under Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665 as interpreted by the Court and, concerning the lack of notification, under Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665 as interpreted by the Court and Article 8(2) of Directive 93/37; and

– order Ireland to pay the costs.

23. Ireland contends for its part that the Court should:

– dismiss the action; and

– order the Commission to pay the costs.

24. The Court received written submissions on the Commission's action, followed by oral argument, on 24 September 2009. (13)

V – Assessment

25. The Commission's action will be well founded if Ireland has failed to fulfil one of its obligations under the EC Treaty. Those obligations include, in accordance with the third paragraph of Article 249 EC and Article 10 EC, the duty to achieve the results aimed at by Community directives.

26. In the present case the Commission bases its action on two pleas. The first plea concerns an individual case: it relates to the alleged failure to inform the unsuccessful consortium of tenderers of the award decision for the Dundalk Western Bypass motorway construction project. The second plea goes beyond that individual case: it denounces as contrary to Community law the provision of Irish law on the time-limits for seeking remedies, as laid down in Order 84A(4) of the RSC.

A – First plea: failure to notify the award decision

27. By its first plea, the Commission accuses Ireland of a failure to fulfil its obligations under Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665 and Article 8(2) of Directive 93/37, consisting in the fact that the NRA did not inform the unsuccessful tenderer, in accordance with those provisions, of its award decision concerning the Dundalk Western Bypass motorway construction project.

28. Both the Commission and Ireland tacitly assume that the Dundalk Western Bypass motorway construction project put out to tender by the NRA was a public works contract for the purposes of Directive 93/37.

29. The NRA as the contracting authority was therefore obliged under Article 8(2) of Directive 93/37 to inform tenderers or candidates promptly of its decision on the award of that contract.

30. The same obligation also arises under Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665, because effective legal protection against award decisions can only be ensured if all candidates or tenderers are informed in good time and in detail of precisely those decisions. (14)

31. It is not disputed, however, that in the present case the NRA never formally informed EuroLink, the unsuccessful consortium of tenderers to which SIAC belonged, of its decision to award the road construction project in question to the competing consortium Celtic Roads Group.

32. Nor could the announcement of 9 February 2004 on the NRA's website and the notice of 3 April 2004 in the Official Journal of the European Union provide an adequate substitute. They merely informed the public of the final conclusion of the contract between the NRA and Celtic Roads Group. But in order to make effective legal protection possible for the unsuccessful candidates or tenderers, they should have been informed in good time before the contract was concluded – instead of being informed only after the creation of a fait accompli – about the NRA's award decision. (15)

33. The NRA thus failed to comply with its obligations to provide information under Article 8(2) of Directive 93/37 and Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665 with respect to the Dundalk Western Bypass motorway construction project.

34. Ireland objects that in the present case SIAC none the less suffered no injustice. In view of the circumstances of the particular case, at no time was there any uncertainty for SIAC as to the tenderer to which the NRA would award the contract. Ireland refers here to the NRA's letter of 14 October 2003, in which the EuroLink consortium was informed of the selection of Celtic Roads Group as the preferred tenderer. From that time at the latest, SIAC must in Ireland's view have been aware that – 'except in very exceptional circumstances' (16) – an award decision would be made in favour of Celtic Roads Group. On this point, Ireland expressly adopts the reasoning of the High Court of Ireland in the national review proceedings. (17)

35. This objection fails, however. In its letter of 14 October 2003 the NRA did not notify any final award decision; it even expressly informed EuroLink that its offer had not been rejected. The selection of a 'preferred tenderer' by NRA may already have been an important decision as to the direction to take, but it did not involve a definitive determination of a tenderer. The NRA expressly reserved the right to invite EuroLink to enter into discussions in the place of Celtic Roads Group at a later date if appropriate. EuroLink could therefore assume for the time being that it was not yet completely out of the running.

36. Apart from that, in an action under Article 226 EC for failure to fulfil obligations, which is objective in nature, it is in any case irrelevant whether actual damage or other adverse effects have occurred as a result of the conduct of official bodies of a Member State. (18)

37. Ireland stresses, finally, that its national law is in harmony with the obligations under Community law to provide information; these are correctly transposed in Article 49(1) of the APAC Regulations. In those circumstances, an individual case in which no information was given on the award decision cannot be stigmatised as a breach of Community law.

38. This argument of Ireland is also unconvincing, however. First, it is by no means undisputed whether Article 49(1) of the APAC Regulations in fact correctly transposes the obligations under Community law to provide information; separate proceedings for failure to fulfil obligations are pending against Ireland on this point. (19) Second, it is settled case-law that, in an action for failure to fulfil obligations, not only can the compatibility of a Member State's laws, regulations and administrative provisions with Community law be examined, an infringement of Community law by the national bodies in a specific individual case can also be ascertained. (20)

39. Altogether, I therefore conclude that the Commission's first plea is well founded.

B – Second plea: rules on time-limits for legal remedies in Irish procedural law that are contrary to Community law

40. By its second plea, the Commission accuses Ireland of an infringement of Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665, consisting in the fact that Order 84A(4) of the RSC regulates the limitation period for applications in review procedures in a way which conflicts with the requirements of Community law.

41. Directive 89/665 makes no express provision on the time-limits that apply to review procedures under Article 1 of the directive. (21) However, the Court has consistently held that the Member States may in the exercise of their procedural autonomy introduce reasonable limitation periods for bringing proceedings, provided that they comply with the principles of equivalence and effectiveness. (22) Those two principles are also reflected in Article 1 of Directive 89/665, the principle of equivalence in Article 1(2) and the principle of effectiveness in Article 1(1). (23)

42. In the present case it is the principle of effectiveness that is the focus of interest. That Ireland can lay down limitation periods for applications for the review of decisions of contracting authorities is not in dispute. (24) The dispute between the parties concerns merely certain details of the national rules on limitation. The essential issue is whether those rules are sufficiently clear to make effective review within the meaning of Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665 possible. The Commission denies this. It refers to lack of clarity in connection with determining the kinds of decisions against which challenges must be brought within the period laid down by Order 84A(4) of the RSC, and to lack of clarity as regards the duration of that period.

1. Determination of the kinds of decisions to which the limitation period applies (first part of the second plea)

43. By the first part of its second plea, the Commission complains that there is legal uncertainty as to the kind of procurement law decisions against which challenges must be brought within the period laid down by Order 84A(4) of the RSC. According to its wording, Order 84A(4) of the RSC applies only to the review of 'a decision to award or the award of a public contract'. In practice, however, according to the Commission, the scope of that provision is extended also to interim decisions, so that applications for their review can likewise be brought only within the period laid down by Order 84A(4) of the RSC.

44. The facts relied on by the Commission in this respect are not in dispute. Both the submissions of Ireland in the present proceedings for failure to fulfil obligations and the judgment of the High Court of Ireland on the Dundalk Western Bypass motorway construction project (25) confirm that the period laid down in Order 84A(4) of the RSC is in practice applied by the competent Irish authorities not only to challenges to final decisions ('a decision to award or the award of a public contract') but also to challenges to interim decisions taken by contracting authorities. (26)

45. It is very much in dispute between the parties, however, whether Order 84A(4) of the RSC, as interpreted and applied by the national authorities, complies with the requirements of Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665.

46. Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665 requires that decisions of contracting authorities may be reviewed 'effectively and, in particular, as rapidly as possible' for breaches of procurement law.

47. To achieve that objective of the directive, the Member States must, in accordance with the third paragraph of Article 249 EC in conjunction with Article 10 EC, take all appropriate measures, both general and particular. According to settled case-law, they must establish a specific legal framework in the area in question. (27) They must make the situation in national law sufficiently precise, clear and transparent for individuals to be able to ascertain their rights and obligations. (28)

48. Moreover, the same follows from the principle of legal certainty, which is a general legal principle forming part of the Community legal order, and must be observed by the Member States when they exercise their powers within the scope of Community law. (29) According to settled case-law, one of the requirements of legal certainty is that rules of law must be clear, precise and predictable in their effects, especially where they may have negative consequences for individuals and undertakings. (30)

49. For a limitation rule such as that in Order 84A(4) of the RSC, the requirements of clarity, precision and predictability apply especially. An unclear limitation provision is liable to entail substantial negative consequences for individuals and undertakings. If a tenderer or candidate misses a deadline for bringing proceedings under Order 84A(4) of the RSC, he is barred from complaining of possible breaches of procurement law and loses the possibility of subjecting the award decision in question to a review. He is no longer entitled to go to court to obtain the public contract as such or at least compensation for the public contract he has lost. (31)

50. Yet the application of a limitation period must precisely not lead to the exercise of the right to review of award decisions being deprived of its practical effectiveness. (32)

51. Only if it is clear beyond doubt that even preparatory acts of contracting authorities or the interim decisions at issue in the present case start the limitation period under Order 84A(4) of the RSC running can tenderers and candidates take the necessary precautions to have possible breaches of procurement law reviewed effectively within the meaning of Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665 and to avoid their challenges being statute-barred.

52. In this context, I regard it as incompatible with the requirements of Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665 for the scope of the limitation period under Order 84A(4) of the RSC to be extended in Ireland to the review of interim decisions, without that being clearly expressed in the wording of the provision. This is because the effects of the limitation rule, in particular the extent of its preclusive effect, cannot be predicted with sufficient certainty by tenderers and candidates in award procedures. The objective of effective review of decisions taken by contracting authorities, prescribed by Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665, is thereby undermined.

– Ireland's objection that a time-limit for challenging interim decisions corresponds to the objectives of Directive 89/665, in particular the requirement to act rapidly

53. Ireland contends that under Directive 89/665 and the case-law on that directive all decisions taken by contracting authorities are open to challenge. The extension of the limitation rule in Order 84A(4) of the RSC to interim decisions is in harmony with the requirements of Community law. Moreover, Directive 89/665 is based on a requirement to act rapidly. Article 1(1) demands not only effective review but also review that is carried out as rapidly as possible of decisions of contracting authorities. The review of all decisions taken by contracting authorities must therefore be subject to the time-limit laid down by Order 84A(4) of the RSC. If it were permissible for unsuccessful tenderers to wait until the issue of the final award decision and make all their complaints then, there would be a risk of lengthy legal uncertainty and a considerable loss of time in connection with the award of public contracts. Furthermore, in Ireland's view, it would become impossible to remedy possible infringements of procurement law while an award procedure was still under way.

54. In this connection, it must be observed that Ireland is of course free to provide for limitation periods for procurement law review of preparatory acts and inter

Action brought on 20 October 2008 - Commission of the European Communities v Ireland

(Case C-456/08)

Language of the case: English

Parties

Applicant: Commission of the European Communities (represented by: G. Zavvos, M. Konstantinidis and D. Kukovec, Agents)

Defendant: Ireland

The applicant claims that the Court should:

Declare that, by way of the rules on time limits in the national legislation regulating the exercise of the right of tenderers to judicial review in public procurement procedures and by failing to notify the award decision to the complainant in the award decision in question, Ireland has failed to fulfil its obligations under, concerning the applicable time limits, Article 1(1) of Council Directive 89/665/EEC[1] on the application of review procedures to the award of public supply and public work contracts as interpreted by the Court and, concerning the lack of notification, under Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665/EEC as interpreted by the Court and Article 8(2) of council directive 93/37/EEC[2] on the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts.

order Ireland to pay the costs.

Pleas in law and main arguments

In the Commission's view Irish law does not appear to be in line with the fundamental principle of legal certainty and the requirement of effectiveness under directive 89/665/EEC which is an application of this principle, since tenderers are left in uncertainty as to their position if they intend to challenge an award decision of a contracting authority in two-phase award procedures where a preferred bidder is selected prior to the final award decision. Ireland must take measures to ensure that tenderers have clarity and certainty as to which decision of the contracting authority they may challenge and from which date time limits are to be considered. It must be made clear to tenderers if Order 84A applies not only to the award decisions but also to interim decisions of a contracting authority taken during the contract award procedure (e.g. regarding the selection of the preferred bidder), with the effect that the circumstances embodied in the interim decision cannot be challenged following the lapse of the time limit reckoned from that interim decision nor may the award decision be challenged on the basis of the circumstances already embodied in the interim decision.

Order 84A requires that actions need to be brought "at the earliest opportunity and in any event within three months". The Commission considers that this formulation leaves tenderers in uncertainty regarding their position when they consider making use of their Community law right to effective legal remedy against a decision of a contracting authority. In the Commission's view it needs to be made clear for tenderers which deadline applies for bringing an action against the contracting authority's decisions and that, with a view to the obligation to respect the fundamental principle of legal certainty, the applicable time limit needs to be a fixed one which can be interpreted in a clear and foreseeable manner by all tenderers.

Judgment

1 By its application, the European Commission sought a declaration from the Court that, by adopting Article 49 of Statutory Instrument No 329 of 2006 ('S.I. No 329 of 2006') and Article 51 of Statutory Instrument No 50 of 2007 ('S.I. No 50 of 2007'), Ireland established the rules governing the notification of contracting authorities' and entities' award decisions and their reasoning to tenderers in such a way that by the time tenderers are fully informed of the reasons for the rejection of their offer, the standstill period for the conclusion of the contract has already expired, and that, by so doing, Ireland has failed to fulfil its obligations under Articles 1(1) and 2(1) of Council Directive 89/665/EEC of 21 December 1989 on the coordination of the laws, regulations and administrative provisions relating to the application of review procedures to the award of public supply and public works contracts (OJ 1989 L 395, p. 33), as amended by Council Directive 92/50/EEC of 18 June 1992 (OJ 1992 L 209, p. 1), and Articles 1(1) and 2(1) of Council Directive 92/13/EEC of 25 February 1992 coordinating the laws, regulations and administrative provisions relating to the application of Community rules on the procurement procedures of entities operating in the water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors (OJ 1992 L 76, p. 14), as interpreted by the Court in its judgment in Case C-81/98 Alcatel Austria and Others [1999] ECR I–7671 and its judgment of 24 June 2004 in Case C–212/02 Commission v Austria.

Legal context

2 Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665 provides:

'The Member States shall take the measures necessary to ensure that, as regards contract award procedures falling within the scope of Directives 71/305/EEC, 77/62/EEC and 92/50/EEC … , decisions taken by the contracting authorities may be reviewed effectively and, in particular, as rapidly as possible in accordance with the conditions set out in the following Articles, and, in particular, Article 2(7) on the grounds that such decisions have infringed Community law in the field of public procurement or nation[al] rules implementing that law.'

3 Article 2(1) of Directive 89/665 provides:

'The Member States shall ensure that the measures taken concerning the review procedures specified in Article 1 include provision for the powers to:

(a) take, at the earliest opportunity and by way of interlocutory procedures, interim measures with the aim of correcting the alleged infringement or preventing further damage to the interests concerned, including measures to suspend or to ensure the suspension of the procedure for the award of a public contract or the implementation of any decision taken by the contracting authority;

(b) either set aside or ensure the setting aside of decisions taken unlawfully, including the removal of discriminatory technical, economic or financial specifications in the invitation to tender, the contract documents or in any other document relating to the contract award procedure;

(c) award damages to persons harmed by an infringement.'

4 Article 1(1) of Directive 92/13 provides:

'The Member States shall take the measures necessary to ensure that decisions taken by contracting entities may be reviewed effectively and, in particular, as rapidly as possible in accordance with the conditions set out in the following Articles and, in particular, Article 2(8), on the grounds that such decisions have infringed Community law in the field [of] procurement or national rules implementing that law as regards:

(a) contract award procedures falling within the scope of Council Directive 90/531/EEC; and

(b) compliance with Article 3(2)(a) of that Directive in the case of the contracting entities to which that provision applies.'

5 Article 2(1) of that directive provides:

'The Member States shall ensure that the measures taken concerning the review procedures specified in Article 1 include provision for the powers:

(a) to take, at the earliest opportunity and by way of interlocutory procedure, interim measures with the aim of correcting the alleged infringement or preventing further injury to the interests concerned, including measures to suspend or to ensure the suspension of the procedure for the award of a contract or the implementation of any decision taken by the contracting entity; and

(b) to set aside or ensure the setting aside of decisions taken unlawfully, including the removal of discriminatory technical, economic or financial specifications in the notice of contract, the periodic indicative notice, the notice on the existence of a system of qualification, the invitation to tender, the contract documents or in any other document relating to the contract award procedure in question;

(c) to take, at the earliest opportunity, if possible by way of interlocutory procedures and if necessary by a final procedure on the substance, measures other than those provided for in points (a) and (b) with the aim of correcting any identified infringement and preventing injury to the interests concerned; in particular, making an order for the payment of a particular sum, in cases where the infringement has not been corrected or prevented.

Member States may take this choice either for all contracting entities or for categories of entities defined on the basis of objective criteria, in any event preserving the effectiveness of the measures laid down in order to prevent injury being caused to the interests concerned;

(d) and, in both the above cases, to award damages to persons injured by the infringement.

Where damages are claimed on the grounds that a decision has been taken unlawfully, Member States may, where their system of internal law so requires and provides bodies having the necessary powers for that purpose, provide that the contested decision must first be set aside or declared illegal.'

6 The above provisions of Directives 89/665 and 92/13 were amended by Directive 2007/66/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 11 December 2007 amending Council Directives 89/665/EEC and 92/13/EEC with regard to improving the effectiveness of review procedures concerning the award of public contracts (OJ 2007 L 335, p. 31), which entered into force on 9 January 2008 and the time-limit for the transposition of which expired on 20 December 2009.

7 Article 49 of S.I. No 329 of 2006, which, Ireland submits, transposes into Irish law Directive 2004/18/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 31 March 2004 on the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts, public supply contracts and public service contracts (OJ 2004 L 134, p. 114), states:

'(1) As soon as practicable after reaching a decision about entering into a public contract or framework agreement or admission to a dynamic purchasing system, a contracting authority shall inform candidates and tenderers of the decision by the most rapid means of communication possible (such as by electronic mail or by telefax). If the authority notifies its decision by electronic mail or telefax, it shall confirm the decision in writing if a candidate or tenderer so requests.

(3) As soon as possible, and in any event no later than 15 days after the date on which a contracting authority receives a request to do so, the authority shall inform:

(a) a candidate whose application is rejected of the reasons for the rejection, or

(b) a tenderer whose tender is rejected of the reasons for the rejection (including, in a case referred to in Regulation 23(9) or (10), the reasons for the authority's decision of non-equivalence or that the works, supplies or service do not meet the authority's performance or functional requirements), or

(c) a tenderer that has made an admissible tender of the characteristics and relative advantages of the tender selected as well as the name of the successful tenderer or the parties to the framework agreement.

award decision in accordance with paragraph (1).'

S.I. No 50 of 2007

8 Article 51 of S.I. No 50 of 2007, the purpose of which, Ireland submits, is to transpose into Irish law Directive 2004/17/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 31 March 2004 coordinating the procurement procedures of entities operating in the water, energy, transport and postal services sectors (OJ 2004 L 134, p. 1), provides:

'(1) As soon as possible after reaching a decision about

(a) entering into a framework agreement or awarding a regulated contract, or

(b) admission to a dynamic purchase system, a contracting entity shall notify candidates and tenderers of the decision by the most rapid available means of communication, such as electronic mail or fax.

(4) A contracting entity that has rejected a candidate's application shall, as soon as practicable and in any case within 15 days after receiving a request to do so, inform the candidate of the reasons for the rejection.

(5) A contracting entity that has rejected a tenderer's tender shall

(a) when notifying the tenderer in accordance with paragraph (1), indicate the principal reason, or reasons, why the tender is not the selected tender;

(b) as soon as practicable, and in any case within 15 days after receiving a request from a tenderer that has made an admissible tender, inform that tenderer of

(i) the characteristics and relative advantages of the selected tender, and

(ii) the name of the successful tenderer or parties to the framework agreement.

(8) A contracting entity may not enter into a regulated contract with a successful tenderer unless at least 14 days have elapsed since the date on which tenderers were informed, in accordance with paragraph (1), of the decision to award the contract to that tenderer.'

Pre-litigation procedure

9 It is clear from the contents of the file submitted to the Court that Directives 89/665 and 92/13 were transposed into Irish law by Statutory Instrument No 309 of 1994 ('S.I. No 309 of 1994') and by Statutory Instrument No 104 of 1993, respectively.

10 By letter of 17 May 2001, the Commission asked the Irish authorities for information relating to the implementation of Directive 89/665 which, according to the judgment in Alcatel Austria and Others, requires the Member States to establish effective review procedures that are as rapid as possible to ensure the setting aside of any decision taken unlawfully by a contracting authority at the stage where infringements can still be rectified.

11 The Irish authorities replied, by letter of 27 July 2001, that the body designated to review appeals against contracting authorities' unlawful decisions was the High Court, which had the power, among others, to declare the disputed contract void. According to those authorities, although S.I. No 309 of 1994 lacks a specific provision concerning the notification of the contract award decision, there is a 'general policy' to notify the unsuccessful tenderers of that decision at the same time as the successful tenderer is notified of it. Despite the voluntary nature of that notification and the lack of a standstill period between that notification and the conclusion of the contract, unsuccessful tenderers have ample time to initiate appropriate review procedures.

12 By letter of 18 October 2002, the Commission gave Ireland formal notice to submit, within two months, its observations with regard to the three specific obligations arising from the judgment in Alcatel Austria and Others, that, first, the contract award decision must be distinct from the conclusion of the contract and amenable to review by a court, second, that decision must be notified to all the participants in the procedure and, third, a reasonable period must be prescribed between that decision and the conclusion of the contract so as to allow tenderers to commence proceedings concerning the decision.

13 Since the Commission considered the Irish authorities' reply of 7 January 2004 to be unsatisfactory, it issued, by letter of 1 April 2004, a reasoned opinion in which it invited Ireland to take the measures necessary to comply with the opinion within two months from its notification.

14 In its reply of 6 August 2004, Ireland stated that it envisaged amending its law in accordance with the arguments set out in the reasoned opinion and, at a meeting held on 5 November 2004, specified that it would do so as part of the transposition of Directives 2004/17 and 2004/18.

15 The final draft of the legislation envisaged, in so far as it concerned the transposition of Directive 2004/18, was communicated to the Commission on 22 September 2005. On 17 July 2006, Ireland notified the Commission of S.I. No 329 of 2006 as legislation transposing Directive 2004/18.

16 Since it considered that those measures did not comply with the requirements of the judgment in Alcatel Austria and Others, and that no measures had been adopted to give effect to the same requirements arising from Commission v Austria regarding the special sectors covered by Directive 2004/17, the Commission sent Ireland an additional letter of formal notice on 15 December 2006.

17 Ireland replied to the additional letter of formal notice on 13 March 2007. That reply was considered unsatisfactory by the Commission, inasmuch as the Irish authorities acknowledged the need to amend their legislation but referred to no concrete measures which they intended to take or any timetable for adopting such measures.

18 By letter of 1 February 2008, the Commission served Ireland with an additional reasoned opinion, in which it concluded that Ireland had failed to fulfil its obligations in the terms of the action, as set out in paragraph 1 of the present judgment.

19 Ireland replied to the additional reasoned opinion by a letter of 17 March 2008, in which it stated that, as the matters at issue were thenceforth dealt with in Directive 2007/66, it would comply with the reasoned opinion by making the necessary revisions to its legislation prior to the time-limit for transposing that directive, namely 20 December 2009.

20 Since it was not satisfied with that response, the Commission decided to bring the present action.

21 The Commission submits that it follows from paragraphs 34 and 43 of the judgment in Alcatel Austria and Others that Articles 1(1) and 2(1)(a) and (b) of Directive 89/665 require the Member States to establish effective review procedures that are as rapid as possible to enable unsuccessful tenderers to have any decision taken unlawfully by the contracting authority set aside at the stage where infringements can still be rectified. Similar obligations arise from the corresponding articles of Directive 92/13 (see Commission v Austria, paragraph 23). It follows that a reasonable period must elapse between the time when the contract award decision is communicated to unsuccessful tenderers and the conclusion of the contract with the successful tenderer, in order, in particular, to allow an application to be made for interim measures prior to such conclusion.

22 However, neither Article 49 of S.I. No 329 of 2006 nor Article 51 of S.I. No 50 of 2007 satisfies those requirements. Those provisions do not ensure that tenderers are fully informed of the reasons for the refusal of their tender so as to put them in a position, in sufficient time before the expiry of the standstill period for the conclusion of the contract with the successful tenderer, to consider whether the decision awarding the contract is valid.

23 Whilst it is true that Directive 2007/66 deals with those questions by codifying and detailing the requirements in the field, that is irrelevant because the Irish legislation covered by the present action does not comply with Directives 89/665 and 92/13. Those directives must be implemented with unquestionable binding force, and the specificity, precision and clarity necessary to satisfy the requirements of legal certainty, which demand that where a directive is intended to create rights for individuals, the beneficiaries of those rights can ascertain their full extent.

24 Ireland admits that the requirements arising from Directives 89/665 and 92/13, as interpreted by the Court in Alcatel Austria and Others and Commission v Austria, have not been incorporated into its national law. It submits, however, that it would not be appropriate to declare that it has failed to fulfil its obligations in the manner alleged, since the precise extent of those obligations had not been clearly defined at the time when it adopted the measures necessary for the transposition of Directives 2004/17 and 2004/18 into Irish law. In addition, Ireland submits that Directive 2007/66 deals directly with the questions raised in the present action, and it proposed to adopt the measures necessary to transpose the latter directive into Irish law prior to 20 December 2009.

25 Ireland adds that it has taken steps to ensure that the measures required by the Commission are henceforth carried out in practice. It observes that it informed the Commission that all public purchasers are registered on the national public procurement website. All those purchasers, as well as members of a wide network of public procurement managers and other procurement officials have been reminded of the need to have award decisions reasoned with sufficient information to enable a tenderer to decide within the standstill period preceding the conclusion of the contract whether an award appears valid or there are justifiable grounds for seeking a review. That information was notified to the Commission by letter of 14 March 2008.

26 As is clear from the Court's case-law, the provisions of Directives 89/665 and 92/13, which are intended to protect tenderers against arbitrary decisions by the contracting authority, seek to reinforce existing arrangements for ensuring effective application of the Community rules on the award of public contracts, in particular where infringements can still be rectified (see, particularly, Commission v Austria, paragraph 20). The objective of those directives is to ensure that unlawful decisions taken by the contracting authorities may be reviewed effectively and as rapidly as possible (see, particularly, Case C–444/06 Commission v Spain [2008] ECR I–2045, paragraph 44).

27 The Court has held, in particular, that the Member States are required to ensure that the contracting authority's decision, prior to the conclusion of the contract in a tender procedure, as to the bidder with which it will conclude the contract is in all cases open to review in a procedure whereby an applicant may have that decision set aside if the relevant conditions are met, notwithstanding the possibility, once the contract has been concluded, of obtaining an award of damages (see, particularly, Alcatel Austria and Others, paragraph 43).

28 The complete legal protection which must be ensured before the conclusion of the contract presupposes, in particular, the duty to inform the tenderers of the award decision before such conclusion so that they may have a real possibility of initiating review proceedings. That same protection requires provision to be made for the unsuccessful tenderer to examine in sufficient time the question of whether the award decision is valid, which means that a reasonable period must pass between the moment when the contract award decision is notified to the unsuccessful tenderers and the conclusion of the contract, in order to allow them, in particular, to bring an application for interim measures until the conclusion of the contract (see to that effect, particularly, Commission v Austria, paragraphs 21 and 23; Commission v Spain, paragraphs 38 and 39; and the judgment of 11 June 2009 in Case C–327/08 Commission v France, paragraphs 41 and 56). Therefore, the fact that there is the option of bringing proceedings for the annulment of the contract itself is not such as to compensate for the impossibility of challenging the mere act of awarding the contract concerned, before the contract is concluded (Commission v Spain, paragraph 45).

29 However, as Ireland admits, S.I. No 329 of 2006 and S.I. No 50 of 2007 do not meet those requirements.

30 First, Article 49 of S.I. No 329 of 2006 provides that tenderers must be informed of the decision to award a public contract by the most rapid means of communication possible, as soon as practicable after the contracting authority has made its decision. From the date of such information, the standstill period which must elapse before the conclusion of the contract must be at least 14 days. However, under the terms of the same provision, the contracting authority is required to state the reasons for the rejection of a tender only if it receives an express request to do so, and then only 'as soon as possible, and in any event no later than 15 days' after its receipt of the request.

31 As Ireland accepts, it follows that the standstill period may already have expired when an unsuccessful tenderer is fully informed of the reasons for the rejection of its tender. Yet, as the Commission maintains, the reasons for the decision to reject the tender must be communicated at the time of the notification of that decision to the tenderers concerned and, in all cases, in sufficient time before the conclusion of the contract, in order to allow the unsuccessful tenderers to bring, in particular, an application for interim measures until such conclusion.

32 Secondly, Article 51 of S.I. No 50 of 2007 provides that the unsuccessful tenderers are to be informed, at the time when the award decision is notified, of 'the principal reason, or reasons, why [their] tender is not the selected tender'. However, as the Commission maintains, the discretion which that provision allows the contracting authority is such that unsuccessful tenderers are at risk of receiving incomplete information and very generally formulated explanations concerning the rejection of their tender, so that they are prevented from examining the validity of the award decision in sufficient time.

33 Indeed, since the standstill period preceding the conclusion of the contract with the successful tenderer is 14 days, whereas the period allowed the contracting authority to inform the unsuccessful tenderers of the 'characteristics and relative advantages of the selected tender' is 15 days after receiving a request to do so, by the time that tenderers are fully informed of the reasons for the rejection of their tender, the standstill period preceding the conclusion of the contract may already have expired.

34 As is clear from paragraph 31 of the present judgment, the reasons for the decision to reject their tender must be communicated to the tenderers concerned in sufficient time before the conclusion of the contract, in order to allow the unsuccessful tenderers to bring, in particular, an application for interim measures until such conclusion.

35 Ireland observes that it will comply with the requirements arising from Articles 1 and 2 of Directives 89/665 and 92/13 as part of the implementation of Directive 2007/66, which must be effected by 20 December 2009 at the latest, that meanwhile it has taken steps to ensure that those requirements are carried out in practice and that it would be inappropriate for the Court to uphold the present action, since the precise extent of the requirements in question was not clearly defined before delivery of the judgment in Alcatel Austria and Others.

36 However, none of those arguments can lead to the dismissal of the present action.

37 In response to the argument based on the transposition of Directive 2007/66 into Irish law, it is sufficient to point out that the question whether a Member State has failed to fulfil its obligations must be determined by reference to the situation in the Member State at the end of the period laid down in the reasoned opinion. The Court cannot take account of any subsequent changes (see, particularly, Commission v Austria, paragraph 28).

38 As regards the argument based on the steps undertaken by Ireland so that the requirements under Directives 89/665 and 92/13 are carried out in practice, it need merely be recalled that, according to established case-law, the provisions of directives must be implemented with unquestionable binding force, and the specificity, precision and clarity necessary to satisfy the requirements of legal certainty (see, particularly, Case C–225/97 Commission v France [1999] ECR I–3011, paragraph 37), that the incompatibility of national legislation with Community provisions can be remedied for good only by means of binding national provisions having the same legal force as those which must be amended (see, particularly, Case C–160/99 Commission v France [2000] ECR I–6137, paragraph 23), and that mere administrative practices, which by their nature are alterable at will by the authorities and are not given the appropriate publicity, cannot be regarded as constituting fulfilment of the obligations owed by the Member States in the context of transposition of a directive (see, particularly, Case C–508/04 Commission v Austria [2007] ECR I–3787, paragraph 80).

39 As for the argument that the relevant Community legislation lacked clarity before delivery of the judgment in Alcatel Austria and Others, it is appropriate to point out that, according to settled case-law, the interpretation which the Court gives to a rule of Community law clarifies and defines, where necessary, the meaning and scope of that rule as it must be or ought to have been understood and applied from the time of its coming into force (see, particularly, Case C-453/00 Kühne & Heitz [2004] ECR I–837, paragraph 21). In other words, a preliminary ruling does not create or alter the law, but is purely declaratory, with the consequence that in principle it takes effect from the date on which the rule interpreted entered into force (see, particularly, Case C–2/06 Kempter [2008] ECR I–411, paragraph 35).

40 Furthermore, the objective of the pre-litigation procedure provided for in Article 226 EC is precisely to give the Member State concerned an opportunity to comply, as appropriate, with its obligations under Community law (see, particularly, Case C–490/04 Commission v Germany [2007] ECR I–6095, paragraph 25).

41 As Ireland admits, when the period laid down in the reasoned opinion expired, Irish law still did not satisfy the requirements arising from Articles 1(1) and 2(1) of Directives 89/665 and 92/13, as interpreted by the Court in its judgments in Alcatel Austria and Others and in Case C–212/02 Commission v Austria.

42 Having regard to the foregoing considerations, it must be held that, by adopting Article 49 of S.I. No 329 of 2006 and Article 51 of S.I. No 50 of 2007, Ireland established the rules governing the notification of contracting authorities' and entities' award decisions and their reasoning to tenderers in such a way that by the time that tenderers are fully informed of the reasons for the rejection of their offer, the standstill period preceding the conclusion of the contract may already have expired, and that, by so doing, Ireland has failed to fulfil its obligations under Articles 1(1) and 2(1) of Directives 89/665 and 92/13.

Costs

43 Under Article 69(2) of the Rules of Procedure, the unsuccessful party is to be ordered to pay the costs if they have been applied for in the successful party's pleadings. Since the Commission has applied for costs and Ireland has been unsuccessful, Ireland must be ordered to pay the costs.

On those grounds, the Court (Second Chamber) hereby:

1. Declares that, by adopting Article 49 of Statutory Instrument No 329 of 2006 and Article 51 of Statutory Instrument No 50 of 2007, Ireland established the rules governing the notification of contracting authorities' and entities' award decisions and their reasoning to tenderers in such a way that by the time that tenderers are fully informed of the reasons for the rejection of their offer, the standstill period preceding the conclusion of the contract may already have expired, and that, by so doing, Ireland has failed to fulfil its obligations under Articles 1(1) and 2(1) of Council Directive 89/665/EEC of 21 December 1989 on the coordination of the laws, regulations and administrative provisions relating to the application of review procedures to the award of public supply and public works contracts, as amended by Council Directive 92/50/EEC of 18 June 1992, and Articles 1(1) and 2(1) of Council Directive 92/13/EEC of 25 February 1992 coordinating the laws, regulations and administrative provisions relating to the application of Community rules on the procurement procedures of entities operating in the water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors;

2. Orders Ireland to pay the costs.

Action brought on 17 October 2008 - Commission of the European Communities v Ireland

(Case C-455/08)

Language of the case: English

Parties

Applicant: Commission of the European Communities (represented by: G. Zavvos, M. Konstantinidis and D. Kukovec, Agents)

Defendant: Ireland

The applicant claims that the Court should:

declare that, by way of Article 49 of S.I. No. 329 of 2006, the Irish transposition measure for Directive 2004/18/EC[1], and Article 51 of S.I. no. 50 of 2007, the Irish transposition measure for Directive 2004/17/EC[2], Ireland has established the rules governing the notification of contracting authorities' and entities' award decisions and their reasoning to tenderers in such a way, which in practice may imply that by the time tenderers are fully informed of the reasons for the rejection of their offer, the standstill period for the conclusion of the contract has already expired; thereby, Ireland has failed to fulfil its obligations under Articles 1(1) and 2(1) of Directive 89/665/EEC[3] and Articles 1(1) and 2(1) of Directive 92/13/EEC[4] as interpreted by the European Court of Justice in its judgments handed down in case C-81/98[5] (the "Alcatel judgment") and in case C-212/02[6] (Commission v. Austria").

order Ireland to pay the costs of this action.

Pleas in law and main arguments

Irish S.I. No. 329

Article 49 of the Irish S.I. No. 329, which is the Irish transposition measure of Directive 2004/18/EC, requires that tenderers be informed of the award decision by the most rapid means of communication as soon as practicable after the contracting authority took the decision. Calculated from the date on which tenderers were informed of the award decision, the standstill period which needs to elapse before the conclusion of the contract must be at least 14 days.

However, under the Irish law, the contracting authority is required to give the reasons for the rejection of a tender only when it receives such a request. The contracting authority must provide the reasons "as soon as possible and in any event no later than 15 days". In the Commission's view, this means that the standstill period may have already lapsed by the time an unsuccessful tenderer is fully informed of the reasons for the rejection of his offer.

In order to comply with the requirements that derive from the case law of the Court of Justice in its Alcatel judgement and in Commission vs Austria it is essential to ensure that the award decision is reasoned in due time to allow it to be the subject of an effective appeal, undertaken within the standstill period. The Commission submits that the Irish rules are not in line with this requirement as they do not guarantee that tenderers are informed of the reasons for the rejection of their offer in due time and well before the expiry of the standstill period. This impedes the tenderers' right to effective legal remedies, as required by directive 89/665/EEC.

According to article 51 of S.I. No. 50 of 2007, which is the Irish transposition measure of directive 2004/17/EC, when contracting entities notify tenderers of the award decision they must indicate to the unsuccessful tenderers the "principal reason, or reasons, why the tender is not the selected tender". The "characteristics and the relative advantages of the selected tender" shall be communicated by the contracting entity to the unsuccessful tenderers "as soon as practicable, and in any case within 15 days" after receiving a request to do so. The standstill period is 14 days, calculated from the notification of the award decision. In the Commission's view this means that the standstill period might already have lapsed by the time an unsuccessful tenderer is fully informed of the reasons for the rejection of his offer.

The Commission submits that, regarding award procedures covered by directives 2004/17/EC and 92/13/EEC, the Irish legislation establishes the rules for the notification of tenderers in a manner that restricts the unsuccessful tenderers' right to effective legal remedies and is not in conformity with the remedies directives in force, directives 89/665/EEC and 92/13/EEC, as interpreted by the Court of Justice.

ORDER OF THE COURT (Sixth Chamber)

20 May 2009 (*)

(Reference for a preliminary ruling – Inadmissibility)

In Case C-454/08,

REFERENCE for a preliminary ruling under Article 234 EC from the Court of Appeal in Northern Ireland (United Kingdom), made by decision of 8 September 2008, received at the Court on 16 October 2008, in the proceedings

v

Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland,

THE COURT (Sixth Chamber), composed of J.-C. Bonichot, President of the Chamber, L. Bay Larsen and C. Toader (Rapporteur), Judges, Advocate General: Y. Bot,

Registrar: R. Grass,

after hearing the Advocate General,

makes the following

Order

1 This reference for a preliminary ruling concerns the interpretation of Articles 3, 5 and 6 of Directive 2001/42/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 27 June 2001 on the assessment of the effects of certain plans and programmes on the environment (OJ 2001 L 197, p. 30).

2 The reference was made in the course of proceedings between Seaport Investments Limited and the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland concerning the lawfulness of the Environmental Assessment of Plans and Programmes Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2004.

3 The reference for a preliminary ruling from the Court of Appeal in Northern Ireland comprises an order that merely indicates that the questions set out in the schedule thereto are to be referred to the Court of Justice.

4 In that schedule, the national court referred the following questions to the Court for a preliminary ruling:

‘(1) On the proper construction of Directive [2001/42] where a State authority which prepares a plan falling within Article 3 is itself the authority charged with overall environmental responsibility in the Member State, is it open to the Member State to refuse to designate under Article 6(3) any authority to be consulted for the purposes of Articles 5 and 6?

(2) On the proper construction of the directive, where the authority preparing a plan falling within Article 3 is itself the authority charged with overall environmental responsibility in the Member State, is the Member State required to ensure that there is a consultation body which will be designated that is separate from that authority?

(3) On the proper construction of the directive, may the requirement in Article 6(2) to the effect that the authorities referred to in Article 6(3) and the public referred to in 6(4) be given an early and effective opportunity to express their opinion “within appropriate timeframes”, be transposed by rules which provide that the authority responsible for preparing the plan shall authorise the time-limit in each case within which opinions shall be expressed, or must the rules transposing the directive themselves lay down a time-limit, or different time-limits for different circumstances, within which such opinions shall be expressed?'

5 In addition, the order for reference is accompanied by a covering letter, enclosing the notice of the appeal by the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland before the Court of Appeal in Northern Ireland; the order of 13 November 2007 of the High Court of Justice in Northern Ireland, Queen's Bench Division; and also the two judgments of that court of 7 September and 13 November 2007 against which the appeal has been lodged.

Admissibility of the reference for a preliminary ruling

6 It should be recalled that it has been consistently held that the procedure provided for by Article 234 EC is an instrument for cooperation between the Court of Justice and the national courts, by means of which the Court of Justice provides the national courts with the points of interpretation of Community law which they need in order to decide the disputes before them (see, inter alia, Case C-83/91 Meilicke [1992] ECR I-4871, paragraph 22, and the orders in Case C-361/97 Nour [1998] ECR I-3101, paragraph 10, and of 21 January 2005 in Case C-75/04 Hanssens and Others, paragraph 6).

7 In the context of that cooperation, it is for the national court seised of the dispute, which alone has direct knowledge of the facts giving rise to the dispute and which must assume responsibility for the subsequent judicial decision, to determine in the light of the particular circumstances of the case both the need for a preliminary ruling in order to enable it to deliver judgment and the relevance of the questions which it submits to the Court. Consequently, where the questions submitted concern the interpretation of Community law, the Court of Justice is, in principle, bound to give a ruling (see, inter alia, Case C-322/98 Kachelmann [2000] ECR I-7505, paragraph 16; Case C-379/98 PreussenElektra [2001] ECR I-2099, paragraph 38; and the order of 1 December 2005 in Case C-116/05 Dhumeaux et Cie and Others, paragraph 19).

8 Nevertheless, the Court has pointed out many times that the need to provide an interpretation of Community law which will be of use to the national court makes it necessary that the national court define the factual and legislative context of the questions it is asking or, at the very least, explain the factual circumstances on which those questions are based (see, inter alia, Joined Cases C-320/90 to C-322/90 Telemarsicabruzzo and Others [1993] ECR I-393, paragraph 6; Case C-470/04 N [2006] ECR I-7409, paragraph 69; and the order of 5 May 2008 in Case C-386/07 Hospital Consulting and Others, paragraph 31).

9 The Court has also stressed that it is important for the national court to set out the precise reasons why it was unsure as to the interpretation of Community law and why it considered it necessary to refer questions to the Court for a preliminary ruling (see, inter alia, the orders in Case C-9/98 Agostini [1998] ECR I-4261, paragraph 6; of 13 July 2006 in Case C-166/06 Eurodomus, paragraph 10; and Hospital Consulting and Others, paragraph 32).

10 Since it is the order for reference which serves as the basis of the proceedings before the Court, it is for the national court to explain, in the order for reference itself, the factual and legislative context of the main proceedings, the reasons which have led the court to raise the question of the interpretation of certain provisions of Community law in particular, and the connection which it establishes between those provisions and the national law applicable to the case (see, to that effect, the orders in Case C-116/96 REV Reisebüro Binder [1998] ECR I-1889, paragraph 8, and Case C-116/00 Laguillaumie [2000] ECR I-4979, paragraphs 23 and 24).

11 In that connection, it should be noted that the information provided in orders for reference serves not only to enable the Court to give helpful answers but also to give the governments of the Member States and the other interested parties the opportunity to submit observations pursuant to Article 23 of the Statute of the Court of Justice. It is the Court's duty to ensure that that opportunity is safeguarded, bearing in mind that under that provision only the orders for reference are notified to the interested parties, accompanied by a translation into the official language of each Member State (see Joined Cases 141/81 to 143/81 Holdijk and Others [1982] ECR 1299, paragraph 6, and the orders in Laguillaumie, paragraphs 14 and 24; Hanssens and Others, paragraph 10; and Dhumeaux et Cie and Others, paragraph 22).

12 In the present case, it is clear that the order for reference does not contain any information setting out the legislative and factual context of the main proceedings, since the Court of Appeal in Northern Ireland merely appended to the letter accompanying the order for reference documents relating to the proceedings before the national courts. In addition, the referring court does not set out sufficiently clearly and precisely the reasons for its uncertainty as to the interpretation of Articles 3, 5 and 6 of Directive 2001/42.

13 In those circumstances, it must be held, pursuant to Articles 92(1) and 103(1) of the Rules of Procedure, that the reference for a preliminary ruling is manifestly inadmissible.

Costs

14 Since these proceedings are, for the parties to the main proceedings, a step in the action pending before the national court, the decision on costs is a matter for that court.

On those grounds, the Court (Sixth Chamber) hereby orders:

The reference for a preliminary ruling made by the Court of Appeal in Northern Ireland by decision of 8 September 2008 is manifestly inadmissible.

Legal context

3 Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665 provides:

'The Member States shall take the measures necessary to ensure that, as regards contract award procedures falling within the scope of [Council Directive 71/305/EEC of 26 July 1971 concerning the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts (OJ, English Special Edition 1971 (II), p. 682)], [Council Directive 77/62/EEC of 21 December 1976 coordinating procedures for the award of public supply contracts (OJ 1977 L 13, p. 1)], and [Directive] 92/50/EEC, decisions taken by the contracting authorities may be reviewed effectively and, in particular, as rapidly as possible in accordance with the conditions set out in the following Articles and, in particular, Article 2(7), on the grounds that such decisions have infringed Community law in the field of public procurement or national rules implementing that law.'

4 Under Article 2(1) of Directive 89/665:

'The Member States shall ensure that the measures taken concerning the review procedures specified in Article 1 include provision for the powers to:

(a) take, at the earliest opportunity and by way of interlocutory procedures, interim measures with the aim of correcting the alleged infringement or preventing further damage to the interests concerned, including measures to suspend or to ensure the suspension of the procedure for the award of a public contract or the implementation of any decision taken by the contracting authority;

(b) either set aside or ensure the setting aside of decisions taken unlawfully, including the removal of discriminatory technical, economic or financial specifications in the invitation to tender, the contract documents or in any other document relating to the contract award procedure;

(c) award damages to persons harmed by an infringement.'

5 Article 41(1) and (2) of Directive 2004/18/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 31 March 2004 on the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts, public supply contracts and public service contracts (OJ 2004 L 134, p. 114) provides:

'1. Contracting authorities shall as soon as possible inform candidates and tenderers of decisions reached concerning the conclusion of a framework agreement, the award of the contract or admittance to a dynamic purchasing system, including the grounds for any decision not to conclude a framework agreement or award a contract for which there has been a call for competition or to recommence the procedure or implement a dynamic purchasing system; that information shall be given in writing upon request to the contracting authorities.

2. On request from the party concerned, the contracting authority shall as quickly as possible inform:

– any unsuccessful candidate of the reasons for the rejection of his application,

– any unsuccessful tenderer of the reasons for the rejection of his tender, including, for the cases referred to in Article 23, paragraphs 4 and 5, the reasons for its decision of non-equivalence or its decision that the works, supplies or services do not meet the performance or functional requirements,

– any tenderer who has made an admissible tender of the characteristics and relative advantages of the tender selected as well as the name of the successful tenderer or the parties to the framework agreement.

The time taken may in no circumstances exceed 15 days from receipt of the written request.'

National legislation

6 Regulation 47(7)(b) of the Public Contracts Regulations 2006 ('the 2006 Regulations'), adopted in order to implement Directive 89/665 into domestic law, provides:

'Proceedings under this regulation must not be brought unless –

(b) those proceedings are brought promptly and in any event within three months from the date when grounds for the bringing of the proceedings first arose unless the Court considers that there is good reason for extending the period within which proceedings may be brought.'

The dispute in the main proceedings and the questions referred for a preliminary ruling

7 Uniplex, a company established in the United Kingdom, is the sole distributor in that Member State of haemostats manufactured by Gelita Medical BV, a company established in the Netherlands.

8 NHS is part of the National Health Service, the State-owned and -operated public health service in the United Kingdom. It is a contracting authority for the purposes of Directive 2004/18.

9 On 26 March 2007 NHS launched a restricted tendering procedure for the conclusion of a framework agreement for the supply of haemostats. A notice to that effect was published in the Official Journal of the European Union on 28 March 2007.

10 On 13 June 2007, NHS issued an invitation to tender to five suppliers, including Uniplex, which had expressed interest in that framework agreement. Tenders were to be submitted by 19 July 2007.

11 The award criteria, with the relevant weighting to be given to each, set out in the tendering documentation sent to the tenderers, were as follows: price and other cost effectiveness factors (30%); quality and clinical acceptability (30%); product support and training (20%); delivery performance and capability (10%); product range/development (5%); and environmental/sustainability (5%).

12 Uniplex submitted its tender on 18 July 2007.

13 On 22 November 2007, NHS sent to Uniplex a letter indicating that it had decided to conclude a framework agreement with three tenderers. Uniplex was notified that it would not be awarded a framework agreement, as it had obtained the lowest marks of the five tenderers which had been invited to submit, and which had submitted, bids. That letter set out the award criteria, with the corresponding weighting, and indicated the names of the successful tenderers, the range of the successful scores and Uniplex's evaluated score.

14 According to that letter, the range of the successful scores was between 905.5 and 971.5, whereas Uniplex had obtained a score of 568.

15 The letter of 22 November 2007 also informed Uniplex of its right to challenge the decision to conclude the framework agreement in question, of the mandatory 10-day standstill period that would apply from the date of notification of that decision to conclusion of the framework agreement, and of Uniplex's entitlement to seek an additional debriefing.

17 NHS replied on 13 December 2007 by providing details of its approach to the evaluation of the award criteria as to characteristics and relative advantages of the successful tenders in relation to Uniplex's tender.

18 That letter stated, inter alia, first, that Uniplex had been given a score of zero for price and other cost effectiveness factors because it had submitted its list prices. All the other tenderers had offered discounts on their list prices. Secondly, with respect to the delivery performance and capability criterion, all tenderers which were new to the haemostats market in the United Kingdom received a score of zero for the sub-criterion relating to customer base in the United Kingdom.

19 On 28 January 2008, Uniplex sent NHS a letter before action alleging a number of breaches of the 2006 Regulations. Uniplex claimed in that letter that time did not start to run for the bringing of proceedings until 13 December 2007. Uniplex requested a reply from NHS by 13 February 2008, but added that if NHS took the view that time did not run from that date, it should reply by 6 February 2008.

20 By letter dated 11 February 2008, NHS notified Uniplex that there had been a change of circumstances. It had been discovered that the bid of Assut (UK) Ltd was non-compliant and that B. Braun UK Ltd, which had been placed fourth under the evaluation of tenders, had been awarded a position on the framework agreement in place of Assut (UK) Ltd.

21 NHS responded to Uniplex's letter before action by letter dated 13 February 2008, denying the various allegations made by Uniplex. In that letter, NHS also asserted, as a preliminary point, that the events giving rise to Uniplex's complaints had occurred no later than 22 November 2007, which was the date on which the decision not to include Uniplex in the framework agreement had been communicated to it. NHS asserted that 22 November 2007 was the latest date from which time began to run for the purposes of Regulation 47(7)(b) of the 2006 Regulations.

22 Uniplex responded by letter on 26 February 2008. In that letter, it continued to maintain that the period for bringing proceedings under the 2006 Regulations did not begin to run until 13 December 2007.

23 On 12 March 2008, Uniplex brought proceedings before the High Court of Justice (England and Wales), Queen's Bench Division, inter alia seeking, first, a declaration that NHS had breached the applicable public procurement rules and, second, damages.

24 The High Court of Justice (England and Wales), Queen's Bench Division, decided to stay the proceedings and to refer the following questions to the Court for a preliminary ruling:

'Where an economic operator is challenging in national proceedings the award of a framework agreement by a contracting authority following a public procurement exercise in which he was a tenderer and which was required to be conducted in accordance with Directive 2004/18/EC (and applicable implementing national provisions), and is in those proceedings seeking declarations and damages for breach of applicable public procurement provisions as regards that exercise and award:

(a) is a national provision such as Regulation 47(7)(b) of the Public Contracts Regulations 2006 which states that those proceedings are to be brought promptly and in any event within three months from the date when grounds for the bringing of the proceedings first arose, unless the Court considers that there is good reason for extending the period, to be interpreted, in light of Directive 89/665/EEC, Articles 1 and 2, and the Community-law principle of equivalence and the Community-law requirement for effective legal protection, and/or the principle of effectiveness, and having regard to any other relevant principles of EC law, as conferring an individual and unconditional right upon the tenderer against the contracting authority such that the time for the bringing of proceedings challenging such a tender exercise and award starts running as from the date when the tenderer knew or ought to have known that the procurement procedure and award infringed EC public procurement law or as from the date of breach of the applicable public procurement provisions; and

The questions referred

25 By its first question, the national court asks, in essence, whether Article 1 of Directive 89/665 requires that the period for bringing proceedings seeking to have an infringement of the public procurement rules established or to obtain damages for the infringement of those rules starts to run from the date of the infringement of those rules or from the date on which the claimant knew, or ought to have known, of that infringement.

26 The objective of Directive 89/665 is to guarantee the existence of effective remedies for infringements of Community law in the field of public procurement or of the national rules implementing that law, so as to ensure the effective application of the directives on the coordination of public procurement procedures. However, Directive 89/665 contains no provision specifically covering time-limits for the applications for review which it seeks to establish. It is therefore for the internal legal order of each Member State to establish such time-limits (Case C-470/99 Universale-Bau and Others [2002] ECR I-11617, paragraph 71).

27 The detailed procedural rules governing the remedies intended to protect rights conferred by Community law on candidates and tenderers harmed by decisions of contracting authorities must not compromise the effectiveness of Directive 89/665 (Universale-Bau and Others, paragraph 72).

28 It is for that reason appropriate to determine whether, in the light of the purpose of Directive 89/665, national legislation such as that at issue in the main proceedings does not adversely affect rights conferred on individuals by Community law (Universale-Bau and Others, paragraph 73).

29 In that regard, it should be recalled that Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665 requires Member States to guarantee that unlawful decisions of contracting authorities can be subjected to effective review which is as swift as possible (Universale-Bau and Others, paragraph 74).

30 However, the fact that a candidate or tenderer learns that its application or tender has been rejected does not place it in a position effectively to bring proceedings. Such information is insufficient to enable the candidate or tenderer to establish whether there has been any illegality which might form the subject-matter of proceedings.

31 It is only once a concerned candidate or tenderer has been informed of the reasons for its elimination from the public procurement procedure that it may come to an informed view as to whether there has been an infringement of the applicable provisions and as to the appropriateness of bringing proceedings.

32 It follows that the objective laid down in Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665 of guaranteeing effective procedures for review of infringements of the provisions applicable in the field of public procurement can be realised only if the periods laid down for bringing such proceedings start to run only from the date on which the claimant knew, or ought to have known, of the alleged infringement of those provisions (see, to that effect, Universale-Bau and Others, paragraph 78).

33 This conclusion is supported by the fact that Article 41(1) and (2) of Directive 2004/18, which was in force at the time of the facts in the main proceedings, requires contracting authorities to notify unsuccessful candidates and tenderers of the reasons for the decision concerning them. Such provisions are consistent with a system of limitation periods under which those periods start to run from the date on which the claimant knew, or ought to have known, of the alleged infringement of the provisions applicable in the field of public procurement.

34 The same conclusion is also supported by the amendments made to Directive 89/665 by Directive 2007/66/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 11 December 2007 amending Council Directives 89/665/EEC and 92/13/EEC with regard to improving the effectiveness of review procedures concerning the award of public contracts (OJ 2007 L 335, p. 31), even though the period for transposition of that directive did not expire until after the facts in the main proceedings had occurred. Article 2c of Directive 89/665, introduced by Directive 2007/66, provides that the decision of the contracting authority is to be communicated to each candidate or tenderer, accompanied by a summary of the relevant reasons, and that the period for making an application for review expires only after a specified number of days following that communication.

35 The answer to the first question accordingly is that Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665 requires that the period for bringing proceedings seeking to have an infringement of the public procurement rules established or to obtain damages for the infringement of those rules should start to run from the date on which the claimant knew, or ought to have known, of that infringement.

The second question

36 The second question consists of two parts. The first concerns the interpretation of Directive 89/665 in relation to a requirement under national law that proceedings be brought promptly. The second relates to the effects which that directive has on the discretion conferred on the national court to extend periods within which proceedings must be brought.

The first part of the second question

37 By the first part of the second question, the national court asks, in essence, whether Directive 89/665 is to be interpreted as precluding a provision, such as Regulation 47(7)(b) of the 2006 Regulations, which requires that proceedings be brought promptly.

38 As observed in paragraph 29 of this judgment, Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665 requires Member States to guarantee that decisions of contracting authorities can be subjected to effective review which is as swift as possible. In order to attain the objective of rapidity pursued by that directive, Member States may impose limitation periods for actions in order to require traders to challenge promptly preliminary measures or interim decisions taken in public procurement procedures (see, to that effect, Universale-Bau and Others, paragraphs 75 to 79; Case C-230/02 Grossmann Air Service [2004] ECR I-1829, paragraphs 30 and 36 to 39; and Case C-241/06 Lämmerzahl [2007] ECR I-8415, paragraphs 50 and 51).

39 The objective of rapidity pursued by Directive 89/665 must be achieved in national law in compliance with the requirements of legal certainty. To that end, Member States have an obligation to establish a system of limitation periods that is sufficiently precise, clear and foreseeable to enable individuals to ascertain their rights and obligations (see, to that effect, Case C-361/88 Commission v Germany [1991] ECR I-2567, paragraph 24, and Case C-221/94 Commission v Luxembourg [1996] ECR I-5669, paragraph 22).

40 Furthermore, the objective of rapidity pursued by Directive 89/665 does not permit Member States to disregard the principle of effectiveness, under which the detailed methods for the application of national limitation periods must not render impossible or excessively difficult the exercise of any rights which the person concerned derives from Community law, a principle which underlies the objective of effective review proceedings laid down in Article 1(1) of that directive.

41 A national provision such as Regulation 47(7)(b) of the 2006 Regulations, under which proceedings must not be brought ‘unless … those proceedings are brought promptly and in any event within three months’, gives rise to uncertainty. The possibility cannot be ruled out that such a provision empowers national courts to dismiss an action as being out of time even before the expiry of the three-month period if those courts take the view that the application was not made ‘promptly’ within the terms of that provision.

42 As the Advocate General observed in point 69 of her Opinion, a limitation period, the duration of which is placed at the discretion of the competent court, is not predictable in its effects. Consequently, a national provision providing for such a period does not ensure effective transposition of Directive 89/665.

43 It follows that the answer to the first part of the second question is that Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665 precludes a national provision, such as that at issue in the main proceedings, which allows a national court to dismiss, as being out of time, proceedings seeking to have an infringement of the public procurement rules established or to obtain damages for the infringement of those rules on the basis of the criterion, appraised in a discretionary manner, that such proceedings must be brought promptly.

44 By the second part of the second question, the national court asks, in essence, which effects follow from Directive 89/665 in respect of the discretion conferred on the national court to extend periods within which proceedings must be brought.

45 In the case of national provisions transposing a directive, national courts are bound to interpret national law, so far as possible, in the light of the wording and purpose of the directive concerned in order to achieve the result sought by that directive (see Case 14/83 Von Colson and Kamann [1984] ECR 1891, paragraph 26, and Joined Cases C-397/01 to C-403/01 Pfeiffer and Others [2004] ECR I-8835, paragraph 113).

46 In the present case, it is for the national court, as far as is at all possible, to interpret the domestic provisions establishing the limitation period in a manner which accords with the objective of Directive 89/665 (see, to that effect, Case C-327/00 Santex [2003] ECR I-1877, paragraph 63, and Lämmerzahl, paragraph 62).

47 In order to satisfy the requirements in the answer given to the first question, the national court dealing with the case must, as far as is at all possible, interpret the national provisions governing the limitation period in such a way as to ensure that that period begins to run only from the date on which the claimant knew, or ought to have known, of the infringement of the rules applicable to the public procurement procedure in question.

48 If the national provisions at issue do not lend themselves to such an interpretation, that court is bound, in exercise of the discretion conferred on it, to extend the period for bringing proceedings in such a manner as to ensure that the claimant has a period equivalent to that which it would have had if the period provided for by the applicable national legislation had run from the date on which the claimant knew, or ought to have known, of the infringement of the public procurement rules.

49 In any event, if the national provisions do not lend themselves to an interpretation which accords with Directive 89/665, the national court must refrain from applying those provisions, in order to apply Community law fully and to protect the rights conferred thereby on individuals (see, to that effect, Santex, paragraph 64, and Lämmerzahl, paragraph 63).

50 The answer to the second part of the second question is accordingly that Directive 89/665 requires the national court, by virtue of the discretion conferred on it, to extend the limitation period in such a manner as to ensure that the claimant has a period equivalent to that which it would have had if the period provided for by the applicable national legislation had run from the date on which the claimant knew, or ought to have known, of the infringement of the public procurement rules. If the national provisions do not lend themselves to an interpretation which accords with Directive 89/665, the national court must refrain from applying them, in order to apply Community law fully and to protect the rights conferred thereby on individuals.

Costs

51 Since these proceedings are, for the parties to the main proceedings, a step in the action pending before the national court, the decision on costs is a matter for that court. Costs incurred in submitting observations to the Court, other than the costs of those parties, are not recoverable.

On those grounds, the Court (Third Chamber) hereby rules:

1. Article 1(1) of Council Directive 89/665/EEC of 21 December 1989 on the coordination of the laws, regulations and administrative provisions relating to the application of review procedures to the award of public supply and public works contracts, as amended by Council Directive 92/50/EEC of 18 June 1992, requires that the period for bringing proceedings seeking to have an infringement of the public procurement rules established or to obtain damages for the infringement of those rules should start to run from the date on which the claimant knew, or ought to have known, of that infringement.

2. Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665, as amended by Directive 92/50, precludes a national provision, such as that at issue in the main proceedings, which allows a national court to dismiss, as being out of time, proceedings seeking to have an infringement of the public procurement rules established or to obtain damages for the infringement of those rules on the basis of the criterion, appraised in a discretionary manner, that such proceedings must be brought promptly.

3. Directive 89/665, as amended by Directive 92/50, requires the national court, by virtue of the discretion conferred on it, to extend the limitation period in such a manner as to ensure that the claimant has a period equivalent to that which it would have had if the period provided for by the applicable national legislation had run from the date on which the claimant knew, or ought to have known, of the infringement of the public procurement rules. If the national provisions do not lend themselves to an interpretation which accords with Directive 89/665, as amended by Directive 92/50, the national court must refrain from applying them, in order to apply Community law fully and to protect the rights conferred thereby on individuals.

1. Article 1(1) of Council Directive 89/665/EEC of 21 December 1989 on the coordination of the laws, regulations and administrative provisions relating to the application of review procedures to the award of public supply and public works contracts, as amended by Council Directive 92/50/EEC of 18 June 1992, requires that the period for bringing proceedings seeking to have an infringement of the public procurement rules established or to obtain damages for the infringement of those rules should start to run from the date on which the claimant knew, or ought to have known, of that infringement.

2. Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665, as amended by Directive 92/50, precludes a national provision, such as that at issue in the main proceedings, which allows a national court to dismiss, as being out of time, proceedings seeking to have an infringement of the public procurement rules established or to obtain damages for the infringement of those rules on the basis of the criterion, appraised in a discretionary manner, that such proceedings must be brought promptly.

3. Directive 89/665, as amended by Directive 92/50, requires the national court, by virtue of the discretion conferred on it, to extend the limitation period in such a manner as to ensure that the claimant has a period equivalent to that which it would have had if the period provided for by the applicable national legislation had run from the date on which the claimant knew, or ought to have known, of the infringement of the public procurement rules. If the national provisions do not lend themselves to an interpretation which accords with Directive 89/665, as amended by Directive 92/50, the national court must refrain from applying them, in order to apply Community law fully and to protect the rights conferred thereby on individuals.

Uniplex (UK) Ltd
NHS Business Services Authority

(Reference for a preliminary ruling from the High Court of Justice of England and Wales, Queen's Bench Division, Leeds District Registry (United Kingdom))

(Public procurement – Directive 89/665/EEC – Review procedure under national law – Effective legal protection – Limitation periods – Point at which time starts running – Whether the applicant knew or 'ought to have' known of the breach of procurement law – Requirement that proceedings be brought 'promptly')

I – Introduction

1. This reference for a preliminary ruling from the High Court of Justice of England and Wales (2) gives the Court of Justice of the European Communities an opportunity to develop its case-law on the remedies available to unsuccessful tenderers in public procurement procedures.

2. It is acknowledged that the Member States may lay down appropriate limitation periods for remedies of this kind. Clarification is required, however, in particular on the question of the time from which those limitation periods may start to run: the time at which the alleged breach of procurement law occurred, or the time at which the unsuccessful tenderer knew or should have known of the breach. This problem, whose practical effects should not be underestimated, arises in the context of a provision of English law under which the period for bringing applications for review starts to run regardless of the unsuccessful tenderer's knowledge of the breach of procurement law, and any extension of the period is at the discretion of the national court.

3. As regards the legal issues raised, the present case has certain points of contact with Case C–456/08 Commission v Ireland, in which I also deliver my Opinion today.

II – Legal context

A – Community law

4. The Community law context of the present case is defined by Directive 89/665/EEC, (3) as amended by Directive 92/50/EEC. (4) (5)

5. Article 1 of Directive 89/665 provides as follows:

‘1. The Member States shall take the measures necessary to ensure that, as regards contract award procedures falling within the scope of Directives 71/305/EEC, 77/62/EEC, and 92/50/EEC … decisions taken by the contracting authorities may be reviewed effectively and, in particular, as rapidly as possible in accordance with the conditions set out in the following Articles and, in particular, Article 2(7) on the grounds that such decisions have infringed Community law in the field of public procurement or nation[al] rules implementing that law.

2. Member States shall ensure that there is no discrimination between undertakings claiming injury in the context of a procedure for the award of a contract as a result of the distinction made by this Directive between national rules implementing Community law and other national rules.

3. The Member States shall ensure that the review procedures are available, under detailed rules which the Member States may establish, at least to any person having or having had an interest in obtaining a particular public supply or public works contract and who has been or risks being harmed by an alleged infringement. In particular, the Member States may require that the person seeking the review must have previously notified the contracting authority of the alleged infringement and of his intention to seek review.’ (6)

6. In addition, Article 2(1) of Directive 89/665 contains the following provision:

(b) either set aside or ensure the setting-aside of decisions taken unlawfully …

(c) award damages to persons harmed by an infringement.’

B – National law

7. For England, Wales and Northern Ireland, Directive 89/665 was transposed by Part 9 of the Public Contracts Regulations 2006 (‘the PCR 2006’), (7) Regulation 47 of which provides, in extract, as follows:

‘(1) The obligation on –

(a) a contracting authority to comply with the provisions of these Regulations, other than regulations …, and with any enforceable Community obligation in respect of a public contract, framework agreement or design contest …

is a duty owed to an economic operator.

(6) A breach of the duty owed in accordance with paragraph (1) or (2) is actionable by any economic operator which, in consequence, suffers, or risks suffering, loss or damage and those proceedings shall be brought in the High Court.

(7) Proceedings under this regulation must not be brought unless –

(a) the economic operator bringing the proceedings has informed the contracting authority or concessionaire, as the case may be, of the breach or apprehended breach of the duty owed to it in accordance with paragraph (1) or (2) by that contracting authority or concessionaire and of its intention to bring proceedings under this regulation in respect of it; and

(b) those proceedings are brought promptly and in any event within three months from the date when grounds for the bringing of the proceedings first arose unless the Court considers that there is good reason for extending the period within which proceedings may be brought.

(9) In proceedings under this regulation the Court does not have power to order any remedy other than an award of damages in respect of a breach of the duty owed in accordance with paragraph (1) or (2) if the contract in relation to which the breach occurred has been entered into.'

III – Facts and main proceedings

8. Uniplex (UK) Ltd (8) is a company established in the United Kingdom and an economic operator for the purposes of Directive 2004/18 and the PCR 2006. It is the sole distributor in the United Kingdom of haemostats manufactured by the Netherlands company Gelita Medical BV.

9. NHS Business Services Authority (9) is part of the public health service of the United Kingdom, the National Health Service, which is owned and operated by the State. It is a contracting authority for the purposes of Directive 2004/18 and the PCR 2006.

10. On 26 March 2007 NHS Business Services invited tenders, in a restricted procedure, for a framework agreement for the supply of haemostats to National Health Service institutions. (10) A notice to that effect was published in the Official Journal of the European Union on 28 March 2007.

11. By letter of 13 June 2007, NHS Business Services addressed an invitation to tender to five interested parties, including Uniplex. The deadline for the submission of tenders was 19 July 2007. Uniplex submitted its tender on 18 July 2007.

12. On 22 November 2007 Uniplex was informed by NHS Business Services in writing that awards had finally been made to three tenderers, but that Uniplex would not be awarded a framework agreement. The letter also set out the award criteria, the names of the successful tenderers, the evaluated score of Uniplex, and the range of the evaluated scores achieved by the successful tenderers. According to the criteria applied by NHS Business Services, Uniplex had achieved the lowest evaluated score of the five tenderers which had been invited to submit and had submitted bids. In the letter Uniplex was also informed of its right to challenge the award decision and to seek further information.

13. In reply to a separate request by Uniplex of 23 November 2007, NHS Business Services on 13 December 2007 gave details of its method of evaluation with reference to its award criteria, and also of the characteristics and relative advantages of the bids of the successful tenderers compared with the Uniplex tender.

14. On 28 January 2008 Uniplex sent NHS Business Services a letter before action alleging various breaches of the public procurement rules.

15. By letter of 11 February 2008, NHS Business Services informed Uniplex that the situation had changed. It had been found that the tender by Assut (UK) Ltd did not comply with the requirements, and B. Braun (UK) Ltd, which had been placed fourth in the evaluation of the tenders, had been included in the framework agreement instead of Assut (UK) Ltd.

16. After a further exchange of correspondence between Uniplex and NHS Business Services, in which inter alia the starting point of the period for bringing proceedings was disputed, Uniplex on 12 March 2008 commenced proceedings in the High Court, the court making the present reference. It seeks inter alia a declaration of the alleged breaches of procurement law, damages from NHS Business Services in respect of those breaches, and – if the court has jurisdiction to make such an order – an order that NHS Business Services award Uniplex a framework agreement.

17. The referring court is uncertain whether Uniplex brought its action in time and, if not, whether it should exercise its discretion to extend the period for bringing proceedings under Regulation 47(7)(b) of the PCR 2006.

IV – Order for reference and procedure before the Court

18. By order of 30 July 2008, received at the Court on 18 September 2008, the High Court stayed the proceedings before it and referred the following questions to the Court for a preliminary ruling:

Where an economic operator is challenging in national proceedings the award of a framework agreement by a contracting authority following a public procurement exercise in which he was a tenderer and which was required to be conducted in accordance with Directive 2004/18 (and applicable implementing national provisions), and is in those proceedings seeking declarations and damages for breach of applicable public procurement provisions as regards that exercise and award:

(a) is a national provision such as Regulation 47(7)(b) of the PCR 2006 which states that those proceedings are to be brought promptly and in any event within three months from the date when grounds for the bringing of the proceedings first arose, unless the court considers that there is good reason for extending the period, to be interpreted, in light of Articles 1 and 2 of Directive 89/665 and the Community law principle of equivalence and the Community law requirement for effective legal protection, and/or the principle of effectiveness, and having regard to any other relevant principles of EC law, as conferring an individual and unconditional right upon the tenderer against the contracting authority such that the time for the bringing of proceedings challenging such a tender exercise and award starts running as from the date when the tenderer knew or ought to have known that the procurement procedure and award infringed EC public procurement law or as from the date of breach of the applicable public procurement provisions; and

(b) in either event how is a national court then to apply

(i) any requirement for proceedings to be brought promptly and

(ii) any discretion as to extending the national limitation period for the bringing of such proceedings?

19. In the procedure before the Court, in addition to Uniplex and NHS Business Services, the United Kingdom Government, Ireland and the Commission of the European Communities made written and oral observations. (11) The German Government also took part in the hearing.

V – Assessment

20. By its two questions, the High Court seeks essentially to know what requirements derive from Community law for the interpretation and application of limitation periods in the public procurement review procedure.

21. Directive 89/665 makes no express provision on the time-limits that apply to review procedures under Article 1 of the directive. (12) However, the Court has consistently held that the Member States may in the exercise of their procedural autonomy introduce reasonable limitation periods for bringing proceedings, provided that they comply with the principles of equivalence and effectiveness. (13) Those two principles are also reflected in Article 1 of Directive 89/665, the principle of equivalence in Article 1(2) and the principle of effectiveness in Article 1(1). (14)

22. In the present case it is the principle of effectiveness that is the focus of interest. That the United Kingdom can lay down limitation periods for applications for the review of decisions of contracting authorities is not in dispute. (15) The dispute between the parties concerns merely certain details of the interpretation and application of the national rules on limitation. They disagree on whether a limitation provision such as that in Regulation 47(7)(b) of the PCR 2006 has due regard to the requirements of Community law. In this connection the referring court wishes to know – whether it may take as the point when time starts running the date of the breach of procurement law, or must take the date when the applicant knew or ought to have known of the breach (first question), – whether in a review procedure it may dismiss an action as inadmissible if it has not been brought ‘promptly’ (first part of the second question), and – how it should exercise its discretion with respect to a possible extension of time (second part of the second question).

23. It depends on the answers to those questions whether or not the referring court must regard the application brought by Uniplex in the main proceedings as brought in time within the meaning of Regulation 47(7)(b) of the PCR 2006.

24. I shall start by addressing the first question (see Section A below) and the second part of the second question (see Section B below), which are closely connected, before turning to the first part of the second question (see Section C below).

25. Contrary to the oral submissions of NHS Business Services, the United Kingdom and Ireland, it cannot be decisive for the answer to those questions that a provision such as Regulation 47(7)(b) of the PCR 2006 may reflect a long tradition in the Member State concerned.

26. Certainly, when requirements of Community law are being interpreted, attention should indeed always be paid to whether they can be fitted into national law with as little friction as possible. For all that, the Court's primary function is to ensure that in the interpretation and application of European Community law the law is observed (first paragraph of Article 220 EC) and – working together with the national courts – to give effect to the rights that individuals derive from Community law.

A – Relevance of knowledge of the breach of procurement law for determining when time starts running (first question)

27. By its first question, the referring court seeks essentially to know whether it may take as the point when the limitation period starts running in review procedures under procurement law the date of the breach of procurement law, or must take the date when the applicant knew or ought to have known of the breach.

28. The opinions of the parties differ on this point. Uniplex, the German Government and the Commission take the view that, at least with reference to legal remedies that do not affect the validity of contracts, no limitation period may start before the applicant knew or ought to have known of the alleged breach of procurement law. By contrast, NHS Business Services, the United Kingdom Government and Ireland insist that the running of time cannot depend on whether the applicant knew or ought to have known of a breach of procurement law; it suffices to give the national courts a discretion to extend the limitation period.

29. The latter view is reflected in the practice of both the English courts (16) and the Irish courts. (17) According to that case-law, the period for review of a procurement decision starts to run, in accordance with Regulation 47(7)(b) of the PCR 2006, (18) regardless of whether the tenderer or candidate concerned knew or ought to have known of the breach of procurement law complained of. The applicant's lack of knowledge of the breach of procurement law may at most be relevant to extending the period, and in that respect is one of a number of aspects which the national court takes into account when exercising its discretion. (19)

30. Against the background of this dominant practice of the English courts, (20) it will be discussed below whether it is compatible with the requirements of Community law for a limitation period such as that in Regulation 47(7)(b) of the PCR 2006 to start running regardless of whether the applicant knew or ought to have known of the breach of procurement law in question.

31. Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665 requires it to be possible for decisions taken by contracting authorities to be reviewed for infringements of procurement law 'effectively and, in particular, as rapidly as possible'. That is an expression both of the principle of effectiveness ('effectively') and of the requirement of rapid action ('as rapidly as possible'). Neither of those concerns may be put into practice at the expense of the other. (21) A fair balance between them must instead be struck, and this is to be assessed in the light of the type and consequences of the particular legal remedy and the rights and interests of all parties concerned.

32. In my Opinion in pressetext Nachrichtenagentur I have previously suggested a solution based on a differentiation between primary and secondary legal protection. (22)

– The difference between primary and secondary legal protection

33. If a remedy is aimed at having a contract already concluded with a successful tenderer declared void (primary legal protection), it is reasonable to lay down an absolute limitation period of comparatively short duration. The particularly severe legal consequence of the invalidity of an already concluded contract is justification for laying down a period that also runs regardless of whether the applicant knew, or at least ought to have known, that the award of the contract was contrary to procurement law. Both for the contracting authority and for its contractual partner, there is a clear need, deserving of protection, for legal certainty with respect to the validity of the contract that has been concluded. (23) The requirement of review 'as rapidly as possible' within the meaning of Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665 therefore carries particular weight in the field of primary legal protection.

34. It is otherwise if a remedy is directed merely at a declaration of an infringement of procurement law and possibly an award of compensation (secondary legal protection). Such a remedy does not affect the existence of a contract already concluded with a successful tenderer. The contractual partners' need for certainty of planning and their interest in performing the public contract swiftly are not affected. Accordingly, there is no occasion to subject applications for secondary legal protection to the same strict limitation periods as applications for primary legal protection. On the contrary, the aim of effective review which Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665 imposes on the Member States argues in favour of giving more weight to the legal protection interests of the unsuccessful tenderer or candidate, and hence in favour of more generous limitation periods which do not start running until the person concerned knows or ought to know of the alleged breach of procurement law. (24)

35. Contrary to the view taken by NHS Business Services and the United Kingdom Government, such a differentiation between primary and secondary legal protection does not lead to 'lack of transparency' and 'legal uncertainty'. Nor is it suitable only for cases such as pressetext Nachrichtenagentur in which a contracting authority makes a 'direct award' with no prior notice of the award.

36. The distinction between primary and secondary legal protection is, rather, of general validity. It makes it possible to strike a fair balance between 'effective review' and 'review as rapidly as possible', and is sketched out in Directive 89/665 itself. Even in the original version of the directive, a distinction is drawn in Article 2(1)(b) and (c) between the setting-aside of unlawful decisions on the one hand and the awarding of compensation on the other. In future, Articles 2d, 2e and 2f of Directive 89/665, as amended by Directive 2007/66, will show more plainly this distinction between primary and secondary legal protection, also and particularly with respect to limitation periods. (25)

37. The present case concerns not primary but only secondary legal protection. That becomes especially clear if one looks at the introductory words to the questions formulated by the High Court. That passage speaks exclusively of applications for a declaration of a breach of procurement law and for the award of compensation. That is the context of the questions referred. (26)

38. There is therefore no reason to subject the applications brought by Uniplex in the main proceedings to the same strict limitation periods that might perhaps apply to applications for a declaration of the invalidity of a contract or indeed for a contracting authority to be ordered to enter into a contract.

– Time running from when the applicant knew or 'ought to have' known of the breach of procurement law

39. The principle of effectiveness, as expressed in Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665, requires that a limitation period for claims for compensation and applications for declarations of breaches of procurement law may not start to run until the time when the applicant knew or ought to have known of the alleged breach of procurement law. (27)

40. The Court has also expressed this in Universale-Bau and Others: (28) it considers that the spirit and purpose of rules on limitation are to ensure that unlawful decisions of contracting authorities, from the moment they become known to those concerned, (29) are challenged and corrected as soon as possible. (30)

41. It is of course for the referring court to ascertain the time from which the person concerned knew or ought to have known of a breach of procurement law. (31) In order to give a useful answer, however, the Court may, in a spirit of cooperation with national courts, provide all the guidance that it regards as necessary. (32)

42. The mere fact that a tenderer or candidate has learnt that his tender has been unsuccessful does not yet mean that he knows of any breach of procurement law. Consequently, that fact on its own cannot yet set any limitation periods running for applications for secondary legal protection. As Uniplex correctly submits, an unsuccessful tenderer or candidate for his part could also not rely, in an application for review, on the mere statement that his tender had not been accepted.

43. Only once the unsuccessful tenderer or candidate has been informed of the essential reasons for his being unsuccessful in the award procedure may it generally be presumed that he knew or in any case ought to have known of the alleged breach of procurement law. (33) Only from then on is it possible for him sensibly to prepare a possible application for review and to estimate its chances of success. (34) Before receiving such reasons, on the other hand, the person concerned cannot as a rule effectively exercise his right to a review. (35)

44. Directive 2004/18 accordingly lays down already today, in Article 41(1) and (2), that contracting authorities must inform unsuccessful tenderers and candidates of the reasons for their rejection. To the same effect, Article 2c of Directive 89/665, inserted by Directive 2007/66, provides for future cases that the communication of the contracting authority's decision to each tenderer or candidate must be accompanied by a summary of the relevant reasons, and that any limitation periods for applications for review may not expire until a certain number of calendar days after that communication.

45. Merely for the sake of completeness, it may be mentioned that the time when the period starts running for bringing a claim for compensation must not be made to depend on the fact that the applicant knew or ought to have known of the damage incurred by him. (36) The damage that follows from a breach of duty sometimes comes to light only after some delay. Waiting for knowledge of the damage would thus run counter to the principle of review 'as rapidly as possible' within the meaning of Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665. In return, however, it must be made possible for the tenderer or candidate concerned, if necessary, first to make an application for a declaration of a breach of procurement law and then to quantify the damage and claim compensation in subsequent proceedings.

– The national court's discretion to grant an extension of the limitation period

46. NHS Business Services, the United Kingdom and Ireland object that effective legal protection does not necessarily require, however, that the limitation periods for seeking remedies in review proceedings run only from the time when the tenderer or candidate concerned knew or ought to have known of the alleged infringement of procurement law. They submit that a provision such as Regulation 47(7)(b) of the PCR 2006 ensures effective legal protection by giving the national court a discretion to extend, if appropriate, the period for bringing proceedings.

47. That argument does not convince me.

48. Article 1(1) in conjunction with Article 1(3) of Directive 89/665 gives any person who has or had an interest in obtaining a particular public contract and who has been or risks being harmed by an alleged infringement an individual right to review of the decisions of the contracting authority. (37) As I explain in the parallel case of Commission v Ireland, the effective assertion of such a claim cannot be made to depend on the discretion of a national body, not even the discretion of an independent court. (38)

49. Regulation 47(7)(b) of the PCR 2006 does not give the national court any legal criteria for the exercise of its discretion as regards a possible extension of time. At the hearing before the Court, all the parties moreover agreed in submitting that the applicant's lack of knowledge of a breach of procurement law is only one of several aspects which influence the national court's assessment. Thus lack of knowledge may lead to an extension of the period, but this is not mandatory. Furthermore, the national court may, as Ireland observes, limit an extension of time to specific complaints and refuse it for others, so that an action by the unsuccessful tenderer or candidate may well be only partially admissible.

50. It thus becomes unpredictable for the person concerned in the individual case whether it will be worth his while to claim a legal remedy. Such a legal position may deter unsuccessful tenderers or candidates – especially those from other Member States – from asserting their legal right to review of the decisions of contracting authorities. The objective of effective review, as prescribed by Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665, cannot be achieved with certainty in those circumstances.

– Practical problems in determining whether an applicant 'knows' or 'ought to know'

51. NHS Business Services and the United Kingdom further assert that it will lead to considerable practical problems if a limitation period does not start running until the date on which the unsuccessful tenderer or candidate knew or ought to have known of the alleged breach of procurement law. It is not easy, for example, to assess what the knowledge must relate to in the particular case or at what time it was acquired or from when it must be presumed.

52. It suffices to point out here that the same practical problems also arise if a court, when exercising its discretion as to a possible extension of time, has to consider the time from which the applicant knew or ought to have known of the breach of procurement law he complains of. A provision such as Regulation 47(7)(b) of the PCR 2006 cannot avoid such practical problems; it merely treats them from a different point of view.

– The deterrent effect of actions for compensation

53. Ireland also objects that an overgenerous approach to time-limits for bringing actions for compensation may have a highly deterrent effect on contracting authorities (a 'chilling effect') and cause considerable delay to award procedures. This submission was adopted at the hearing by NHS Business Services and the United Kingdom.

54. This argument is also unconvincing, however.

55. Successful actions for compensation by unsuccessful tenderers or candidates may undoubtedly entail a substantial financial burden for the contracting authority. This risk is, however, the price to be paid by a contracting authority so that effective legal protection in connection with the award of public contracts can be provided. Any attempt to minimise the attendant financial risks for the contracting authority will necessarily be at the expense of effective legal protection.

56. A too restrictive approach to the conditions for obtaining secondary legal protection would ultimately also jeopardise the achievement of the objectives of the review procedure. Those objectives do not only include the provision of legal protection for the tenderers and candidates concerned. The review procedure is in fact also intended to have a disciplinary effect on contracting authorities, by ensuring that the rules of European procurement law – in particular the requirement of transparency and the prohibition of discrimination – are observed and any infringements penalised.

57. Merely in passing, it may be observed that not even a limitation rule such as Regulation 47 (7)(b) of the PCR 2006 is capable of excluding the chilling effect mentioned. As already noted, that provision leaves it in the discretion of the national court to extend the limitation periods for unsuccessful tenderers or candidates, especially where they had no previous knowledge of the alleged infringement of procurement law. This possibility of an extension of time may thus lead to the contracting authority, long after the contract has been concluded with the successful tenderer or candidate, still being exposed to the risk of claims for compensation. Because of the unpredictability of the exercise of judicial discretion, this risk is if anything more difficult for the contracting authority to calculate in the context of Regulation 47(7)(b) of the PCR 2006 than with a rule under which the limitation period starts to run as soon as the person concerned knows or ought to know of the alleged breach of procurement law.

B – The national court's discretion to grant an extension of time (second part of the second question)

58. The second part of the second question is closely connected with the first question. The referring court essentially wishes to know what steps it should take if an unsuccessful tenderer or candidate did not initially know of the alleged breach of procurement law, and was not in a position in which he ought to have known of it, so that he could not make an application for review within the three-month period under Regulation 47(7)(b) of the PCR 2006.

59. According to settled case-law, the courts of the Member States are required to interpret and apply national law consistently with directives. (39) Specifically with respect to procurement review procedures, they must interpret the national provisions laying down a limitation period, as far as is at all possible, in such a way as to ensure observance of the principle of effectiveness deriving from Directive 89/665. (40)

60. As I have explained in connection with the first question, (41) limitation periods for actions for declarations and compensation in connection with public contracts may not start to run until the time when the applicant knew or ought to have known of the alleged breach of procurement law. The referring court must therefore do whatever lies within its jurisdiction to achieve that objective. (42)

61. Consequently, the referring court is required above all to deal with the limitation period under Regulation 47(7)(b) of the PCR 2006, in harmony with the directive, in such a way that in the case of proceedings for declarations and compensation it does not already start to run from the time of the breach of procurement law, but only from the time at which the applicant knew or ought to have known of that breach of procurement law.

62. Should Regulation 47(7)(b) of the PCR 2006 not be amenable to such an interpretation, then the referring court would as an alternative have to look, in the context of its discretion to extend the time-limit, for a solution that was compliant with the directive. The aim of effective review as prescribed by Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665 would then lead to the national court's discretion being as it were 'reduced to zero'. It would thus be obliged to grant an extension of time to an applicant such as Uniplex.

63. That extension of time would have to be at least long enough for the applicant to have available for the preparation and submission of his claim, from the point at which he knew or ought to have known of the alleged infringement of procurement law, the three months mentioned in Regulation 47(7)(b) of the PCR 2006. In addition, the national court of course remains free to grant, in the exercise of its discretion, having regard to the circumstances of the individual case, a more generous extension of time, if it considers this necessary in order to arrive at a fair solution.

C – The requirement to apply for review promptly (first part of the second question)

64. By the first part of its second question, the referring court wishes essentially to know whether in review proceedings it can dismiss an action as inadmissible if it has not been submitted 'promptly'.

65. According to the limitation provision in Regulation 47(7)(b) of the PCR 2006, an application for review is only admissible if it is brought 'promptly and in any event within three months from the date when grounds for the bringing of the proceedings first arose'. This requirement to initiate the review procedure promptly apparently allows the English court, in its discretion, to dismiss applications for review as inadmissible even before the expiry of the three-month period. At the hearing before the Court, the parties to the main proceedings and the United Kingdom Government agreed (43) that in their practice the English courts do in fact make use of this possibility of dismissing an application on the ground of 'lack of promptness'. (44)

66. The application of a limitation period must not, however, lead to the exercise of the right to review of award decisions being deprived of its practical effectiveness. (45)

67. Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665 requires that it must be possible for decisions of contracting authorities to be reviewed 'effectively and, in particular, as rapidly as possible'. As I explain in more detail in my Opinion in Case C–456/08 Commission v Ireland, (46) in order to achieve that aim of the directive the Member States must create a clear legal framework in the field in question. They are obliged to establish a sufficiently precise, clear and transparent legal position, so that individuals can know what their rights and obligations are.

68. For a limitation rule such as Regulation 47(7)(b) of the PCR 2006, the requirements of clarity, precision and predictability apply to a special degree. Lack of clarity with respect to the applicable time-limits is liable, in view of the threat of an action being time-barred, to entail serious harmful consequences for individuals and undertakings.

69. A limitation period such as that under Regulation 47(7)(b) of the PCR 2006, the duration of which is placed at the discretion of the competent court by the criterion 'promptly', is not predictable in its effects. The tenderers and candidates concerned are uncertain as to how much time they have to prepare their applications for review properly, and they are scarcely able to estimate the prospects of success of such applications. The objective imposed by Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665 of effective review of decisions taken by the contracting authorities is thereby missed. (47)

70. In consequence, the national courts may not declare an application for review, brought within the three-month period under Regulation 47(7)(b) of the PCR 2006, inadmissible on the ground of 'lack of promptness'. They are obliged to interpret and apply the provisions of national law in a manner consistent with the directive. (48) With regard specifically to review procedures under procurement law, they must – as already mentioned – interpret the national rules laying down a limitation period, as far as is at all possible, in such a way as to ensure observance of the principle of effectiveness deriving from Directive 89/665. (49)

71. In this connection I may point out that a criterion of promptness need not necessarily be understood in the sense of an independent limitation period. If a provision combines an indication of time expressed in days, weeks, months or years with the word 'promptly' or a similar expression, that addition can also be interpreted as emphasising the need for rapid action and reminding applicants of their responsibility, in their own interests, for taking the necessary steps as early as possible, in order best to protect their interests. (50)

72. Against that background, the referring court will have to examine whether the criterion of acting 'promptly' in Regulation 47(7)(b) of the PCR 2006 can be interpreted to the effect that it does not constitute an independent barrier to admissibility but merely contains a reference to the need for rapidity.

73. Should it not be possible to interpret Regulation 47(7)(b) of the PCR 2006 to that effect, in compliance with the directive, the national court is obliged to apply Community law to its full extent and to protect the rights it confers on individuals, if necessary by disapplying any provision whose application would in the particular case lead to a result contrary to Community law. (51)

VI – Conclusion

74. On the basis of the above considerations, I propose that the Court give the following answers to the reference for a preliminary ruling from the High Court of Justice:

(1) Article 1(1) of Council Directive 89/665/EEC of 21 December 1989 on the coordination of the laws, regulations and administrative provisions relating to the application of review procedures to the award of public supply and public works contracts requires that a limitation period for applications for a declaration of an infringement of procurement law and for actions for compensation does not start to run until the time at which the applicant knew or ought to have known of the alleged infringement of procurement law.

(2) Article 1(1) of Directive 89/665/EEC precludes a limitation provision which allows the national court in its discretion to dismiss applications for a declaration of an infringement of procurement law and actions for damages as inadmissible by reference to a requirement to bring proceedings promptly.

(3) The national court is obliged to do whatever lies within its jurisdiction to achieve a result compatible with the aim of Directive 89/665/EEC. If such a result cannot be achieved by way of interpreting and applying the limitation rule in a manner consistent with the directive, the national court is obliged to leave that rule unapplied.

13 – See, for example, Case 33/76 Rewe-Zentralfinanz and Rewe-Zentral [1976] ECR 1989, paragraph 5; Case C–231/96 Edis [1998] ECR I–4951, paragraphs 20 and 35; Case C–30/02 Recheio – Cash & Carry [2004] ECR I–6051, paragraph 18; and Case C–40/08 AsturcomTelecomunicaciones [2009] ECR I–0000, paragraph 41.

16 – The referring court cites the judgment of the Court of Appeal of England and Wales (Dyson LJ) of 13 July 2001 in JobsinCoUKplc v Department of Health [2001] EWCA Civ 1241, [2001] EuLR 685, paragraphs 23 and 28 (that judgment related to the predecessor to Regulation 47(7)(b) of the PCR 2006, whose content was identical); see also the judgment of the High Court of Justice of England and Wales, Queen's Bench Division, (Langley J) of 17 November 1997 in KeymedLtd v Forest Healthcare NHSTrust [1998] EuLR 71, at p. 92.

17 – Ireland refers in its written observations to the judgment of the High Court of Ireland

(Clarke J) of 2 May 2006 in Veolia Water UK v Fingal County Council (No 1) [2006] IEHC 137, [2007] 1 IR 690, paragraphs 28 to 54.

18 – In Ireland there is an essentially similar rule on limitation periods under Order 84A (4) of the Rules of the Superior Courts (SI No 374 of 1998). That rule is the subject of the action by the Commission for failure to fulfil obligations in Case C–456/08 Commission v Ireland, in which I am also delivering my Opinion today.

19 – The observations of Dyson LJ in Jobsin Co UK plc v Department of Health, cited in footnote 16, which are quoted in the order for reference, are illuminating in this respect: 'A service provider's knowledge is plainly irrelevant to the question whether he has suffered or risks suffering loss or damage as a result of a breach of duty owed to him by a contracting authority. … Knowledge will often be relevant to whether there is good reason for extending time within which proceedings may be brought, but it cannot be relevant to the prior question of when the right of action first arises' (paragraphs 23 to 28 of the judgment). At the hearing before the Court, the parties were in agreement that the national court is not obliged to grant such an extension of time.

20 – There appear also to be judges in England who differ from this approach. At the hearing before the Court, the judgment of the High Court of Justice of England and Wales, Queen's Bench Division, (Coulson J) of 8 May 2009 in AmaryllisLtd v HMTreasury [2009] EWHC 962 (TCC) was mentioned in this connection.

21 – See also my Opinion of today's date in Case C–456/08 Commission v Ireland, point 56.

22 – See, on this and the following, my Opinion in pressetextNachrichtenagentur, cited in footnote 12, points 161 to 171.

23 – See my Opinion in pressetextNachrichtenagentur, cited in footnote 12, point 162.

24 – See my Opinion in pressetextNachrichtenagentur, cited in footnote 12, points 163 to 167.

25 – If a contract is to be declared invalid, Articles 2d and 2f(1) of Directive 89/665, as amended by Directive 2007/66, are relevant. If, on the other hand, compensation is to be awarded, Articles 2e and 2f(2) in conjunction with Article 2c of Directive 89/665, as amended by Directive 2007/66, apply.

26 – That is also supported by Regulation 47(9) of the PCR 2006. NHS Business Services admittedly points out that in the main proceedings Uniplex made more extensive claims. However, in relation to the factual and legal context of references for preliminary rulings, the Court must proceed from the statements made by the referring court (settled case-law; see Joined Cases C–482/01 and C–493/01 Orfanopoulos and Oliveri [2004] ECR I–5257, paragraph 42, and Case C–244/06 DynamicMedien [2008] ECR I–505, paragraph 19).

28– Cited in footnote 15, paragraph 78.

29 – This is also clear in the French version of Universale-Bau and Others, French being the language in which the judgment was drafted and deliberated on: dès qu'elles sont connues des intéressés (judgment cited in footnote 15, paragraph 78).

30 – Interestingly, NHS Business Services leaves out precisely this paragraph 78 of the judgment in Universale-Bau and Others, although it otherwise cites the full text of the relevant passage of the Court's reasoning (paragraphs 74 to 79).

31 – The parties to the main proceedings disagree as to whether Uniplex ought to have known of the alleged infringements of procurement law from the letter of 22 November 2007 or only from the letter of NHS Business Services of 13 December 2007 (see points 12 and 13 above). After reading those two letters, it seems to me that the first of them confines itself to extremely general statements from which an unsuccessful tenderer can hardly work out why he was unsuccessful and whether procurement law was applied correctly. The second letter, on the other hand, contains at least two statements which arouse the suspicion that infringements of procurement law were committed. First, Uniplex is given a zero mark in the category 'Price and other cost-effectiveness factors' because it offered only its list price; the contracting authority appears to have completely ignored the fact that one tenderer's list price may be lower than another's discount price, and that what ultimately matters is the comparison of the prices actually offered. Second, all tenderers who had not previously been active in the market for haemostats in the United Kingdom were apparently marked at zero in the category 'UK customer base', which suggests covert discrimination against tenderers from other countries. In the end, however, it will be the task of the referring court to make the necessary findings in this respect.

32 – Case C–49/07 MOTOE [2008] ECR I–4863, paragraph 30, and Case C–142/05 Mickelsson and Roos [2009] ECR I–0000, paragraph 41; to the same effect, Case C–328/91 Thomas and Others [1993] ECR I–1247, paragraph 13.

33 – The same may apply if a tenderer or candidate complains of a breach of procurement law and his complaint is rejected by the contracting authority with reasons being given.

34 – To that effect, Case 222/86 Heylens and Others [1987] ECR 4097, paragraph 15, and Case C–75/08 Mellor [2009] ECR I–0000, paragraph 59; see also my Opinion in Case C–186/04 Housieaux [2005] ECR I–3299, point 32, and my Opinion in Mellor, especially point 31.

35 – Opinion of Advocate General Poiares Maduro in Case C–250/07 Commission v Greece [2009] ECR I–0000, point 28.

36 – That the term 'occurrence of the damage' was used in the first sentence of point 167 of my Opinion in pressetextNachrichtenagentur, cited in footnote 12, is an editing mistake. The correct version is that it suffices that the person concerned knew or ought to have known of the alleged infringement of procurement law, as follows from points 169 and 171 of that Opinion.

37 – To that effect, Case C–15/04 Koppensteiner [2005] ECR I–4855, paragraph 38, and Lämmerzahl, cited in footnote 15, second sentence of paragraph 63.

38 – See my Opinion of today's date in Case C–456/08 Commission v Ireland, point 75.

39 – On the principle of interpretation in conformity with directives generally, see Case 14/83 von Colson and Kamann [1984] ECR 1891, paragraph 26, Joined Cases C–397/01 to C–403/01 Pfeiffer and Others [2004] ECR I–8835, paragraph 113, and Case C–268/06 Impact [2008] ECR I–2483, paragraph 98; on Directive 89/665 specifically, see also Santex, paragraph 63, and Lämmerzahl, paragraph 62, both cited in footnote 15.

42 – See Pfeiffer and Others, paragraphs 118 and 119, and Impact, paragraph 101, both cited in footnote 39.

43 – Ireland submitted in the present proceedings for a preliminary ruling that the essentially identical limitation rule in Irish law (in accordance with Order 84A(4) of the Rules of the Superior Courts, an application for review must be made 'at the earliest opportunity and in any event within three months') does not produce any such effects. Nevertheless, in the proceedings for failure to fulfil obligations which are being heard in parallel to the present case, Ireland indicated that in certain circumstances an application for review may under Irish law be dismissed as out of time even if it has been made within the three-month period (see on this point my Opinion of today's date in Case C–456/08 Commission v Ireland, point 70).

44 – At the hearing before the Court, the parties mentioned in this connection inter alia the judgment of the High Court of Justice of England and Wales, Queen's Bench Division, (Cooke J) of 4 November 2004 in M Holleran Ltd v Severn Trent Water Ltd [2004] EWHC 2508 (Comm), [2005] EuLR 364.

45 – To that effect, Universale-Bau and Others, in particular paragraph 72, Santex, paragraphs 51 and 57, and Lämmerzahl, paragraphs 52, all cited in footnote 15; on procedural rules generally, see Joined Cases C–21/03 and C–34/03 Fabricom [2005] ECR I–1559, paragraph 42.

46 – See points 47 to 49 of that Opinion, with references to the case-law.

47 – See my Opinion of today's date in Case C–456/08 Commission v Ireland, point 71.

48 – See on this point the case-law cited in footnote 39.

49 – Santex, cited in footnote 15, paragraph 62.

50 – See the examples in my Opinion in Case C–456/08 Commission v Ireland, point 68. In procurement law too, the concept of a 'duty of diligence, which falls to be categorised more as an obligation as to means than an obligation as to results', is not unknown (Case C–250/07 Commission v Greece [2009] ECR I–0000, paragraph 68).

Where an economic operator is challenging in national proceedings the award of a framework agreement by a contracting authority following a public procurement exercise in which he was a tenderer and which was required to be conducted in accordance with Directive 2004/18/EC[1] (and applicable implementing national provisions), and is in those proceedings seeking declarations and damages for breach of applicable public procurement provisions as regards that exercise and award:

(a) is a national provision such as Regulation 47(7)(b) of the Public Contracts Regulations 2006 which states that those proceedings are to be brought promptly and in any event within 3 months from the date when grounds for the bringing of the proceedings first arose, unless the Court considers that there is good reason for extending the period, to be interpreted, in light of Directive 89/665/EEC[2], Articles 1 and 2, and the Community law principle of equivalence and the Community law requirement for effective legal protection, and/or the principle of effectiveness, and having regard to any other relevant principles of EC law, as conferring an individual and unconditional right upon the tenderer against the contracting authority such that the time for the bringing of proceedings challenging such a tender exercise and award starts running as from the date when the tenderer knew or ought to have known that the procurement procedure and award infringed EC public procurement law or as from the date of breach of the applicable public procurement provisions; and

(b) in either event how is a national court then to apply (i) any requirement for proceedings to be brought promptly and (ii) any discretion as to extending the national limitation period for the bringing of such proceedings?

Legal context

3 Recital 2 in the preamble to Directive 2004/18 states:

'The award of contracts concluded in the Member States on behalf of the State, regional or local authorities and other bodies governed by public law entities, is subject to the respect of the principles of the [EC] Treaty and in particular to the principle of freedom of movement of goods, the principle of freedom of establishment and the principle of freedom to provide services and to the principles deriving therefrom, such as the principle of equal treatment, the principle of non-discrimination, the principle of mutual recognition, the principle of proportionality and the principle of transparency. However, for public contracts above a certain value, it is advisable to draw up provisions of Community coordination of national procedures for the award of such contracts which are based on these principles so as to ensure the effects of them and to guarantee the opening-up of public procurement to competition. These coordinating provisions should therefore be interpreted in accordance with both the aforementioned rules and principles and other rules of the Treaty.'

4 Article 2 of that directive provides:

'Contracting authorities shall treat economic operators equally and non-discriminatorily and shall act in a transparent way.'

5 Article 4 of the directive, under the heading 'Economic operators', provides:

'1. Candidates or tenderers who, under the law of the Member State in which they are established, are entitled to provide the relevant service, shall not be rejected solely on the ground that, under the law of the Member State in which the contract is awarded, they would be required to be either natural or legal persons.

2. Groups of economic operators may submit tenders or put themselves forward as candidates. In order to submit a tender or a request to participate, these groups may not be required by the contracting authorities to assume a specific legal form; however, the group selected may be required to do so when it has been awarded the contract, to the extent that this change is necessary for the satisfactory performance of the contract.'

6 In accordance with the version of Article 7(c) of Directive 2004/18 in force at the material time as a result of the adaptation effected by Commission Regulation (EC) No 2083/2005 of 19 December 2005 amending Directives 2004/17/EC and 2004/18/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council in respect of their application thresholds for the procedures for the award of contracts (OJ 2005 L 333, p. 28), Directive 2004/18 applied to public works contracts which had a value exclusive of value added tax estimated to be equal to or greater than EUR 5 278 000.

7 Article 45 of that directive, headed 'Personal situation of the candidate or tenderer', provides in paragraph 2:

'Any economic operator may be excluded from participation in a contract where that economic operator:

(a) is bankrupt or is being wound up, where his affairs are being administered by the court, where he has entered into an arrangement with creditors, where he has suspended business activities or is in any analogous situation arising from a similar procedure under national laws and regulations;

(b) is the subject of proceedings for a declaration of bankruptcy, for an order for compulsory winding up or administration by the court or of an arrangement with creditors or of any other similar proceedings under national laws and regulations;

(c) has been convicted by a judgment which has the force of res judicata in accordance with the legal provisions of the country of any offence concerning his professional conduct;

(d) has been guilty of grave professional misconduct proven by any means which the contracting authorities can demonstrate;

(e) has not fulfilled obligations relating to the payment of social security contributions in accordance with the legal provisions of the country in which he is established or with those of the country of the contracting authority;

(f) has not fulfilled obligations relating to the payment of taxes in accordance with the legal provisions of the country in which he is established or with those of the country of the contracting authority;

(g) is guilty of serious misrepresentation in supplying the information required under this Section or has not supplied such information.

Member States shall specify, in accordance with their national law and having regard for Community law, the implementing conditions for this paragraph.'

8 Legislative Decree No 163 of 12 April 2006 establishing the Code on public works contracts, public service contracts and public supply contracts pursuant to Directives 2004/17/EC and 2004/18/EC (Codice dei contratti pubblici relativi a lavori, servizi e forniture in attuazione delle direttive 2004/17/CE e 2004/18/CE) (Ordinary Supplement to GURI No 100 of 2 May 2006, 'Legislative Decree No 163/2006'), governs, in their entirety, the procedures in Italy for the award of public works contracts, public service contracts and public supply contracts. Article 34 of that legislative decree, as amended by Legislative Decree No 113 of 31 July 2007, entitled 'Entities to which public contracts may be awarded', provides in paragraph 1:

'1. Without prejudice to the restrictions expressly provided for, the following entities are entitled to participate in the procedures for the award of public procurement contracts:

(b) consortia of producers' and workers' cooperatives … and consortia of artisan/handicraft businesses …;

(c) permanent consortia, constituted as joint venture companies …, between individual contractors (including artisans), commercial companies or partnerships or producers' and workers' cooperatives, in accordance with the provisions of Article 36;

(f) entities which have entered into a European Economic Interest Group [EEIG] …;

(f a) economic operators … established in other Member States and constituted according to the applicable legislation of the Member State concerned.'

9 Article 36(1) of Legislative Decree No 163/2006 provides:

'"Permanent consortia" ("consorzi stabili") mean those … which, by a decision of their respective management, have agreed to participate jointly in public works contracts, public service contracts and public supply contracts, for a period of not less than five years, creating a joint undertaking structure for that purpose.'

10 Article 36(5) of Legislative Decree No 163/2006, in the version in force at the material time, provided:

'… a permanent consortium may not participate in the same award procedure as members of that consortium; in the event of failure to comply with this provision, Article 353 of the Criminal Code shall apply …'.

11 Article 37(7) of that legislative decree, in the version in force at the material time, provided:

'… The consortia referred to in Article 34(1)(b) are required to specify in the tender the members for which the consortium is competing: those members are precluded from participating, in any other form, in the same tendering procedure; in the event of infringement, both the consortium and the member shall be excluded from the procedure; in the event of failure to comply with this provision, Article 353 of the Criminal Code shall apply …'

12 Under Article 353 of the Criminal Code, the failure to comply with the above prohibition is punishable by up to two years' imprisonment and, in certain circumstances by up to five years' imprisonment, and by a fine.

The dispute in the main proceedings and the questions referred for a preliminary ruling

13 In 2007 the Comune di Milano issued a call for tenders relating to the award of a works contract concerning 'emergency and rationalisation measures for district registry offices, lot V'. On 27 September 2007, the Comune di Milano decided to exclude Serrantoni, a member of the permanent consortium Consorzio stabile edili Scrl, as well as the permanent consortium itself, from the tendering procedure for breach of Article 36(5) of Legislative Decree No 163/2006. On the basis of the same provision, the Comune di Milano also ordered the documents to be forwarded to the Public Prosecutor's office for the application of Article 353 of the Criminal Code, and awarded the contract to another company.

14 Serrantoni and the permanent consortium to which it belongs brought an appeal before the referring court against that decision of the contracting authority, submitting that Article 36(5) of Legislative Decree No 163/2006 is incompatible with Article 4 of Directive 2004/18, Articles 39 EC, 43 EC, 49 EC and 81 EC, and with the principle of non-discrimination.

15 The referring court points out, first of all, that the national legislation at issue in the main proceedings makes a distinction between permanent consortia, on the one hand, and consortia of producers' and workers' cooperatives and consortia of artisan/handicraft businesses, on the other. As regards permanent consortia, there is an absolute prohibition on the consortium and the companies forming part thereof participating in the same procedure simultaneously by separate tenders, on pain of automatic exclusion from the procedure and criminal sanctions. As regards the consortia of producers' and workers' cooperatives and consortia of artisan/handicraft businesses, that prohibition applies only to the consortium and the company in whose interests that consortium submitted a tender in the tendering procedure in question. That court observes that, in the case at issue in the main proceedings, the permanent consortium in question did not participate in the call for tenders in Serrantoni's interests.

16 The referring court notes, next, that the different forms of consortium referred to above do not exhibit any differences in respect of their aims and organisation that would justify such unequal treatment. All those forms of consortium are characterised by a common organisation for the purposes of instituting cooperation between the member companies in order to reduce management costs, to optimise their respective economic results and to increase their competitiveness in relation to public contracts. The referring court therefore asks whether the difference in treatment in question is compatible with the principle of non-discrimination and with the Community requirement to ensure the widest possible participation in public tendering procedures.

17 The referring court also asks whether that difference in treatment is compatible with Article 4 of Directive 2004/18, to the extent that the exclusion in question is based solely on the fact that the entity takes the legal form of a permanent consortium, and with Articles 39 EC, 43 EC, 49 EC and 81 EC. That discrimination is moreover of particular importance since the institution of consortia has been amply provided for in the legal systems of the other Member States and finds expression at the Community level in the form of European Economic Interest Groupings (EEIGs).

18 Lastly, the referring court points out that the absolute prohibition in question is based exclusively on a formal aspect, that is to say whether a company forms part of a particular type of group. The legislation in question makes no call for a specific assessment of the mutual influence exerted between consortium and member company but, on the contrary, posits an abstract presumption of mutual interference. Thus, that court notes, even if the consortium is not participating in the tendering procedure in the interests of the company concerned, is not using the company for the execution of the contract, and therefore has no agreement with that company concerning the submission of the tender, the absolute prohibition is applicable. It therefore asks whether that absolute prohibition may be justified by an overriding requirement in the general interest relating to the need to ensure that public tendering procedures are properly conducted, and whether it does not go far beyond its objective.

19 In the light of those considerations, the Tribunale amministrativo regionale per la Lombardia (Regional Administrative Court, Lombardy) decided to stay proceedings and refer the following questions to the Court for a preliminary ruling:

'(1) Is the correct application of Article 4 of Directive 2004/18 … impeded by the provisions of national law laid down in Article 36(5) of Legislative Decree No 163/2006 …, under which:

– where a member of a consortium participates in a tendering procedure for a public contract, the consortium itself is automatically excluded from participation solely on the ground that it has a particular legal form (that of a permanent consortium) rather than another, essentially identical, legal form (that of a consortium of producers' and workers' cooperatives or a consortium of artisan/handicraft businesses); and

– where a permanent consortium participates in a tendering procedure for a public contract, and where it has declared that it is competing on behalf of other companies and that it will entrust the works to other companies if it is awarded the contract, a company is automatically excluded from participation solely on the formal ground that it is a member of that consortium?

(2) Is the correct application of Articles 39 EC, 43 EC, 49 EC and 81 EC impeded by the provisions of national law laid down in Article 36(5) of Legislative Decree No 163/2006 …, under which:

– where a member of a consortium participates in a tendering procedure for a public contract, the consortium itself is automatically excluded from participation solely on the ground that it has a particular legal form (that of a permanent consortium) rather than another, essentially identical, legal form (a consortium of producers' and workers' cooperatives or a consortium of artisan/handicraft businesses), and

– where a permanent consortium participates in a tendering procedure for a public contract, and where it has declared that it is competing on behalf of other companies and that it will entrust the works to other companies if it is awarded the contract, a company is automatically excluded from participation solely on the formal ground that it is a member of that consortium?'

The questions referred for a preliminary ruling

20 First of all, it should be observed that, as is clear from the file submitted to the Court, the value of the contract to which the award procedure at issue in the main proceedings relates is considerably lower than the threshold laid down in Article 7(c) of Directive 2004/18. Consequently, that contract does not fall within the scope of the procedures laid down in that directive.

21 None the less, it should be recalled that the fact that the value of a contract is below the threshold set by the Community rules does not, however, mean that that contract is not subject at all to the application of Community law.

22 It is clear from the Court's settled case-law that, in the context of the award of a contract with a value below that threshold, the fundamental rules of the Treaty and in particular the principle of equal treatment must be complied with. The distinguishing feature in relation to contracts with a value above the threshold prescribed by the provisions of Directive 2004/18 is that only the latter are subject to the strict special procedures laid down in those provisions (see, to that effect, Joined Cases C–147/06 and C-148/06 SECAP and Santorso [2008] ECR I–3565, paragraphs 19 and 20).

23 That interpretation is confirmed by recital 2 in the preamble to Directive 2004/18, which states that the award of all contracts concluded in the Member States on behalf of bodies with the status of a contracting authority must comply with the basic rules of the Treaty, and in particular with those concerning freedom of movement of goods and services, the right of establishment and the fundamental principles deriving therefrom, such as the principles of equal treatment, proportionality and transparency.

24 However, according to the case-law of the Court, the application of the fundamental rules and general principles of the Treaty to procedures for the award of contracts below the threshold for the application of Community provisions is based on the premiss that the contracts in question are of certain cross-border interest (SECAP and Santorso, paragraph 21 and case-law cited).

25 In that connection, the Court has already pointed out that it is for the referring court to carry out a detailed assessment of all the relevant facts concerning the contract in question in order to determine whether there is certain cross-border interest (SECAP and Santorso, paragraph 34). In the present case, the answers to the questions referred take as their premiss that it is none the less for the referring court to ascertain whether the contract in question involves certain cross-border interest.

26 By this question, the referring court asks whether Article 4 of Directive 2004/18 must be interpreted as precluding national legislation, such as that at issue in the main proceedings, which provides that both a permanent consortium and its member companies are automatically excluded from participating in a procedure for the award of a public contract and face criminal sanctions where the member companies have submitted tenders in competition with that consortium's tender in the context of the procedure in question, even if the consortium's tender was not submitted on behalf and in the interests of those companies.

27 In that connection, as has been noted in paragraph 20 of this judgment, the contract at issue in the main proceedings does not fall within the scope of the procedures laid down in that directive, since its value is below the threshold laid down in Article 7(c) of Directive 2004/18.

28 Accordingly, there is no need to answer the question referred by the national court.

29 By this question, considered in the light of the reference for a preliminary ruling taken as a whole, the referring court asks whether the general principles of equal treatment and proportionality deriving from Articles 43 EC and 49 EC and Articles 39 EC and 81 EC must be interpreted as precluding national legislation, such as that at issue in the main proceedings, which provides that both a permanent consortium and its member companies are automatically excluded from participating in a procedure for the award of a public contract and face criminal sanctions where the member companies have submitted tenders in competition with the consortium's tender in the context of the same procedure, even if that consortium's tender was not submitted on behalf and in the interests of those companies.

30 As regards the Treaty articles to which the national court refers, it should be noted, first of all, that the exclusion at issue in the main proceedings has no connection with freedom of movement for workers, or with agreements between undertakings or decisions by associations of undertakings, within the meaning of Articles 39 EC and 81 EC. There is therefore no need for the Court to give an answer with regard to those articles.

31 As regards the principles of equal treatment and transparency, the Member States must be recognised as having a certain amount of discretion for the purpose of adopting measures intended to ensure compliance with those principles, which are binding on contracting authorities in any procedure for the award of a public contract (see, to that effect, Case C–213/07 Michaniki [2008] ECR I-0000, paragraph 44).

32 Each Member State is best placed to identify, in the light of historical, legal, economic or social considerations specific to it, situations propitious to conduct liable to bring about breaches of those principles (see Michaniki, paragraph 56).

33 However, in accordance with the principle of proportionality, which constitutes a general principle of Community law (see, inter alia, Case C-210/03 Swedish Match [2004] ECR I-11893, paragraph 47), the measures adopted by the Member States must not go beyond what is necessary to achieve that objective (see, to that effect, Michaniki, paragraphs 48 and 61, and Case C-538/07 Assitur [2009] ECR I-0000, paragraphs 21 and 23).

34 First, as regards the principles of equal treatment and of proportionality, it should be noted that the legislation at issue in the main proceedings provides for the automatic exclusion from participation in a public tendering procedure in the event of simultaneous and competing tenders submitted by a permanent consortium and by one or more companies forming part thereof.

35 In that connection, it must be pointed out that the automatic exclusion at issue in the main proceedings is only applicable to permanent consortia and the companies of which they are composed, and not to other forms of consortium, such as consortia of producers' and workers' cooperatives and consortia of artisan/handicraft businesses. As regards the latter forms of consortium, the exclusion is applicable, in accordance with Article 37(7) of Legislative Decree No 163/2006, only where competing tenders are submitted by the consortium in question and by those of its member companies on whose behalf the consortium itself has submitted a tender.

36 In that connection, the referring court notes that all those forms of consortium are essentially identical and do not exhibit any differences in respect of their aims and organisation that would justify such unequal treatment.

37 It must therefore be found that the automatic exclusion measure at issue in the main proceedings, which concerns only the permanent consortium form and its member companies and is applicable in the event of competing tenders, regardless of whether the consortium concerned participates in the public tendering procedure in question on behalf and in the interests of the companies which have submitted a tender, constitutes discrimination against that form of consortium, and does not therefore comply with the principle of equal treatment.

38 It should be added that, even if the treatment in question applied without distinction to all forms of consortium, or the national court found that there were objective elements which distinguished the situation of permanent consortia from that of other forms of consortium, a rule requiring automatic exclusion, such as the rule at issue in the main proceedings, would not in any event be compatible with the principle of proportionality.

39 A rule of that kind involves an irrebutable presumption of mutual interference in cases in which a consortium and one or more of its member companies have submitted competing tenders in the same procedure for the award of a public contract, even where the consortium in question has not participated in the procedure on behalf and in the interests of those companies, without either the consortium or the companies concerned being afforded the possibility of showing that their tenders were drawn up completely independently and that there is therefore no risk of influencing competition between tenderers (see, to that effect, Michaniki, paragraph 67, and Assitur, paragraph 30, in relation to the public contracts falling within the scope of Council Directive 93/37/EEC of 14 June 1993 concerning the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts (OJ 1993 L 199, p. 54) and Council Directive 92/50/EEC of 18 June 1992 relating to the coordination of procedures for the award of public service contracts (OJ 1992 L 209, p. 1).

40 A systematic rule of exclusion, which also entails an absolute obligation on the contracting authorities to exclude the entities concerned, even in cases in which the relationship between those entities has no effect on their conduct in the context of the procedures in which they have participated, is contrary to the Community interest in ensuring the widest possible participation by tenderers in a call for tenders, and goes beyond what is necessary to achieve the objective of ensuring the application of the principles of equal treatment and transparency (see, to that effect, Assitur, paragraphs 26 to 29, with regard to public contracts falling within the scope of Directive 92/50).

41 Second, it should be noted that, in accordance with the settled case-law of the Court, Articles 43 EC and 49 EC preclude any national measure which, even though it is applicable without discrimination on grounds of nationality, is liable to prohibit, impede or render less attractive the exercise by Community nationals of the freedom of establishment and the freedom to provide services guaranteed by those provisions of the Treaty (see, to that effect, Case C–299/02 Commission v Netherlands [2004] ECR I–9761, paragraph 15, and Case C-433/04 Commission v Belgium [2006] ECR I–10653, paragraph 28).

42 As the Commission of the European Communities rightly observes, a national rule such as that at issue in the main proceedings, which provides that permanent consortia and their member companies may be automatically excluded, is likely to have a dissuasive effect on economic operators established in other Member States, that it so to say, first, on operators wishing to establish themselves in the Member State concerned through the establishment of a permanent consortium, possibly composed of national and foreign companies, and, second, on operators intending to join consortia of that kind already in existence, in order to be able to participate more easily in public tendering procedures launched by the contracting authorities of that Member State and thereby be able to offer their services more easily.

43 A national measure of that kind which is likely to have a dissuasive effect on economic operators established in other Member States constitutes a restriction within the meaning of Articles 43 EC and 49 EC (see, to that effect, Commission v Belgium, paragraph 29), all the more so as that dissuasive effect is heightened by the risk of criminal sanctions which are laid down in the national legislation at issue in the main proceedings.

44 However, a restriction such as that at issue in the main proceedings may possibly be justified in so far as it pursues a legitimate objective in the public interest, and to the extent that it is suitable for securing the attainment of the objective and does not go beyond what is necessary in order to attain it.

45 In the present case, it must be found that, notwithstanding its legitimate objective of combating possible collusion between the consortium concerned and its member companies, the restriction in question cannot be justified since, as is clear from paragraphs 38 to 40 of this judgment, it goes beyond what is necessary to achieve that objective.

46 The answer to the second question must therefore be that Community law must be interpreted as precluding national legislation, such at that at issue in the main proceedings, which provides that, when a public contract is being awarded, with a value below the threshold laid down in Article 7(c) of Directive 2004/18 but of certain cross-border interest, both a permanent consortium and its member companies are automatically excluded from participating in that procedure and face criminal sanctions where those companies have submitted tenders in competition with the consortium's tender in the context of the same procedure, even if the consortium's tender was not submitted on behalf and in the interests of those companies.

Costs

47 Since these proceedings are, for the parties to the main proceedings, a step in the action pending before the national court, the decision on costs is a matter for that court. Costs incurred in submitting observations to the Court, other than the costs of those parties, are not recoverable.

On those grounds, the Court (Fourth Chamber) hereby rules:

Community law must be interpreted as precluding national legislation, such at that at issue in the main proceedings, which provides that, when a public contract is being awarded, with a value below the threshold laid down in Article 7(c) of Directive 2004/18/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 31 March 2004 on the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts, public supply contracts and public service contracts, but of certain cross-border interest, both a permanent consortium and its member companies are automatically excluded from participating in that procedure and face criminal sanctions where those companies have submitted tenders in competition with the consortium's tender in the context of the same procedure, even if the consortium's tender was not submitted on behalf and in the interests of those companies.

– en adoptant et en maintenant en vigueur l'article 1441–1 du nouveau code de procédure civile, tel que modifié par le décret n° 2005–1308, dans la mesure où cette disposition prévoit un délai de dix jours pour la réponse du pouvoir adjudicateur et/ou de l'entité adjudicatrice concernés interdisant tout référé précontractuel avant ladite réponse et sans que ce délai suspende le délai à respecter entre la notification de la décision d'attribution du marché aux soumissionnaires et la signature du marché, la République française a manqué aux obligations qui lui incombent en vertu des directives 89/665/CEE du Conseil, du 21 décembre 1989, portant coordination des dispositions législatives, réglementaires et administratives relatives à l'application des procédures de recours en matière de passation des marchés publics de fournitures et de travaux (JO L 395, p. 33), telle que modifiée par la directive 92/50/CEE du Conseil, du 18 juin 1992 (JO L 209, p. 1, ci-après la «directive 89/665»), et 92/13/CEE du Conseil, du 25 février 1992, portant coordination des dispositions législatives, réglementaires et administratives relatives à l'application des règles communautaires sur les procédures de passation des marchés des entités opérant dans les secteurs de l'eau, de l'énergie, des transports et des télécommunications (JO L 76, p. 14), telles qu'interprétées par la Cour dans ses arrêts du 28 octobre 1999, Alcatel Austria e.a. (C–81/98, Rec. p. I–7671), et du 24 juin 2004, Commission/Autriche (C–212/02), et plus particulièrement en vertu des articles 2, paragraphe 1, de la directive 89/665 et 2, paragraphe 1, de la directive 92/13.

Le cadre juridique

2 L'article 1er de la directive 89/665 prévoit:

3. Les États membres assurent que les procédures de recours sont accessibles, selon des modalités que les États membres peuvent déterminer, au moins à toute personne ayant ou ayant eu un intérêt à obtenir un marché public de fournitures ou de travaux déterminé et ayant été ou [risquant] d'être lésée par une violation alléguée. En particulier, ils peuvent exiger que la personne qui souhaite utiliser une telle procédure ait préalablement informé le pouvoir adjudicateur de la violation alléguée et de son intention d'introduire un recours.»

3 L'article 2, paragraphe 1, de la même directive dispose:

a) de prendre, dans les délais les plus brefs et par voie de référé, des mesures provisoires ayant pour but de corriger la violation alléguée ou d'empêcher d'autres dommages d'être causés aux intérêts concernés, y compris des mesures destinées à suspendre ou à faire suspendre la procédure de passation de marché public en cause ou de l'exécution de toute décision prise par les pouvoirs adjudicateurs;

4 L'article 1er de la directive 92/13 est libellé comme suit:

«1. Les États membres prennent les mesures nécessaires pour assurer que les décisions prises par les entités adjudicatrices peuvent faire l'objet de recours efficaces et, en particulier, aussi rapides que possible, dans les conditions énoncées aux articles suivants, et notamment à l'article 2 paragraphe 8, au motif que ces décisions ont violé le droit communautaire en matière de passation des marchés ou les règles nationales transposant ce droit en ce qui concerne:

a) les procédures de passation des marchés relevant de la directive 90/531/CEE

b) le respect de l'article 3 paragraphe 2 point a) de ladite directive, dans le cas des entités adjudicatrices auxquelles cette disposition s'applique.

[…]

3. Les États membres veillent à ce que les procédures de recours soient accessibles, selon des modalités que les États membres peuvent déterminer, au moins à toute personne ayant ou ayant eu un intérêt à obtenir un marché déterminé et ayant été ou risquant d'être lésée par une violation alléguée. En particulier, ils peuvent exiger que la personne qui souhaite l'application d'une telle procédure ait préalablement informé l'entité adjudicatrice de la violation alléguée et de son intention d'introduire un recours.»

5 L'article 2, paragraphe 1, de la même directive dispose:

soit

a) de prendre, dans les délais les plus brefs et par voie de référé, des mesures provisoires ayant pour but de corriger la violation alléguée ou d'empêcher que d'autres préjudices soient causés aux intérêts concernés, y compris des mesures destinées à suspendre ou à faire suspendre la procédure de passation de marché en cause ou l'exécution de toute décision prise par l'entité adjudicatrice

c) de prendre, dans les délais les plus brefs, si possible par voie de référé et, si nécessaire, par une procédure définitive quant au fond, d'autres mesures que celles prévues aux points a) et b), ayant pour but de corriger la violation constatée et d'empêcher que des préjudices soient causés aux intérêts concernés; notamment d'émettre un ordre de paiement d'une somme déterminée dans le cas où l'infraction n'est pas corrigée ou évitée.

7 L'article 1er de la directive 2007/66 remplace les articles 1er et 2 de la directive 89/665 par le texte suivant:

4. Les États membres peuvent exiger que la personne qui souhaite faire usage d'une procédure de recours ait informé le pouvoir adjudicateur de la violation alléguée et de son intention d'introduire un recours, pour autant que cela n'ait pas d'incidence sur le délai de suspension visé à l'article 2 bis, paragraphe 2, ou sur tout autre délai d'introduction d'un recours visé à l'article 2 quater.

5. Les États membres peuvent exiger que la personne concernée introduise en premier lieu un recours auprès du pouvoir adjudicateur. Dans ce cas, les États membres veillent à ce que l'introduction dudit recours entraîne la suspension immédiate de la possibilité de conclure le marché.

Les États membres décident des moyens de communication adéquats, y compris les télécopieurs ou les moyens électroniques, qu'il convient d'utiliser pour introduire un recours conformément au premier alinéa.

La suspension visée au premier alinéa ne prend pas fin avant l'expiration d'un délai d'au moins dix jours calendaires à compter du lendemain du jour où le pouvoir adjudicateur a envoyé une réponse si un télécopieur ou un moyen électronique est utilisé, ou, si un autre moyen de communication est utilisé, avant l'expiration d'un délai d'au moins quinze jours calendaires à compter du lendemain du jour où le pouvoir adjudicateur a envoyé une réponse, ou d'au moins dix jours calendaires à compter du lendemain du jour de réception d'une réponse.

Article 2 bis

2. La conclusion du contrat qui suit la décision d'attribution d'un marché relevant du champ d'application de la directive 2004/18/CE ne peut avoir lieu avant l'expiration d'un délai d'au moins dix jours calendaires à compter du lendemain du jour où la décision d'attribution du marché a été envoyée aux soumissionnaires et candidats concernés si un télécopieur ou un moyen électronique est utilisé ou, si d'autres moyens de communication sont utilisés, avant l'expiration d'un délai d'au moins quinze jours calendaires à compter du lendemain du jour où la décision d'attribution du marché est envoyée aux soumissionnaires et candidats concernés, ou d'au moins dix jours calendaires à compter du lendemain du jour de réception de la décision d'attribution du marché.

8 L'article 2 de la directive 2007/66 apporte au texte de la directive 92/13 des modifications analogues à celles mentionnées au point précédent.

9 En vertu de son article 4, la directive 2007/66 est entrée en vigueur le 9 janvier 2008. Aux termes de l'article 3, paragraphe 1, premier alinéa, de cette directive, les États membres doivent mettre en vigueur les dispositions législatives, administratives et réglementaires nécessaires pour se conformer à celle-ci au plus tard le 20 décembre 2009.

10 L'article 44-I du décret n° 2005–1308 prévoit:

Un délai d'au moins dix jours est respecté entre la date à laquelle la décision de rejet est notifiée aux candidats dont l'offre n'a pas été retenue et la date de signature du marché ou de l'accord-cadre.

11 L'article 46-I du décret n° 2005–1742 dispose:

Un délai d'au moins dix jours est respecté entre la date à laquelle la décision de rejet est notifiée aux candidats dont l'offre n'a pas été retenue et la date de signature du marché ou de l'accord-cadre.

12 L'article 80-I-1° du code des marchés publics est libellé comme suit:

Un délai d'au moins dix jours est respecté entre la date à laquelle la décision de rejet est notifiée aux candidats dont l'offre n'a pas été retenue et la date de signature du marché ou de l'accord-cadre.

En cas d'urgence ne permettant pas de respecter ce délai de dix jours, il est réduit dans des proportions adaptées à la situation.»

En cas de refus ou d'absence de réponse dans un délai de dix jours, l'auteur de la mise en demeure peut saisir le président de la juridiction compétente ou son délégué, qui statue dans un délai de vingt jours.»

14 Le 21 mars 2005, la Commission a adressé une lettre de mise en demeure à la République française par laquelle elle attirait l'attention de cette dernière sur le problème de la conformité avec le droit communautaire de certaines dispositions de la réglementation nationale relative à la protection juridictionnelle des soumissionnaires en matière de passation de marchés publics. Le 15 décembre 2006, la Commission a adressé au même État membre une lettre de mise en demeure complémentaire. Les autorités françaises ont répondu à celle-ci par lettre du 8 mars 2007.

15 N'étant pas convaincue par cette réponse, la Commission a, le 1er février 2008, émis un avis motivé invitant la République française à prendre les mesures nécessaires pour s'y conformer dans un délai de deux mois à compter de la réception de celui-ci.

Sur le recours

17 Sans soulever formellement une exception d'irrecevabilité, la République française invoque des arguments qui laissent entendre que le présent recours serait dépourvu d'objet. Il convient d'examiner cette question en premier lieu.

Sur la question de savoir si le recours est dépourvu d'objet

19 Ledit État membre indique que la procédure de transposition de la directive 2007/66 en droit français est en cours. Le nouveau régime des recours instauré par cette directive serait complexe et nécessiterait une approche globale, comprenant également les matières faisant l'objet du présent recours.

20 La Commission soutient que la transposition de la directive 2007/66 est dépourvue de pertinence au regard du présent recours. Elle fait valoir que le délai imparti dans l'avis motivé pour mettre la réglementation nationale en conformité avec les directives 89/665 et 92/13 a expiré le 1er avril 2008 et que cette réglementation, qui met en cause l'effet utile de ces directives, demeurera en vigueur jusqu'à l'adoption des mesures nécessaires à la transposition de la directive 2007/66, à savoir jusqu'au 20 décembre 2009 au plus tard.

21 La République française suggère que la mise en œuvre imminente de la directive 2007/66 prive d'objet le présent recours qui reproche à cet État membre de ne pas avoir transposé dans son ordre juridique les directives 89/665 et 92/13.

22 Selon une jurisprudence constante, l'existence d'un manquement doit être appréciée en fonction de la situation de l'État membre en cause telle qu'elle se présentait au terme du délai fixé dans l'avis motivé (voir, notamment, arrêt du 21 février 2008, Commission/Italie, C–412/04, Rec. p. I–619, point 42 et jurisprudence citée).

23 À cet égard, il est constant que, à la date à laquelle le délai fixé dans l'avis motivé est venu à expiration, les directives 89/665 et 92/13 ainsi que la législation française y afférente trouvaient encore à s'appliquer et, partant, un recours fondé sur le défaut de transposition de ces directives n'était pas dépourvu d'objet.

24 La République française laisse en outre entendre que le présent recours n'a aucune utilité pratique dans la mesure où, même si les griefs soulevés par la Commission étaient retenus par la Cour, les mesures d'exécution conséquentes ne pourraient être prises que dans le cadre global de la mise en œuvre de la directive 2007/66.

25 Ces considérations concernent l'opportunité de l'introduction du présent recours.

26 Selon une jurisprudence constante de la Cour, c'est à la Commission qu'il incombe d'apprécier l'opportunité d'agir contre un État membre, les considérations qui déterminent ce choix ne pouvant affecter la recevabilité du recours (arrêt du 8 décembre 2005, Commission/Luxembourg, C–33/04, Rec. p. I–10629, point 66 et jurisprudence citée).

27 Par conséquent, il convient d'examiner le recours de la Commission au fond.

Sur le premier grief

28 Le troisième alinéa des articles 44–I du décret n° 2005–1308, 46–I du décret n° 2005-1742 et 80-I-1° du code des marchés publics (ci-après les «dispositions litigieuses») prévoient en des termes identiques que, «[e]n cas d'urgence ne permettant pas de respecter ce délai de dix jours, ce délai est réduit dans des proportions adaptées à la situation».

29 La Commission fait valoir que la notion d'urgence mentionnée dans les dispositions litigieuses n'est pas définie, mais est au contraire laissée à l'appréciation discrétionnaire du pouvoir adjudicateur ou de l'entité adjudicatrice sans qu'aucune condition objective soit requise. S'il semble résulter du libellé de ces dispositions que le pouvoir adjudicateur ou l'entité adjudicatrice ne saurait aller jusqu'à supprimer purement et simplement le délai en question, rien ne semblerait en revanche interdire de réduire celui-ci à une durée minimale.

37 La précision d'un tel délai a été introduite pour la première fois par la directive 2007/66, dans le but exprès de remédier à l'absence de disposition à cet égard dans les directives 89/665 et 92/13, comme cela ressort du quatrième considérant de la directive 2007/66.

38 Par conséquent, contrairement à ce qu'affirme la Commission, l'existence d'un délai minimal de dix jours à respecter entre la notification des candidats et soumissionnaires et la conclusion du marché ne peut pas être déduite des termes des directives 89/665 et 92/13.

39 Les directives 89/665 et 92/13 n'interdisent pas explicitement que le délai à respecter entre la notification de la décision d'attribution du marché aux candidats et soumissionnaires évincés et la signature du contrat soit réduit en cas d'urgence. Il ne découle pas non plus du système et de l'objectif des directives 89/665 et 92/13 que celles-ci interdisent par principe toute réduction dudit délai en cas d'urgence.

40 Cette conclusion est confirmée par le fait que la directive 2007/66 ne prévoit pas de délai de suspension minimal dans les cas d'urgence impérieuse visés aux articles 31, point 1, sous c), de la directive 2004/18 et 40, paragraphe 3, sous d), de la directive 2004/17, comme cela est précisé au huitième considérant de la directive 2007/66.

41 En tenant compte de l'effet utile des directives 89/665 et 92/13, la Cour a précisé qu'un délai raisonnable doit s'écouler entre le moment où la décision d'attribution du marché est notifiée aux soumissionnaires évincés et la conclusion du contrat, afin de permettre à ces derniers, notamment, d'introduire une demande de mesures provisoires jusqu'à ladite conclusion (arrêts Commission/Autriche, précité, point 23, et du 3 avril 2008, Commission/Espagne, C–444/06, Rec. p. I-2045, point 39).

42 Selon les termes des dispositions litigieuses, le délai de suspension visé par celles-ci ne peut être réduit, en cas d'urgence, que «dans des proportions adaptées à la situation».

44 Les dispositions litigieuses prévoient, en substance, que, en effectuant une réduction du délai de recours en cas d'urgence, le pouvoir adjudicateur ou l'entité adjudicatrice doivent néanmoins laisser un délai raisonnable aux opérateurs évincés pour leur permettre de présenter un recours.

45 Dans ces conditions, la Commission n'a pas démontré que les dispositions litigieuses portent atteinte aux exigences des directives 89/665 et 92/13.

46 Dès lors, il y a lieu de rejeter le premier grief de la Commission.

Sur le second grief

47 La Commission fait valoir que l'article 1441–1 du code de procédure civile, dans la mesure où il instaure une phase préalable de mise en demeure obligatoire et non suspensive du délai à respecter entre la notification de la décision d'attribution du marché aux candidats et soumissionnaires évincés et la signature du marché, revient à priver ce délai de tout effet utile.

48 Le délai de dix jours prévu audit article 1441-1 pour répondre à la mise en demeure ne serait pas conforme aux directives 89/665 et 92/13, dans la mesure où il interdit tout référé précontractuel avant cette réponse et court en même temps que le délai de suspension de la signature du marché, qui est, lui aussi, de dix jours. Il en résulterait l'impossibilité pour les candidats et soumissionnaires évincés de faire usage du référé précontractuel dans les cas où la réponse ou l'absence de réponse ne serait connue qu'à la date de l'expiration de ce délai de dix jours et où le contrat serait signé à cette date.

52 Les articles 1er, paragraphe 3, des directives 89/665 et 92/13 autorisent les États membres à exiger qu'une personne souhaitant introduire un recours contre un pouvoir adjudicateur ou une entité adjudicatrice informe préalablement ceux-ci de la violation alléguée et de son intention d'introduire un recours, sans prévoir qu'une telle démarche a un effet suspensif.

53 Il n'est pas contesté que l'article 1441–1 du code de procédure civile est conforme auxdites dispositions dans la mesure où il prévoit que le candidat ou soumissionnaire auquel a été notifié le rejet de sa candidature ou de son offre doit, s'il entend introduire un référé précontractuel, préalablement mettre en demeure le pouvoir adjudicateur ou l'entité adjudicatrice.

54 La Commission critique l'article 1441-1 du code de procédure civile dans la mesure seulement où il assortit cette mise en demeure obligatoire d'un délai de réponse de dix jours pendant lequel le délai, également fixé à dix jours, que le pouvoir adjudicateur ou l'entité adjudicatrice sont tenus de respecter entre la notification de la décision d'attribution du marché aux candidats et soumissionnaires évincés et la conclusion du contrat n'est pas suspendu. Selon la Commission, cette réglementation a pour effet de priver ce dernier délai de son effet utile.

56 Ainsi qu'il résulte du point 41 du présent arrêt, il découle des directives 89/665 et 92/13 qu'un délai

raisonnable doit s'écouler entre le moment où la décision d'attribution du marché est notifiée aux candidats et soumissionnaires évincés et la conclusion du contrat, afin de permettre à ces derniers d'introduire une demande de mesures provisoires avant la conclusion du contrat.

57 Or, l'article 1441-1 du code de procédure civile n'est pas compatible avec les directives 89/665 et 92/13 ainsi interprétées, dans la mesure où il peut avoir pour effet, dans certaines circonstances, de ne laisser, entre la notification de ladite décision aux candidats et soumissionnaires évincés et la conclusion du contrat, aucun délai permettant à ceux-ci d'introduire un recours juridictionnel.

59 Dans ces conditions, il y a lieu de conclure que le second grief est fondé.

60 Par conséquent, il convient de constater que, en adoptant et en maintenant en vigueur l'article 1441–1 du code de procédure civile, dans la mesure où cette disposition prévoit, pour la réponse du pouvoir adjudicateur ou de l'entité adjudicatrice à une mise en demeure, un délai de dix jours excluant tout référé précontractuel avant ladite réponse et sans que ce délai suspende le délai à respecter entre la notification de la décision d'attribution du marché aux candidats et soumissionnaires évincés et la signature du contrat, la République française a manqué aux obligations qui lui incombent en vertu des directives 89/665 et 92/13.

61 En vertu de l'article 69, paragraphe 3, du règlement de procédure, la Cour peut répartir les dépens ou décider que chaque partie supporte ses propres dépens si les parties succombent respectivement sur un ou plusieurs chefs. La Commission et la République française ayant chacune succombé en l'un des griefs faisant l'objet du présent recours, il convient de condamner chaque partie à supporter ses propres dépens.

Par ces motifs, la Cour (troisième chambre) déclare et arrête:

1) En adoptant et en maintenant en vigueur l'article 1441–1 du nouveau code de procédure civile, tel que modifié par l'article 48–1° du décret n° 2005–1308, du 20 octobre 2005, relatif aux marchés passés par les entités adjudicatrices mentionnées à l'article 4 de l'ordonnance n° 2005–649 du 6 juin 2005 relative aux marchés passés par certaines personnes publiques ou privées non soumises au code des marchés publics, dans la mesure où cette disposition prévoit, pour la réponse du pouvoir adjudicateur ou de l'entité adjudicatrice à une mise en demeure, un délai de dix jours excluant tout référé précontractuel avant ladite réponse et sans que ce délai suspende le délai à respecter entre la notification de la décision d'attribution du marché aux candidats et soumissionnaires évincés et la signature du contrat, la République française a manqué aux obligations qui lui incombent en vertu des directives 89/665/CEE du Conseil, du 21 décembre 1989, portant coordination des dispositions législatives, réglementaires et administratives relatives à l'application des procédures de recours en matière de passation des marchés publics de fournitures et de travaux, telle que modifiée par la directive 92/50/CEE du Conseil, du 18 juin 1992, et 92/13/CEE du Conseil, du 25 février 1992, portant coordination des dispositions législatives, réglementaires et administratives relatives à l'application des règles communautaires sur les procédures de passation des marchés des entités opérant dans les secteurs de l'eau, de l'énergie, des transports et des télécommunications.

2) Le recours est rejeté pour le surplus.

3) La Commission des Communautés européennes et la République française supportent chacune leurs propres dépens.

The Court:

1. Declares that, by adopting and maintaining in force Article 1441-1 of the new Code of Civil Procedure, as amended by Article 48-1° of Decree No 2005-1308 of 20 October 2005 concerning contracts awarded by the contracting authorities referred to in Article 4 of Order No 2005-649 of 6 June 2005 on contracts awarded by certain public bodies or private persons not subject to the Public Procurement Code, in so far as that provision imposes on the contracting authority or entity a ten-day period within which to respond to a formal challenge – the bringing of any pre-contractual proceedings before that response being precluded – and where that period does not have the effect of suspending the period which must be ensured between the notification to the unsuccessful candidates and tenderers of the decision to award the contract and the signature of that contract, the French Republic has failed to fulfil its obligations under Council Directive 89/665/EEC of 21 December 1989 on the coordination of the laws, regulations and administrative provisions relating to the application of review procedures to the award of public supply and public works contracts, as amended by Council Directive 92/50/EEC of 18 June 1992, and Council Directive 92/13/EEC of 25 February 1992 coordinating the laws, regulations and administrative provisions relating to the application of Community rules on the procurement procedures of entities operating in the water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors;

2. Dismisses the action as to the remainder;

3. Orders the Commission of the European Communities and the French Republic to bear their own costs.

Action brought on 17 July 2008 - Commission of the European Communities v French Republic

(Case C-327/08)

Language of the case: French

Parties

Applicant: Commission of the European Communities (represented by: G. Rozet and D. Kukovec, Agents)

Defendant: French Republic

Form of order sought

Declare that:

by adopting and maintaining in force Article 44-1 of Decree No 2005-1308 of 20 October 2005, Article 46-1 of Decree No 2005-1742 of 30 December 2005 and Article 80-1-1 of Decree No 2006-975 of 1 August 2006, in so far as those provisions provide for the possibility for contracting authorities and/or contracting entities to reduce the reasonable time-limit to be complied with between the notice of tender and the signature of the contract without any limit in time and without any objective condition laid down previously in the national legislation, by adopting and maintaining in force Article 144-1 of the new Code of Civil Procedure, as amended by Decree No 2005-1308 of 20 October 2005, in so far as that provision provides for a time-limit of 10 days for the response from the contracting authority and/or the contracting entity concerned prohibiting any precontractual interim measures before that response and without that time period having any suspensory effect on the time-limit to be complied with between the notice of tender and the signature of the contract, the French Republic has failed to fulfil its obligations under Directive 89/665/EEC [1] and Directive 92/13/EEC [2], as interpreted by the Court of Justice in Case C-81/98 Alcatel and Case C-212/02 Commission v Austria and, more specifically, Article 2(1) of Directive 89/665/EEC and Article 2(1) of Directive 92/13/EEC.

order the French Republic to pay the costs.

Pleas in law and main arguments

The Commission puts forward two pleas in law in support of its action.

By its first plea, the Commission criticises the defendant for having allowed contracting authorities, in urgent cases, to reduce to under 10 days the minimum time-limit to be complied with between the notice of award of tender to all tenderers and the signature of the relevant contract. The urgency referred to in the French legislation is left to the discretion of the contracting authority, without any objective condition being required. However, that same legislation contains no guarantee that the number of days by which the time-limit is reduced will be brought to the attention of the tenderers, which could lead to those tenderers bringing precontractual proceedings against a decision to award a contract at a stage when the relevant contract has already been signed. Such a situation is clearly contrary to the objective pursued by Directives 89/665//EEC and 92/13/EEC, supported by the Court's case-law, consisting in putting in place effective and rapid remedies targeting unlawful decisions by contracting authorities at a stage when there is still time to correct violations.

By its second plea, the Commission also criticises the defendant for having disregarded the practical effectiveness of those directives by providing in the French legislation for a compulsory preliminary phase of formal notice to the contracting authority, which does not have a suspensory effect on the time-limit to be complied with between the notice of award of contract and the signature of the relevant contract. Since an unsuccessful tenderer may not bring an action during the time for responding to the formal notice, equivalent to 10 days, a response given by the contracting authority upon expiry of that time-limit deprives the unsuccessful tenderer of all effective legal remedies, because by that time the contract will have already been signed.

Judgment

1 This reference for a preliminary ruling concerns the interpretation of Article 1(2)(a) and (8), first and second subparagraphs, of Directive 2004/18/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 31 March 2004 on the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts, public supply contracts and public service contracts (OJ 2004 L 134, p. 114).

2 The reference was made in proceedings between the Consorzio Nazionale Interuniversitario per le Scienze del Mare (National Inter-University Marine Sciences Consortium, 'CoNISMa') and the Regione Marche (the Marche Region) relating to the latter's decision not to admit the consortium to

3 Recital 4 in the preamble to Directive 2004/18 states as follows:

'Member States should ensure that the participation of a body governed by public law as a tenderer in a procedure for the award of a public contract does not cause any distortion of competition in relation to private tenderers.'

4 Article 1(2)(a) of Directive 2004/18 is worded as follows:

'"Public contracts" are contracts for pecuniary interest concluded in writing between one or more economic operators and one or more contracting authorities and having as their object the execution of works, the supply of products or the provision of services within the meaning of this Directive.'

5 Article 1(8) of Directive 2004/18 provides as follows:

'The terms "contractor", "supplier" and "service provider" mean any natural or legal person or public entity or group of such persons and/or bodies which offers on the market, respectively, the execution of works and/or a work, products or services.

The term "economic operator" shall cover equally the concepts of contractor, supplier and service provider. It is used merely in the interest of simplification.

6 Article 1(9) of Directive 2004/18 is worded as follows:

'"Contracting authorities" means the State, regional or local authorities, bodies governed by public law, associations formed by one or several of such authorities or one or several of such bodies governed by public law.

A "body governed by public law" means any body:

(a) established for the specific purpose of meeting needs in the general interest, not having an industrial or commercial character;

(b) having legal personality; and

(c) financed, for the most part, by the State, regional or local authorities, or other bodies governed by public law; or subject to management supervision by those bodies; or having an administrative, managerial or supervisory board, more than half of whose members are appointed by the State, regional or local authorities, or by other bodies governed by public law.

7 Article 4 of Directive 2004/18, entitled 'Economic Operators', provides as follows:

'1. Candidates or tenderers who, under the law of the Member State in which they are established, are entitled to provide the relevant service, shall not be rejected solely on the ground that, under the law of the Member State in which the contract is awarded, they would be required to be either natural or legal persons.

2. Groups of economic operators may submit tenders or put themselves forward as candidates. In order to submit a tender or a request to participate, these groups may not be required by the contracting authorities to assume a specific legal form; however, the group selected may be required to do so when it has been awarded the contract, to the extent that this change is necessary for the satisfactory performance of the contract.'

8 Article 44 of Directive 2004/18, entitled 'Verification of the suitability and choice of participants and award of contracts', provides in the first paragraph thereof as follows:

'Contracts shall be awarded on the basis of the criteria laid down in Articles 53 and 55, taking into account Article 24, after the suitability of the economic operators not excluded under Articles 45 and 46 has been checked by contracting authorities in accordance with the criteria of economic and financial standing, of professional and technical knowledge or ability referred to in Articles 47 to 52, and, where appropriate, with the non-discriminatory rules and criteria referred to in paragraph 3.'

9 Article 55 of Directive 2004/18, entitled 'Abnormally low tenders', is worded as follows:

'1. If, for a given contract, tenders appear to be abnormally low in relation to the goods, works or services, the contracting authority shall, before it may reject those tenders, request in writing details of the constituent elements of the tender which it considers relevant.

Those details may relate in particular to:

(a) the economics of the construction method, the manufacturing process or the services provided;

(b) the technical solutions chosen and/or any exceptionally favourable conditions available to the tenderer for the execution of the work, for the supply of the goods or services;

(c) the originality of the work, supplies or services proposed by the tenderer;

(d) compliance with the provisions relating to employment protection and working conditions in force at the place where the work, service or supply is to be performed;

(e) the possibility of the tenderer obtaining State aid.

2. The contracting authority shall verify those constituent elements by consulting the tenderer, taking account of the evidence supplied.

3. Where a contracting authority establishes that a tender is abnormally low because the tenderer has obtained State aid, the tender can be rejected on that ground alone only after consultation with the tenderer where the latter is unable to prove, within a sufficient time limit fixed by the contracting authority, that the aid in question was granted legally. Where the contracting authority rejects a tender in these circumstances, it shall inform the Commission of that fact.'

10 Article 3(19) and (22) of Legislative Decree No 163 of 12 April 2006 establishing the Codice dei contratti pubblici relativi a lavori, servizi e forniture in attuazione delle direttive 2004/17/CE e 2004/18/CE (Public Works Contracts, Public Supply Contracts and Public Service Contracts Code implementing Directives 2004/17/EC and 2004/18/EC) (GURI No 100 of 2 May 2006, ordinary supplement) ('Legislative Decree No 163/2006') provides as follows:

'19. The terms "contractor", "supplier" and "service provider" mean a natural or legal person, or body without legal personality, including a European Economic Interest Group (EEIG) formed pursuant to Legislative Decree No 240 of 23 July 1991, which offers on the market, respectively, the execution of works or a work, the supply of products or the provision of services.

22. The term "economic operator" shall include a contractor, a supplier, a service provider or a group or consortium of these.'

11 Article 34 of Legislative Decree No 163/2006 provides, under the heading 'Entities to which public contracts may be awarded (Articles 4 and 5 of Directive 2004/18)', as follows:

'1. Without prejudice to the restrictions expressly provided for, the following entities are entitled to participate in procedures for the award of public procurement contracts:

(a) individual commercial operators, including artisans, commercial companies and partnerships and cooperatives;

(b) consortia of production- and labour-cooperatives … and … consortia of artisans …;

(c) permanent consortia, constituted inter alia as joint venture companies for the purpose of Article 2615b of the Civil Code, between individual contractors (including artisans), commercial companies or partnerships or production- and labour-cooperatives, in accordance with the provision in Article 36;

(d) special purpose groupings of competitors, whose members include the entities referred to in subparagraphs (a), (b) and (c) …;

(e) ordinary consortia of competitors referred to in Article 2602 of the Civil Code whose members include the entities referred to in subparagraphs (a), (b) and (c) of the present paragraph, including those constituted as companies or partnerships …;

(f) entities who have entered into a European Economic Interest Group (EEIG) contract …;

12 After the material events of the main proceedings had occurred, Legislative Decree No 152 of 11 September 2008 (GURI No 231 of 2 October 2008) added the following subparagraph (f bis) to the above list:

'economic operators within the meaning of Article 3(22), established in other Member States and constituted according to the applicable legislation of the Member State concerned.'

13 Lastly, Article 2082 of the Italian Civil Code provides that a 'commercial operator' (imprenditore) is any person who, in a professional capacity, engages in economic activity on an organised basis in order to produce or exchange goods or services.

The dispute in the main proceedings and the questions referred for a preliminary ruling

14 It is apparent from the order for reference that the Regione Marche organised a public tendering procedure for the award of a service contract entailing the acquisition of marine and seismic stratigraphic data and the taking of core borings and samples from the sea along the coastline between Pesaro and Civitanova Marche.

15 CoNISMa applied to participate in that procedure. After expressing reservations as to whether CoNISMa was eligible to participate in the tendering procedure in question, the contracting authority decided to exclude it by Decisions 4, 18 and 23 of 23 April 2007.

16 CoNISMa challenged its exclusion by way of an extraordinary petition to the President of the Italian Republic, a special procedure provided for by the Italian legal system, arguing that if Article 34 of Legislative Decree 163/2006 were interpreted as meaning that it contains an exhaustive list, not including universities and research institutes, and that such bodies are therefore not eligible to participate in a procedure for the award of a public contract, such an interpretation would be incompatible with Directive 2004/18. In the framework of that extraordinary petition, the Ministero dell'ambiente e della tutela del territorio (Italian Ministry of the Environment and Protection of the Territory) requested an opinion of the Consiglio di Stato (Council of State), for which provision is made under the relevant national legislation.

17 The Consiglio di Stato observes that, in order to deliver its opinion, it must establish whether an inter-university group, such as CoNISMa, can be regarded as an 'economic operator' within the meaning of Directive 2004/18 and, accordingly, whether it may take part in a tendering procedure for the award of a public service contract such as that at issue in the main proceedings. The referring court expresses reservations in that connection, on the basis of the following considerations.

18 The Consiglio di Stato states, as a preliminary point, that CoNISMa is a group ('consorzio') of 24

Italian universities and three ministries. According to its statute, it is non-profit-making and its object is to promote and coordinate research and other scientific activities and their applications in the field of marine sciences among the member universities. It can take part in tendering procedures and other procedures for competitive tendering organised by public authorities and by companies operating in the public and private sphere. Its activities are financed primarily by grants awarded by the Ministry for Universities and Research and other public authorities as well as by Italian or foreign public and private bodies.

19 The Consiglio di Stato refers, first, to Article 1(c) of Council Directive 92/50/EEC of 18 June 1992 relating to the coordination of procedures for the award of public service contracts (OJ 1992 L 209, p. 1) — to which Directive 2004/18 was the successor — which provides that 'service provider shall mean any natural or legal person, including a public body, which offers services' and observes that that wording appears to indicate an intention to restrict the possibility of concluding contracts with contracting authorities to entities which are engaged 'in an institutional capacity' in the activity corresponding to the service to be provided under the contract in question. If that approach is adopted, with the exception of private economic operators, tendering procedures are open only to public bodies which provide, for pecuniary gain, the services covered by that contract, in accordance with the function ascribed to them by the legal system, university bodies thus being excluded. That approach would appear to have been confirmed by the Court in Case C–220/05 Auroux and Others [2007] ECR I–385, paragraph 44, which held that Community legislation on public contracts applied to the person concerned 'as an economic operator active on the market'. That approach also appears to have been followed in Article 3(19) of Legislative Decree No 163/2006, which provides that a service provider is an economic operator 'which offers' services 'on the market'.

20 Second, the Consiglio di Stato points out that the position adopted on this question in Italian case-law is not without ambiguity. Certain courts have taken the view that public tendering procedures are open to natural and legal persons operating as a business and to public bodies which offer, in accordance with their institutional organisation, services similar to those covered by the tendering procedure. From that perspective, universities cannot be included in such categories of private and public undertakings, since their institutional remit is to develop teaching and research activities. Following a different approach, it has been held that public universities and consortia of such universities can take part in procedures for the award of public service contracts, provided that the provision of services in question is compatible with their institutional objectives and the provisions laid down in their statutes.

21 The Consiglio di Stato refers, thirdly, to the position adopted by the regulatory authority for public contracts, which distinguishes between economic operators and entities, such as non-economic public bodies, universities and university departments, which do not fall into the former category because their purpose is not to carry out economic activity, which is characterised by the creation of wealth. Such entities cannot therefore take part in public tendering procedures unless they set up companies expressly for that purpose by exercising the autonomy granted to universities under national legislation. That view is confirmed by Article 34 of Legislative Decree No 163/2006, which contains an exhaustive list of the entities authorised to take part in public tendering procedures.

22 By way of justification of its reservations, the Consiglio di Stato refers, lastly, to the Court's case-law, according to which Community public procurement rules must be interpreted by reference to a criterion of a functional nature, so that the fundamental principle of effective competition is not circumvented (Case C–337/06 Bayerischer Rundfunk and Others [2007] ECR I–11173). With regard in particular to public service contracts, the Court has drawn attention to the principal objective of the Community rules in this field, namely the free movement of services and the opening-up to the widest possible undistorted competition in all the Member States (Case C–26/03 Stadt Halle and RPL Lochau [2005] ECR I–1, paragraphs 44 and 47).

23 In the light of that case-law, the Consiglio di Stato states that the admission of universities, research institutes and consortia of those bodies to public tendering procedures may infringe the principle of free competition in two respects. First, it could potentially remove from the open market a number of public contracts, to which ease of access would in practice be hampered for a not inconsiderable proportion of ordinary undertakings. Second, it would place the contractor in a position of unfair advantage, guaranteeing it economic security provided by the constant and predictable flow of public finance, which is not available to other economic operators. However, the Consiglio di Stato takes the view that a restrictive interpretation of the concept of 'economic operator', which is dependent on the stable presence of such an operator 'on the market', thus precluding universities, research institutes and consortia of such bodies from taking part in public tendering procedures, would seriously undermine cooperation between public and private entities and between researchers and commercial operators and ultimately constitute a restriction on free competition.

24 In the light of the foregoing, the Consiglio decided to stay the proceedings and to refer the following questions to the Court for a preliminary ruling:

'(1) Must the provisions of Directive 2004/18/EC ... be interpreted as precluding a consortium made up solely of Italian universities and State bodies … from taking part in a tendering procedure for the award of a service contract such as that for the acquisition of geophysical data and marine samples?

(2) Are the provisions of Italian law contained in Article 3(22) and (19) and Article 34 of Legislative Decree No 163/2006, which provide, respectively: that "the term 'economic operator' shall include a contractor, supplier, service provider or a group or consortium of these" and "the terms 'contractor', 'supplier' and 'service provider' shall mean any natural or legal person, or body without legal personality, including a European Economic Interest Group (EEIG) ..., which 'offers on the market', respectively, the execution of works or a work, the supply of products or the provision of services", contrary to Directive 2004/18/EC … if interpreted as restricting participation in tendering procedures to professional providers of such services and excluding entities whose primary objects are non-profit-making, such as research?'

25 It should be noted, first, that, according to the Court's case-law, when it issues an opinion in the context of an extraordinary petition, such as that in the main proceedings, the Consiglio di Stato constitutes a court or tribunal for the purposes of Article 234 EC (Joined Cases C–69/96 to C–79/96 Garofalo and Others [1997] ECR I–5603, paragraph 27).

Question 1

26 By this question, the Consiglio di Stato asks, in essence, whether Directive 2004/18 must be interpreted as precluding a consortium made up solely of universities and public authorities from taking part in a public tendering procedure for the award of a service contract.

27 As is apparent from the order for reference, the provisions of Directive 2004/18 considered to be relevant by the national court are, in particular, those in Article 1(2)(a) and (8), first and second subparagraphs, because those provisions refer to the concept of 'economic operator'. Moreover, according to the order, the consortium in question is, for the most part, non-profit-making and does not have the organisational structure of an undertaking or a regular presence on the market.

28 For the purposes of answering that question, it should be pointed out, first, that the provisions of Directive 2004/18 do not contain a definition of 'economic operator' and, second, do not distinguish between tenderers on the basis of whether they are primarily profit-making and nor do they expressly preclude entities such as that in question in the main proceedings. However, considered in the light of the Court's case-law, those provisions contain sufficient indications for it to be possible to give a useful answer to the referring court.

29 For instance, recital 4 in the preamble to Directive 2004/18 makes it clear that 'a body governed by public law' can participate as a tenderer in a procedure for the award of a public contract.

30 Similarly, the first and second subparagraphs of Article 1(8) of the directive grant the status of 'economic operator' not only to any natural or legal person but also, expressly, to any 'public entity' or group consisting of such entities offering services on the market. The concept of 'public entity' may also, therefore, include bodies which are not primarily profit-making, are not structured as an undertaking and do not have a continuous presence on the market.

31 Moreover, paragraph 1 of Article 4 of Directive 2004/18, which is entitled 'Economic operators', prohibits Member States from providing that candidates or tenderers who, under the rules of the Member State in which they are established, are entitled to provide the services covered by the contract notice, are to be rejected solely on the ground that, under the law of the Member State in which the contract is awarded, they are required to be either natural or legal persons. Nor does that provision distinguish between candidates and tenderers on the basis of whether they are governed by public or private law.

32 As regards the question raised by the referring court concerning a possible distortion of competition due to the participation in a public tendering procedure by entities, such as the applicant in the main proceedings, which enjoy a position of unfair advantage vis-à-vis private economic operators on account of the public finance which they receive, it should be noted that recital 4 in the preamble to Directive 2004/18 imposes an obligation on Member States to ensure that the participation of a body governed by public law in a public tendering procedure does not cause such a distortion. That obligation also applies with regard to entities such as the applicant.

33 Reference should be made in that connection to the obligations upon and options available to contracting authorities under Article 55(3) of Directive 2004/18 in cases involving abnormally low tenders where the tenderer has obtained State aid. The Court has also recognised that, in certain specific circumstances, the contracting authorities are required, or at the very least permitted, to take into account the existence of subsidies, and in particular of aid incompatible with the Treaty, in order, where appropriate, to exclude tenderers in receipt of such aid (see, to that effect, Case C–94/99 ARGE [2000] ECR I–11037, paragraph 29).

34 However, the fact that an economic operator may enjoy an unfair advantage because it receives public finance or State aid cannot justify the exclusion of entities, such as the applicant in the main proceedings, from a public tendering procedure a priori and without further consideration.

35 It follows from the above considerations that the Community legislature did not intend to restrict the concept of 'economic operator which offers services on the market' solely to operators which are structured as a business or to impose specific conditions which can restrict access to tendering procedures, from the outset, on the basis of the legal form and internal organisation of the economic operator.

37 The Court has thus held that one of the primary objectives of Community rules on public procurement is to attain the widest possible opening-up to competition (see, inter alia, to that effect Bayerischer Rundfunk and Others, paragraph 39) and that it is the concern of Community law to ensure the widest possible participation by tenderers in a call for tenders (Case C–538/07 Assitur [2009] ECR I–0000, paragraph 26). It should be added that the widest possible opening-up to competition is contemplated not only from the point of view of the Community interest in the free movement of goods and services but also the interest of the contracting authority concerned itself, which will thus have greater choice as to the most advantageous tender which is most suitable for the needs of the public authority in question (see, to that effect, with regard to abnormally low tenders, Joined Cases C–147/06 and C–148/06 SECAP and Santorso [2008] ECR I–3565, paragraph 29).

38 In that spirit of opening up public contracts to the widest possible competition, the Court has also held that Community rules governing that field are applicable when the entity with which a contracting authority plans to conclude a contract for pecuniary interest is itself also a contracting authority (see, to that effect, Stadt Halle and RPL Lochau, paragraph 47 and the case-law cited). According to Article 1(9) of Directive 2004/18, a contracting authority is an entity not having an industrial or commercial character which performs a task in the general interest. As a general rule, such a body does not pursue gainful activity on the market.

39 Similarly, the Court has held that Community rules preclude any national legislation which excludes candidates or tenderers entitled under the law of the Member State in which they are established to provide the services in question from the award of public service contracts with a value greater than the threshold for the application of the relevant directives, solely on the ground that those candidates or tenderers do not have the legal form corresponding to a specific category of legal persons (see, to that effect, Case C–357/06 Frigerio Luigi and C. [2007] ECR I–12311, paragraph 22).

40 Moreover, it should be noted that, according to the Court's case-law, first, the mere fact that contracting authorities allow bodies which receive subsidies enabling them to submit tenders at prices appreciably lower than those of competing, unsubsidised, tenderers to take part in a procedure for the award of a public contract does not amount to a breach of the principle of equal treatment and, second, if the Community legislature had intended to require contracting authorities to exclude such tenderers, it would have stated this explicitly (ARGE, paragraphs 25 and 26).

41 Finally, the Court's case-law also provides that Community rules do not require that, in order to be classed as a contractor – that is, an economic operator – a person who enters into a contract with a contracting authority must be capable of direct performance using his own resources. The person in question need only be able to arrange for execution of the works in question and to furnish the necessary guarantees in that connection (see, to that effect, Case C–399/98 Ordine degli Architetti and Others [2001] ECR I–5409, paragraph 90).

42 It therefore follows from both Community rules and the Court's case-law that any person or entity which, in the light of the conditions laid down in a contract notice, believes that it is capable of carrying out the contract, either directly or by using subcontractors, is eligible to submit a tender or put itself forward as a candidate, regardless of whether it is governed by public law or private law, whether it is active as a matter of course on the market or only on an occasional basis and whether or not it is subsidised by public funds. As the Czech Government correctly observed, whether such an entity is actually able to satisfy the conditions laid down in the contract notice must be assessed at a later stage in the procedure, by applying the criteria set out in Articles 44 to 52 of Directive 2004/18.

43 It should be added that the effect of a restrictive interpretation of the concept of 'economic operator' would be that contracts concluded between contracting authorities and bodies which are primarily non-profit-making would not be regarded as 'public contracts', could be awarded by mutual agreement and would thus not be covered by Community rules on equal treatment and transparency, which would be inconsistent with the aim of those rules.

44 Moreover, as the Consiglio di Stato stated, such an interpretation would undermine cooperation between public and private entities and between researchers and commercial operators and constitute a restriction of competition.

45 In the light of the foregoing, the answer to the first question must be that the provisions of Directive 2004/18, in particular those in Article 1(2)(a) and (8), first and second subparagraphs, which refer to the concept of 'economic operator', must be interpreted as permitting entities which are primarily non-profit-making and do not have the organisational structure of an undertaking or a regular presence on the market – such as universities and research institutes and consortia made up of universities and public authorities – to take part in a public tendering procedure for the award of a service contract.

46 By this question, the Consiglio di Stato asks, in essence, whether the provisions of Directive 2004/18, in particular those in Article 1(2)(a) and (8), first and second subparagraphs, preclude national legislation transposing that directive into national law where such legislation is interpreted as restricting participation in public procurement procedures to service providers who offer services on the market on a systematic and commercial basis and excluding entities, such as universities and research institutes, which are primarily non-profit-making.

47 It should be noted, as is apparent from the wording of Article 4(1) of Directive 2004/18, that the Member States have a discretion as to whether or not to allow certain categories of economic operators to provide certain services.

48 Accordingly, as the Commission correctly observed, the Member States can regulate the activities of entities, such as universities and research institutes, which are non-profit-making and whose primary object is teaching and research. They can, inter alia, determine whether or not such entities are authorised to operate on the market, according to whether the activity in question is compatible with their objectives as an institution and those laid down in their statutes.

49 However, if and to the extent that such entities are entitled to offer certain services on the market, the national legislation transposing Directive 2004/18 into domestic law cannot prevent them from taking part in public procedures for the award of contracts for the provision of those services. Such a prohibition would be incompatible with the provisions of Directive 2004/18, as interpreted in connection with the examination of the first question referred.

50 In such a situation, it is for the national court to interpret domestic law, so far as possible, in the light of the wording and the purpose of Directive 2004/18 with a view to achieving the results sought by the latter, favouring the interpretation of the national rules which is the most consistent with that purpose in order thereby to achieve an outcome compatible with the provisions of the directive, setting aside, if necessary, any contrary provision of national law (see Case C-414/07 Magoora [2008] ECR I-0000, paragraph 44).

51 The answer to the second question must therefore be that Directive 2004/18 must be construed as precluding an interpretation of national legislation, such as that at issue in the main proceedings, which prohibits entities, such as universities and research institutes, which are primarily non-profit-making from taking part in a procedure for the award of a public contract, even though such entities are entitled under national law to offer the services covered by the contract in question.

Costs

52 Since these proceedings are, for the parties to the main proceedings, a step in the action pending before the national court, the decision on costs is a matter for that court. Costs incurred in submitting observations to the Court, other than the costs of those parties, are not recoverable.

On those grounds, the Court (Fourth Chamber) hereby rules:

1. The provisions of Directive 2004/18/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 31 March 2004 on the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts, public supply contracts and public service contracts, in particular those in Article 1(2)(a) and (8), first and second subparagraphs, which refer to the concept of 'economic operator', must be interpreted as permitting entities which are primarily non-profit-making and do not have the organisational structure of an undertaking or a regular presence on the market – such as universities and research institutes and consortia made up of universities and public authorities – to take part in a public tendering procedure for the award of a service contract.

2. Directive 2004/18 must be construed as precluding an interpretation of national legislation, such as that at issue in the main proceedings, which prohibits entities, such as universities and research institutes, which are primarily non-profit-making from taking part in a procedure for the award of a public contract, even though such entities are entitled under national law to offer the services covered by the contract in question.

Operative part of the judgment

The provisions of Directive 2004/18/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 31 March 2004 on the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts, public supply contracts and public service contracts, in particular those in Article 1(2)(a) and (8), first and second subparagraphs, which refer to the concept of 'economic operator', must be interpreted as permitting entities which are primarily non-profit-making and do not have the organisational structure of an undertaking or a regular presence on the market - such as universities and research institutes and consortia made up of universities and public authorities - to take part in a public tendering procedure for the award of a service contract.

Consorzio Nazionale Interuniversitario per le Scienze del Mare (CoNISMa)
v
Regione Marche

(Reference for a preliminary ruling from the Consiglio di Stato (Italy))

(Public service contracts – Directive 2004/18/EC – Procedure for the award of public procurement contracts – Concept of 'economic operator' – Exclusion of non-profit-making entities whose objects include research, such as universities)

1. The present reference for a preliminary ruling from the Consiglio di Stato (Council of State) (Italy) concerns the interpretation of the concept of 'economic operator', set out in particular in the second paragraph of Article 1(8) of Directive 2004/18/EC. (2) The referring court seeks to know whether non-profit-making entities which are not necessarily present on the market on a regular basis, in particular universities and research institutes as well as groups (consortia) of those universities and research institutes and State bodies, are allowed to participate in a public service tendering procedure in relation to the acquisition of geophysical data and marine samples. In addition, the referring court asks whether a restrictive interpretation of the national legislation, which provides that the above entities are excluded from such participation, is contrary to the Directive.

I – Legal framework

A – Community law

2. Article 1(2)(a) of the Directive provides that '"Public contracts" are contracts for pecuniary interest concluded in writing between one or more economic operators and one or more contracting authorities and having as their object the execution of works, the supply of products or the provision of services within the meaning of this Directive'. (3)

3. According to Article 1(8) of the Directive:

'the terms "contractor", "supplier" and "service provider" mean any natural or legal person or public entity or group of such persons and/or bodies which offers on the market, respectively, the execution of works and/or a work, products or services.

The term "economic operator" shall cover equally the concepts of contractor, supplier and service provider. It is used merely in the interest of simplification.

4. Article 4 of the Directive is entitled 'Economic operators' and states:

'1. Candidates or tenderers who, under the law of the Member State in which they are established, are entitled to provide the relevant service, shall not be rejected solely on the ground that, under the law of the Member State in which the contract is awarded, they would be required to be either natural or legal persons.

2. Groups of economic operators may submit tenders or put themselves forward as candidates. In order to submit a tender or a request to participate, these groups may not be required by the contracting authorities to assume a specific legal form; however, the group selected may be required to do so when it has been awarded the contract, to the extent that this change is necessary for the satisfactory performance of the contract.' (5)

5. Finally, Article 44(1) of the Directive provides under the heading 'verification of the suitability and choice of participants and award of contracts' that 'contracts shall be awarded on the basis of the criteria laid down in Articles 53 and 55, taking into account Article 24, after the suitability of the economic operators not excluded under Articles 45 and 46 has been checked by contracting authorities in accordance with the criteria of economic and financial standing, of professional and technical knowledge or ability referred to in Articles 47 to 52, and, where appropriate, with the non-discriminatory rules and criteria referred to in paragraph 3'. (6)

B – National law

6. Article 3(19) and (22) of the Public Contracts Code, enacted by Legislative Decree No 163 of 12 April 2006, (7) provides, respectively that 'the terms "contractor", "supplier" and "service provider" shall mean any natural or legal person, or body without legal personality, including a European Economic Interest Group (EEIG) formed pursuant to Legislative Decree No 240 of 23 July 1991, which "offers on the market", respectively, the execution of works or a work, the supply of products, or the provision of services' and that 'the term "economic operator" shall include a contractor, supplier, service provider or a group or consortium of these'. (8)

7. Article 34 of Legislative Decree No 163/2006 provides, under the heading 'Entities to which public contracts may be awarded …':

'1. Without prejudice to the restrictions expressly provided for, the following entities are entitled to participate in the procedure for the award of public procurement contracts:

(a) individual commercial operators, including artisans, commercial companies and partnerships and cooperatives;

(b) consortia of production- and labour-cooperatives … and … consortia of artisans …;

(c) permanent consortia, constituted inter alia as joint venture companies ..., between individual contractors (including artisans), commercial companies or partnerships or production- and labour-cooperatives, …;

(d) special purpose groupings of competitors, whose members include the entities referred to in subparagraphs (a), (b) and (c) …;

(e) ordinary consortia of competitors ..., whose members include the entities referred to in subparagraphs (a), (b) and (c) of the present paragraph, including those constituted as companies or partnerships…;

(f) entities who have entered into an [EEIG] …;

8. It was only after the material events of the main proceedings had occurred, and therefore also after the adoption of the order of the referring court on 23 April 2008, that Legislative Decree No 152 of 11 September 2008 (9) added the following subparagraph to the above list: '(f bis) economic operators within the meaning of Article 3(22), established in other Member States and constituted according to the applicable legislation of the Member State concerned'.

II – Factual and procedural background and the questions referred

9. The Regione Marche (the Marche Region), in its capacity as a contracting authority, organised a public service tendering procedure in relation to the acquisition of geophysical data and marine samples. The Consorzio Nazionale Interuniversitario per le Scienze del Mare (National Inter-University Marine Sciences Consortium, 'CoNISMa') applied to participate, but was ultimately excluded from that procedure.

10. CoNISMa challenged its exclusion by way of an extraordinary petition to the President of the Italian Republic. In the framework of that extraordinary petition, the Ministero dell'ambiente e della tutela del territorio (Italian Ministry of the Environment and Protection of the Territory) requested an opinion of the Consiglio di Stato. The referring court needs to establish whether an inter-university group, such as CoNISMa, constitutes an 'economic operator' within the meaning of the Directive and, if so, whether it may take part in a tendering procedure such as the one at issue in the main proceedings. In that regard, the referring court expresses doubts on the basis of the following considerations.

11. The Consiglio di Stato states that CoNISMa is a group (consortium) of 24 universities and three ministries. According to its statute, the consortium is non-profit-making and seeks to promote and coordinate research and other scientific activities and their applications in the field of marine sciences between the member universities. However, its statute provides that it may participate in public tendering procedures. The consortium is financed primarily from funds provided by the Ministry for Universities and Research. In the referring court's view, the tendering procedures in question are open only to public bodies that supply the services which are the subject of the contract in accordance with their official functions and in a manner which is consistent with the profit-making functions they are assigned by the rules governing them.

12. Thus the Consiglio di Stato decided to stay the proceedings and to refer the following questions to the Court for a preliminary ruling:

'(1) Must the provisions of Directive 2004/18/EC ... be interpreted as precluding a consortium made up solely of Italian universities and State bodies, [such as CoNISMa], from taking part in a tendering procedure for the award of a service contract such as that for the acquisition of geophysical data and marine samples?

(2) Are the provisions of Italian law contained in Article 3(22) and (19) and Article 34 of the Public Contracts Code, enacted by Legislative Decree No 163/2006, which provide, respectively: that "the term 'economic operator' shall include a contractor, supplier, service provider or a group or consortium of these" and "the terms 'contractor', 'supplier' and 'service provider' shall mean any natural or legal person, or body without legal personality, including [an EEIG] ..., which 'offers on the market', respectively, the execution of works or a work, the supply of products or the provision of services", contrary to Directive 2004/18/EC if interpreted as restricting participation in tendering procedures to professional providers of such services and excluding entities whose primary objects are non-profit-making, such as research?'

III – Assessment

A – Principal arguments of the parties

13. According to CoNISMa, the applicant in the main proceedings, the national legislation, which excludes entities that are not 'contractors' according to an exhaustive list contained in Article 34 of Legislative Decree No 163/2006, must be interpreted in the light of the Directive. Article 1(8) of the Directive expressly includes 'public entities' among contractors, suppliers or service providers. Article 4 of the Directive provides that candidates entitled to provide the relevant service are not to be rejected solely on the ground that, under the law of the Member State in which the contract is awarded, they would be required to be either natural or legal persons. A fortiori, a candidate should not be rejected on the ground that he is not a 'contractor'. CoNISMa states that that approach is confirmed by the fact that after the Commission of the European Communities had taken action in the form of opening administrative procedure No 2007/2309 (10) against the Italian Republic concerning a failure to fulfil obligations, the Italian Government inserted in Article 34(1) of Legislative Decree No 163/2006 the new subparagraph (f bis) referred to above. In CoNISMa's view, this reform expressly abolished the requirement that economic operators established in other Member States be a 'contractor'. Furthermore, that reform replaced the term 'undertakings' used in the Legislative Decree with the term 'economic operators'.

14. The Czech Government argues, in essence, that if the Directive intended to establish a distinction between economic public bodies, which carry out a certain economic activity, and non-economic ones, it would have included a statement to that effect. Therefore, the Czech Government proposes that the first question should be answered in the negative.

15. The Austrian Government contends inter alia that the Community rules on public procurement are applicable where a contracting authority intends to award a contract for pecuniary interest to a legally distinct entity, whether the latter is itself a contracting authority or not. It follows that contracting authorities may take part in public tendering procedures both as tenderers or as candidates, a point which should apply a fortiori to tenderers who are not contracting authorities but whose objects are non-profit-making and which do not act exclusively in accordance with market forces.

16. The Commission submits essentially that according to Article 1(8) of the Directive and the Court's case-law, public bodies and contracting authorities in general may take part in a public tendering procedure as tenderers and may therefore be considered as economic operators within the meaning of the Directive. Furthermore, no provision of the Directive precludes universities and consortia of universities from being considered economic operators and from accessing Community tender procedures.

17. As regards the second question, all the above parties argue, in substance, that it should be answered in the affirmative.

B – Appraisal

18. By its two questions, which should be considered together, the referring court asks essentially whether non-profit-making entities which are not necessarily present on the market on a regular basis, (11) such as CoNISMa – that is to say, universities and research institutes as well as groups (consortia) of those universities and research institutes and State bodies (12) – are entitled to participate in a public service tendering procedure and may be considered to constitute an 'economic operator' within the meaning of the Directive. Should the national legislation be interpreted restrictively as precluding the above entities from participating, the referring court asks whether such interpretation is contrary to the Directive. In that respect, it is sufficient to point out that the Court interprets Community law and not national law. (13)

19. I shall first consider the wording of the relevant provisions.

20. Despite the reference to 'economic operators' in, inter alia, Article 1(2)(a), the Directive does not contain a precise definition of that concept. Article 1(8) of the Directive provides only that that term 'is used merely in the interest of simplification' and means 'any natural or legal person or public entity or group of such persons and/or bodies which offers on the market … works[,] products or services'. (14)

21. In that regard, I consider that the fact that Article 1(8) of the Directive refers to those who 'offer services on the market' does not signify an intention to restrict the category of public bodies eligible to conclude contracts with contracting authorities solely to those bodies which are engaged (as an undertaking) in the activity involved in the service to be provided by the selected contractor and whose objects are profit-making. In order to be considered an economic operator it is not essential to offer services on the market on a continuous and systematic basis.

22. In my view, the Directive clearly does not require any particular legal form and it contains no requirement to the effect that an economic operator qualify as an undertaking or needs to have profit-making objects or a stable or regular presence on the market.

23. The Directive merely provides that an 'economic operator' means inter alia any public entity which offers on the market the execution of works, products or services. It says nothing more.

24. In that connection, as the Commission has pointed out, by not providing any indications as to the required characteristics and/or legal form of economic operators allowed to participate in tendering procedures, the Community legislature did not wish to define that concept in a way which would introduce particular conditions and thus limit access to tender procedures in such a way.

25. In addition, it should be pointed out that Article 4(1) of the Directive provides that 'candidates or tenderers who, under the law of the Member State in which they are established, are entitled to provide the relevant service, shall not be rejected solely on the ground that, under the law of the Member State in which the contract is awarded, they would be required to be either natural or legal persons'. Then, as regards groups of economic operators, Article 4(2) of the Directive continues that 'in order to submit a tender or a request to participate, these groups may not be required by the contracting authorities to assume a specific legal form …'.

26. It follows from the foregoing considerations, and not least from the wording of Article 1(8) of the Directive in particular, that public entities, such as the entity involved in the main proceedings, constitute 'economic operators' and may, in principle, participate in public service tendering procedures.

27. The above approach is confirmed by the travaux préparatoires to the Directive. (15)

28. Here, one may perhaps draw a parallel with the well-established concept of an undertaking under Community competition law.

29. This may also be opportune due to the fact that the Directive stresses that the concept of 'economic operator' is used merely in the interest of simplification. In addition, it is obvious that competition law and rules guaranteeing fair competition in tendering procedures are related.

30. Therefore it is instructive to recall the Höfner and Elser (16) line of case-law on the concept of 'undertaking', in the context of competition law, which 'encompasses every entity engaged in an economic activity, regardless of the legal status of the entity and the way in which it is financed'. Furthermore, the Court has held that 'any activity consisting in offering goods or services on a given market is an economic activity'. (17) Here, the remark of Advocate General Jacobs that 'an activity does not necessarily cease to be economic simply because there is no aim to make a profit' is particularly apt. (18)

31. My interpretation of the concept of 'economic operator' is also confirmed by the Court's case-law relating to public procurement.

32. First of all, there is case-law (19) where the Court has stated that the Community rules on public contracts apply to 'an economic operator [who is] active on the market'. However, I consider that one should not infer from that statement that an economic operator must have a stable or regular presence on the market.

33. On the contrary, in my view, the concept of 'economic operator' must be interpreted broadly in order to include any person who offers services on the market, whether he does so for the first time or merely on an isolated or occasional basis.

34. Indeed, as the Commission has pointed out, the above is not prejudicial to the quality of the service provided since Article 44 of the Directive provides that contracts are to be awarded only after the contracting authorities have checked the economic operators' economic and financial standing as well as their professional and technical knowledge or ability.

35. A broad interpretation of the concept of 'economic operator' is also in line with the Court's case-law to the effect that it is the concern of Community law to ensure the widest possible participation by tenderers in a call for tenders. (20)

36. Regard should also be had in this context to the judgments in Teckal, (21) ARGE, (22)Stadt Halle and RPL Lochau, (23) and Auroux and Others, (24) where the Court ruled, inter alia, that Community legislation on public procurement is applicable even in cases where the contractor is itself a contracting authority. (25) Therefore, a contracting authority may also be considered to constitute an 'economic operator' within the meaning of the Directive. This also supports my broad interpretation of that concept in the present case.

37. The referring court expressed concerns specifically with regard to CoNISMa's non-profit-making objects. In that connection, in Commission v Italy, (26) the Court ruled, first, that the fact that an association is non-profit-making does not exclude it from carrying out an activity of an economic nature and from constituting an undertaking under the Treaty provisions relating to competition.

38. Next, the Court recalled the ruling in ARGE (27) and held that the fact that, as their employees work on a voluntary basis, such bodies tend to be able to submit tenders at prices appreciably lower than those of other tenderers does not preclude them from participating in an award procedure for a public service contract covered by Directive 92/50. Therefore, the Court concluded that the contract at issue in that case was not excluded from the concept of public service contracts within the meaning of Article 1(a) of Directive 92/50, by reason of the fact that the associations at issue were of a non-profit-making nature. (28)

39. Furthermore, in order to address the referring court's concerns that the consortium would allegedly not be able to offer the professionalism and capability of a typical business as well as the sophisticated machinery and highly-skilled operators required for the service concerned, it is sufficient to recall the case-law where the Court held that it makes no difference if the tenderer himself cannot or does not intend to carry out the contract itself provided that it can demonstrate that it actually has available to it the resources, of subsidiaries or third parties and whatever the nature of its legal link with those companies, (29) which are necessary for carrying out the contract.

40. In that connection, the Directive does not allow a contracting authority to exclude a public body, such as CoNISMa, from taking part in a tendering procedure, the reason being that the question whether an economic operator is entitled to take part in such a procedure is to be examined in the framework of Articles 44 to 52 of the Directive. In other words, as the Czech Government has argued, the possibility of taking part in a tendering procedure by way of submitting a bid should be distinguished from the assessment of that bid in the framework of a subsequent qualification phase of the procedure.

41. In addition, the referring court considers that participation in tendering procedures by consortia of public bodies, such as CoNISMa, may infringe the principle of free competition in two respects. First, such participation could potentially remove from the open market a number of public contracts, to which ease of access would be at least hampered for a not inconsiderable proportion of ordinary undertakings due to the consortium's widespread network of business-referral points. Secondly, it would place the contractor in a position of unfair advantage because of the economic security provided by the constant and predictable flow of public finance which is not available to other economic operators, who must rely solely on their ability to earn revenue from their offering on the market.

42. First, as regards the alleged widespread network of business-referral points, I do not consider that argument particularly decisive, not least since CoNISMa explained in its observations that its only seat is in Rome and the offices of its various members do not play any role in public tendering procedures.

43. Secondly, with regard to the argument that CoNISMa would be placed in a position of unfair advantage because of the public finance available to it – quite apart from CoNISMa's explanation that its commercial activity is self-funding – I agree with the Czech Government and the Commission that it is sufficient to refer to the Court's case-law to the effect that that element is not an obstacle to participation in tendering procedures. (30) In particular, the Court has held that public bodies, specifically bodies receiving subsidies from the State which might enable them to submit tenders at prices appreciably lower than those of other, unsubsidised, tenderers, are expressly authorised (31) to participate in a procedure for the award of a public procurement contract. Indeed, the Directive which is pertinent in the case in the main proceedings also expressly authorises public bodies, funded in some cases out of the public purse, to participate in procedures for the award of public procurement contracts.

44. It may be noted here that Article 55(3) of the Directive concerning 'abnormally low tenders' provides that 'where a contracting authority establishes that a tender is abnormally low because the tenderer has obtained State aid, the tender can be rejected on that ground alone only after consultation with the tenderer where the latter is unable to prove, within a sufficient time-limit fixed by the contracting authority, that the aid in question was granted legally. Where the contracting authority rejects a tender in these circumstances, it shall inform the Commission of that fact'. (32)

45. In that regard, the Directive states, in the fourth recital in the preamble, that 'Member States should ensure that the participation of a body governed by public law as a tenderer in a procedure for the award of a public contract does not cause any distortion of competition in relation to private tenderers'.

46. To conclude, Article 1(8) of the Directive, and in particular the concept of 'economic operator', should be interpreted as not precluding a consortium such as the one in the main proceedings from taking part in a public service tendering procedure. (33) It follows that the Directive precludes national legislation which excludes such entities from participation, provided that they are otherwise entitled under the relevant national legislation to offer products, services or works on the market.

47. In that regard, it is for the national court to determine, taking into account all the relevant circumstances of the case before it, whether the relevant national legislation is compatible with the Directive, disapplying, if necessary, any contrary provision of domestic law. (34)

IV – Conclusion

48. Therefore, I suggest that the Court answer the questions of the Consiglio di Stato as follows:

(1) Article 1(8) of Directive 2004/18/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 31 March 2004 on the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts, public supply contracts and public service contracts, and in particular the concept of 'economic operator', should be interpreted as not precluding a consortium, such as the one in the main proceedings, from taking part in a tendering procedure for the award of a service contract pertaining to services the consortium is entitled to carry out under the relevant national legislation.

(2) Directive 2004/18 precludes national legislation which excludes entities whose primary objects are non-profit-making, such as research, from participating in tendering procedures, provided that those entities are entitled under the relevant national legislation to offer works, products or services on the market.

10 – CoNISMa claims that the Commission criticised the list in Article 34 of Legislative Decree No 163/2006, stating that it 'does not appear to allow the participation in tendering procedures of operators with a legal form different to those mentioned in the list. In particular, this article does not appear to allow the participation of other public entities or bodies governed by public law in the sense of the public procurement directives'.

11 – The Consiglio di Stato refers in this respect to CoNISMa's presence on the market as not being on a 'regular' or 'stable' basis. However, CoNISMa's statute expressly provides that it may participate in tendering procedures and that is why I qualify the statement with the inclusion of 'necessarily'. In fact, CoNISMa argues that it regularly participates in public tendering procedures.

12 – I would note here that CoNISMa disputes the fact that it is also composed of State bodies. However, suffice it to say that the questions referred for a preliminary ruling are considered within the factual and legal context as set out by the referring court. The Court does not take account of observations from interested parties within the meaning of Article 23 of the Statute of the Court which take issue with that context. See Case C–153/02 Neri [2003] ECR I–13555, paragraphs 33 to 36; see also Case C–145/03 Keller [2005] ECR I–2529, paragraphs 32 to 34. In any event, my conclusion in the present opinion applies whether or not the consortium is also composed of State bodies.

13 – As regards the wording of the second question, it is not the task of the Court, in preliminary ruling proceedings, to rule upon the compatibility of national law with Community law or to interpret national law. The Court is, however, competent to give the national court full guidance on the interpretation of Community law in order to enable it to determine the issue of compatibility for the purposes of the case before it (see Case C–213/07 Michaniki [2008] ECR I–0000, paragraphs 51 and 52 and the case-law cited).

14 – Emphasis added.

---

15 – The proposal for the Directive explained, under 'justification' for the wording of what eventually became Article 1(8), that the 'new concept [of an economic operator] has become necessary because of the insertion of the three public sector Directives into a single text'. The travaux préparatoires to the Directive also state that 'the only purpose of [that] term is for conciseness' and that it stands for 'opérateur économique' in French or 'ondernemer' in Dutch and that in English it effectively means 'undertaking'. They continue by stating that 'in the event of serious transcription problems, systematic use could be made, despite the ponderous style, of "supplier, provider of services and contractor"'.

31 – At the time, by Directive 92/50.

32 – In this respect, see also ARGE, cited in footnote 22.

33 – In that connection, as the Commission has pointed out, a Member State may of course govern the activities of non-profit-making persons whose primary object is research and, if necessary, may limit the possibility for such persons to offer services on the market. None the less, the Member State in question must recognise persons established in other Member States entitled under the law of the Member States concerned to carry out the relevant service activity as constituting 'economic operators', whether they be universities, research institutes or groups made up of these, acting with or without a profit-making purpose. The referring court does not refer to any Italian legislation which would establish the above limitations for entities such as the one in the main proceedings.

34 – See, to that effect, Case C–357/06 Frigerio Luigi & C. [2007] ECR I–12311, paragraph 28, which refers to Case 157/86 Murphy and Others [1988] ECR 673, paragraph 11, and Case C–208/05 ITC [2007] ECR I–181, paragraphs 68 and 69.

Must the provisions of Directive 2004/18/EC [1] on the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts, public supply contracts and public service contracts that are referred to in section 1 above be interpreted as precluding a consortium made up solely of Italian universities and state bodies, as described in section 8 above, from taking part in a tendering procedure for the award of a service contract such as that for the acquisition of geophysical data and marine samples?

Are the provisions of Italian law contained in Article 3(22) and (19) and Article 34 of the Public Contracts Code, enacted by Legislative Decree No 163/2006, which provide, respectively: that 'the term "economic operator" shall include a contractor, supplier, service provider or a group or consortium of these' and 'the terms "contractor", "supplier" and "service provider" shall mean any natural or legal person, or body without legal personality, including a European Economic Interest Group (EEIG) formed pursuant to Legislative Decree No 240 of 23 July 1991, which "offers on the market", respectively, the execution of works or a work, the supply of products or the provision of services', contrary to Directive 2004/18/EC if interpreted as restricting participation in tendering procedures to professional providers of such services and excluding entities whose primary objects are not-for-profit, such as research?

having regard to the written procedure and further to the hearing on 10 June 2009, after hearing the Opinion of the Advocate General at the sitting on 22 September 2009, gives the following

Judgment

1 By its application, the Commission of the European Communities is asking the Court to declare that, by adopting and keeping in force Articles 73 and 74-IV of the Code des marchés publics (the Public Procurement Code) adopted by Decree No 2006-975 of 1 August 2006 (Official Journal of the French Republic of 4 August 2006, p. 11627), inasmuch as those provisions lay down a procedure for the award of so–called marchés de definition (public contracts for designing the parameters, including the purpose, of a public works, supply or service contract) under which it is possible for the contracting authority to award a marché d'exécution (a public works, supply or service contract) to one of the holders of the initial marchés de définition without opening it afresh to competition or, at most, by opening it to competition limited to those holders, the French Republic has failed to fulfil its obligations under Articles 2, 28 and 31 of Directive 2004/18/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 31 March 2004 on the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts, public supply contracts and public service contracts (OJ 2004 L 134, p. 114).

Legal context

2 Recital 3 in the preamble to Directive 2004/18 states:

'Such [Community] coordinating provisions [of national procedures for the award of contracts] should comply as far as possible with current procedures and practices in each of the Member States.'

3 Article 2 of the Directive provides:

'Contracting authorities shall treat economic operators equally and non-discriminatorily and shall act in a transparent way.'

4 According to Article 28 of the Directive:

'In awarding their public contracts, contracting authorities shall apply the national procedures adjusted for the purposes of this Directive.

They shall award these public contracts by applying the open or restricted procedure. In the specific circumstances expressly provided for in Article 29, contracting authorities may award their public contracts by means of the competitive dialogue. In the specific cases and circumstances referred to expressly in Articles 30 and 31, they may apply a negotiated procedure, with or without publication of the contract notice.'

5 Article 29 of Directive 2004/18, entitled 'Competitive dialogue', provides:

'1. In the case of particularly complex contracts, Member States may provide that where contracting authorities consider that the use of the open or restricted procedure will not allow the award of the contract, the latter may make use of the competitive dialogue in accordance with this Article.

A public contract shall be awarded on the sole basis of the award criterion for the most economically advantageous tender.

2. Contracting authorities shall publish a contract notice setting out their needs and requirements, which they shall define in that notice and/or in a descriptive document.

3. Contracting authorities shall open, with the candidates selected in accordance with the relevant provisions of Articles 44 to 52, a dialogue the aim of which shall be to identify and define the means best suited to satisfying their needs. They may discuss all aspects of the contract with the chosen candidates during this dialogue.

During the dialogue, contracting authorities shall ensure equality of treatment among all tenderers. In particular, they shall not provide information in a discriminatory manner which may give some tenderers an advantage over others.

Contracting authorities may not reveal to the other participants solutions proposed or other confidential information communicated by a candidate participating in the dialogue without his/her agreement.

4. Contracting authorities may provide for the procedure to take place in successive stages in order to reduce the number of solutions to be discussed during the dialogue stage by applying the award criteria in the contract notice or the descriptive document. The contract notice or the descriptive document shall indicate that recourse may be had to this option.

5. The contracting authority shall continue such dialogue until it can identify the solution or solutions, if necessary after comparing them, which are capable of meeting its needs.

6. Having declared that the dialogue is concluded and having so informed the participants, contracting authorities shall ask them to submit their final tenders on the basis of the solution or solutions presented and specified during the dialogue. These tenders shall contain all the elements required and necessary for the performance of the project.

These tenders may be clarified, specified and fine-tuned at the request of the contracting authority. However, such clarification, specification, fine-tuning or additional information may not involve changes to the basic features of the tender or the call for tender, variations in which are likely to distort competition or have a discriminatory effect.

7. Contracting authorities shall assess the tenders received on the basis of the award criteria laid down in the contract notice or the descriptive document and shall choose the most economically advantageous tender in accordance with Article 53.

At the request of the contracting authority, the tenderer identified as having submitted the most economically advantageous tender may be asked to clarify aspects of the tender or confirm commitments contained in the tender provided this does not have the effect of modifying substantial aspects of the tender or of the call for tender and does not risk distorting competition or causing discrimination.

8. The contracting authorities may specify prices or payments to the participants in the dialogue.'

6 Article 31 of Directive 2004/18 states:

'Contracting authorities may award public contracts by a negotiated procedure without prior publication of a contract notice in the following cases:

(3) for public service contracts, when the contract concerned follows a design contest and must, under the applicable rules, be awarded to the successful candidate or to one of the successful candidates[;] in the latter case, all successful candidates must be invited to participate in the negotiations;

...'

7 The first subparagraph of Article 80(1) of the Directive is worded as follows:

'The Member States shall bring into force the laws, regulations and administrative provisions necessary to comply with this Directive no later than 31 January 2006. They shall forthwith inform the Commission thereof.'

8 The code des marchés publics (Public Procurement Code), in the version thereof resulting from Decree No 2004-15 of 7 January 2004 (Official Journal of the French Republic of 8 January 2004, p. 703), which entered into force on 10 January 2004, provided in the third paragraph of Article 73 as follows:

'Provisions supplied under several marchés de définitions having the same subject–matter, concluded upon completion of a single procedure and awarded simultaneously, may be awarded, without a further tendering process, to the supplier of the chosen solution. In such cases, the amount of the provisions to be compared with the thresholds takes account of the cost of the definition studies and the estimated amount of the marché d'exécution.'

9 The Public Procurement Code, as adopted by Decree No 2006–975, which entered into force on 1 September 2006, contains inter alia the following provisions:

'Article 73

If the public entity is unable to specify the aims and performances which the contract must meet, the techniques to be used, and the human and material resources required, it may resort to marchés de definition.

The purpose of such contracts is to explore the possibilities and conditions for establishing a contract subsequently, if necessary through production of a model or demonstrator. They must also enable the price level of the provisions to be estimated and calculated, as well as the different phases of the performance schedule.

In the framework of a single procedure, contracts for the performance of services following several marchés de définition having the same subject-matter and awarded simultaneously are awarded after being opened to competition limited to the holders of the initial marchés de définition, in accordance with the following provisions:

1. The public contract notice defines the subject-matter of the marchés de définition awarded simultaneously and the subject-matter of the subsequent marché d'exécution;

2. The public contract notice defines the criteria for the selection of applications. Those criteria take into account the capacities and competences required of the candidates both for the marchés de définition and for the subsequent marché d'exécution;

3. The public contract notice defines the criteria for the selection of offers for the marchés de définition awarded simultaneously and the criteria for the selection of offers for the subsequent marché d'exécution;

4. The amount of the provisions to be compared with the thresholds takes account of the cost of the definition studies and the estimated amount of the marché d'exécution;

5. The number of marchés de définition awarded simultaneously in the framework of the present procedure may not be lower than three, subject to a sufficient number of candidates.

The contract or framework agreement is awarded by the tenders committee for the local authorities or after the opinion of the tenders committee for the State, for the public health bodies and the public social or medical-social bodies.'

IV. In the framework of a single procedure, the contract or framework agreement of project-management following several marchés de définition having the same subject-matter and awarded simultaneously may be awarded after being opened to competition limited to the holders of the initial marchés de définition, under the conditions laid down in the third paragraph of Article 73.

The pre–litigation procedure

10 By letter of 18 October 2004, the Commission sent the French Republic a first letter of formal notice concerning Articles 73 and 74–III of the Public Procurement Code, as amended by Decree No 2004-15. Following the amendment of those provisions by Decree No 2006-975, the Commission sent an additional letter of formal notice to that Member State on 15 December 2006.

11 As it was not satisfied with the French Republic's replies, on 29 June 2007 the Commission sent a reasoned opinion to the French Republic, calling on it to take the measures necessary to comply with that opinion within two months of its receipt.

12 Taking the view that that Member State's replies to the reasoned opinion were not satisfactory, the Commission decided to bring the present action.

13 The Commission claims that Articles 73 and 74-IV of the Public Procurement Code, as adopted by Decree No 2006-975, allow a contracting authority to award a marché d'exécution (a public works, supply or service contract) to one of the holders of the initial marchés de définition without opening it afresh to competition or, at most, by opening it to competition limited to those holders as soon as the conditions provided for in the third paragraph of Article 73 have been met. Those articles of the Public Procurement Code infringe the provisions of Directive 2004/18 by allowing a contract to be awarded on the basis of mutual agreement, or with limited competition, in situations not provided for by the Directive.

14 The Commission maintains that marchés de définition as provided for by those national provisions do not make it possible, as a general rule, to establish at the outset, with sufficient precision, the subject-matter of the marché d'exécution, the criteria for selecting tenderers or those for awarding the contract in question. It follows that the procedure for the award of marchés de définition resulting from those provisions runs counter to the principle of transparency laid down in Article 2 of Directive 2004/18. That procedure creates a situation of legal uncertainty for both contracting authorities and operators.

15 According to the Commission, the procedure for the award of marchés de définition is neither a competitive dialogue nor a framework agreement within the meaning of Articles 29 and 32 of Directive 2004/18. Nor is such a procedure a design contest under which it is possible, under certain conditions, to award the ensuing service contract on the basis of mutual agreement in accordance with Article 31(3) of the Directive.

16 The French Republic claims that the national provisions in issue are not incompatible with Articles 2, 28 or 31 of Directive 2004/18. The latter, it argues, is a coordinating directive and does not lay down a uniform and exhaustive body of Community rules. Consequently, the fact that competition may be limited when the marchés d'exécution are being awarded is compatible with that directive. The procedure for the award of marchés de définition complies with the principles on the right of establishment and the freedom to provide services laid down by the EC Treaty and set out in Article 2 of that directive, since the Member States remain free to maintain or adopt substantive and procedural rules in regard to public contracts.

17 The French Republic argues that it is possible for the subject-matter and criteria of the subsequent marché d'exécution to be established from the launch of the procedure for the award of the marchés de définition. There are many situations, such as those involving certain urban development contracts, in which the subject-matter and criteria for the award of the marché d'exécution are sufficiently independent of the marchés de définition that they can already be determined at the initial stage of the marchés de définition.

18 The French Republic adds that Directive 2004/18 sets out two procedures with characteristics which are analogous to those of the procedure for the award of marchés de definition provided for by the Public Procurement Code, as adopted by Decree No 2006–975, namely the framework agreement and the competitive dialogue. By those two procedures, the Community legislature itself established complex procedures by which contracts are opened to competition in two stages. Since that directive does not lay down a uniform and exhaustive body of Community rules, the national legislature can also establish specific provisions providing for contracts to be opened to competition in two stages, provided that those provisions comply with the principle of transparency laid down in Article 2 of that directive.

19 If the Court were to take the view that the body of rules established by that directive is exhaustive, the French Republic submits, in the alternative, that the procedure for the award of marchés de definition set out in the Public Procurement Code can be regarded as constituting a variation on the competitive dialogue procedure.

20 By its form of order, the Commission is asking the Court to declare that the French Republic has failed to fulfil its obligations under Articles 2, 28 and 31 of Directive 2004/18 by adopting and keeping in force Articles 73 and 74-IV of the Public Procurement Code adopted by Decree No 2006-975, inasmuch as those provisions lay down a procedure for the award of marchés de definition under which it is possible for a contracting authority to award a marché d'exécution to one of the holders of the initial marchés de définition 'without opening it afresh to competition' or, at most, by opening it to competition limited to those holders.

21 It is appropriate to examine the alleged failure to fulfil obligations under Article 31 of Directive 2004/18. According to the Commission, that failure stems from the fact that the procedure for the award of marchés de définition allows contracts to be awarded on the basis of mutual agreement in circumstances which are not provided for by point 3 of Article 31 of the Directive.

22 In this respect, it is settled case–law that the question whether a Member State has failed to fulfil obligations must be determined by reference to the situation prevailing in that Member State at the end of the period laid down in the reasoned opinion (see, inter alia, Case C–64/01 Commission v Greece [2002] ECR I-2523, paragraph 7, and Case C–456/05 Commission v Germany [2007] ECR I-10517, paragraph 15).

23 It is common ground that the version of Article 73 of the Public Procurement Code resulting from Decree No 2004-15 which allowed marchés d'exécution to be awarded 'without a further tendering process' was no longer in force on the date of expiry of the two-month period laid down in the reasoned opinion. On that date, that version of Article 73 had been replaced by a new version resulting from Decree No 2006–975.

24 It is clear from the wording of the third paragraph of Article 73 of the Public Procurement Code, as adopted by Decree No 2006-975, that marchés d'exécution are awarded solely 'after being opened to competition limited to the holders of the initial marchés de définition'. On the date on which the period laid down in the reasoned opinion expired, marchés d'exécution were thus not awarded by means of the negotiated procedure within the meaning of point 3 of Article 31 of Directive 2004/18.

25 It follows that the Commission's action must be dismissed in so far as it seeks a declaration by the Court that the procedure for the award of marchés de définition allows a contracting authority to award a marché d'exécution to one of the holders of the marchés de définition 'without opening it afresh to competition' and in so far as it claims that there has been a failure to fulfil obligations under Article 31 of that directive.

26 The action does, however, retain a purpose in so far as the Commission complains that the French Republic has failed in its obligations under Articles 2 and 28 of Directive 2004/18 by adopting and keeping in force Articles 73 and 74-IV of the Public Procurement Code adopted by Decree No 2006-975, inasmuch as those provisions lay down a procedure for the award of marchés de definition under which it is possible for the contracting authority to award a marché d'exécution to one of the holders of the initial marchés de définition by opening it to competition limited to those holders.

27 In its statement in defence, the French Republic submits that Directive 2004/18 is only a coordinating directive, which leaves Member States free to maintain or adopt rules in regard to public contracts other than those provided for by that directive.

28 That line of argument cannot be accepted. Whilst it is true that Directive 2004/18 does not seek to establish complete harmonisation of the rules governing public procurement in the Member States, the fact remains that the procedures for the award of public contracts that the Member States are permitted to use are listed exhaustively in Article 28 of that directive.

29 Under Article 28, contracting authorities are required to award their public contracts by applying either the open or restricted procedure, or, in the specific circumstances expressly provided for in Article 29 of Directive 2004/18, the competitive dialogue or, in the further alternative, in the specific circumstances referred to expressly in Articles 30 and 31 thereof, a negotiated procedure. The award of public contracts by means of other procedures is not permitted by that directive.

30 A different conclusion cannot be inferred from Joined Cases 27/86 to 29/86 CEI and Bellini [1987] ECR 3347.

31 Admittedly, in the first sentence of paragraph 15 of that judgment, the Court held that Council Directive 71/305/EEC of 26 July 1971 concerning the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts (OJ, English Special Edition 1971 (II), p. 682) did not lay down a uniform and exhaustive body of Community rules. However, in the following sentence of that paragraph 15, the Court stated that, although Member States remained free to maintain or adopt substantive and procedural rules in regard to public contracts, they had to do so within the framework of the common rules contained in that directive.

32 Furthermore, in paragraph 17 of CEI and Bellini, the Court made it clear that it was ruling in the light of the state of harmonisation of Community law at the time of delivery of its judgment.

However, the second paragraph of Article 28 of Directive 2004/18, which had no equivalent in Directive 71/305, specifically lists the procedures which contracting authorities must apply in awarding their contracts.

33 It follows that, in the framework of the common rules currently in force, Member States are no longer free to adopt award procedures other than those specified by Directive 2004/18.

34 Accordingly, the French Republic's arguments that it is possible for a Member State to adopt contract award procedures which are not provided for by Directive 2004/18, but which exhibit characteristics analogous to those of certain procedures referred to by that directive, must be rejected.

35 However, it is necessary to examine the argument, put forward by the French Republic in the alternative, that the procedure for the award of marchés de definition provided for by the Public Procurement Code, as adopted by Decree No 2006–975, constitutes a form of implementation of the competitive dialogue procedure provided for in Article 29 of Directive 2004/18.

36 It must be acknowledged that there is a degree of proximity between the objectives pursued by the competitive dialogue procedure and those of the procedure for the award of marchés de definition. Each of those procedures was designed to enable the contracting authority to define initially the specific subject–matter of a contract and the technical means for performing it.

37 However, there is a fundamental difference between those two procedures. The difference is that the competitive dialogue is a procedure for the award of one single contract, whereas the procedure for the award of marchés de définition relates to the award of several contracts of different natures, namely marchés de définition, on the one hand, and one or more marché d'exécution, on the other.

38 That difference by itself makes it impossible for the procedure for the award of marchés de definition to be interpreted as a form of implementation of the competitive dialogue procedure.

39 The Commission also pleads a failure to fulfil obligations under Article 2 of Directive 2004/18, which requires contracting authorities to treat economic operators equally and non–discriminatorily and to act in a transparent way.

40 In this respect, the Court notes that the purpose of the procedure for the award of marchés de definition, as adopted by Decree No 2006-975, is to award two types of contracts, namely marchés de définition and marchés d'exécution, the latter being awarded after being opened to competition limited to the holders of the former alone. Accordingly, economic operators who might be interested in participating in marchés d'exécution, but who are not holders of one of the marchés de définition, are discriminated against in comparison with those holders, contrary to the principle of equality, which is laid down as a principle for the award of contracts in Article 2 of Directive 2004/18.

41 Moreover, both the principle of equal treatment and the obligation of transparency which flows from it require the subject-matter of each contract and the criteria governing its award to be clearly defined (see, to that effect, Case C-340/02 Commission v France [2004] ECR I-9845, paragraph 34).

42 The French Republic has put forward a number of examples of procedures for the award of marchés de definition in which, in its view, the subject–matter of the marché d'exécution could be defined with a certain degree of precision already at the stage of the launch of the procedure for the award of the marchés de définition.

43 However, marchés de définition and marchés d'exécution appear by their nature to have different subject–matters, namely, first, a study and design project in which the needs of the contracting authority are defined and, second, the actual provision of supplies, services or works defined in advance. The national provisions the subject of complaint are not, however, capable of ensuring that, in all cases, the subject–matter and award criteria of both marchés de définition and the marché d'exécution can be defined from the beginning of the procedure.

44 It follows that the procedure for the award of marchés de définition laid down by Articles 73 and 74-IV of the Public Procurement Code, as adopted by Decree No 2006-975, is not consistent with Article 2 of Directive 2004/18.

45 Consequently, by adopting and keeping in force Articles 73 and 74-IV of the Public Procurement Code, adopted by Decree No 2006-975 of 1 August 2006, inasmuch as those provisions lay down a procedure for the award of marchés de definition under which it is possible for the contracting authority to award a marché d'exécution (a public works, supply or service contract) to one of the holders of the initial marchés de définition by opening it to competition limited to those holders, the French Republic has failed to fulfil its obligations under Articles 2 and 28 of Directive 2004/18.

Costs

46 Under Article 69(2) of the Rules of Procedure, the unsuccessful party is to be ordered to pay the costs if they have been applied for in the successful party's pleadings. Since the Commission has applied for costs to be awarded against the French Republic and the latter has, in essence, been unsuccessful, the French Republic must be ordered to pay the costs.

On those grounds, the Court (Third Chamber) hereby:

1. Declares that, by adopting and keeping in force Articles 73 and 74-IV of the Public Procurement Code, adopted by Decree No 2006-975 of 1 August 2006, inasmuch as those provisions lay down a procedure for the award of marchés de definition (public contracts for designing the parameters, including the purpose, of a public works, supply or service contract) under which it is possible for the contracting authority to award a marché d'exécution (a public works, supply or service contract) to one of the holders of the initial marchés de définition by opening it to competition limited to those holders, the French Republic has failed to fulfil its obligations under Articles 2 and 28 of Directive 2004/18/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 31 March 2004 on the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts, public supply contracts and public service contracts;

2. Dismisses the remainder of the action;

3. Orders the French Republic to pay the costs.

OPINION OF ADVOCATE GENERAL
Mazák
delivered on 22 September 2009 (1)

Case C–299/08

Commission of the European Communities
French Republic

(Failure of a Member State to fulfil its obligations – Directive 2004/18/EC – Public procurement – Use of the negotiated procedure without publication of a contract notice in situations not provided for in the directive – Distinction between marchés de définition and public works, supply or service contracts)

1. By its present action, brought under Article 226 EC, the Commission is asking the Court to declare that, by adopting and keeping in force Articles 73 and 74-IV of the Code des marchés publics (2) ('the contested provisions'), inasmuch as those provisions lay down a procedure for the award of so-called marchés de définition (3) under which it is possible for the contracting authority to award an ulterior marché d'exécution (a public works, supply or service contract) to one of the holders of the initial marchés de définition without opening it afresh to competition or, at most, by opening it to competition limited to those holders, the French Republic has failed to fulfil its obligations under Articles 2, 28 and 31 of Directive 2004/18/EC. (4)

I – Legal context

A – Community law

2. Article 2 of the Directive provides under 'Principles of awarding contracts' that 'contracting authorities shall treat economic operators equally and non-discriminatorily and shall act in a transparent way'.

3. Article 28 of the Directive, under 'Use of open, restricted and negotiated procedures and of competitive dialogue', provides:

'In awarding their public contracts, contracting authorities shall apply the national procedures adjusted for the purposes of this Directive.

They shall award these public contracts by applying the open or restricted procedure. In the specific circumstances expressly provided for in Article 29, contracting authorities may award their public contracts by means of the competitive dialogue. In the specific cases and circumstances referred to expressly in Articles 30 and 31, they may apply a negotiated procedure, with or without publication of the contract notice.'

4. The Member States had to bring into force the laws, regulations and administrative provisions necessary to comply with the Directive no later than 31 January 2006.

B – National law

5. The CMP 2006, which entered into force on 1 September 2006, provides inter alia as follows:

‘Article 73

If the public entity is unable to specify the aims and performances the contract must meet, the techniques to be used, and the human and material resources required, it may resort to marchés de définition.

The purpose of such contracts is to explore the possibilities and conditions for establishing a contract subsequently, if necessary through production of a model or demonstrator. They must also enable the price level of the provisions to be estimated and calculated, as well as the different phases of the performance schedule.

In the framework of a single procedure, the performance of the contract following several marchés de définition having the same subject-matter and awarded simultaneously are awarded after being opened to competition limited to the holders of the initial marchés de définition, in accordance with the following provisions:

1 The public contract notice defines the subject-matter of the marchés de définition awarded simultaneously and the subject-matter of the subsequent marché d’exécution;

2 The public contract notice defines the criteria for the selection of applications. Those criteria take into account the capacities and competences required of the candidates both for the marchés de définition and for the subsequent marché d’exécution;

3 The public contract notice defines the criteria for the selection of offers for the marchés de définition awarded simultaneously and the criteria for the selection of offers for the subsequent marché d’exécution;

4 The amount of the provisions to be compared with the thresholds takes account of the cost of the definition studies and the estimated amount of the fulfilment contract;

5 The number of marchés de définition awarded simultaneously in the framework of the present procedure may not be lower than three, subject to a sufficient number of candidates.

The contract or framework agreement is awarded by the tenders committee for the local authorities or after the opinion of the tenders committee for the State, for the public health bodies and the public social or medical-social bodies.’

‘Article 74

II – Procedure

6. On 18 October 2004, the Commission sent the French Republic a first letter of formal notice and on 12 December 2006, it sent an additional letter of formal notice. As the Commission was not satisfied with the French Republic’s replies, it issued a reasoned opinion on 27 June 2007. Since the Commission considered that the failure to fulfil obligations was persisting and it was not satisfied with the replies it received, the Commission decided to bring this action. Both parties submitted oral argument at the hearing, which took place on 10 June 2009.

III – Assessment

A – Principal arguments of the parties

7. The Commission submits that France permits the award of contracts on the basis of mutual agreement, or with limited competition, in situations not provided for by the Directive. In the Commission’s view, it is impossible by definition for the subject-matter and criteria for the award of a public procurement contract to be known precisely at a moment where the project has not yet been defined and where the marchés de définition have not yet been executed. The marché de définition and the marché d'exécution are two entirely distinct types of public procurement contract and may not be awarded by way of a single procedure. According to the Commission, the procedure for the award of marchés de définition comes neither under the competitive dialogue nor under the framework agreement within the meaning of Articles 29 and 32 of the Directive and it cannot be analysed as a derivation of the competitive dialogue.

8. The French Government submits that the contested provisions are not incompatible with the Directive, which is merely a coordinating directive. In its view, it is possible for the subject-matter and criteria of the ulterior marché d'exécution to be established from the launch of the marchés de définition. Furthermore, the French Government submits that the Directive has foreseen two procedures with characteristics analogous to those of the French procedure for the award of marchés de définition – the framework agreement and the competitive dialogue. Thus the Community legislature itself instituted complex procedures where contracts are opened to competition in two stages, without however being exhaustive.

1. General remarks

9. The Commission argues that, by drawing a distinction between marchés de définition and marchés d'exécution and by allowing, in certain circumstances, the award of the latter to one of the holders of the initial marchés de définition without again opening them to competition or, at the very least, by opening them to competition limited only to those holders, the French legislation disregards the fundamental principles of equality and transparency inherent to the Directive. Here it should be pointed out that the argument concerning the marchés de définition not being opened to any competition would appear to pertain to the wording of the provisions in the CMP 2004. (5) Thus, I will consider the Commission's argument as it pertains to the contested provisions – that is to say the CMP 2006 which was meant to transpose the Directive into national law – to the effect that these open the marchés d'exécution to competition limited only to holders of the initial marchés de définition and that in situations not provided for by the Directive.

2. On the exhaustive nature of Article 28 of the Directive

10. In that regard, in their submissions the parties have discussed at length whether or not the list of procedures for the award of public contracts, contained in Article 28 of the Directive, is exhaustive in nature since it clearly does not make provision for the marchés de définition.

11. Here the French Government argues that, in view of the third recital in the preamble to the Directive and Article 28, the Directive did not mean to abolish all the specific national procedures. Referring to the Court's ruling in CEI and Others, (6) concerning Council Directive 71/305/EEC, (7) the French Government claims that 'the Member States remain free to maintain or adopt substantive and procedural rules in regard to public … contracts on condition that they comply with all the relevant provisions of Community law and, in particular, the prohibitions flowing from the principles laid down in the Treaty in regard to the right of establishment and the freedom to provide services'. (8)

12. Indeed, it is quite clear from the title of the Directive and from the second and third recitals in its preamble that the Directive's aim is to coordinate national procedures for the award of public contracts. Therefore, it does not lay down a uniform and exhaustive body of Community rules on the matter. Hence, within the framework of the common rules which it contains, the Member States remain free to maintain or adopt substantive and procedural rules in regard to public contracts on condition that they comply with all the relevant provisions of Community law. However, the fact that the Directive has not brought about a complete harmonisation of the rules governing procedures for the award of public contracts does not mean that some of its provisions should not be understood as having exhaustively regulated certain matters.

13. First, suffice it to note that the French Government cannot rely on the CEI and Others case-law because Article 28 of Directive 2004/18 substantially differs from Article 2 of Directive 71/305 – the Community legislature has complemented Article 28 of the Directive with a completely new second paragraph which plays a decisive role for the case at hand.

14. Secondly, there are certain factors which convincingly suggest that the procedures referred to in Article 28 of the Directive are to be regarded as exhaustive. In general, the wording of that paragraph exhibits none of the features to be observed in what is commonly known as an open list. On the contrary, that paragraph enumerates not only the two standard procedures but also two exceptional procedures thus leaving no room for another kind of interpretative completion of the list of procedures. Nor does the Directive as a whole contain any provision which would allow such a completion.

15. As I will explain below, the procedure for the award of marchés de définition clearly differs from the procedures set out in the Directive and cannot be assimilated to any provision of the Directive. In fact, the French Government explicitly recognised in its defence and in its rejoinder that the marchés de définition have not been provided for in the Directive.

16. The procedures which the Directive does provide for are the following. As is clear from the second paragraph of Article 28 of the Directive, the Community legislature has set out two procedures which should, as a general rule, be followed by contracting authorities. These are the open and the restricted procedures and they may be referred to as standard or normal procedures. Next, the competitive dialogue may be considered to constitute a special or exceptional procedure whose implementation and conditions are specified in Article 29 of the Directive. (9) Likewise, the negotiated procedure, with or without publication of the contract notice, may be considered as special or exceptional in nature with conditions specified in Articles 30 and 31 of the Directive. (10)

17. However, the French Government submits that, in fact, there are certain specific award procedures provided for by the Directive in Chapter V under 'Procedures' which are not mentioned in Article 28 of the Directive. The French Government refers to framework agreements, dynamic purchasing systems and public works contracts: particular rules on subsidised housing schemes. These are provided for in Articles 32, 33 and 34 of the Directive respectively.

18. In that regard, first, framework agreements and dynamic purchasing systems constitute specific forms of contracts or variations of existing procedures. They are not distinct new forms of award procedures for public contracts which are, as such, provided for in Article 28 of the Directive. In addition, it follows from the wording of Articles 32(2) and 33(2) of the Directive that the contracting authorities are obliged to follow the rules of procedure referred to in Article 28 of the Directive. Secondly, with regard to the rules on subsidised housing schemes, the title of Article 34 clearly shows it concerns 'particular rules' and not rules of procedure as such. Rather, it constitutes an exception to the provisions pertaining to the general procedure. Indeed, the very existence of Article 34 of the Directive and of the particular rules which it sets out would militate in favour of the view that the list of award procedures in Chapter V of the Directive should be considered to be exhaustive.

19. In this context it may be noted in passing that in its submissions the French Government also argues the merits and the raison d'être of the procedure for the award of marchés de définition notably with regard to complex contracts where contracting authorities are 'unable to specify the aims and performances the contract must meet, the techniques to be used, and the ... resources required'. (11) It is apparent from the travaux préparatoires for the Directive that the Community legislature was aware of such concerns. (12) As a result, the Community legislature did include among the award procedures for public contracts a new procedure in the form of the competitive dialogue but it did not decide to include the procedure for the award of marchés de définition. (13)

20. In addition, the French Government also tries to defend its case by arguing that the marchés de définition should be considered analogous to two procedures which are provided for in the Directive – the framework agreement and the competitive dialogue. As regards the former, its opening to competition may be divided into two stages where the last stage is open to competition limited to the successful holders of the first contract and which allows it to further specify the terms of the second contract. As regards the latter, the procedure for the award of marchés de définition allows a contracting authority to draw up the conditions of a contract whose selection criteria had been established. Thus, according to the French Government, the Community legislature instituted complex procedures where contracts are opened to competition in two stages, without however being exhaustive.

21. That argumentation shall not prosper. Suffice it to point out that it is not disputed by the French Government that the procedure for the award of marchés de définition comes neither under the competitive dialogue nor under the framework agreement within the meaning of Articles 29 and 32 of the Directive. Competitive dialogue and framework agreements are forms of contracts subject to specific provisions. Recognising their specificity, the Community legislature provided for rules which guarantee that principles set out in Article 2 of the Directive remain respected.

22. Should the list in Article 28 of the Directive be held to be exhaustive, the French Government submits, in the alternative, that the procedure for the award of marchés de définition should be analysed as a derivation of the competitive dialogue procedure. It would appear that the French Government raised this argument in the alternative for the first time in its defence before the Court. Prior to that that government had defended the opposite thesis to the effect that marchés de définition did not come under the competitive dialogue procedure and were not provided for by the Directive. Indeed, those very submissions have raised numerous differences between the two procedures. In any event, I consider that that argument is not helpful to the French Government's case. Suffice it to point out that the two procedures differ in important aspects, not least because the competitive dialogue is a procedure for the award of a single contract, while the procedure for the award of marchés de définition is aimed at awarding two contracts where the second is awarded after being opened to competition limited to the holders of the initial contract.

3. Treating economic operators equally and non-discriminatorily and in a transparent way

23. In any event, even if we were to accept the consideration that one may, under certain conditions, adjust the procedures enumerated in Article 28 of the Directive, having regard to the nature and functioning of the procedure for the award of marchés de définition, it is to be noted that this procedure not only cannot be classified under Article 28 of the Directive but is contrary to the principles referred to in the second recital in the preamble to the Directive and in Article 2 of the Directive. (14)

24. Contrary to what the French Government argues, in my view the Commission is correct when it submits that it is virtually impossible by definition for the subject-matter and criteria for the award of a public procurement contract (marché d'exécution) to be known precisely at a moment where the project has not yet been defined and where the marchés de définition have not yet been executed. The marchés de définition and the marché d'exécution are two entirely distinct types of public procurement contract, which, it would appear, has never been contested by the French Government. Each has its own subject-matter and award criteria and, on those grounds, both contracts must comply with the stipulations of the Directive and may not be awarded by way of a single procedure. In other words, since the marché d'exécution has its own subject-matter and award criteria it should be subjected to competition and not simply reserved for the holders of the initial marchés de définition.

25. The Court held in Commission v France ('Le Mans') (15) that 'the French Government submits … that the option, set out in the notice …, of awarding the contract relating to the second phase to the successful candidate in the design contest releases the contracting authority from the obligation to publish another notice prior to the award of that contract'. The Court then stated that 'that argument cannot be accepted. The principle of equal treatment of service providers … and the principle of transparency which flows from it … require the subject-matter of each contract and the criteria governing its award to be clearly defined'. (16)

26. In the same judgment, the Court continued: 'that obligation exists where the subject-matter of a contract and the criteria selected for its award must be regarded as decisive for the purposes of determining which of the procedures provided for in the Directive is to be implemented and assessing whether the requirements related to that procedure have been observed.' Thus the Court concluded that 'in the present case the mere option of awarding the contract relating to the second phase according to criteria laid down in respect of a different contract, that is the one related to the first phase, does not amount to awarding the contract in accordance with one of the procedures laid down in the Directive.'

27. In the case which concerns us here, in its defence before the Court, the French Government has recognised itself that in the above judgment 'the Court gave a negative verdict on a procedure which is analogous [to the marchés de définition]'. In my view, it is clear that the marchés de définition do not, as a general rule, allow the second contract's (i.e. marché d'exécution) subject-matter, criteria for the selection and award to be initially established with sufficient precision in order to meet the requirements specified in the above judgment. The reason for that is the fact that the aim of the initial marchés de définition is in fact precisely to define the subject-matter and the tender conditions of the ulterior marché d'exécution.

28. Therefore, the procedure for the award of marchés de définition, pursuant to the contested provisions, runs counter to the principle of transparency laid down in Article 2 of the Directive. This procedure creates a situation of legal uncertainty both for contracting authorities and for economic operators, because of the risk of litigation which is inherent to it.

29. The French Government contests the argument in point 27 above and submits that the aim of the marchés de définition is to only define all the technical specifications of the ulterior contract and not its subject-matter. However, suffice it to state that the very wording of Article 73 of the CMP 2006 does not support that: its second paragraph provides that 'the purpose of such contracts is to explore the possibilities and conditions for establishing a contract subsequently, if necessary through production of a model or demonstrator'. Moreover, even though it may be the case in certain situations that the marchés de définition merely define the technical specifications, the procedure in question in fact certainly allows the tender conditions of the marché d'exécution to be completed or even drawn up in their entirety.

30. Furthermore, the French Government insists that it is possible for the subject-matter and criteria of the ulterior marché d'exécution to be established from the launch of the marchés de définition. The argument goes, there are many cases where the criteria for selection of candidatures for marché d'exécution are sufficiently independent from the marchés de définition in order for the former to be defined already at the stage of the marchés de définition. In its submissions to the Court, the French Government has furnished three examples of such cases.

31. In any event, it should be pointed out, first, that the French Government has accepted at the hearing that in fact problems do arise – clearly there are cases where the marchés de définition do not merely serve to define technical specifications but are instead used to complete or draw up the tender conditions of the marché d'exécution. Three examples of such cases were provided by the Commission before the Court. I consider that the French Government has failed to prove that the contested provisions allow in all cases and at all times transparency and sufficient clarity to be guaranteed to the effect that 'the subject-matter of [the marché d'exécution] and the criteria governing its award [are] clearly defined'. (17) In any event, a mere general definition such as 'urban development of city district X' – which it would appear is very often the only possible definition that may be given at the stage of invitations for tenders for the marchés de définition – most certainly does not meet the standard required by the Court in Commission v France ('Le Mans'). (18)

32. Last but not least, I consider it important to point out that the procedure for the award of marchés de définition is based on a bias. While the whole tenor of the Directive is that the promotion of competition between economic operators should be protected, the marchés de définition address only a certain type of economic operators – those and only those that have both design and construction capabilities. By its nature, the procedure for the award of marchés de définition makes such a pre-selection among all the potential economic operators. I consider that to be contrary to the spirit of Community public procurement rules. It is clear that regardless of how the marchés de définition develop in a particular case, the solution provided by the procedure will always result in a tender that is limited in nature.

33. It follows from the above considerations that the contested provisions permit the award of contracts with limited competition in situations not provided for by the Directive and they cannot be justified by any of the exceptions laid down by the Directive.

IV – Costs

34. Article 69(2) of the Rules of Procedure provides that the unsuccessful party is to be ordered to pay the costs if they have been applied for in the successful party's pleadings. Since the Commission has applied for costs and the French Republic has been unsuccessful, the latter must be ordered to pay the costs.

V – Conclusion

35. In the light of the foregoing considerations, I propose that the Court:

(1) declare that, by adopting and keeping in force Articles 73 and 74–IV of the Code des marchés publics (Public Procurement Code) adopted by Decree No 2006-975 of 1 August 2006, inasmuch as those provisions lay down a procedure for the award of marchés de définition (public contracts for designing the parameters, including the purpose, of a public works, supply or service contract) under which it is possible for the contracting authority to award a public works, supply or service contract to one of the holders of the initial marchés de définition by opening it to competition limited to those holders, the French Republic has failed to fulfil its obligations under Articles 2, 28 and 31 of Directive 2004/18/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 31 March 2004 on the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts, public supply contracts and public service contracts;

(2) order the French Republic to pay the costs.

3 – These are public contracts for designing the parameters, including the purpose, of a public works, supply or service contract, and are also referred to as 'design solutions tenders' or 'project definition contracts'. I note that only a procedure with several marchés de définition is at issue here – applicable where the conditions in Article 73 (3) of the CMP 2006 are met – and not one where a single marché de définition is awarded.

The French Government submits that that case-law may be transposed to Directive 2004/18 notably because the second recital in the preamble to Directive 71/305 has become the third recital in the preamble to Directive 2004/18 and Article 2 of Directive 71/305 has become Article 28 of Directive 2004/18.

10 – That reading is confirmed by the travaux préparatoires for the Directive. The proposal for the Directive explained, to justify the wording of Article 28 of the Directive, that 'a new paragraph 2 has been added, which explicitly states the principle that the open procedure and the restricted procedure are the standard procedures. A new paragraph 3 [which was eventually merged with paragraph 2] describes the exception, which is that contracting authorities may only use the negotiated procedure in the specific cases and under the specific conditions listed in Articles 29, 30 and 31'.

11 – See Article 73 of the CMP 2006.

12 – The proposal for the Directive, page 6, stated that 'in the case of particularly complex contracts … purchasers are well aware of their needs but do not know in advance what … the best technical solution for satisfying those needs [is]. Discussion of the contract and dialogue between purchasers and suppliers is therefore necessary in such cases. But the standard procedures laid down by the public sector Directives … leave very little scope for discussion during the award of contracts and are therefore regarded as lacking in flexibility in situations of this type.'

13 – One of the reasons for that could be that the inclusion of marchés de définition was considered as not necessary since that procedure is similar in nature to the new competitive dialogue procedure – transposed into French law in Article 67 of the CMP 2006 as a completely autonomous procedure – which appears to address the same concerns.

14 – My position would appear to be supported by the French legal doctrine. See, most recently, for instance, Monjal, P.-Y., 'Le droit communautaire applicable aux marchés publics locaux français: quelques interrogations en forme d'inquiétude', Revue du Droit de l'Union européenne, No 4, 2008, pp. 729-738. For a case pertaining to marchés de définition, see also, for instance, judgment of the French Conseil d'État of 3 March 2004, No 258272, in 'Société Mak System'.

18 – Case cited in footnote 15. Cf. Arrowsmith, S., The Law of Public and Utilities Procurement, Thomson, Sweet & Maxwell, London, 2005, p. 448: 'the current directives … contain no express requirement for precise specifications in open or restricted procedures. However, the transparency principle may imply such a requirement. For example, it is probably not acceptable simply to state a requirement for tenders for "a school" without giving a clear indication of, for example, the number of pupils and the main type of facilities required. Reasonable precision needs to be established at the latest at the time of invitation to tenders'.

(Case C-299/08)

Language of the case: French

Parties

Applicant: Commission of the European Communities (represented by: G. Rozet and D. Kukovec, acting as Agents)

Defendant: French Republic

Form of order sought

Declare that, by adopting and keeping in force Articles 73 and 74-IV of the Code des marchés publics (Public Procurement Code) adopted by Decree No 2006-975 of 1 August 2006, inasmuch as those provisions lay down a procedure for the award of marchés de definition (public contracts for designing the parameters, including the purpose, of a public works, supply or service contract) under which it is possible for the awarding authority to award a public works, supply or service contract to one of the holders of the initial marchés de definition without opening it afresh to competition or, at most, by opening it to competition limited to those holders, the French Republic has failed to fulfil its obligations under Articles 2, 28 and 31 of Directive 2004/18/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 31 March 2004 on the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts, public supply contracts and public service contracts; [1]

order the French Republic to pay the costs.

Pleas in law and main arguments

By its action, the Commission alleges that the defendant permits the award of contracts on the basis of mutual agreement - or with limited competition - in situations not provided for by Directive 2004/18/EC. By drawing a distinction between marchés de definition and public works, supply or service contracts and by allowing, in certain circumstances, the award of the latter contracts to one of the holders of the initial marchés de definition without again opening them to competition or, at the very least, by opening them to competition limited only to those holders, the French legislation disregards the fundamental principles of equality and transparency inherent to Directive 2004/18/EC. In the Commission's view, it is impossible by definition for the subject-matter and criteria for the award of a public procurement contract to be known precisely before the project itself has been defined. The marché de definition and the public works, supply or service contract are two entirely distinct types of public procurement contract, each having its own subject-matter and criteria for award and, on those grounds, they must both comply with the stipulations of Directive 2004/18/EC.

Judgment

1 These references for a preliminary ruling concern the interpretation of the relevant provisions, in the light of the facts of the disputes in the main proceedings, of Council Directive 92/50/EEC of 18 June 1992 relating to the coordination of procedures for the award of public service contracts (OJ 1992 L 209, p. 1) and Council Directive 89/665/EEC of 21 December 1989 on the coordination of the laws, regulations and administrative provisions relating to the application of review procedures to the award of public supply and public works contracts (OJ 1989 L 395, p. 33), as amended by Directive 92/50 ('Directive 89/665'), and general principles of European Union law on public contracts and, in particular, the principle of effective judicial protection.

2 The references have been made in proceedings between private undertakings and natural persons and Ethniko Simvoulio Radiotileorasis (National Radio and Television Council; 'ESR'), an authority which, in accordance with national legislation, has the power and the obligation to check whether persons having the status of owner, partner, main shareholder, member of an administrative organ or management executive of an undertaking tendering in a public procurement procedure present certain aspects of incompatibility as provided for in that legislation and, therefore, must automatically be excluded from the procedure.

Legal context

European Union legislation

3 Pursuant to Article 1(a) of Directive 92/50:

'[P]ublic service contracts shall mean contracts for pecuniary interest concluded in writing between a service provider and a contracting authority …

4 Article 2 thereof provides:

'If a public contract is intended to cover both products within the meaning of [Council] Directive 77/62/EEC [of 21 December 1976 coordinating procedures for the award of public supply contracts (OJ 1977 L 13, p. 1)] and services within the meaning of Annexes I A and I B to this Directive, it shall fall within the scope of this Directive if the value of the services in question exceeds that of the products covered by the contract.'

5 Article 3 of that directive provides:

'1. In awarding public service contracts or in organising design contests, contracting authorities shall apply procedures adapted to the provisions of this Directive.

2. Contracting authorities shall ensure that there is no discrimination between different service providers.

6 Under Article 8 of Directive 92/50:

'Contracts which have as their object services listed in Annex I A shall be awarded in accordance with the provisions of Titles III to VI.'

7 Article 9 of that directive provides:

'Contracts which have as their object services listed in Annex I B shall be awarded in accordance with Articles 14 and 16.'

8 Article 14 forms part of Title IV of that directive, which concerns the common rules in the technical field and deals with the technical specifications which are to be given in the general documents or the contractual documents relating to each contract, and Article 16 forms part of Title V, which governs the common advertising rules.

9 Annex IB to Directive 92/50, entitled 'Services within the meaning of Article 9', includes:

17 Hotel and restaurant services

...

26 Recreational, cultural and sporting services

27 Other services'.

10 Finally, Article 26(1) of that directive provides:

'Tenders may be submitted by groups of service providers. These groups may not be required to assume a specific legal form in order to submit the tender; however, the group selected may be required to do so when it has been awarded the contract.'

11 Article 1 of Directive 89/665 provides:

'1. The Member States shall take the measures necessary to ensure that, as regards contract award procedures falling within the scope of [Council] Directives 71/305/EEC [of 26 July 1971 concerning the co-ordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts (OJ, English Special Edition 1971 (II), p. 682)], 77/62 ... and 92/50 ..., decisions taken by the contracting authorities may be reviewed effectively and, in particular, as rapidly as possible in accordance with the conditions set out in the following Articles and, in particular, Article 2(7) on the grounds that such decisions have infringed Community law in the field of public procurement or nation rules implementing that law.

2. Member States shall ensure that there is no discrimination between undertakings claiming injury in the context of a procedure for the award of a contract as a result of the distinction made by this Directive between national rules implementing Community law and other national rules.

3. The Member States shall ensure that the review procedures are available, under detailed rules which the Member States may establish, at least to any person having or having had an interest in obtaining a particular public supply or public works contract and who has been or risks being harmed by an alleged infringement. In particular, the Member States may require that the person seeking the review must have previously notified the contracting authority of the alleged infringement and of his intention to seek review.'

12 Under Article 2 of that directive:

'1. The Member States shall ensure that the measures taken concerning the review procedures specified in Article 1 include provision for the powers to:

(a) take, at the earliest opportunity and by way of interlocutory procedures, interim measures with the aim of correcting the alleged infringement or preventing further damage to the interests concerned, including measures to suspend or to ensure the suspension of the procedure for the award of a public contract or the implementation of any decision taken by the contracting authority;

(b) either set aside or ensure the setting aside of decisions taken unlawfully, including the removal of discriminatory technical, economic or financial specifications in the invitation to tender, the contract documents or in any other document relating to the contract award procedure;

(c) award damages to persons harmed by an infringement.

5. The Member States may provide that where damages are claimed on the grounds that a decision was taken unlawfully, the contested decision must first be set aside by a body having the necessary powers.

6. The effects of the exercise of the powers referred to in paragraph 1 on a contract concluded subsequent to its award shall be determined by national law.

Furthermore, except where a decision must be set aside prior to the award of damages, a Member State may provide that, after the conclusion of a contract following its award, the powers of the body responsible for the review procedures shall be limited to awarding damages to any person harmed by an infringement.

National legislation

13 Directive 89/665 was transposed into Greek law by Law 2522/1997 providing judicial protection during the phase preceding the award of public supply, public works and public services contracts (FEK A' 178).

14 Article 2 of that Law, entitled 'Extent of judicial protection', provides:

'1. Every person concerned who has or had an interest in being awarded a particular public works, supply or services contract and has suffered or may suffer damage through the infringement of Community or domestic legislation shall be entitled to seek, as more specifically laid down in the following articles, interim judicial protection, the annulment, or a finding of invalidity, of the unlawful act of the contracting authority and the award of damages.

15 Article 4 of that Law, entitled 'Annulment or a finding of invalidity', provides:

'1. The person concerned shall be entitled to seek the annulment, or a finding of invalidity, of every act or omission of the contracting authority which infringes a rule of Community or domestic law on the procedure that precedes the award of the contract. …

2. If the court declares an act or omission of the contracting authority void after the contract is awarded, and unless the award procedure has been suspended as a measure of interim relief, the contract itself is not affected. In that case the applicant may seek damages in accordance with the provisions of the following article.'

16 Article 5 of Law 2522/1997, entitled 'Claim for damages', provides:

'1. A person concerned who has been excluded from participation or from the award of public works, supplies or services, in breach of a rule of Community or domestic law, shall be entitled to claim damages from the contracting authority, pursuant to Articles 197 and 198 of the Civil Code. Any provision that excludes or restricts that claim shall be inapplicable.

2. In order for damages to be awarded, it is necessary that the unlawful act or omission first be annulled, or found invalid, by the court having jurisdiction. An action for a finding of invalidity and an action for damages may be combined in accordance with the generally applicable rules.'

17 Articles 197 and 198 of the Civil Code, to which the abovementioned provision refers, provide for liability 'arising from negotiations', that is to say the obligation to pay damages in the event that the parties incur unwarranted expense in the course of a procedure with a view to conclusion of a contract.

18 Presidential Decree 18/1989 codifies the laws relating to the Simvoulio tis Epikratias (FEK A' 8). Article 47 thereof, entitled 'Legitimate interest', provides:

'1. An individual or a legal person who is affected by an administrative act, or whose legitimate interests, including non-financial interests, are affected by that act, has the right to bring an action for annulment.

19 Law 2206/1994 governs the 'Creation, organisation, operation, control of casinos, etc.' (FEK A' 62). Under Article 1(7) of that Law, entitled 'Grant of casino licences':

'Casino licences are to be granted by decision of the Minister for Tourism following a public international tendering procedure organised by a seven-member commission.'

20 Article 3 of that Law, entitled 'Operation of casinos', provides:

'Casinos are subject to State control.

21 Article 14(9) of the Greek Constitution and Implementing Law 3021/2002 (FEK A' 143) institute a system of restrictions applicable to the conclusion of public contracts with persons who are active or who have holdings in the media sector. That system establishes a presumption that the status of owner, partner, main shareholder or management executive of an undertaking active in the media sector is incompatible with that of owner, partner, main shareholder or management executive of an undertaking which contracts with the State or a legal person in the public sector in the broad sense to perform a works, supply or services contract. That incompatibility also extends to natural persons who are related to a certain degree.

22 Law 3021/2002 provides, in essence, that, before issuing acceptance of a tender for or awarding a public contract and, in any event, before the public contract is signed, the contracting authority must apply to ESR for a certificate attesting that the conditions of incompatibility laid down in that law are not fulfilled. The decision of ESR is binding on the contracting authority, but may be subject to an action for annulment by persons having locus standi, including public authorities.

23 In its judgment in Case C-213/07 Michaniki [2008] ECR I-9999, paragraphs 1 and 2 of the operative part, the Court held that, although European Union law does not preclude legislation which pursues the legitimate objectives of equal treatment of tenderers and of transparency in procedures for the award of public contracts, it does preclude, from the point of view of the principle of proportionality, the setting up of an irrebuttable presumption of incompatibility such as that laid down in the national legislation at issue.

The actions in the main proceedings and the questions referred for a preliminary ruling

24 It is apparent from the order for reference that, by decision of 10 October 2001, the competent interministerial committee decided to privatise Elliniko Kazino Parnithas AE ('EKP'), a subsidiary of Ellinika Touristika Akinita AE ('ETA'), an undertaking wholly owned by the Greek State. The contract notice published in October 2001 provided for an initial preselection stage to determine which tenderers met the conditions set out in that notice. The highest bidder, which would be invited to sign the contract, was to be selected at a subsequent stage. In the course of the first stage, the Koinopraxia Kazino Attikis consortium and the Hyatt Regency Xenodokhiaki kai Touristiki (Ellas) AE – Elliniki Tekhnodomiki AE consortium were preselected.

25 Following an additional notice published in April 2002, the terms of the contract to be signed were settled as follows:

The contract is a mixed contract and includes:

– an agreement under which ETA would sell 49% of the shares in EKP to a 'single purpose limited company' ('AEAS'), to be set up by the successful tenderer;

– an agreement under which AEAS would undertake to implement a development plan, to be completed within 750 days of obtaining the necessary planning permission. That development plan was to comprise refurbishing the casino and enhancing the facilities offered by its operating licence, refurbishing and improving two adjoining hotel units and developing stretches of surrounding land of a surface area of approximately 280 hectares. Performance of that work constitutes part of the price payable for the acquisition of 49% of the shares in EKP;

– an agreement between ETA and AEAS under which the latter would acquire the right to appoint the majority of EKP's board of directors and thus to administer the company in accordance with the terms of the contract;

– an agreement under which AEAS would take over management of the casino business, in return for payment, which will be paid by ETA. As that remuneration, AEAS would receive a sum no greater than a scaled percentage of the annual operating profits (decreasing from 20% of profits up to EUR 30 million to 5% of profits over EUR 90 million) and 2% of turnover;

– as manager, AEAS would manage the casino business in such a way as constantly to maintain a luxurious environment offering high-level services and in a manner profitable for EKP. In concrete terms, the management profit before tax should not be less than a total of EUR 105 million for the first five financial years following entry into force of the contract. The net profit was to be shared between ETA and AEAS according to the percentage of the capital in EKP they each hold;

– Since EKP is the only casino business currently operating in the province of Attica, the contract provides that, in the event that another casino were lawfully established within that geographical area within 10 years from the date of entry into force of the contract, it would have to compensate AEAS by paying, as damages, a sum equal to 70% of the price of the transaction. The amount of the compensation would be reduced by one tenth each year with effect from the entry into force of the contract; – with regard to management of the casino business, the contract would terminate at the end of the 10th year from taking effect.

26 Since the Hyatt Regency Xenodokhiaki kai Touristiki (Ellas) AE – Elliniki Tekhnodomiki AE consortium was the highest bidder in the procedure in question, it was designated the successful tenderer. Before signature of the contract, ETA informed ESR of the identity of the owners, partners, major shareholders and management executives of the successful tenderer in order to obtain a certificate that none of them fell within one of the cases of incompatibility as provided for in Article 3 of Law 3021/2002. By certificate issued on 27 September 2002, ESR confirmed that none of those persons fell within such a case of incompatibility.

27 That act of the ESR constitutes the subject-matter of an action for annulment brought by only three of the seven members comprising the consortium 'Koinopraxia Kazino Attikis', which was not awarded the contract. The applicants have submitted that a member of the consortium to which the contract was awarded fell within one of the cases of incompatibility laid down in the national legislation and that, accordingly, the award of the contract should be annulled.

28 The national court points out that the contract at issue is a mixed contract, containing, on the one hand, one aspect relating to the sale of shares by ETA to the highest bidding tenderer, which aspect, as such, is not covered by the European Union rules on public contracts, and, on the other, one aspect relating to a service contract to be concluded with the highest bidding tenderer, which assumes the obligations of managing the casino business. The aspect which concerns the transfer of shares is, according to the national court, the most important of the mixed contract. In addition, that contract also includes an aspect relating to a works contract, since the successful tenderer assumes the obligation of performing the works referred to in the order for reference, for the transferred shares as part payment. The national court notes that that aspect is entirely ancillary to the 'services' aspect of the contract.

29 In that context, the national court asks whether the view can be taken that the 'services' aspect of the contract at issue constitutes a public service concession contract, which is not subject to the European Union rules. In that regard, it is necessary to ascertain to what extent the successful tenderer bears the risks of organising and operating the services in question, having regard also to the fact that those services relate to activities which, in accordance with the national rules by which they are governed, can be subject to exclusive and special rights.

30 In the event that the Court were to hold that the part of the disputed contract concerning the management of the casino constitutes a public service contract, the national court asks whether an action for annulment brought at national level is covered by the guarantees provided for in Directive 89/665, having regard to the fact that the main object of the contract, that is to say, the sale of shares in EKP, does not fall within the scope of Community rules on public contracts and that contracts having such services as their objects, which fall within Annex I B to Directive 92/50, must be awarded in accordance with Articles 14 and 16 of that directive, which solely include obligations of a procedural nature. Nevertheless, the national court asks whether, despite that restricted aspect of the obligations, the principle of equal treatment of participants in a contract award procedure, the safeguarding of which is the objective of Directive 89/665, also applies in such cases.

31 If the Court were to consider that an action for annulment such as that in the main proceedings does fall within the scope of Directive 89/665, the national court asks whether European Union law precludes a national procedural rule, such as that in Article 47(1) of Presidential Decree 18/1989, as interpreted by that court, under which those who participate in a public procurement procedure as a consortium can bring an action for annulment against acts in the context of that procedure only together and jointly, failing which the action is dismissed as inadmissible.

32 The national court refers in that regard to the judgment of the Court in Case C–129/04 Espace Trianon and Sofibail [2005] ECR I–7805, paragraph 22, pursuant to which a national procedural rule which requires an action for annulment of a contracting authority's decision awarding a public contract to be brought by all the members of a tendering consortium does not limit the availability of such an action in a way contrary to Article 1(3) of Directive 89/665.

33 The national court asks, however, whether that conclusion which, in that judgment, concerned an action for annulment against the decision of a contracting authority to award a public contract, is also valid in respect of all forms of judicial protection guaranteed by the directive, in particular of claims for damages. That issue is connected with the fact that, in the present case, the national legislature, exercising the power conferred on the Member States by Article 5(2) of Directive 89/665, by adopting Article 5(2) of Law 2522/1997, made the award of damages subject to the prior annulment of the allegedly unlawful act.

34 The combination of that provision with the procedural rule in Article 47(1) of Presidential Decree 18/1989, as interpreted by the national court, makes it impossible for any individual member of a consortium which unsuccessfully participated in a contract award procedure not only to seek annulment of the act adversely affecting them jointly but also to apply to the competent court to obtain compensation for any damage they have suffered individually. In the present case, the competent court in respect of actions for annulment is the Simvoulio tis Epikratias (Council of State), while in respect of damages, a different court has jurisdiction.

35 In that context, the national court points out that whether each member of a consortium can apply to the competent court for damages therefore depends on whether all other members of the consortium wish to bring an action for annulment, when the loss suffered by the members of the consortium individually as a result of its failure to win the contract may differ in accordance with the degree to which the members incurred expenses for the purposes of participating in that contract. Consequently, the interest of each member of the consortium in seeking annulment of a decision can also be different. Thus, it is permissible to ask whether, in such a procedural context, the principle of effective judicial protection laid down by Directive 89/665 is upheld.

36 The national court notes finally that, in accordance with the national procedural rules concerning the general right to compensation for losses caused by unlawful acts of the State or public legal persons, it is the court having jurisdiction for the award of damages which also reviews, as an incidental matter, the legality of the administrative act, and not a different court as is the case of actions for annulment brought in respect of public procurement procedures. It therefore asks whether the procedures intended to ensure that rights derived from European Union law are upheld are less favourable than those which ensure that similar or analogous rights derived from national law are upheld.

37 Lastly, the national court states that its current interpretation of Article 47(1) of Presidential Decree 18/1989, that only all members of a consortium, acting jointly, have locus standi to seek annulment of an act forming part of a procedure for the award of a public contract, constitutes a reversal of its settled case-law, in accordance with which the members could bring individual actions.

38 In parallel, it points out the particular context of the main proceedings, that is to say that, initially, the action at issue was brought by the consortium as a whole and by its seven members before the Fourth Chamber of the Simvoulio tis Epikratias. That Chamber declared the action inadmissible with regard to the consortium and four of its members on the ground that they had not properly authorised their lawyer to act and, with regard to the three remaining members of the consortium, it referred the case, in the light of its importance, to the full court. Thus, the Fourth Chamber applied the case-law still valid at that time, in accordance with which an action brought by some members of a consortium was also admissible.

39 Nevertheless, the decision on inadmissibility made by the Fourth Chamber with regard to the action brought by the consortium as a whole and by four of its members was definitive, such that there is no remedy available from the proceedings pending before the full court of the national court. That court therefore asks whether that reversal of its case-law is compatible with the principle of a right to a fair hearing, which is a general principle of European Union law and also set out in Article 6 of the European Convention on Human Rights, signed in Rome on 4 November 1950 ('ECHR'), and with the principle of protection of legitimate expectations.

40 Having regard to the foregoing considerations, the Simvoulio tis Epikratias, sitting as a full court, decided to stay the proceedings and to refer the following questions to the Court for a preliminary ruling:

'1. Does a contract by which the contracting authority entrusts to the contracting undertaking the management of a casino business and the execution of a development plan consisting in the upgrading of the casino premises and the commercial exploitation of the possibilities offered by the casino's licence, and which contains a term under which the contracting authority is obliged to pay the contracting undertaking compensation should another casino lawfully operate in the wider area in which the casino in question operates, constitute a concession, not governed by … Directive 92/50 …?

2. If the first question is answered in the negative, does a legal action which is brought by persons who have participated in the procedure for the award of a public contract of mixed form providing inter alia for the supply of services subject to Annex I B to … [Directive 92/50] …, and in which they plead breach of the principle of equal treatment of participants in tender procedures (a principle affirmed by Article 3(2) of that directive), fall within the field of application of … [Directive 89/665] …, or is its application precluded inasmuch as, in accordance with Article 9 of … [Directive 92/50], only Articles 14 and 16 of the latter apply to the procedure for the award of the abovementioned contract for the supply of services?

3. If the second question is answered in the affirmative, accepting that a national provision in accordance with which only all the members of a consortium without legal personality which has participated unsuccessfully in a public procurement procedure can bring a legal action against the act awarding the contract, and not consortium members individually, is not in principle contrary to Community law and specifically to … [Directive 89/665] …, and that that still applies where the legal action has initially been brought by all the members of the consortium jointly but ultimately proves, as regards some of them, to be inadmissible, is it in addition necessary, from the viewpoint of application of that directive, to examine, in order to make a declaration of inadmissibility, whether those individual members thereafter retain the right to claim before another national court any damages which may be envisaged by a provision of national law?

4. When it has been held by settled case-law of a national court that an individual member of a consortium may also bring an admissible legal action against an act falling within a public procurement procedure, is it compatible with … [Directive 89/665] …, interpreted in the light of Article 6 of the [ECHR] as a general principle of Community law, to dismiss a legal action as inadmissible, because of a change to that settled case-law, without the person who has brought that legal action first being given either the opportunity to cure the inadmissibility or, in any event, the opportunity to set out, pursuant to the adversarial principle, his views relating to that issue?'

41 The city of Thessaloniki decided to organise a public procurement procedure for the award of a contract entitled 'Construction of Thessaloniki town hall and an underground car park'. By decision of the municipal committee of 1 July 2004, the contract was awarded to the consortium of Aktor ATE, Themeliodomi AE and Domotekhniki AE. With a view to conclusion of the contract, the contracting authority informed ESR, in accordance with the national legislation in force, of the identity of the persons having the status of owner, partner, main shareholder or management executive of the companies forming the abovementioned consortium to obtain a certificate that none of them fell within any case of incompatibility as provided for in Article 3 of Law 3021/2002.

42 After having found that a member of the board of directors of Aktor ATE did fall within a case of incompatibility as set out in the national legislation, ESR, by document of 1 November 2004, refused to issue the certificate necessary for signature of the contract. The appeal brought by Aktor ATE against that refusal by ESR was dismissed by decision of that body of 9 November 2004. It is against those two negative decisions that, of the three companies comprising the consortium to which the contract was awarded, only Aktor ATE has brought an action for annulment before the national court, on the basis of the existing case-law of that court which regarded actions brought individually by members of a temporary association as admissible.

43 In those circumstances, the Simvoulio tis Epikratias, sitting as a full court, decided to stay the proceedings and to refer the following questions to the Court for a preliminary ruling:

'1. Accepting that a national provision in accordance with which only all the members of a consortium without legal personality which has participated unsuccessfully in a public procurement procedure can bring a legal action against the act awarding the contract, and not consortium members individually, is not in principle contrary to Community law and specifically to … Directive 89/665 …, and that that still applies where the legal action has initially been brought by all the members of the consortium but ultimately proves, as regards some of them, to be inadmissible, is it in addition necessary, from the viewpoint of application of that directive, to examine, in order to make a declaration of inadmissibility, whether those individual members thereafter retain the right to claim before another national court any damages which may be envisaged by a provision of national law?

2. When it has been held by settled case-law of a national court that an individual member of a consortium may also bring an admissible legal action against an act falling within a public procurement procedure, is it compatible with … Directive 89/665 … , interpreted in the light of Article 6 of the [ECHR] as a general principle of Community law, to dismiss a legal action as inadmissible, because of a change to that settled case-law, without the person who has brought that legal action first being given either the opportunity to cure the inadmissibility or, in any event, the opportunity to set out, pursuant to the adversarial principle, his views relating to that issue?'

44 By order of the President of the Court of 22 May 2008, Cases C–145/08 and C–149/08 were joined for the purposes of the written and oral procedure and the judgment.

The questions referred in Case C–145/08

45 By its questions concerning the application of Directive 92/50 to a contract such as that at issue in the main proceedings, the national court asks whether Directive 89/665 applies to the present case, given that its application presupposes that one of the directives on public contracts referred to in Article 1 of Directive 89/665 is applicable. Thus, it is appropriate to consider those questions together and to ascertain whether such a contract falls within the scope of one of the directives referred to in that article.

46 It is apparent from both the detailed points in the order for reference and the classification of the transaction at issue in the main proceedings by the national court that that transaction is a mixed contract.

47 That contract comprises, essentially, an agreement under which ETA would sell 49% of the shares in EKP to AEAS ('the "sale of shares" aspect'), an agreement under which AEAS would take over management of the casino business, in return for payment ('the "services" aspect') and an agreement under which AEAS would undertake to implement a development plan, comprising refurbishment of the casino and two adjoining hotel units and development of stretches of surrounding land ('the "works" aspect').

48 It follows from the case-law of the Court that, in the case of a mixed contract, the different aspects of which are, in accordance with the contract notice, inseparably linked and thus form an indivisible whole, the transaction at issue must be examined as a whole for the purposes of its legal classification and must be assessed on the basis of the rules which govern the aspect which constitutes the main object or predominant feature of the contract (see, to that effect, Case C–3/88 Commission v Italy [1989] ECR 4035, paragraph 19; Case C–331/92 Gestión Hotelera Internacional [1994] ECR I–1329, paragraphs 23 to 26; Case C–220/05 Auroux and Others [2007] ECR I–385, paragraphs 36 and 37; Case C–412/04 Commission v Italy [2008] ECR I–619, paragraph 47; and Case C–536/07 Commission v Germany [2009] ECR I–0000, paragraphs 28, 29, 57 and 61).

49 That conclusion is valid irrespective of whether or not the aspect constituting the main object of a mixed contract falls within the scope of the directives on public contracts.

50 Consequently, it is appropriate to consider whether the mixed contract at issue in the main proceedings constitutes an indivisible whole and, if so, whether, because of its main object, as a whole it falls within the scope of one of the directives referred to in Article 1 of Directive 89/665 which govern public contracts.

51 Firstly, that contract forms part of a partial privatisation of a public casino business, which was decided upon at a national level by the competent interministerial committee and was launched by a single invitation to tender.

52 It is apparent from the case file, in particular from the conditions in the additional notice published in April 2002, that the mixed contract at issue in the main proceedings is in the form of a single contract relating jointly to the sale of shares in EKP, the acquisition of the right to nominate the majority of the members of the board of directors of EKP, the obligation to assume management of the casino business and to offer high-level services in a profitable manner, and the obligation to refurbish and improve the sites concerned and surrounding land.

53 Those findings demonstrate the need to conclude that mixed contract with a single partner which has both the financial capacity necessary to purchase the shares in question and professional experience in operating a casino.

54 It follows that the various aspects of that contract must be understood as constituting an indivisible whole.

55 Secondly, it is apparent from the findings made by the national court that the main object of the mixed contract was the sale, to the highest bidder, of 49% of the shares in EKP and that the 'works' aspect of that transaction and the 'services' aspect, irrespective of whether the latter constitutes a public service contract or a service concession, were ancillary to the main object of the contract. The national court has also pointed out that the 'works' aspect was entirely ancillary to the 'services' aspect.

56 That assessment is confirmed by the documents submitted to the Court.

57 There can be no doubt that, where there is a purchase of 49% of the shares of a public undertaking such as EKP, that operation constitutes the main object of the contract. The point must be made that the income which AEAS would obtain as a shareholder appears to be significantly greater than the remuneration which it would obtain as a service provider. In addition, AEAS would receive that income for an unlimited time, while the management activity would cease after 10 years.

58 It follows from the foregoing considerations that the different aspects of the mixed contract at issue in the main proceedings constitute an indivisible whole, of which the aspect relating to the transfer of shares constitutes the main object.

59 The transfer of shares to a tenderer in the context of a privatisation of a public undertaking does not fall within the scope of the directives on public contracts.

60 Moreover, that is rightly pointed out in point 66 of the Green Paper on public-private partnerships and Community law on public contracts and concessions (COM(2004) 327 final).

61 In point 69 of its abovementioned Green Paper on public-private partnerships, the Commission points out that it is necessary to ensure that such a capital transaction does not in reality conceal the award to a private partner of contracts which might be termed public contracts or concessions. Nevertheless, in the present case, there is nothing in the documents to cast doubt on the nature of the transaction at issue in the main proceedings, as categorised by the national court.

62 Having regard to the foregoing considerations, the conclusion must be that a mixed contract of which the main object is the acquisition by an undertaking of 49% of the capital of a public undertaking and the ancillary object, indivisibly linked with that main object, is the supply of services and the performance of works does not, as a whole, fall within the scope of the directives on public contracts.

63 That conclusion does not preclude the fact that such a contract must observe the basic rules and general principles of the Treaty, in particular those on the freedom of establishment and the free movement of capital. However, there is no reason in the present case to consider the question of observance of those rules and principles, given that the result of such an examination could in no way lead to a finding that Directive 89/665 applies.

64 In the light of the foregoing, there is no need to answer the other questions referred in Case C–145/08.

The first question referred in Case C–149/08

65 By this question, the national court wishes to know, in essence, whether Directive 89/665 precludes a national rule, as interpreted by that court, under which only all members of a tendering consortium may bring an action against a decision of a contracting authority to award a contract, such that the members of that consortium, individually, are deprived not only of the possibility of having a decision of the contracting authority annulled, but also of the possibility of seeking compensation for individual damage suffered as a result of irregularities in the contract award procedure in question.

66 In order to answer that question, it must be noted that the act of which annulment is sought before the national court emanates from ESR, that is to say, an authority other than the contracting authority which organised the public procurement procedure at issue in the main proceedings.

67 It is apparent from the terms of Directive 89/665, commonly referred to as the 'Remedies Directive', that the protection granted by that directive covers the acts or omissions of contracting authorities.

68 Thus, it is clear from the wording of the fifth recital in the preamble to the directive and Article 1(1) thereof that they refer to measures to be taken in respect of decisions of contracting authorities. Similarly, under Article 1(3), Member States may require that a person seeking a review must have previously notified the contracting authority of the alleged infringement, so that that authority may remedy it. Furthermore, Article 3(2) of that directive gives the Commission the power to notify the contracting authority concerned of the reasons which have led it to conclude that, in a public procurement procedure, an infringement has been committed and to request its correction.

69 Accordingly, the conclusion must be that disputes relating to decisions of an authority such as ESR are not governed by the review system laid down by Directive 89/665.

70 However, the decisions of ESR are liable to have a certain effect on the conduct, or even the outcome, of a public procurement procedure, since they can lead to the exclusion of a tenderer, even a successful tenderer, who individually is characterised by one or another of the incompatibilities as laid down in the relevant national rules. Thus, those decisions are not devoid of interest in respect of the proper application of European Union law in that area.

71 In the present case, it is apparent from the information supplied by the national court that ESR's decision, which led to the applicant in the main proceedings being deprived of the award of the public contract at issue when it had been designated as the successful tenderer, was, in that applicant's opinion, adopted in breach of the provisions of Council Directive 93/37/EEC of 14 June 1993 concerning the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts (OJ 1993 L 199, p. 54) and of the principles arising under the primary legislation of the European Union.

72 The applicant in the main proceedings submits that, by the application of the contested national rules, it was prevented not only from seeking annulment of ESR's allegedly unlawful decision, which led to its exclusion from the procedure at issue in the main proceedings, but also from seeking damages for the loss caused by that decision. Thus it was deprived of its right to effective judicial protection.

73 In that regard, it is important to note that the principle of effective judicial protection is a general principle of European Union law (see, to that effect, Case C–432/05 Unibet [2007] ECR I–2271, paragraph 37 and the case-law cited).

74 The Court has consistently held that, in the absence of Community rules governing the matter, it is for each Member State to designate the courts and tribunals having jurisdiction and to lay down the detailed procedural rules governing actions for safeguarding rights which individuals derive from European Union law. Those detailed procedural rules must, however, be no less favourable than those governing similar domestic actions (principle of equivalence) and must not render practically impossible or excessively difficult the exercise of rights conferred by European Union law (principle of effectiveness) (see, to that effect, Case C–268/06 Impact [2008] ECR I–2483, paragraphs 44 and 46 and the case-law cited).

75 With regard to the principle of equivalence, it is apparent from the information supplied by the national court that, in accordance with the domestic law governing in general compensation for losses caused by unlawful acts of the State or public legal persons, it is the court having jurisdiction for the award of damages which also reviews, as an incidental matter, the legality of the administrative act complained of, which can lead, from an action brought individually by a natural person, to an award of compensation if the basic conditions laid down to that effect are met.

76 However, so far as concerns public contracts, an area covered by European Union law, those two types of jurisdiction, that is to say, on the one hand, the jurisdiction to annul or find the invalidity of an administrative act and, on the other, the jurisdiction to award compensation for the loss suffered, are, in the national law at issue in the main proceedings, held by two different courts.

77 Thus, in the area of public contracts, the combination of Article 5(2) of Law 2522/1997, which makes the award of damages subject to the prior annulment of the allegedly unlawful act, and Article 47(1) of Presidential Decree 18/1989, in accordance with which only all members of a consortium have locus standi to seek annulment of an act forming part of a procedure for the award of a public contract, means, as the national court points out, that it is impossible for any member of a consortium, acting individually, not only to seek annulment of the act adversely affecting it but also to apply to the competent court to obtain compensation for any damage it has suffered individually, whereas that does not appear to be impossible in other areas, by virtue of the rules of domestic law applicable to applications for compensation for loss caused by an unlawful act of a public authority.

78 With regard to the principle of effectiveness, it must be held that, by the application of the contested national rules, a tenderer such as the applicant in the main proceedings is deprived of any opportunity to claim, before the competent court, compensation for any damage it has suffered by reason of a breach of European Union law by an administrative act likely to have influenced the conduct and even the outcome of a public procurement procedure. Such a tenderer is thus deprived of effective judicial protection of the rights in that area of the law which it has under European Union law.

79 As the Advocate General observed in points 107 to 116 of her Opinion, it is important to note, in that regard, that the present situation differs from that which gave rise to the judgment in Espace Trianon and Sofibail. While that case concerned an action for annulment against a contract award decision which deprived the tendering consortium as a whole of the contract, the present case concerns an application for compensation for loss allegedly caused by an unlawful decision of an administrative authority which found that such an incompatibility existed, under the relevant national rules, in the case of the only applicant tenderer.

80 Having regard to the foregoing, the answer to the first question referred in Case C–149/08 is that European Union law, in particular the right to effective judicial protection, precludes a national rule, such as that at issue in the main proceedings, interpreted as meaning that the members of a temporary association, tenderer in a public procurement procedure, are deprived of the possibility of seeking, individually, compensation for the loss which they suffered individually as a result of a decision adopted by an authority, other than the contracting authority, involved in that procedure in accordance with the applicable national rules, which is such as to influence the conduct of that procedure.

81 In the light of that answer, there is no need to answer the second question referred in Case C–149/08.

Costs

82 Since these proceedings are, for the parties to the main proceedings, a step in the action pending before the national court, the decision on costs is a matter for that court. Costs incurred in submitting observations to the Court, other than the costs of those parties, are not recoverable.

On those grounds, the Court (Fourth Chamber) hereby rules:

1. A mixed contract of which the main object is the acquisition by an undertaking of 49 % of the capital of a public undertaking and the ancillary object, indivisibly linked with that main object, is the supply of services and the performance of works does not, as a whole, fall within the scope of the directives on public contracts.

2. European Union law, in particular the right to effective judicial protection, precludes a national rule, such as that at issue in the main proceedings, interpreted as meaning that the members of a temporary association, tenderer in a public procurement procedure, are deprived of the possibility of seeking, individually, compensation for the loss which they suffered individually as a result of a decision adopted by an authority, other than the contracting authority, involved in that procedure in accordance with the applicable national rules, which is such as to influence the conduct of that procedure.

(Public procurement – Contract comprising a transfer of shares and a service element – Classification – Review procedures for the award of contracts – National rule precluding individual appeals by members of an ad hoc consortium lacking legal personality – Change in case-law)

Introduction

1. These two factually and procedurally complex cases, which have been joined by the Court, raise questions of Community public procurement law concerning, in particular, the Remedies Directive (2) and the Services Directive. (3)

2. The ultimate issue in both cases concerns the admissibility of an action, brought by an individual member of an ad hoc consortium without legal personality which was unsuccessful in its bid for a contract, seeking annulment of a decision taken in the course of an award procedure.

3. The Court has already held that the Remedies Directive does not preclude a national rule to the effect that, where the members of such a consortium wish to bring an action against the decision awarding the contract, they must all act together and the action must be admissible in respect of each of them individually. (4)

4. However, the situation in the present cases has the added features that the decision challenged is not the final award but a preliminary decision on eligibility to be awarded the contract, taken not by the contracting authority but by a distinct regulatory authority, and that the decision is of specific relevance to only one member of the consortium and/or its annulment is sought with a view not to obtaining the final award but to being able to seek damages in respect of alleged irregularities in the decision. The issue is further complicated by the fact that national case-law has changed during the course of the proceedings, so that an action which might initially have been admissible can no longer be admissible.

5. Those issues are raised in relation to the Remedies Directive. The applicability of that directive is dependent on a contract's falling within the scope of, inter alia, the Services Directive or the Works Directive. (5) Its applicability is not in doubt in the second case, where the contract is agreed to be subject to the Works Directive. It is, however, less certain in the first case, where the Services Directive may or may not be applicable, depending on whether the award in question is classified as a service contract or a service concession (which would not fall within its scope).

6. A prior question in the first case is therefore how to classify the contract in issue, namely, a mixed contract in which: a public authority sells 49% of the shares in a public casino at a price offered by the highest bidder, to whom it hands over management of the casino and the right to appoint the majority of its directors; that management is remunerated by a percentage of the operating profits; the successful bidder undertakes to implement an improvement and modernisation plan; and the public authority, if it operates any other casino in future within the region concerned, undertakes to compensate the successful bidder.

7. A further issue concerns the extent to which the availability of the remedy in question may be required by fundamental rules and principles of Community law, even if the Remedies Directive does not apply.

Legislative background

Community legislation

The Services Directive (92/50)

8. Article 1(a) defines public service contracts as

'contracts for pecuniary interest concluded in writing between a service provider and a contracting authority' to the exclusion of, in particular, public supply contracts and public works contracts, and contracts awarded in the water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors, all of which are governed by other directives. A number of other types of contract, defined by their subject-matter, are also excluded, but they do not appear relevant for present purposes. Under Article 1(b), contracting authorities are defined as

'the State, regional or local authorities, bodies governed by public law, associations formed by one or more of such authorities or bodies governed by public law' and, under Article 1(c), a service provider is

'any natural or legal person, including a public body, which offers services'.

9. Article 2 provides that, if a public contract is intended to cover both supplies and services, it is to fall within the scope of the directive if the value of the services exceeds that of the products.

10. Article 3(1) requires contracting authorities to apply procedures adapted to the provisions of the directive, and Article 3(2) requires them to ensure that there is no discrimination between service providers.

11. Article 8 stipulates that contracts for services listed in Annex I A (6) are to be awarded in accordance with the provisions of Titles III to VI, (7) while, under Article 9, contracts for services listed in Annex I B are to be awarded in accordance with Articles 14 and 16, which are in Titles IV and V respectively. Under Article 10, contracts for services listed in both annexes are to be awarded in accordance with the provisions of Titles III to VI where the value of the services listed in Annex I A is greater than the value of those listed in Annex I B and, in other cases, in accordance with Articles 14 and 16.

12. Article 14 concerns, essentially, technical specifications to be included in the general or contractual documents in each case, and Article 16 concerns publication of a notice of the award of a contract.

13. None of the services listed in Annex I A appears relevant to the question of classification raised in the first of the present cases. Annex I B, however (to which only Articles 14 and 16 apply), includes (17) 'Hotel and restaurant services', (26) 'Recreational, cultural and sporting services' and (27) 'Other services'. It is common ground that the services in issue fall within one or more of those categories.

14. Article 26(1) provides: 'Tenders may be submitted by groups of service providers. These groups may not be required to assume a specific legal form in order to submit the tender; however, the group selected may be required to do so when it has been awarded the contract.' (8)

The Remedies Directive (89/665)

15. Although the title of the Remedies Directive still refers only to public supply and public works contracts, it was none the less amended by the Services Directive to cover contracts falling within the scope of the latter.

16. Following that amendment, (9) Article 1 provides:

'1. The Member States shall take the measures necessary to ensure that, as regards contract award procedures falling within the scope of [inter alia, the Works and Services Directives], decisions taken by the contracting authorities may be reviewed effectively and, in particular, as rapidly as possible in accordance with the conditions set out in the following Articles and, in particular, Article 2(7) on the grounds that such decisions have infringed Community law in the field of public procurement or nation[al] rules implementing that law.

2. Member States shall ensure that there is no discrimination between undertakings claiming injury in the context of a procedure for the award of a contract as a result of the distinction made by this Directive between national rules implementing Community law and other national rules.

3. The Member States shall ensure that the review procedures are available, under detailed rules which the Member States may establish, at least to any person having or having had an interest in obtaining a particular public supply or public works contract and who has been or risks being harmed by an alleged infringement. In particular, the Member States may require that the person seeking the review must have previously notified the contracting authority of the alleged infringement and of his intention to seek review.'

17. Article 2 provides, in particular:

'1. The Member States shall ensure that the measures taken concerning the review procedures specified in Article 1 include provision for the powers to:

(a) take, at the earliest opportunity and by way of interlocutory procedures, interim measures with the aim of correcting the alleged infringement or preventing further damage to the interests concerned, including measures to suspend or to ensure the suspension of the procedure for the award of a public contract or the implementation of any decision taken by the contracting authority;

(b) either set aside or ensure the setting aside of decisions taken unlawfully, including the removal of discriminatory technical, economic or financial specifications in the invitation to tender, the contract documents or in any other document relating to the contract award procedure;

(c) award damages to persons harmed by an infringement.

5. The Member States may provide that where damages are claimed on the grounds that a decision was taken unlawfully, the contested decision must first be set aside by a body having the necessary powers.

6. The effects of the exercise of the powers referred to in paragraph 1 on a contract concluded subsequent to its award shall be determined by national law.

Furthermore, except where a decision must be set aside prior to the award of damages, a Member State may provide that, after the conclusion of a contract following its award, the powers of the body responsible for the review procedures shall be limited to awarding damages to any person harmed by an infringement.

7. The Member States shall ensure that decisions taken by bodies responsible for review procedures can be effectively enforced.

National law

Casino licences

18. Under Article 1(7) of Law 2206/1994 governing casinos, (10) casino licences are to be granted following a public international tendering procedure organised by a seven-member commission. In accordance with Article 3, casinos are subject to State control.

Ineligibility for award of public contracts

19. Law 3021/2002, implementing Article 14(9) of the Greek Constitution, provides for restrictions on the award of public contracts to persons having active interests in the news media sector. It establishes an irrebuttable presumption of incompatibility as between the status of owner, partner, major shareholder or management executive of an undertaking active in that sector and that of owner, partner, major shareholder or management executive of an undertaking which is awarded a works, supply or services contract by the State or by a legal entity in the public sector (the presumption extending also to certain family members). (11)

20. Before awarding or signing the contract, the contracting authority must obtain from the Ethniko Simvoulio Radiotileorasis (National Council for Radio and Television, the 'ESR') a certificate that there is no such incompatibility. Failure to do so renders the contract null and void. The ESR's decision is binding, but may be challenged in the courts by any person with an interest.

21. In its recent judgment in Michaniki, (12) the Court held that such an irrebuttable presumption was precluded by Community law, even if it pursued the legitimate objectives of equal treatment of tenderers and of transparency in award procedures. The Court did not, however, state that Community law would preclude a rebuttable presumption of the kind described.

Remedies in procurement procedures

22. The Remedies Directive is transposed in Greece by Law 2522/1997, Article 2(1) of which provides that any person having an interest in the award of a public works, supply or services contract and liable to be adversely affected by a breach of Community or national law may, in accordance with certain detailed rules, apply to the courts for interim relief, for annulment, or a finding of invalidity, of the unlawful act, and for damages.

23. Article 4(1) of the same law specifies that the right to seek annulment or a finding of invalidity applies when the alleged breach of Community or national law concerns any step in the procedure leading up to the award. Article 4(2) provides that, if an act or omission of the contracting authority is declared void after the contract is awarded, and unless the award procedure has been suspended as a measure of interim relief, the contract itself is not affected; in that case the applicant may seek damages in accordance with Article 5.

24. Article 5(1) specifies that the right to seek damages is governed by Articles 197 and 198 of the Civil Code (providing for liability in damages arising out of negotiations) and that any provision excluding or restricting that right is inapplicable. Article 5(2) provides (in accordance with Article 2 (5) of the Remedies Directive) that damages cannot be awarded unless the competent court has first annulled the unlawful act or omission in question or made a finding of invalidity, but allows an action for a finding of invalidity and an action for damages to be combined in accordance with the generally applicable rules.

25. Article 47(1) of Presidential Decree 18/1989, codifying the laws relating to the Simvoulio tis Epikratias (Council of State) allows any natural or legal person whose legitimate interests are affected by an administrative act to seek its annulment.

26. In a line of chamber decisions dating from 1992, that court (which appears to have sole jurisdiction to rule on the validity of public procurement procedures) consistently interpreted that provision in such a way as to allow an action for annulment of the award of a public contract to be brought by individual members of a consortium taking part in the procedure. In the course of the main proceedings in the present two cases, however, the court in plenary formation has decided that such an action is inadmissible unless brought jointly by all the members of the consortium (on the ground, essentially, that only the consortium as constituted for the purposes of the procedure could be awarded the contract if the original award were annulled). That interpretation, in conjunction with Article 5(2) of Law 2522/1997, has implications for the availability of an action for damages in respect of an irregularity in the procedure brought by an individual member of the consortium.

Facts, procedure and questions referred

27. In October 2001, the competent interministerial committee decided to privatise Elliniko Kazino Parnithas AE ('EKP', a subsidiary of Ellinika Touristika Akinita AE, 'ETA'), a casino undertaking wholly owned by the Greek State. The notice of invitation to tender provided for an initial preselection stage to determine which tenderers met the conditions set out. The successful tenderer was to be selected at a subsequent stage. Two consortia were preselected.

28. The terms were set out in detail in a draft contract annexed to a supplementary notice in April 2002. (13)

29. Article 3 of those terms stated that the contract was to be a 'mixed' contract comprising, in summary, four agreements under which, respectively:

– ETA would sell (49% of the) shares in EKP to 'AEAS' (a 'single purpose limited company' to be set up by the successful tenderer); (14)

– AEAS would acquire the right to appoint the majority of EKP's board of directors and thus to administer the company in accordance with the terms of the contract;

– AEAS would take over the management of the casino business, in return for payment;

– AEAS, as administrator of EKP and as manager of the casino business, would undertake vis-à-vis ETA to implement a development plan to be approved by EKP's board of directors.

30. The development plan was to comprise refurbishing the casino and enhancing the facilities offered, refurbishing and improving two adjoining hotel units and developing stretches of surrounding land, all to be completed within 750 days of obtaining planning permission.

31. Article 14 of the draft contract concerned AEAS's management of the casino and remuneration thereof. Essentially, the management was to be prudent, entirely in accordance with the law and financially profitable for EKP (Article 13(7) specified in addition that EKP was to be administered in such a way as to achieve an annual pre-tax profit of at least EUR 105 000 000 in the first five years). In return, AEAS would receive a sum no greater than a scaled percentage of the annual operating profits (decreasing from 20% of profits up to EUR 30 000 000 to 5% of profits over EUR 90 000 000) and 2% of turnover.

32. Under Article 21(1) of the draft contract, if ETA were to operate lawfully any other casino in the same region (Attica) within 10 years from the date of effect of the contract, it would have to pay AEAS compensation equal to 70% of the price of the shares acquired in EKP by AEAS, reduced by one tenth each year.

33. Under Article 23(1), the contract would terminate at the end of the 10th year from taking effect. (15)

34. The contract was awarded to a group led by Hyatt Regency Xenodocheiaki kai Touristiki (Thessaloniki) AE (now renamed Regency Entertainment Psychagogiki Touristiki AE) ('Regency'). ETA therefore sought and obtained from the ESR a certificate that none of the owners, partners, major shareholders or management executives of the undertakings in the consortium presented any incompatibility as provided for in Law 3021/2002.

35. An action for annulment of the ESR's decision, in which it is alleged that a management executive of one member of the Regency consortium did have an incompatible connection with the news media sector (being the son of a major shareholder in a Greek media group), is now before the Simvoulio tis Epikratias.

36. The action was lodged in the name of the unsuccessful tendering consortium and all seven of its members. A chamber of the Simvoulio tis Epikratias dismissed it in so far as it was brought by the consortium as a whole and by four of its members, because they did not appear and the lawyer had not been duly authorised to act on their behalf. In so far as the action was brought by the remaining three members, including Club Hotel Loutraki ('Loutraki'), the chamber referred the case to the plenary court in view of its importance. In doing so, the chamber applied the then settled case-law under which an action brought by certain members of a consortium could be admissible. Its ruling of inadmissibility as regards the other applicants is now irrevocable and cannot be reviewed in the procedure before the plenary court, which has – in the meantime – reversed the previously settled case-law. (16)

37. As regards the substance of the action, the Simvoulio tis Epikratias points out that the contract is mixed, in that it comprises (i) a sale of shares to the successful tenderer which, as such, is not subject to Community procurement rules, (ii) a service contract to be concluded with that tenderer, who undertakes the management of the casino premises and (iii) an undertaking to carry out certain works. Of the three parts, according to the referring court, (i) is the main purpose of the contract, (ii) is ancillary and (iii) is the least important.

38. The referring court wonders whether part (ii) of the contract can be classified as a public service concession, not subject to Community directives. That might depend on the extent to which the successful tenderer bears the risk in operating the services concerned, bearing in mind that they relate to activities which, under national law, may be subject to exclusive or special rights. It could also be relevant that running a casino has never in any way constituted a public service in Greek law – although the term 'public service' might have to be defined as a concept of Community law.

39. If the Court should consider that part (ii) of the contract is a public service contract, the national court then wonders whether the action for annulment of the ESR's decision falls within the scope of the Remedies Directive. The services concerned fall within Annex I B to the Services Directive, and contracts for such services are subject only to Articles 14 and 16 of the directive, which impose procedural obligations. The referring court none the less wonders whether the principle of equal treatment of tenderers, which the Remedies Directive is designed to protect, applies also in such cases.

40. If the Remedies Directive does apply, the national court notes that, according to Espace Trianon and Sofibail, (17) a national rule which requires an action for annulment of a decision awarding a public contract to be brought by all the members of a tendering consortium is not contrary to that directive. However, it wonders whether that applies to all types of judicial protection guaranteed by the directive, in particular to claims for damages. The combination of the various national rules means that individual members of an unsuccessful tendering consortium are prevented not only from seeking annulment of the act adversely affecting them jointly but also from obtaining compensation for any damage they have suffered individually. Their ability to seek redress is thus dependent on the will of the other members of the consortium, whose interest in obtaining reparation may be different.

41. The issue is complicated by the fact that, pursuant to Article 2(5) of the Remedies Directive, Greece has made a claim for damages in the field of public procurement conditional on prior annulment of the unlawful act, with different courts having jurisdiction over the two matters – the Simvoulio tis Epikratias is competent as regards validity, whereas the ordinary courts are competent in damages. That is in contrast to the general situation concerning reparation for damage caused by unlawful acts of the State or of public bodies, where the court hearing the claim for damages also reviews the legality of the administrative act.

42. It might therefore be considered that a procedure intended to safeguard rights deriving from Community law was less favourable than a procedure to safeguard comparable rights deriving from national law.

43. Finally, the Simvoulio tis Epikratias wonders whether the procedural situation, in which the current case-law requires an action of the kind in question to be brought jointly by all members of a consortium but the action as brought by only three members had been declared admissible under previous case-law, is compatible with the right to a fair hearing, as a fundamental principle of Community law and as set out in Article 6 of the European Convention on Human Rights, and with the principle of protection of legitimate expectations.

44. The Simvoulio tis Epikratias therefore seeks a preliminary ruling on the following questions:

'(1) Does a contract by which the contracting authority entrusts to the contracting undertaking the management of a casino business and the execution of a development plan consisting in the upgrading of the casino premises and the commercial exploitation of the possibilities offered by the casino's licence, and which contains a term under which the contracting authority is obliged to pay the contracting undertaking compensation should another casino lawfully operate in the wider area in which the casino in question operates, constitute a concession, not governed by [the Services Directive]?

(2) If [question 1] is answered in the negative: does a legal action which is brought by persons who have participated in the procedure for the award of a public contract of mixed form providing inter alia for the supply of services subject to Annex I B to [the Services Directive], and in which they plead breach of the principle of equal treatment of participants in tender procedures (a principle affirmed by Article 3(2) of that directive), fall within the field of application of [the Remedies Directive], or is its application precluded inasmuch as, in accordance with Article 9 of [the Services Directive], only Articles 14 and 16 of the latter apply to the procedure for the award of the abovementioned contract for the supply of services?

(3) If [question 2] is answered in the affirmative: [(18)] accepting that a national provision in accordance with which only all the members of a consortium without legal personality which has participated unsuccessfully in a public procurement procedure can bring a legal action against the act awarding the contract, and not consortium members individually, is not in principle contrary to Community law and specifically to [the Remedies Directive], and that that still applies where the legal action has initially been brought by all the members of the consortium jointly but ultimately proves, as regards some of them, to be inadmissible, is it in addition necessary, from the viewpoint of application of that directive, to examine, in order to make a declaration of inadmissibility, whether those individual members thereafter retain the right to claim before another national court any damages which may be envisaged by a provision of national law?

45. In 2004, in the context of a public works procurement procedure for the construction of a town hall and underground car park, (19) the city of Thessaloniki awarded the contract to a consortium comprising the companies Aktor ATE ('Aktor'), Themeliodomi AE and Domotechniki AE. The ESR, consulted on the existence of a possible incompatibility within the meaning of Law

3021/2002, found that a major shareholder of a company which was one of Aktor's major shareholders did have an incompatible connection with the news media sector (being the son of a major shareholder in a Greek media group (20)), and refused to issue a certificate for the consortium. Aktor, alone of the members of the consortium, requested the ESR to reconsider its decision and has now applied to the Simvoulio tis Epikratias for review of the ESR's dismissal of that request. It did so on the basis of the existing case-law allowing such actions to be brought by individual members of a consortium. However, the plenary court, in the course of its consideration of both this and the Loutraki case, has overturned that case-law, with the effect that it is no longer possible for Aktor to seek to resolve the problem.

46. In that regard, the case thus raises similar issues to those in Case C–145/08. The Simvoulio tis Epikratias therefore seeks a preliminary ruling on two questions, identical to questions 3 (with the exception of th

Judgment

1 This reference for a preliminary ruling concerns the interpretation of Articles 12 EC, 43 EC and 49 EC, the principles of equal treatment and non-discrimination on grounds of nationality, and the consequent requirement of transparency, in connection with the award of service concessions.

2 The reference was made in the course of proceedings between Wall AG ('Wall') and Stadt Frankfurt am Main ('the City of Frankfurt') concerning the award of a service concession for the operation and maintenance of certain public lavatories in that city.

Legal context

3 Article 2 of Commission Directive 80/723/EEC of 25 June 1980 on the transparency of financial relations between Member States and public undertakings as well as on financial transparency within certain undertakings (OJ 1980 L 195, p. 35), as amended by Commission Directive 2000/52/EC of 26 July 2000 (OJ 2000 L 193, p. 75) ('Directive 80/723'), provides:

'1. For the purpose of this Directive:

(b) "public undertakings" means any undertaking over which the public authorities may exercise directly or indirectly a dominant influence by virtue of their ownership of it, their financial participation therein, or the rules which govern it;

...

2. A dominant influence on the part of the public authorities shall be presumed when these authorities, directly or indirectly in relation to an undertaking:

(a) hold the major part of the undertaking's subscribed capital; or

(b) control the majority of the votes attaching to shares issued by the undertaking; or

(c) can appoint more than half of the members of the undertaking's administrative, managerial or supervisory body.'

4 Under Article 1(b) of Council Directive 92/50/EEC of 18 June 1992 relating to the coordination of procedures for the award of public service contracts (OJ 1992 L 209, p. 1), as amended by Commission Directive 2001/78/EC of 13 September 2001 (OJ 2001 L 285, p. 1) ('Directive 92/50'):

'(b) contracting authorities shall mean the State, regional or local authorities, bodies governed by public law, associations formed by one or more of such authorities or bodies governed by public law.

Body governed by public law means any body:

– established for the specific purpose of meeting needs in the general interest, not having an industrial or commercial character, and

– having legal personality and – financed, for the most part, by the State, or regional or local authorities, or other bodies governed by public law; or subject to management supervision by those bodies; or having an administrative, managerial or supervisory board, more than half of whose members are appointed by the State, regional or local authorities or by other bodies governed by public law.

5 Article 17 of Directive 2004/18/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 31 March 2004 on the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts, public supply contracts and public service contracts (OJ 2004 L 134, p. 114) provides:

'Without prejudice to the application of Article 3, this Directive shall not apply to service concessions as defined in Article 1(4).'

6 The first subparagraph of Article 80(1) of Directive 2004/18 provides:

'The Member States shall bring into force the laws, regulations and administrative provisions necessary to comply with this Directive no later than 31 January 2006. They shall forthwith inform the Commission thereof.'

7 According to the first paragraph of Article 82 of that directive:

'Directive 92/50/EEC, except for Article 41 thereof, and Directives 93/36/EEC and 93/37/EEC shall be repealed with effect from the date shown in Article 80, without prejudice to the obligations of the Member States concerning the deadlines for transposition and application set out in Annex XI.'

The main proceedings and the questions referred for a preliminary ruling

8 Wall markets advertising in public streets and open spaces, and for that purpose carries out inter alia the production, installation, maintenance and cleaning of public lavatories.

9 Frankfurter Entsorgungs- und Service GmbH ('FES'), a limited liability company, is a legal person governed by private law, whose objects in accordance with its statutes are waste disposal, waste management, urban cleansing and traffic safety, on behalf of public authorities and private persons. The City of Frankfurt holds 51% of the shares in FES, the remaining 49% being held by a private undertaking. Decisions of the shareholders' meeting of FES require a three-quarters majority. Of the 16 members of the supervisory board of FES, half are appointed by the shareholders. The workers appoint eight members and each of the two shareholders four members. The City of Frankfurt has the right to propose the chairman of the supervisory board, who has a casting vote if the votes are equal. FES employs approximately 1 400 employees, about 800 of whom carry out work concerning the City of Frankfurt.

10 FES achieves a net turnover of EUR 92 million with the City of Frankfurt and EUR 52 million with other persons governed by private and public law. Of the net turnover achieved by FES with the City of Frankfurt in 2005, EUR 51.3 million related to waste disposal and EUR 36.2 million to urban cleansing.

11 On 18 December 2002 the City of Frankfurt called by a 'voluntary EU-wide notice' in the city's official gazette for applications to take part in a competition for the conclusion of a service concession contract relating to the operation, maintenance, servicing and cleaning of 11 municipal public lavatories for a period of 16 years. Two of those 11 public lavatories, namely those at Rödelheim station and Galluswarte, were to be newly built. The consideration for those services was solely the right to charge a fee for the use of the installations and to make use, during the period of the contract, of advertising spaces on and in the lavatories and in other public spaces in the city of Frankfurt.

12 On 4 July 2003 the City of Frankfurt invited interested undertakings to submit tenders. A draft service concession contract was annexed to the invitation, clauses 18(2) and 30(4) of which stated that a change of subcontractor was permitted only with the consent of the city.

13 Tenders were submitted by Wall, FES and three other undertakings also established in Germany.

14 According to the order for reference, FES gave the following description of the concepts relating to its offer: 'Introduction – … The call for tenders by the City of Frankfurt gives FES … an opportunity, together with an efficient and experienced partner such as [Wall], both to renew the buildings and the network of the public lavatories and to present a realistic refinancing scheme which takes account of its responsibility towards employees. … Galluswarte – … In consultation with the authorities, a fully automated City-WC from [Wall] will be integrated beneath the suburban railway bridge. … Bahnhof Rödelheim – Since the lavatories at Rödelheim station will be demolished in the course of redeveloping the open space, in accordance with current plans a fully automated City-WC from [Wall] will be integrated. … Safety concept – … the City-WCs have a fully automated self-cleaning system. Concepts for advertising – … Marketing of the advertising surfaces will be carried out by FES's partner [Wall] as an experienced advertising specialist operating worldwide … Advertising media used – The modern and aesthetic products of [Wall] will be used.'

15 Wall holds several patents relating to the method of functioning of the City-WCs.

16 On 18 March 2004 Wall was excluded from the award procedure and its tender was rejected.

17 On 9 June 2004 the concession was awarded to FES. A corresponding contract was concluded between FES and the City of Frankfurt on 20 and 22 July 2004, valid until 31 December 2019 ('the concession contract'). According to the order for reference, FES's concepts, as they resulted from the negotiations, were agreed as components of the contract. However, in its written observations, the City of Frankfurt asserts that the points mentioned in the FES concept were not incorporated in the concession contract. Only the designation of Wall as one of FES's subcontractors was incorporated.

18 An examination of the wording of the concession contract, submitted with the national court's case-file, shows that Wall was designated as a subcontractor with no further details of its products or services being included in the contract.

19 Clause 18(2) of the concession contract provided that FES was to carry out the construction work for the public lavatories using its own means and/or by means of subcontractors, including Wall. That clause stated that a change of subcontractor was allowed only with the written consent of the City of Frankfurt.

20 Clause 30(4) of the contract stated that Wall was the subcontractor of FES for the advertising services covered by the concession. That clause provided that a change of subcontractor was allowed only with the written consent of the City of Frankfurt.

21 On 5 January 2005 Wolf was requested by FES to submit an offer for the advertising services which were the subject of the concession awarded to FES. FES also invited Deutsche Städte Medien GmbH ('DSM') to submit such an offer.

22 By letter of 15 June 2005, FES then asked the City of Frankfurt to give its consent, as regards the use of the advertising spaces, to a change of subcontractor to DSM. On 21 June 2005 the city agreed to the change of subcontractor.

23 FES awarded those services to DSM, and on 21 June 2005 concluded a contract with DSM which provided for the payment by DSM to FES of an annual remuneration of EUR 786 206.

24 On 28 July 2005 FES invited offers for the supply of two Wall City-WCs. Wall made an offer, but on 7 September 2005 it was informed by FES that FES had received a more competitive offer, and consequently could not take Wall's offer into consideration.

25 By letter of 10 October 2005, FES asked the City of Frankfurt for consent to a change of subcontractor, in accordance with the concession contract, so that those public lavatories could be supplied not by Wall but by other companies.

26 On 19 December 2005 the City of Frankfurt replied to FES that it did not have to deal with the question of a change of subcontractor for the public lavatories, since it understood that FES now wished to carry out the work itself under its own responsibility. The city stated on this occasion that it understood that the standards set out in the contractual documents would be complied with.

27 Wall brought an action before the referring court, asking it to order FES to refrain from performing the contract relating to the advertising services concluded with DSM and from concluding and/or performing any contract with a third party for the construction of the two public lavatories which were to be newly built. Wall also sought for the City of Frankfurt to be ordered to refrain from consenting to the conclusion of a contract between FES and anyone other than Wall for the construction of those two public lavatories. In the alternative, it asked for the City of Frankfurt and FES to be ordered jointly and severally to pay it EUR 1 038 682.18 plus interest.

28 In those circumstances, the Landgericht Frankfurt am Main (Regional Court, Frankfurt am Main) decided to stay the proceedings and refer the following questions to the Court for a preliminary ruling:

‘1. Are the principle of equal treatment expressed inter alia in Articles 12 EC, 43 EC and 49 EC and the prohibition in Community law of discrimination on grounds of nationality to be interpreted as meaning that the consequent duties of transparency for public authorities, namely to use an appropriate degree of advertising to enable the award of service concessions to be opened up to competition and the impartiality of the procurement procedure to be reviewed (see the judgments of the Court of Justice in Case C–324/98 Telaustria and Telefonadress [2000] ECR I–10745, paragraphs 60 to 62; Case C–231/03 Coname [2005] ECR I–7287, paragraphs 17 to 22; Case C–458/03 Parking Brixen [2005] ECR I–8585, paragraphs 46 to 50; Case C–410/04 ANAV [2006] ECR I–3303, paragraph 21; and Case C–260/04 Commission v Italy [2007] ECR I–7083, paragraph 24), require national law to provide an unsuccessful tenderer with a claim to an order restraining an imminent breach of those duties and/or prohibiting the continuation of such a breach of duty?

2. If Question 1 is answered in the negative: Do those duties of transparency form part of the customary law of the European Communities, in the sense that they are already applied continually and constantly, equally and generally, and are recognised as a binding rule by those concerned?

3. Do the duties of transparency mentioned in Question 1 require, in the case also of an intended amendment to a service concession contract – including the substitution of a subcontractor whose identity was emphasised in the tender – that the negotiations on this point are again opened up to competition with an appropriate degree of advertising, and what would be the criteria for requiring such an opening up?

4. Are the principles and duties of transparency mentioned in Question 1 to be interpreted as meaning that in the case of service concessions, in the event of a breach of duty, a contract concluded as a result of the breach and intended to create or amend a continuing obligation must be terminated?

5. Are the principles and duties of transparency mentioned in Question 1 and Article 86(1) EC, referring also if necessary to Article 2(1)(b) and (2) of [Directive 80/723] and Article 1(9) of [Directive 2004/18], to be interpreted as meaning that an undertaking is subject to those duties of transparency, as a public undertaking or contracting authority, if – it was set up by a regional or local authority for the purpose of waste disposal and street cleaning but also operates in the free market,

– it belongs to that regional or local authority to the extent of a 51% holding, but decisions of shareholders can be taken only by a three-quarters majority,

– the regional or local authority appoints only a quarter of the members of the supervisory board of the undertaking, including the chairman, and – it achieves more than half its turnover from bilateral contracts for waste disposal and street cleaning in the territory of that regional or local authority, which reimburses itself by means of municipal taxes on its residents?'

Consideration of the questions referred

Preliminary observation

29 The main proceedings concern, first, the decision of FES to change its subcontractor for the advertising services that were the subject of the concession awarded to FES by the City of Frankfurt, the contract embodying that change having been concluded with the consent of the city on 21 June 2005, and, second, the intention of FES to award the construction of two public lavatories to an operator other than Wall. That intention was expressed in a letter of 10 October 2005, in which FES asked the City of Frankfurt to agree to a change of subcontractor for that work. By letter of 19 December 2005, the city replied to FES that it did not have to deal with the question of a change of subcontractor for the public lavatories, since it understood that FES now wished to carry out the work itself under its own responsibility. That reply is interpreted in the order for reference as meaning that the City of Frankfurt gave its consent to the change of subcontractor for the supply of the two public lavatories. In view of that interpretation, 19 December 2005, the date of the letter by which the City of Frankfurt is taken to have consented to the change of subcontractor requested by FES, should be taken as the reference date for considering the reference for a preliminary ruling.

Question 3

30 By its third question, which should be considered first, the referring court asks whether the principles of equal treatment and non-discrimination on grounds of nationality enshrined in Articles 12 EC, 43 EC and 49 EC and the consequent obligation of transparency require, where an amendment to a service concession contract – including the case where the amendment is intended to replace a specific subcontractor on whom weight was laid during the procedure – is envisaged, the reopening up to competition of the relevant negotiations by ensuring an adequate degree of advertising and, if so, how such an opening up to competition should be done.

31 That question concerns the application of those provisions and principles in a situation in which, in connection with the performance of a service concession contract, it is intended to replace one of the subcontractors of the holder of the concession.

32 Since Articles 43 EC and 49 EC are specific applications of the general prohibition of discrimination on grounds of nationality laid down in Article 12 EC, there is no need to refer to Article 12 EC in order to answer the question (see, to that effect, Joined Cases C–397/98 and C–410/98 Metallgesellschaft and Others [2001] ECR I–1727, paragraphs 38 and 39, and Case C–105/07 Lammers & Van Cleeff [2008] ECR I–173, paragraph 14).

33 As European Union law now stands, service concession contracts are not governed by any of the directives by which the legislature has regulated the field of public procurement (see Coname, paragraph 16, and Case C–347/06 ASM Brescia [2008] ECR I–5641, paragraph 57). However, the public authorities concluding them are bound to comply with the fundamental rules of the EC Treaty, including Articles 43 EC and 49 EC, and with the consequent obligation of transparency (see, to that effect, Telaustria and Telefonadress, paragraphs 60 to 62; Coname, paragraphs 16 to 19; and Parking Brixen, paragraphs 46 to 49).

34 That obligation of transparency applies where the service concession in question may be of interest to an undertaking located in a Member State other that in which the concession is awarded (see, to that effect, Coname, paragraph 17; see also, by analogy, Case C–507/03 Commission v Ireland [2007] ECR I–9777, paragraph 29, and Case C–412/04 Commission v Italy [2008] ECR I–619, paragraph 66).

35 That the service concession at issue in the main proceedings may be of interest to undertakings located in a Member State other than the Federal Republic of Germany follows from the order for reference, in that the referring court states that the call for applications was announced in the official gazette of the City of Frankfurt at 'EU-wide' level, and that it considers that a breach of the obligation of transparency could constitute discrimination, at least potentially, against undertakings in other Member States.

36 The obligation of transparency to be complied with by public authorities concluding service concession contracts consists in ensuring, for the benefit of any potential tenderer, a degree of advertising sufficient to allow the service concession to be opened up to competition and the impartiality of the award procedures to be reviewed (see Telaustria and Telefonadress, paragraphs 60 to 62; Parking Brixen, paragraphs 46 to 49; and ANAV, paragraph 21).

37 In order to ensure transparency of procedures and equal treatment of tenderers, substantial amendments to essential provisions of a service concession contract could in certain cases require the award of a new concession contract, if they are materially different in character from the original contract and are therefore such as to demonstrate the intention of the parties to renegotiate the essential terms of that contract (see, by analogy with public contracts, Case C–337/98 Commission v France [2000] ECR I–8377, paragraphs 44 and 46, and Case C–454/06 pressetext Nachrichtenagentur [2008] ECR I–4401, paragraph 34).

38 An amendment to a service concession contract during its currency may be regarded as substantial if it introduces conditions which, if they had been part of the original award procedure, would have allowed for the admission of tenderers other than those originally admitted or would have allowed for the acceptance of an offer other than that originally accepted (see, by analogy, pressetext Nachrichtenagentur, paragraph 35).

39 A change of subcontractor, even if the possibility of a change is provided for in the contract, may in exceptional cases constitute such an amendment to one of the essential provisions of a concession contract where the use of one subcontractor rather than another was, in view of the particular characteristics of the services concerned, a decisive factor in concluding the contract, which is in any event for the referring court to ascertain.

40 The referring court observes that in the concept annexed to the offer submitted to the City of Frankfurt by FES, FES stated that it would use City-WCs from Wall. According to the referring court, it is likely that in that case the concession was awarded to FES because of the identity of the subcontractor it had introduced.

41 It is for the national court to establish whether the situations described in paragraphs 37 to 39 above are present.

42 If, in making that assessment, the referring court were to conclude that an essential element of the concession contract was being altered, all necessary measures would have to be taken, in accordance with the national legal system of the Member State concerned, to restore the transparency of the procedure, which might extend to a new award procedure. If need be, a new award procedure would have to be organised in a manner appropriate to the specific features of the service concession involved, and would have to ensure that an undertaking located in another Member State had access to sufficient information on that concession before it was awarded.

43 The answer to Question 3 is therefore that, where amendments to the provisions of a service concession contract are materially different in character from those on the basis of which the original concession contract was awarded, and are therefore such as to demonstrate the intention of the parties to renegotiate the essential terms of the contract, all necessary measures must be taken, in accordance with the national legal system of the Member State concerned, to restore the transparency of the procedure, which may extend to a new award procedure. If need be, a new award procedure should be organised in a manner appropriate to the specific features of the service concession involved, and should ensure that an undertaking located in another Member State has access to sufficient information on that concession before it is awarded.

44 By its fifth question, which should be taken second, the referring court asks essentially whether, in the light of Article 86(1) EC, in conjunction if necessary with Article 2(1)(b) and (2) of Directive 80/723 and Article 1(9) of Directive 2004/18, an undertaking with characteristics such as those of FES which is the holder of a concession is bound by the obligation of transparency flowing from Articles 43 EC and 49 EC and by the principles of equal treatment and non-discrimination on grounds of nationality, when concluding a contract relating to services within the scope of the concession granted to it by the public authority.

45 More precisely, the referring court wishes to know whether Article 86(1) EC is relevant for defining the scope of that obligation of transparency.

46 As to Article 86(1) EC, it suffices to note that that provision is addressed solely to the Member States, not directly to undertakings.

47 To establish whether an entity with characteristics such as those of FES may be equated to a public authority bound by the obligation of transparency, some aspects of the definition of 'contracting authority' in Article 1(b) of Directive 92/50 on public service contracts should be taken as guidance, to the extent that they correspond to the requirements produced by the application to service concessions of the obligation of transparency flowing from Articles 43 EC and 49 EC.

48 Those articles and the principles of equal treatment and non-discrimination on grounds of nationality, and the consequent obligation of transparency, pursue the same objectives as Directive 92/50, in particular the free movement of services and their opening up to undistorted competition in the Member States.

49 It must accordingly be ascertained whether two conditions are satisfied: first, that the undertaking in question is effectively controlled by the State or another public authority, and, second, that it does not compete in the market.

50 As regards the former condition, the order for reference states that, although the City of Frankfurt holds 51% of the capital of FES, that holding does not enable it effectively to control the management of that company. A majority of three quarters of the votes is needed for a decision of a general meeting of shareholders.

51 Moreover, the other 49% of the capital of FES is held not by one or more other public authorities but by a private undertaking which, as such, follows considerations proper to private interests and pursues objectives other than the public interest (see, to that effect, Case C-26/03 Stadt Halle and RPL Lochau [2005] ECR I-1, paragraph 50).

52 In addition, on the supervisory board of FES, the City of Frankfurt has only a quarter of the votes. The fact that it has the right to put forward a candidate for the post of chairman of the supervisory board, who has a casting vote if the votes are equal, is not enough to allow it to exercise a decisive influence over FES.

53 In those circumstances, the condition of effective control by the State or another public undertaking is not satisfied.

54 As regards the second condition mentioned in paragraph 49 above, the referring court observes that more than half of FES's turnover derives from bilateral contracts for waste disposal and street cleaning in the city of Frankfurt.

55 Such a relationship is analogous to that which exists in normal commercial relations formed by bilateral contracts freely negotiated between the contracting parties (see, to that effect, Case C-380/98 University of Cambridge [2000] ECR I-8035, paragraph 25).

56 It may be concluded, moreover, from the order for reference that FES operates competitively in the market, as follows from the fact that it derives a large part of its income from activities carried out with public authorities other than the City of Frankfurt and with private undertakings operating in the market, and from the fact that it competed with other undertakings to obtain the concession at issue in the main proceedings.

57 In those circumstances, the second condition for equating an undertaking with a public authority is not satisfied either.

58 The referring court also asks the Court about the possible application of Directive 80/723.

59 In that it relates to the transparency of financial relationships between the Member States and public undertakings, that directive does not apply as such to the subject-matter of Question 5.

60 The answer to Question 5 is therefore that, where an undertaking which is the holder of a concession concludes a contract for services within the scope of a concession it has been awarded by a regional or local authority, the obligation of transparency deriving from Articles 43 EC and 49 EC and from the principles of equal treatment and non-discrimination on grounds of nationality does not apply if that undertaking – was set up by the regional or local authority for the purpose of waste disposal and street cleaning but also operates in the market,

– belongs to that regional or local authority to the extent of a 51% holding, but decisions of shareholders can be taken only by a three-quarters majority of votes at a general meeting of the company,

– has only a quarter of the members of its supervisory board, including the chairman, appointed by the regional or local authority, and

– obtains more than half its turnover from bilateral contracts for waste disposal and street cleaning in the territory of that regional or local authority, which reimburses itself by means of municipal taxes on its residents.

Questions 1, 2 and 4

61 By its first, second and fourth questions, which should be examined together, the referring court essentially asks whether the principles of equal treatment and non-discrimination on grounds of nationality enshrined by Articles 43 EC and 49 EC and the consequent obligation of transparency require the national authorities to terminate a contract entered into in breach of that obligation and the national courts to give a tenderer whose offer has not been accepted the right to a restraining order to prevent an imminent breach or to put an end to an existing breach of that obligation. The referring court also asks whether that obligation may be regarded as part of the customary law of the European Union.

62 As noted in paragraph 33 above, service concession contracts are not governed, in the present state of European Union law, by any of the directives regulating the field of public procurement.

63 According to the Court's case-law, in the absence of European Union rules, it is for the domestic legal system of each Member State to regulate the legal procedures for safeguarding rights which individuals derive from European Union law (see, to that effect, Case C–432/05 Unibet [2007] ECR I–2271, paragraph 39 and the case-law cited).

64 Such procedures must be no less favourable than similar domestic procedures (principle of equivalence) and must not render practically impossible or excessively difficult the exercise of rights conferred by the law of the European Union (principle of effectiveness) (see, to that effect, Unibet, paragraph 43 and the case-law cited).

65 It follows that the principles of equal treatment and non-discrimination on grounds of nationality enshrined in Articles 43 EC and 49 EC and the consequent obligation of transparency do not require the national authorities to terminate a contract or the national courts to grant a restraining order in every case of an alleged breach of that obligation in connection with the award of service concessions. It is for the domestic legal system to regulate the legal procedures for safeguarding the rights which individuals derive from that obligation in such a way that those procedures are no less favourable than similar domestic procedures and do not make the exercise of those rights practically impossible or excessively difficult.

66 The referring court raises, finally, one further question. It considers that a purely judge-made development of the law cannot constitute a protective law giving rise to liability under the German Bürgerliches Gesetzbuch (Civil Code). Only customary law constitutes a rule of law within the meaning of that code. Citing the case-law of the Bundesverfassungsgericht (Federal Constitutional Court), the referring court states that the recognition of customary law requires prolonged usage that is permanent and consistent, equal and general, and is accepted as a binding rule of law by the individuals concerned.

67 In the national court's opinion, however, the obligation of transparency defined in the case-law of the Court is so recent that it cannot be regarded as having the status of customary law, as defined in the preceding paragraph.

68 It must be observed here that the obligation of transparency derives from the law of the European Union, in particular Articles 43 EC and 49 EC (see, to that effect, Coname, paragraphs 17 to 19). Those provisions, whose observance the Court ensures, have direct effect in the domestic legal systems of the Member States and take precedence over any contrary provision of national law.

69 By virtue in particular of Article 4(3) TEU, all the authorities of the Member States must ensure the observance of the rules of European Union law within the sphere of their competence (see, to that effect, Case C–2/06 Kempter [2008] ECR I–411, paragraph 34 and the case-law cited).

70 It is for the national court to interpret the national law which it has to apply, as far as is at all possible, in a manner which accords with the requirements of European Union law and, in particular, ensures that the obligation of transparency is observed (see, to that effect, Case C–327/00 Santex [2003] ECR I–1877, paragraph 63 and the case-law cited).

71 In the light of the foregoing, the answer to Questions 1, 2 and 4 is that the principles of equal treatment and non-discrimination on grounds of nationality enshrined in Articles 43 EC and 49 EC and the consequent obligation of transparency do not require the national authorities to terminate a contract or the national courts to make a restraining order in every case of an alleged breach of that obligation in connection with the award of service concessions. It is for the domestic legal system to regulate the legal procedures for safeguarding the rights which individuals derive from that obligation in such a way that those procedures are no less favourable that similar domestic procedures and do not make the exercise of those rights practically impossible or excessively difficult. The obligation of transparency flows directly from Articles 43 EC and 49 EC, which have direct effect in the domestic legal systems of the Member States and take precedence over any contrary provision of national law.

Costs

72 Since these proceedings are, for the parties to the main proceedings, a step in the action pending before the national court, the decision on costs is a matter for that court. Costs incurred in submitting observations to the Court, other than the costs of those parties, are not recoverable.

On those grounds, the Court (Grand Chamber) hereby rules:

1. Where amendments to the provisions of a service concession contract are materially different in character from those on the basis of which the original concession contract was awarded, and are therefore such as to demonstrate the intention of the parties to renegotiate the essential terms of the contract, all necessary measures must be taken, in accordance with the national legal system of the Member State concerned, to restore the transparency of the procedure, which may extend to a new award procedure. If need be, a new award procedure should be organised in a manner appropriate to the specific features of the service concession involved, and should ensure that an undertaking located in another Member State has access to sufficient information on that concession before it is awarded.

2. Where an undertaking which is the holder of a concession concludes a contract for services within the scope of a concession it has been awarded by a regional or local authority, the obligation of transparency deriving from Articles 43 EC and 49 EC and from the principles of equal treatment and non-discrimination on grounds of nationality does not apply if that undertaking

   – was set up by the regional or local authority for the purpose of waste disposal and street cleaning but also operates in the market,

   – belongs to that regional or local authority to the extent of a 51% holding, but decisions of shareholders can be taken only by a three-quarters majority of votes at a general meeting of the company,

   – has only a quarter of the members of its supervisory board, including the chairman, appointed by the regional or local authority, and

– obtains more than half its turnover from bilateral contracts for waste disposal and street cleaning in the territory of that regional or local authority, which reimburses itself by means of municipal taxes on its residents.

3. The principles of equal treatment and non-discrimination on grounds of nationality enshrined in Articles 43 EC and 49 EC and the consequent obligation of transparency do not require the national authorities to terminate a contract or the national courts to make a restraining order in every case of an alleged breach of that obligation in connection with the award of service concessions. It is for the domestic legal system to regulate the legal procedures for safeguarding the rights which individuals derive from that obligation in such a way that those procedures are no less favourable that similar domestic procedures and do not make the exercise of those rights practically impossible or excessively difficult. The obligation of transparency flows directly from Articles 43 EC and 49 EC, which have direct effect in the domestic legal systems of the Member States and take precedence over any contrary provision of national law.

CONCLUSIONS DE L'AVOCAT GÉNÉRAL
M. YVES Bot
présentées le 27 octobre 2009 (1)

Affaire C–91/08

Wall AG
contre
Stadt Frankfurt am Main,
Frankfurter Entsorgungs- und Service GmbH

[demande de décision préjudicielle formée par le Landgericht Frankfurt am Main (Allemagne)]

1. Par le présent renvoi préjudiciel, le Landgericht Frankfurt am Main (Allemagne) s'interroge, en substance, sur la portée de l'obligation de transparence et sur les conséquences qu'il convient de tirer de sa violation dans le cadre d'une procédure de passation d'une concession de services.

2. Cette demande a été présentée dans le cadre d'un litige opposant l'entreprise Wall AG (2) à la Stadt Frankfurt am Main (ville de Francfort–sur–le–Main) et à l'entreprise Frankfurter Entsorgungs- und Service GmbH (3) au sujet de l'exécution d'une concession pour l'exploitation, la maintenance et l'entretien de toilettes publiques sur le territoire de cette ville.

3. Cette affaire va permettre à la Cour de préciser les conditions dans lesquelles le pouvoir adjudicateur peut consentir à une modification du contrat de concession, au cours de son exécution, sans méconnaître la portée de l'obligation de transparence.

4. Elle va également offrir à la Cour l'opportunité de préciser les conditions dans lesquelles le respect de cette obligation s'impose à une entité à capital mixte constituée dans le cadre d'un partenariat public–privé.

5. Enfin, les questions posées par le Landgericht Frankfurt am Main permettront à la Cour de préciser les modalités du contrôle juridictionnel des décisions qui ont été adoptées dans le cadre des concessions de services. En particulier, la Cour devra examiner si, lorsque la juridiction nationale compétente constate la violation de l'obligation de transparence dans le cadre d'une procédure de passation d'une concession de services, le droit communautaire requiert des États membres qu'ils reconnaissent, dans le chef de leur juridiction nationale, un pouvoir d'injonction à l'égard des parties au contrat.

I – Le cadre juridique communautaire

A – Le droit primaire

6. Le traité CE ne restreint pas la liberté des États membres de conclure des contrats de concession de services pour autant que les modalités d'octroi de ceux–ci soient compatibles avec les dispositions qui instaurent et garantissent le bon fonctionnement du marché unique.

7. Ainsi, comme tout acte étatique fixant les conditions auxquelles une prestation d'activités économiques est subordonnée, l'octroi d'une concession doit respecter les principes consacrés par le traité en matière de droit d'établissement (article 43 CE) et de libre prestation des services (article 49 CE) et doit se soumettre aux règles interdisant toute discrimination en raison de la nationalité (article 12, premier alinéa, CE).

8. L'octroi d'une concession doit, en outre, respecter les principes que la Cour a dégagés sur la base de ces dispositions, et en particulier les principes d'égalité de traitement et de transparence dont nous expliquerons la portée ci–après. Si cette jurisprudence porte notamment sur le contentieux des contrats de marchés publics, il n'en demeure pas moins que les principes qui s'en dégagent ont une portée qui dépasse le simple cadre desdits contrats. Nous partons de la prémisse que ces principes sont également applicables à d'autres situations, et en particulier aux concessions.

B – Le droit dérivé

9. Au stade actuel du droit communautaire, les contrats de concession de services ne font l'objet d'aucune réglementation dérivée (4). Néanmoins, les dispositions adoptées dans le cadre des directives en matière de passation des marchés publics permettent d'apprécier certaines modalités de passation de ce type de contrats.

1. La réglementation relative à la coordination des procédures de passation des marchés publics de services

10. La notion de «pouvoirs adjudicateurs» a tout d'abord été définie à l'article 1er, sous b), de la directive 92/50/CEE (5). Conformément à son huitième considérant, celle–ci s'applique aux «marchés publics de services» (6) et, de ce fait, exclut de son champ d'application les concessions de services. La directive 92/50 vise à supprimer les entraves à la libre circulation des services et des marchandises et tend à protéger les intérêts des opérateurs économiques qui souhaitent offrir des biens ou des services aux pouvoirs adjudicateurs établis dans un autre État membre (7).

11. L'article 1er, sous b), de cette directive définit la notion de «pouvoirs adjudicateurs» comme suit:

Par 'organisme de droit public', on entend tout organisme:

– créé pour satisfaire spécifiquement des besoins d'intérêt général ayant un caractère autre qu'industriel ou commercial

et

– ayant la personnalité juridique

et

– dont soit l'activité est financée majoritairement par l'État, les collectivités territoriales ou d'autres organismes de droit public, soit la gestion est soumise à un contrôle par ces derniers, soit l'organe d'administration, de direction ou de surveillance est composé de membres dont plus de la moitié est désignée par l'État, les collectivités territoriales ou d'autres organismes de droit public.

12. La notion de «concession de services» a ensuite été définie à l'article 1er, paragraphe 4, de la directive 2004/18/CE (8), qui refond l'ensemble des dispositions relatives à la passation des marchés publics de services, de fournitures et de travaux (9).

13. Aux termes de cette disposition, une concession de services est un «contrat présentant les mêmes caractéristiques qu'un marché public de services, à l'exception du fait que la contrepartie de la prestation des services consiste soit uniquement dans le droit d'exploiter le service, soit dans ce droit assorti d'un prix».

14. En outre, cette directive reprend en des termes identiques, à son article 1er, paragraphe 9, la définition de la notion d'«organisme de droit public», visée à l'article 1er, sous b), deuxième alinéa, de la directive 92/50.

2. La directive 89/665/CEE

15. La directive 89/665/CEE (10) permet un accroissement substantiel des garanties de transparence et de non-discrimination dans le cadre de l'ouverture des marchés publics à la concurrence en obligeant les États membres à mettre en place des procédures de recours efficaces et rapides en cas de violation des dispositions des directives «marchés publics» (11). Conformément à l'article 1er de cette directive, ces procédures doivent être accessibles, selon des modalités que les États membres peuvent déterminer, à toute personne ayant ou ayant eu un intérêt à obtenir un marché public déterminé et ayant été ou risquant d'être lésée par une violation alléguée.

16. Compte tenu de la brièveté des procédures de passation des marchés publics, lesdites procédures doivent, conformément à l'article 2 de la directive 89/665, permettre non seulement un traitement urgent des violations alléguées et l'adoption de mesures provisoires, mais également l'annulation des décisions illégales et l'indemnisation des personnes lésées. Cette disposition est rédigée comme suit:

a) de prendre, dans les délais les plus brefs et par voie de référé, des mesures provisoires ayant pour but de corriger la violation alléguée ou d'empêcher d'autres dommages d'être causés aux intérêts concernés, y compris des mesures destinées à suspendre ou à faire suspendre la procédure de passation de marché public en cause ou de l'exécution de toute décision prise par les pouvoirs adjudicateurs;

b) d'annuler ou de faire annuler les décisions illégales […]

c) d'accorder des dommages-intérêts aux personnes lésées par une violation.

6. Les effets de l'exercice des pouvoirs visés au paragraphe 1 sur le contrat qui suit l'attribution d'un marché sont déterminés par le droit national.

[…]»

17. Ainsi que nous l'avons indiqué, la directive 89/665 a été modifiée par la directive 2007/66. Celle-ci tend à renforcer l'efficacité des procédures de recours nationales et précise les cas dans lesquels un contrat conclu en violation des règles de procédure de passation des marchés publics doit être dépourvu d'effets.

3. La directive 80/723/CEE

18. L'article 2 de la directive 80/723/CEE (12) est rédigé dans les termes suivants:

«1. Aux fins de la présente directive, on entend par:

[…]

b) ‘entreprise publique’, toute entreprise sur laquelle les pouvoirs publics peuvent exercer directement ou indirectement une influence dominante du fait de la propriété, de la participation financière ou des règles qui la régissent;

[…]

2. L’influence dominante des pouvoirs publics sur l’entreprise est présumée lorsque, directement ou indirectement, ceux–ci:

a) détiennent la majorité du capital souscrit de l’entreprise ou

b) disposent de la majorité des voix attachées aux parts émises par l’entreprise ou

c) peuvent désigner plus de la moitié des membres de l’organe d’administration, de direction ou de surveillance de l’entreprise.»

II – Les faits et la procédure au principal

19. Nous résumerons de la manière suivante les faits qui semblent pertinents aux fins de notre raisonnement.

20. Le contrat en cause dans la présente affaire est un contrat de concession de services au sens de l’article 1er, paragraphe 4, de la directive 2004/18. Ce contrat a été conclu entre la Stadt Frankfurt am Main qui est considérée, en tant que collectivité territoriale, comme un «pouvoir adjudicateur» au sens de l’article 1er, sous b), de la directive 92/50 et l’entreprise FES. Ledit contrat a pour objet l’exploitation, la maintenance et l’entretien de onze toilettes publiques situées sur le territoire de la Stadt Frankfurt am Main et comporte la reconstruction de deux toilettes publiques situées dans les gares de Rödelheim et de Galluswarte, ce qui constitue des services au sens de l’article 8 et de l’annexe I A de cette directive.

21. Le contrat en cause a été conclu pour une durée de seize ans. FES, qui est l’entrepreneur principal, n’est pas rémunérée par la Stadt Frankfurt am Main, mais perçoit une redevance versée par les usagers et dispose du droit d’exploiter, à titre exclusif, les supports des toilettes à des fins publicitaires. Ce mode de rémunération implique que FES prend en charge le risque d’exploitation des services en question.

23. Dans le cadre de son offre, FES a présenté la requérante comme étant sa sous–traitante en ce qui concerne les prestations publicitaires et la fourniture des modules de toilettes nécessaires à la réalisation des services concédés. Elle s’est notamment prévalue de la renommée mondiale et de l’expertise technique de celle–ci dans ces secteurs. La Stadt Frankfurt am Main a retenu l’offre de FES.

24. À la suite de la conclusion du contrat de concession les 20 et 22 juillet 2004, FES a invité la requérante ainsi que l’intervenante, la Deutsche Städte Medien GmbH (14), à présenter des offres le 5 janvier 2005, pour la fourniture de prestations publicitaires, et le 28 juillet 2005, pour la fourniture de modules de toilettes. Les offres de la requérante ont été écartées.

25. En application de l’article 30, IV, du contrat de concession, FES a demandé à la Stadt Frankfurt am Main de consentir au changement de sous–traitant. Cette dernière n’a présenté aucune objection et a, par ailleurs, précisé que, malgré ce changement, les standards décrits dans le cahier des charges seraient respectés.

26. Devant la juridiction nationale, la requérante reproche à la Stadt Frankfurt am Main d’avoir méconnu l’obligation de transparence en autorisant ledit changement, procédant ainsi à une modification essentielle du contrat de concession conclu avec FES.

III – Le renvoi préjudiciel

27. Le Landgericht Frankfurt am Main a décidé de surseoir à statuer et de poser à la Cour les questions préjudicielles suivantes:

«1) Convient–il d'interpréter le principe d'égalité de traitement et le principe communautaire de non–discrimination en raison de la nationalité, consacrés par les articles 12 [CE], 43 [CE] et 49 [CE], en ce sens que les obligations de transparence en découlant pour les autorités publiques et consistant à ouvrir, pour l'adjudication des concessions de services, la concurrence avec un degré de publicité adéquat et à permettre le contrôle de l'impartialité de la procédure d'adjudication [(15)] imposent que le droit national accorde au soumissionnaire dont l'offre n'a pas été retenue le droit d'obtenir une injonction visant à prévenir une violation imminente de ces obligations et/ou à faire cesser une telle violation?

2) En cas de réponse négative à la première question préjudicielle, les obligations de transparence [susmentionnées] relèvent–elles du droit coutumier des Communautés européennes en ce sens qu'elles sont déjà appliquées de manière durable, permanente, égale et générale, et reconnues comme règles contraignantes par les sujets de droit concernés?

3) Les obligations de transparence mentionnées dans la première question préjudicielle imposent–elles également, lorsqu'il est envisagé de modifier un contrat de concession de services – y compris lorsque cette modification vise à remplacer un sous–traitant précis, sur lequel l'accent a été mis lors du concours –, d'ouvrir à nouveau à la concurrence les négociations y relatives en garantissant un degré de publicité adéquat et, le cas échéant, selon quelles modalités une telle ouverture à la concurrence devrait–elle être réalisée?

4) Les principes et les obligations de transparence mentionnés dans la première question préjudicielle doivent–ils être interprétés en ce sens que, en cas de manquement s'agissant d'une concession de services, le contrat conclu à la suite de ce manquement et visant à créer ou à modifier des obligations d'une durée indéterminée doit être résilié?

5) Convient–il d'interpréter les principes et les obligations de transparence visés dans la première question préjudicielle et l'article 86, paragraphe 1, CE, pris conjointement, le cas échéant, avec l'article 2, paragraphes 1, sous b), et 2, de la directive 80/723 […] et l'article 1er, paragraphe 9, de la directive 2004/18 […], en ce sens qu'une entreprise, en tant qu'entreprise publique ou pouvoir adjudicateur, est liée par ces obligations de transparence lorsque:

– elle a été créée par une collectivité territoriale aux fins de l'élimination des déchets et du nettoyage de la voirie, mais qu'elle est également active sur le marché libre;

– elle appartient à ladite collectivité territoriale à hauteur de 51 %, les décisions de gestion ne pouvant cependant être adoptées qu'à la majorité des trois quarts;

– ladite collectivité territoriale ne nomme qu'un quart des membres du conseil de surveillance de l'entreprise en question, le président du conseil de surveillance compris, et que

– plus de la moitié de son chiffre d'affaires provient de contrats synallagmatiques relatifs à l'élimination des déchets et au nettoyage de la voirie sur le territoire de ladite collectivité territoriale, cette dernière les finançant par les impôts locaux versés par ses administrés?»

28. Des observations écrites et orales ont été fournies par les parties au principal, mais également par la Commission des Communautés européennes, l'Autorité de surveillance de l'Association européenne de libre–échange (AELE) ainsi que six États membres (16).

IV – L'objet des questions préjudicielles

29. Nous débuterons notre étude du présent renvoi préjudiciel par l'examen des troisième et cinquième questions préjudicielles, relatives à la portée de l'obligation de transparence.

30. Par sa troisième question, la juridiction de renvoi demande à la Cour si une telle obligation impose au pouvoir adjudicateur une nouvelle procédure de mise en concurrence lorsque l'entrepreneur principal, auquel la concession a été attribuée, souhaite, pour l'exécution de celle-ci, recourir aux services d'un sous-traitant différent de celui dont il s'est prévalu lors de la remise de son offre. En outre, par sa cinquième question, la juridiction de renvoi se demande si un entrepreneur principal tel que FES, qui est constitué sous la forme d'une entité à capital mixte, peut également être qualifié de «pouvoir adjudicateur» au sens de la directive 92/50, soumis, en tant que tel, au respect de l'obligation de transparence.

31. Après l'examen de ces deux premières questions, nous poursuivrons notre analyse par l'étude des première, deuxième et quatrième questions préjudicielles qui concernent, en substance, les modalités du contrôle juridictionnel des décisions adoptées dans le cadre des concessions de services.

32. Ces trois dernières questions ne sont pertinentes que dans le cas où le juge national considérerait que la Stadt Frankfurt am Main et/ou FES ont compromis la transparence de la procédure en procédant à un changement de sous-traitant au cours de l'exécution du contrat de concession en cause.

V – Analyse

33. Avant d'entamer notre examen, il nous semble important de rappeler les grandes lignes de la jurisprudence relative à l'obligation de transparence. Bien que cette jurisprudence concerne en partie les marchés publics, celle-ci a été élaborée à partir des principes du traité et nous semble donc pertinente pour l'application du droit communautaire aux concessions de services.

A – Les grandes lignes de la jurisprudence relative à l'obligation de transparence

34. Il ressort d'une jurisprudence constante que l'obligation de transparence constitue une expression concrète et spécifique du principe d'égalité de traitement.

35. La Cour considère depuis longtemps que ce principe appartient aux principes fondamentaux du droit communautaire (17) dont le respect s'impose aux États membres dès lors qu'ils agissent dans le champ d'application du droit communautaire. Ledit principe exige que des situations comparables ne soient pas traitées de manière différente, à moins qu'une différenciation ne soit objectivement justifiée (18). Il figure au nombre des droits fondamentaux dont la Cour assure le respect (19).

37. La Cour a eu l'occasion de préciser la portée du principe d'égalité de traitement dans le cadre des marchés publics dans les arrêts Commission/Danemark et Commission/Belgique (21), dont la jurisprudence a ensuite été transposée aux concessions de services (22).

38. Le principe d'égalité de traitement entre les soumissionnaires a pour objectif de favoriser le développement d'une concurrence saine et effective entre les entreprises candidates. Le respect de ce principe doit permettre de garantir une comparaison objective des offres et s'impose à tous les stades de la procédure. Tous les soumissionnaires, indépendamment de leur nationalité, doivent disposer des mêmes chances dans la formulation des termes de leurs offres (23). Autrement dit, les règles du jeu doivent être connues de tous les soumissionnaires potentiels et doivent s'appliquer à tous de la même manière.

39. Selon le juge communautaire, le respect du principe d'égalité de traitement des soumissionnaires implique l'absence de discrimination en raison de la nationalité et une obligation de transparence qui doit permettre à l'autorité publique concédante de s'assurer que ce principe est respecté (24).

40. La Cour a précisé la portée de l'obligation de transparence dans les arrêts précités Telaustria et Telefonadress ainsi que Parking Brixen. Selon le juge communautaire, cette obligation a essentiellement pour but de garantir l'absence de risque de favoritisme et d'arbitraire de la part du pouvoir adjudicateur. Ladite obligation consiste à garantir, en faveur de tous les soumissionnaires potentiels, un degré de publicité adéquat de la procédure d'adjudication permettant ainsi une ouverture à la concurrence et le contrôle de l'impartialité de la procédure. Elle implique également que toutes les conditions et les modalités de la procédure d'attribution soient formulées de manière claire, précise et univoque dans l'avis de marché ou dans le cahier des charges. Cela doit permettre à tous les soumissionnaires raisonnablement informés et normalement diligents d'en comprendre la portée exacte et de les interpréter de la même manière. Cela doit également permettre au pouvoir adjudicateur de vérifier si les offres des soumissionnaires correspondent effectivement aux critères régissant le marché en cause (25).

41. Un examen de la jurisprudence de la Cour démontre le lien étroit existant entre l'obligation de transparence et le principe d'égalité de traitement. La première vise à assurer l'effet utile du second en garantissant les conditions d'une concurrence saine. Puisque le principe d'égalité de traitement constitue, en tant que tel, un principe général du droit communautaire, le respect de l'obligation de transparence qui en constitue une expression concrète et spécifique s'impose aux États membres dans la même mesure.

1. Sur la portée ratione materiæ de l'obligation de transparence

42. Par sa troisième question, la juridiction de renvoi demande à la Cour si l'obligation de transparence impose au pouvoir adjudicateur une nouvelle procédure de mise en concurrence lorsque l'entrepreneur principal, auquel la concession a été attribuée, souhaite, pour l'exécution de celle–ci, ne plus recourir aux services du sous–traitant présenté lors de la remise de l'offre.

43. Pour répondre à cette question, il nous semble important d'examiner la manière selon laquelle l'obligation de transparence doit s'appliquer compte tenu des caractéristiques propres de la concession de services. En effet, celle–ci présente des différences essentielles avec les marchés publics de services dans sa finalité et dans son mode d'exécution.

44. Quel que soit son degré de complexité et de sophistication, un marché public de services s'analyse généralement comme l'achat par une personne publique d'un service et vise une prestation ponctuelle fournie par une entreprise. En revanche, la concession de services est un mode de gestion déléguée d'un service public, par laquelle la personne publique confie à un prestataire extérieur à l'administration la gestion d'une activité d'intérêt général et la responsabilité de celle–ci vis–à–vis des usagers, et ce pour une durée significative. Le pouvoir adjudicateur, que ce soit une collectivité publique ou un organisme de droit public, cesse de gérer le service et transfère la responsabilité de son organisation au concessionnaire (26). Celui–ci exploite le service à ses frais et prend en charge les risques d'exploitation y afférents, sa rémunération étant assurée par la perception d'une redevance versée par les usagers du service.

45. L'application du droit communautaire à ce mode de gestion contractuel d'un service d'intérêt général doit tenir compte de différents impératifs.

46. Au stade de la conclusion du contrat, il est nécessaire de concilier l'obligation de transparence avec la liberté importante dont dispose le pouvoir adjudicateur dans l'appréciation des offres et dans la détermination de celle qui est économiquement la plus avantageuse. L'offre économiquement la plus avantageuse est celle qui apporte la meilleure réponse économique, au sens global du terme, aux besoins exprimés par la collectivité publique, compte tenu des critères qui ont été retenus et de leur pondération. Le pouvoir adjudicateur doit pouvoir choisir le prestataire de services qui, par ses références, la qualité de son offre, la connaissance qu'il a du secteur et la confiance qu'il inspire, paraît lui apporter le maximum de garanties de bonne exécution du service. La spécificité de la concession de services autorise donc un choix du prestataire à partir d'une gamme de critères larges, privilégiant le critère de l'intuitu personæ. Cette liberté de choix ne signifie pas pour autant que l'attribution de la concession doive s'opérer de façon arbitraire et discriminatoire. Afin de prévenir la corruption et d'assurer une meilleure transparence de la vie économique et des procédures publiques, le juge a encadré ladite liberté en se fondant sur les principes régissant les procédures de passation des marchés publics. Ainsi, la liberté de négociation et de décision subsiste, mais elle doit s'exercer dans le respect d'une obligation préalable de publicité et de mise en concurrence permettant une sélection transparente du candidat et assurant une égalité de traitement entre les soumissionnaires (27).

47. Ensuite, au stade de l'exécution du contrat, il est nécessaire de concilier l'obligation de transparence avec l'intérêt du service public, qui exige, dans certaines circonstances, d'adapter et de modifier le contrat.

48. Comme nous l'avons indiqué, le concessionnaire prend en charge l'organisation du service ainsi que les risques d'exploitation y afférents. Compte tenu du caractère complexe et à long terme de la concession de services, le concessionnaire doit disposer de la marge de manœuvre suffisante pour s'adapter aux conditions du marché et aux changements qui peuvent intervenir dans l'environnement économique, technique ou juridique de la concession. Les contraintes imprévisibles et les incidents d'exécution qui sont inévitables dans les investissements de longue durée requièrent donc des parties une flexibilité particulière et un esprit de coopération. Les causes de renégociation des contrats sont donc multiples. Néanmoins, certaines peuvent être une source d'abus si elles conduisent à bouleverser l'économie du contrat, rendant illusoires la transparence de la procédure et la mise en concurrence préalable des soumissionnaires. Il est donc nécessaire d'apprécier si la modification envisagée constitue un simple avenant au contrat, justifié par des motifs légitimes, ou si elle aboutit finalement à la conclusion d'un nouveau contrat qui, conformément aux principes fondamentaux du droit communautaire, doit faire l'objet d'un degré de publicité adéquat et d'une nouvelle procédure de mise en concurrence.

49. Dans un arrêt Commission/France (28), la Cour a jugé que les modifications qui sont apportées à un contrat de marché public, pendant la durée de sa validité, constituent une nouvelle passation de marché lorsqu'elles «présentent des caractéristiques substantiellement différentes par rapport [aux négociations] déjà menées et sont, en conséquence, de nature à démontrer la volonté des parties de renégocier les termes essentiels du contrat» (29).

50. La Cour a précisé la portée de ce motif dans l'arrêt pressetext Nachrichtenagentur (30) en visant quatre hypothèses dans lesquelles ce type de modifications peut être considéré comme substantiel.

51. La première hypothèse est celle dans laquelle la modification introduit des conditions dans le contrat qui, si elles avaient figuré dans la procédure de passation initiale, auraient permis l'admission de soumissionnaires autres que ceux initialement admis ou auraient permis de retenir une offre autre que celle initialement retenue.

52. La deuxième hypothèse est celle dans laquelle la modification étend le marché, dans une mesure importante, à des services qui n'étaient pas initialement prévus.

53. La troisième hypothèse vise une situation dans laquelle la modification change l'équilibre économique du contrat en faveur de l'adjudicataire du marché d'une manière qui n'était pas prévue dans les termes du marché initial.

54. La quatrième hypothèse vise, enfin, la situation dans laquelle un nouveau cocontractant se substitue à celui auquel le pouvoir adjudicateur avait initialement attribué le marché. Cette modification constitue un changement de l'un des termes essentiels du marché public, à moins, selon la Cour, que cette «substitution ait été prévue dans les termes du marché initial, par exemple au titre de la sous-traitance».

55. Ainsi que nous l'avons indiqué, le contrat de concession de services conclu entre la Stadt Frankfurt am Main et FES autorise, à son article 30, IV, le changement de sous-traitant à la condition que le pouvoir adjudicateur consente à celui-ci. En l'occurrence, cette procédure a été respectée.

56. Dans la présente affaire, la question est donc de savoir si, malgré l'existence de cette clause et le respect de la procédure y afférente, le changement de sous-traitant constitue, au sens de la jurisprudence communautaire, une modification de l'un des termes essentiels de la concession de services concernée.

57. Cette appréciation est délicate dans la mesure où la Stadt Frankfurt am Main a elle-même consenti à cette modification en considérant que les standards décrits dans le cahier des charges seraient respectés. Néanmoins, compte tenu des circonstances particulières dans lesquelles ce changement est intervenu, nous pensons que la juridiction nationale doit s'assurer que l'acte par lequel cette collectivité a autorisé cette modification n'aboutit pas à contourner le principe d'égalité de traitement des soumissionnaires et l'obligation de transparence qui en découle.

58. Aux fins de cet examen, il nous semble important de rappeler les termes dans lesquels le concessionnaire peut recourir à la sous-traitance.

59. Compte tenu de la complexité et de la durée des contrats de concession, le concessionnaire peut décider de sous-traiter tout ou partie de l'exécution du contrat conclu avec le maître d'ouvrage. Il est admis que le choix du sous-traitant est un acte discrétionnaire relevant des prérogatives de l'entrepreneur. Cette liberté de choix est le corollaire de la règle selon laquelle le concessionnaire conserve l'entière responsabilité de l'exécution de la concession, le sous-traitant n'étant d'ailleurs lié qu'avec lui par un contrat qui, étant conclu entre deux personnes privées, est de droit privé.

60. Néanmoins, pour être régulière, la sous-traitance doit faire l'objet d'une acceptation par le pouvoir adjudicateur soit à l'occasion de la conclusion du contrat, soit au cours de l'exécution de celui-ci. C'est à cette occasion que le pouvoir adjudicateur vérifie les capacités techniques et économiques du sous-traitant (31).

61. Lorsque le sous-traitant est présenté lors de la remise de l'offre, c'est la notification de la concession qui emporte acceptation du sous-traitant. Généralement, le pouvoir adjudicateur peut refuser d'agréer une entreprise en qualité de sous-traitant lorsque celle-ci est, par exemple, dans une situation irrégulière sur le plan fiscal ou social ou qu'elle ne dispose pas des capacités suffisantes pour mener à bien l'exécution des prestations qui lui sont confiées.

62. La sous-traitance n'est pas limitée à celle annoncée lors de la remise de l'offre. Au cours de l'exécution du contrat, l'entrepreneur principal peut recourir à d'autres sous-traitants ou changer de sous-traitants pour des motifs légitimes tenant, par exemple, à la qualité effective de ses prestations ou à sa situation financière. Cela lui permet d'adapter ses prestations ou de se libérer, conformément aux dispositions du sous-traité, d'une entreprise qui ne donne pas satisfaction.

63. Lorsque le changement de sous-traitant est prévu dans les termes du contrat et que le pouvoir adjudicateur consent lui-même à cette modification, il est, en principe, difficile de soutenir que ce changement modifie, en soi, un terme essentiel de la concession et impose une nouvelle procédure de mise en concurrence.

64. En effet, en donnant son accord, le pouvoir adjudicateur considère que l'identité du sous-traitant n'est pas essentielle au vu de l'objet de la concession et que les prestations confiées à l'entrepreneur principal seront réalisées conformément au cahier des charges, indépendamment de cette modification. Une telle situation peut se rencontrer lorsqu'il existe, sur le marché en cause, de nombreuses entreprises offrant des prestations de nature et de qualité équivalentes.

65. En outre, lorsque le pouvoir adjudicateur prévoit que certaines conditions de l'attribution du contrat peuvent être ajustées après le choix du concessionnaire et qu'il prévoit expressément dans le cahier des charges cette possibilité d'adaptation, de même que ses modalités d'application, alors toutes les entreprises intéressées à participer à la concession en ont connaissance dès le départ et se trouvent ainsi sur un pied d'égalité au moment de formuler leurs offres.

66. Néanmoins, cette modification du contrat de concession peut apparaître critiquable dans une situation telle que celle en cause au principal.

67. En effet, le changement de sous-traitant intervient sans motif légitime, après la conclusion du contrat et avant l'exécution des premières prestations, alors même que le concessionnaire s'est prévalu de la renommée et de l'expertise technique du sous-traitant lors de la remise de son offre.

68. Selon nous, une telle pratique, si elle est admise par le pouvoir adjudicateur, viole l'obligation de transparence et le principe d'égalité de traitement des soumissionnaires. En agissant ainsi, le pouvoir adjudicateur soustrait l'offre de FES, telle qu'elle a été modifiée, à un examen sérieux et transparent des différentes candidatures, ce qui est susceptible de procurer à l'entreprise un avantage injustifié pour l'obtention du contrat.

69. Premièrement, il n'est pas exclu que la Stadt Frankfurt am Main ait préféré une offre autre que celle initialement présentée par FES si celle-ci ne s'était pas prévalue, au titre de la sous-traitance des prestations publicitaires, des nombreuses qualités de la requérante, une «partenaire […] performant[e] et expérimenté[e]», une «spécialiste du domaine publicitaire expérimentée et active dans le monde entier», dont les «produits [sont] modernes et esthétiques» (32).

70. Il ressort clairement de l'ordonnance de renvoi que c'est la présentation de la requérante comme sous-traitante qui a permis à FES d'obtenir le contrat de concession en cause. En effet, le choix en faveur de FES s'est opéré compte tenu de ses prétentions en matière publicitaire puisqu'elle a obtenu, au titre de ce critère d'attribution, 27,3 points, alors que sa principale concurrente, qui est intervenante dans la présente affaire, en a obtenu 20,1. En ce qui concerne les autres critères, la Stadt Frankfurt am Main a accordé autant de points, si ce n'est plus, à l'intervenante. Il résulte donc des documents à notre disposition que la présence de la requérante dans l'offre globale de FES a eu un caractère déterminant dans l'octroi de la concession.

72. Par conséquent, au vu de l'ensemble de ces éléments, tels qu'ils nous apparaissent au travers de l'ordonnance de renvoi, nous pensons que ce changement de sous-traitant intervenu avant même l'exécution des premières prestations et sans qu'il ait été argué de la moindre difficulté d'ordre technique ou financière devait obligatoirement être précédé d'une nouvelle procédure de mise en concurrence. En autorisant un tel changement de sous-traitant sans avoir satisfait aux exigences de publicité et de mise en concurrence requises par le droit communautaire, la Stadt Frankfurt am Main a donc, selon nous, violé l'obligation de transparence.

73. En effet, même si, dans le cadre des concessions, les fonds publics sont effectivement moins engagés que dans le cadre des marchés publics, il n'en reste pas moins que la procédure de passation d'une concession de services doit garantir aux collectivités publiques ainsi qu'aux usagers la meilleure qualité de service, et ce sur la base d'une appréciation sérieuse et transparente des différentes candidatures, respectueuse du principe d'égalité de traitement des soumissionnaires.

74. Si la juridiction de renvoi, au vu de l'ensemble des éléments du dossier, devait confirmer cette analyse des faits, il nous semble qu'elle devrait tirer toutes les conséquences qui s'imposent d'une telle violation.

75. Par conséquent, nous proposons à la Cour de répondre à la juridiction de renvoi que, lorsque, dans le cadre d'une procédure de passation d'une concession de services, l'identité du sous-traitant est un élément essentiel sur lequel le pouvoir adjudicateur s'est fondé pour attribuer la concession, l'obligation de transparence requiert des États membres qu'ils organisent une nouvelle procédure de mise en concurrence lorsque le concessionnaire souhaite procéder à un changement de sous-traitant avant même l'exécution des premières prestations et sans qu'il ait été avancé de raisons légitimes. Il appartient à la juridiction nationale compétente d'apprécier si le nom, la renommée et l'expertise technique du sous-traitant que FES a présenté lors de la remise de son offre ont été un élément essentiel sur lequel la Stadt Frankfurt am Main s'est fondée pour attribuer la concession à cette entreprise.

2. Sur la portée ratione personæ de l'obligation de transparence

76. Par sa cinquième question, la juridiction de renvoi demande si une entreprise telle que FES, eu égard à ses caractéristiques exposées dans la décision de renvoi, doit être considérée comme un «pouvoir adjudicateur» au sens de l'article 1er, sous b), de la directive 92/50 ou comme une «entreprise publique» au sens de l'article 2 de la directive 80/723, qui, en tant que telle, serait soumise au respect de l'obligation de transparence lors de la passation d'une concession de services.

77. La juridiction de renvoi se réfère aux directives susmentionnées dans la mesure où, en ce qui concerne les concessions de services, aucun texte de droit dérivé n'a défini, avec précision, les entités sur lesquelles pèse l'obligation de transparence.

78. Nous pensons que l'absence d'une telle réglementation n'est pas préjudiciable dès lors que les principes qui ont été dégagés sur ce point dans le cadre des marchés publics peuvent, selon nous, être transposés aux concessions de services.

79. En effet, il nous semble important de retenir une définition uniforme de la notion de pouvoir adjudicateur, dans la mesure où cette notion est censée viser l'ensemble des entités publiques susceptibles de confier la prestation d'activités économiques à un tiers, et ce indépendamment du type de contrat conclu, que ce soit dans le domaine des marchés publics ou dans celui des concessions de services publics. À cet égard, il est intéressant de rappeler que le champ d'application de la directive 92/50 est déterminé non pas selon la nature de l'opération en cause, mais selon la personnalité de celui qui la propose, puisque tous les marchés passés par un pouvoir adjudicateur doivent être attribués en conformité avec les principes fixés par cette directive.

80. En revanche, la référence à la notion d'«entreprise publique» visée à l'article 2 de la directive 80/723, relative, nous le rappelons, à la transparence des relations financières entre les États membres et les entreprises publiques, nous semble beaucoup moins pertinente. Compte tenu des éléments que nous allons indiquer dans le cadre de l'examen relatif à la notion d'organisme de droit public, la juridiction nationale pourra néanmoins apprécier, pour le cas où elle l'estimerait nécessaire, si une entreprise telle que FES est susceptible d'être qualifiée d'«entreprise publique» (35).

a) Sur la notion d'«organisme de droit public» au sens de la directive 92/50

81. Avant de rappeler les différentes conditions visées par la directive 92/50 pour qu'une entité soit qualifiée de «pouvoir adjudicateur», il est intéressant de relever, à titre liminaire, que FES est une entreprise d'économie mixte créée dans le cadre d'un partenariat public–privé (36). La Stadt Frankfurt am Main détient 51 % des parts de cette entreprise.

82. Cette affaire offre donc à la Cour l'opportunité de préciser si une telle entité est susceptible de constituer un «organisme de droit public» au sens de la directive 92/50, soumis, en tant que tel, au respect des principes fondamentaux du traité.

83. Avant d'entamer cet examen, il est nécessaire de préciser ce que recouvre la notion de partenariat public–privé.

84. Ce partenariat est un mécanisme associant un capital public normalement majoritaire à un capital privé minoritaire dans une structure juridique en principe soumise aux règles communes du droit commercial. Les partenaires publics et privés établissent ainsi une entité à capital mixte, qui peut prendre la forme d'une société d'économie mixte, en mesure d'exécuter des marchés publics ou de prendre en charge, dans le cadre d'une concession, un service public local. Ainsi que l'a relevé la Commission dans une communication récente (37), la caractéristique de cette coopération, le plus souvent à long terme, est le rôle dévolu au partenaire privé qui participe aux différentes phases du projet en cause (conception, exécution et exploitation), supporte des risques traditionnellement pris en charge par le secteur public et contribue souvent au financement du projet (38).

85. Il n'en reste pas moins que cette entité à capital mixte ne constitue pas, au sens de la jurisprudence de la Cour, une structure de gestion «interne» d'un service de la collectivité publique. Ainsi, lorsque le pouvoir adjudicateur attribue un marché public ou une concession à ce type d'entité, il doit respecter l'ensemble des règles applicables aux marchés publics et aux concessions, qu'elles découlent du traité ou du droit dérivé (39).

86. Il convient, à présent, d'examiner les différentes conditions visées à l'article 1er, sous b), de la directive 92/50 pour qu'une entité soit qualifiée d'«organisme de droit public».

87. Aux termes de l'article 1er, sous b), deuxième alinéa, de la directive 92/50, un organisme de droit public est un organisme qui doit être doté de la personnalité juridique, avoir été créé pour satisfaire spécifiquement des besoins d'intérêt général qui sont dépourvus de caractère industriel ou commercial et dont les activités, le financement ou les organes de direction sont sous la dépendance étroite de l'État, d'une collectivité territoriale ou d'un autre organisme de droit public.

88. Ainsi que la Cour l'a jugé de manière constante, ces trois conditions ont un caractère cumulatif de sorte que, en l'absence d'une seule de ces conditions, un organisme ne saurait être qualifié d'«organisme de droit public» et, partant, de «pouvoir adjudicateur» au sens de la directive 92/50 (40).

89. En outre, eu égard à l'objectif que poursuivent les directives en matière de passation des marchés publics, la Cour considère que la notion d'organisme de droit public doit recevoir une interprétation fonctionnelle (41).

b) Sur l'examen des éléments constitutifs d'un organisme de droit public 90. En l'occurrence, la personnalité juridique de FES n'est pas contestée. Les doutes portent sur les deux autres exigences établies par la directive 92/50.

i) Sur la vocation de FES à satisfaire spécifiquement des besoins d'intérêt général dépourvus de caractère industriel ou commercial

91. Il est constant, tout d'abord, que FES a bien été créée pour satisfaire spécifiquement des besoins d'intérêt général (42), puisqu'elle est chargée, depuis son origine, de la gestion et de l'élimination des déchets ainsi que du nettoyage urbain sur le territoire de la Stadt Frankfurt am Main (43). Ces activités relèvent indéniablement de l'intérêt général. Ainsi que l'a déjà jugé la Cour dans l'arrêt BFI Holding (44), ces besoins font partie de ceux qui ne peuvent pas être totalement satisfaits par des entreprises privées dans la mesure où ils sont jugés nécessaires pour des raisons de santé publique et de protection de l'environnement, motif pour lequel l'État entend conserver à leur égard une influence déterminante (45).

92. Il importe maintenant de vérifier si de tels besoins d'intérêt général ont un caractère autre qu'industriel ou commercial. Cette question est, en revanche, plus délicate.

93. Il existe une jurisprudence abondante sur la manière dont il convient d'apprécier l'existence de ces besoins (46). Selon la Cour, il est nécessaire de prendre en compte un ensemble d'éléments juridiques et factuels qui peuvent s'avérer pertinents, tels que les circonstances qui ont pu présider à la création de l'organisme concerné ou les conditions dans lesquelles il exerce son activité. À cet égard, la Cour précise qu'il importe de vérifier si cet organisme exerce ses activités dans des conditions normales de marché (47). À cette fin, la Cour examine la situation de la concurrence sur le marché des produits et des services pour lesquels ledit organisme a été créé. Si l'existence d'une concurrence peut constituer un indice du fait qu'un besoin d'intérêt général revêt un caractère industriel ou commercial, cet indice n'est pas suffisant (48). Il est encore nécessaire d'examiner si l'organisme poursuit un but lucratif, s'il supporte les pertes liées à l'exercice de son activité et s'il bénéficie d'un financement public pour l'exercice de l'activité en cause (49).

94. Nous ne disposons pas d'éléments suffisants dans le dossier pour apprécier avec justesse l'ensemble de ces circonstances. C'est à la juridiction de renvoi, qui seule possède une connaissance approfondie du dossier, qu'il appartiendra de les examiner. Nous indiquons néanmoins quelques éléments utiles.

95. En ce qui concerne les circonstances ayant présidé à la création de cet organisme, il nous semble important de tenir compte des particularités du marché de la collecte et du traitement des déchets qui est l'une des activités pour lesquelles FES a été créée.

96. Le marché de la collecte et du traitement des déchets a connu un essor considérable, en particulier avec le durcissement du cadre normatif relatif à la gestion, à la valorisation des déchets et à la prévention des nuisances pour l'environnement. Ce durcissement a eu pour conséquence directe d'augmenter les coûts de la collecte et du traitement des déchets, tout en rendant l'activité plus complexe et plus technique. Face à ces contraintes, les collectivités locales ont, pour une grande majorité d'entre elles, choisi de déléguer cette activité à des entreprises spécialisées qui ont pu profiter pleinement du développement de ce marché.

97. Ces éléments nous amènent à penser que la création de cette entité n'a donc pas été motivée par la recherche de bénéfices. Si ladite activité engendre, en réalité, des bénéfices importants, il n'en reste pas moins que la recherche de ces bénéfices ne constituait pas, en tous les cas, l'objectif principal de la création de FES. Lesdits éléments valent a fortiori pour les activités de nettoyage urbain, qui, contrairement aux activités de collecte et de traitement des déchets, donnent lieu à une valorisation moindre.

98. En ce qui concerne les conditions dans lesquelles FES exerce son activité, et en particulier l'état de la concurrence dans les secteurs de la collecte et du traitement des déchets ainsi que du nettoyage urbain, le juge de renvoi devrait examiner si FES évolue dans un marché concurrentiel sur lequel exercent de véritables concurrents ou si elle se trouve, au contraire, dans une situation de quasi-monopole de fait tenant, par exemple, à son statut d'«opérateur historique» (50) ou à l'existence de barrières à l'entrée sur le marché. L'absence de concurrence réelle n'est pas une condition nécessaire aux fins de la qualification de FES en tant qu'organisme de droit public, mais elle pourrait constituer un indice au soutien du fait que FES participe à la satisfaction d'un besoin d'intérêt général dépourvu de caractère industriel ou commercial.

99. En outre, le fait que FES accomplisse, outre sa mission d'intérêt général, d'autres activités lucratives n'est pas pertinent pour la solution du litige au principal. En effet, la Cour juge que la qualité d'organisme de droit public ne dépend pas de l'importance relative de la satisfaction de besoins d'intérêt général ayant un caractère autre qu'industriel ou commercial dans l'activité de l'organisme concerné. Si l'entreprise continue à se charger de ces besoins, alors la Cour juge sans pertinence le fait que l'entreprise exerce d'autres activités lucratives, et ce quelle que soit la part de ces activités dans le chiffre d'affaires global de l'entreprise (51).

100. Par ailleurs, si FES présente sur le plan juridique peu de différences avec une société anonyme détenue par des opérateurs privés dans la mesure où elle supporte les risques économiques liés à son activité et peut également être déclarée en faillite, il ressort de l'ordonnance de renvoi que la Stadt Frankfurt am Main ne permettrait pas qu'une telle situation se produise. Nous relevons, en outre, que cette collectivité perçoit auprès de ses administrés une taxe communale afin de financer les paiements versés à FES pour l'élimination des déchets et le nettoyage de la voirie.

101. Au vu de ces éléments, nous serions donc enclin à penser que FES a été créée pour satisfaire spécifiquement des besoins d'intérêt général dépourvus de caractère industriel ou commercial.

102. Néanmoins, afin de cerner la nature exacte des besoins pris en charge par cette entreprise, c'est à la juridiction de renvoi, qui seule dispose des éléments pertinents, qu'il appartient d'apprécier les conditions dans lesquelles FES exerce son activité et, en particulier, l'état de la concurrence dans les secteurs pour lesquels cette entreprise a été créée.

ii) Sur la condition relative à une dépendance étroite de l'organisme à l'égard de l'État, d'une collectivité territoriale ou d'autres organismes de droit public 103. Nous rappelons que, aux termes de l'article 1er, sous b), deuxième alinéa, troisième tiret, de la directive 92/50, cette condition vise les trois critères alternatifs suivants:

– soit l'activité est financée majoritairement par l'État, les collectivités territoriales ou d'autres organismes de droit public,

– soit la gestion est soumise à un contrôle par ces derniers, – soit l'organe d'administration, de direction ou de surveillance est composé de membres dont plus de la moitié est désignée par l'État, les collectivités territoriales ou d'autres organismes de droit public.

104. Il est constant que la Stadt Frankfurt am Main détient 51 % du capital de FES, soit la majorité de celui-ci. Si cette détention peut effectivement faire présumer d'une influence dominante de la collectivité publique sur l'entreprise, il n'est pas évident que cette influence se traduise dans les modalités de fonctionnement et de gestion de celle-ci.

105. Nous examinerons, tout d'abord, les modalités de gestion de cette entreprise dans la mesure où la Stadt Frankfurt am Main dispose d'un droit de veto à l'assemblée générale, qui, selon les modalités dans lesquelles il est exercé, est susceptible de conférer à la collectivité un contrôle de fait de la gestion de l'entreprise.

– Sur le critère relatif au contrôle de gestion de l'organisme concerné

106. En vertu d'une jurisprudence constante, ce critère vise le cas dans lequel un organisme se trouve dans une situation de dépendance à l'égard des pouvoirs publics, équivalente à celle qui existe lorsqu'un des deux autres critères alternatifs est rempli. Cette dépendance doit permettre aux pouvoirs publics d'influencer les décisions de cet organisme en matière de marchés publics (52) ou, par analogie, en matière de concessions.

107. L'arrêt Adolf Truley, précité, constitue une illustration des cas dans lesquels la Cour juge que ce critère est satisfait. Dans cette affaire, l'office de contrôle de la collectivité publique était habilité à vérifier non seulement le bilan annuel de l'organisme concerné, mais également sa gestion en cours, sous l'angle de l'exactitude des chiffres, de la régularité, de la recherche d'économies, de la rentabilité et de la rationalité. Cet office était par ailleurs autorisé à visiter les locaux d'exploitation et les installations de cet organisme et pouvait rapporter les résultats de ces contrôles aux organes compétents ainsi qu'aux actionnaires de la société et à la collectivité. Selon la Cour, de telles prérogatives permettaient donc un contrôle actif de la collectivité publique sur la gestion dudit organisme.

108. Dans le cadre de la présente affaire, la juridiction de renvoi doit tenir compte de l'ensemble des circonstances de fait ou de droit qui pourrait permettre à la Stadt Frankfurt am Main d'exercer une influence déterminante sur l'activité de FES. En l'occurrence, nous pensons qu'elle devrait s'intéresser aux modalités dans lesquelles cette collectivité exerce à l'assemblée générale de cette entreprise le droit de veto qui est attaché à son actionnariat majoritaire. À cet égard, la juridiction de renvoi doit examiner l'importance de ce droit en prenant en considération les décisions sur lesquelles il peut être appliqué et en examinant les éventuelles conditions restrictives à son utilisation.

109. En effet, si la collectivité ne peut pas imposer de décisions (53), il n'en reste pas moins qu'elle peut exercer un contrôle exclusif de FES si elle est en mesure de s'opposer aux décisions stratégiques de l'entreprise relatives à la politique commerciale de celle–ci, à la nomination des administrateurs, au budget ou au plan d'entreprise. Si la juridiction de renvoi démontre que la Stadt Frankfurt am Main peut, en exerçant son droit de veto, s'opposer à des décisions capitales pour la stratégie commerciale de FES et créer une situation de blocage du processus décisionnel de cette entreprise, alors la Stadt Frankfurt am Main dispose d'une influence déterminante sur la gestion de FES et, par conséquent, d'un contrôle de fait.

110. Dans ces conditions, afin de cerner la mesure exacte dans laquelle la gestion de FES est contrôlée par la Stadt Frankfurt am Main, il appartient à la juridiction de renvoi d'apprécier si la collectivité publique peut exercer une influence déterminante sur la gestion de l'entreprise à travers le droit de veto qui lui est reconnu en tant qu'actionnaire majoritaire.

111. Au cas où le juge de renvoi estimerait que ce droit de veto ne permet pas à la Stadt Frankfurt am Main de contrôler la gestion de cette entreprise, il lui appartiendra d'examiner les deux autres critères.

– Sur le critère relatif au financement majoritaire par la collectivité territoriale

112. La Cour a précisé la portée de cette condition dans l'arrêt University of Cambridge, précité. Selon elle, seules les prestations qui financent ou soutiennent, au moyen d'une aide financière versée sans contre-prestation spécifique, les activités de l'entité concernée peuvent être qualifiées de «financement public». En revanche, les sommes que verse un pouvoir adjudicateur en contrepartie de prestations contractuelles ne relèvent pas de cette catégorie (54).

113. La Cour a également indiqué que le terme «majoritairement» doit être interprété comme signifiant «plus de la moitié» et que l'appréciation de ce pourcentage de financement public doit porter sur l'ensemble des revenus dont bénéficie l'organisme en question, y compris ceux résultant d'une activité commerciale, et que le calcul doit être opéré sur une base annuelle.

114. En l'occurrence, il ressort de l'ordonnance de renvoi que plus de la moitié du chiffre d'affaires annuel de FES provient des contrats synallagmatiques conclus avec la Stadt Frankfurt am Main pour la collecte et le traitement des déchets ainsi que pour le nettoyage urbain. Les sommes que verse cette collectivité sont donc la contrepartie des prestations contractuelles offertes par FES et ladite collectivité a bien entendu un intérêt économique à l'accomplissement de celles-ci. Si une telle relation contractuelle peut effectivement entraîner une dépendance de FES par rapport à la collectivité, cette dépendance a, selon la Cour, une autre nature que celle qui résulte d'une simple prestation de soutien et doit être assimilée à celle existant dans le cadre de relations commerciales normales (55).

115. Au vu de ces éléments, il nous semble que les versements effectués par la Stadt Frankfurt am Main à FES ne constituent donc pas un financement public au sens de la jurisprudence précitée.

– Sur le critère relatif à la composition de l'organe d'administration, de direction ou de surveillance

116. L'ordonnance de renvoi ne précise pas la composition et le mode de désignation des membres du conseil d'administration et des membres de la direction de FES. La juridiction de renvoi nous indique seulement que la Stadt Frankfurt am Main nomme un quart des membres du conseil de surveillance, ainsi que le président de celui-ci qui dispose, en cas d'égalité des votes, d'une voix prépondérante (56). Cela n'est donc pas suffisant pour permettre de satisfaire ce critère.

117. Au vu de l'ensemble de ces éléments, nous pensons qu'une entité à capital mixte, telle que FES, créée dans le cadre d'un partenariat avec la Stadt Frankfurt am Main, constitue un «organisme de droit public» au sens de l'article 1er, sous b), deuxième alinéa, de la directive 92/50 lorsqu'il est démontré, d'une part, que cette entité satisfait à des besoins d'intérêt général qui sont dépourvus de caractère industriel ou commercial et, d'autre part, que sa gestion et sa direction sont sous la dépendance étroite de la collectivité publique.

120. Par ses première et quatrième questions, le Landgericht Frankfurt am Main interroge la Cour sur les modalités du contrôle juridictionnel des décisions qui ont été adoptées dans le cadre des concessions de services. En particulier, la juridiction de renvoi se demande si, dans des circonstances telles que celles en cause au principal, le droit communautaire requiert des États membres qu'ils reconnaissent, dans le chef de leur juridiction nationale, un pouvoir d'injonction à l'égard des parties qui ont conclu un contrat de concession en violation de l'obligation de transparence.

121. Dans la présente affaire, la requérante ne conteste pas la décision par laquelle la Stadt Frankfurt am Main a attribué la concession de services à FES. En revanche, elle conteste la décision par laquelle l'administration a autorisé, sur le fondement de l'article 30, IV, du contrat de concession, le changement de sous-traitant au cours de l'exécution de ce contrat. Selon la requérante, en agissant ainsi, la Stadt Frankfurt am Main aurait méconnu l'obligation de transparence en procédant à une modification essentielle dudit contrat sans avoir satisfait aux exigences de publicité et de mise en concurrence requises par le droit communautaire.

122. Ce contentieux ne vise donc pas la formation du contrat de concession, mais son exécution.

Par son action, la requérante demande au juge national de prévenir une nouvelle violation de l'obligation de transparence en enjoignant à l'administration de ne pas autoriser de changement de sous-traitant en ce qui concerne la fourniture et l'entretien des toilettes publiques qui devront être installées dans les gares de Kornmarkt, de Galluswarte et de Rödelheim. De la même façon, elle lui demande d'enjoindre à FES de ne pas conclure de nouveau contrat de sous-traitance portant sur les prestations susvisées. Afin de régulariser les conditions d'exécution de la concession de services, la requérante demande également au juge national d'enjoindre à l'administration et, le cas échéant, à FES de résilier les contrats conclus en violation de l'obligation de transparence.

123. Afin de répondre aux questions posées par le juge de renvoi, il est nécessaire de rappeler les termes dans lesquels la juridiction nationale est tenue d'assurer la protection des droits que les justiciables tirent du droit communautaire.

1. Remarques liminaires

125. Le principe de primauté du droit communautaire commande aux États membres de sanctionner de façon effective les manquements à l'obligation de transparence commis dans le cadre d'une procédure de passation d'une concession de services.

126. En effet, nous rappelons que l'obligation de transparence constitue une expression concrète et spécifique d'un principe général de droit dont le respect s'impose aux États membres dès lors qu'ils agissent dans le champ d'application du droit communautaire. Une telle obligation crée, dans le chef des justiciables, des droits qui doivent pouvoir faire l'objet d'une protection juridictionnelle effective de la part du juge national. Ce dernier doit donc être en mesure de garantir la pleine exécution de sa décision de justice et doit pouvoir adopter des sanctions effectives, proportionnées et dissuasives afin d'assurer la pleine efficacité du droit communautaire.

127. Cela est notre postulat de départ.

128. En revanche, en l'absence de réglementation communautaire, nous pensons qu'il est conforme au principe de l'autonomie procédurale des États membres de laisser à ces derniers le soin de fixer les pouvoirs dont doit disposer le juge national pour assurer l'exécution de ses décisions juridictionnelles et sanctionner les violations à l'obligation de transparence lors de la passation d'un contrat de concession. Un tel renvoi aux règles de procédure nationales des États membres qui devraient, bien entendu, respecter les principes d'équivalence et d'effectivité, nous semble plus conforme à la jurisprudence constante de la Cour qui est respectueuse de l'autonomie procédurale des États membres.

129. Il résulte de cette jurisprudence que, en l'absence de réglementation communautaire, il appartient à l'ordre juridique interne de chaque État membre de désigner les juridictions compétentes et de régler les modalités procédurales des recours en justice destinés à assurer la sauvegarde des droits que les justiciables tirent du droit communautaire, étant entendu que ces modalités ne sauraient être moins favorables que celles concernant des recours similaires de nature interne (principe d'équivalence) ni rendre en pratique impossible ou excessivement difficile l'exercice des droits conférés par l'ordre juridique communautaire (principe d'effectivité) (57).

130. C'est à la lumière de ces considérations qu'il y a lieu de répondre aux questions posées par la juridiction de renvoi.

2. Appréciation

131. Par ses première, deuxième et quatrième questions, la juridiction de renvoi demande, en substance, à la Cour si l'obligation de transparence doit être interprétée en ce sens que les États membres sont tenus de reconnaître au juge national un pouvoir d'injonction à l'égard des parties à un litige, afin d'assurer le respect de cette obligation. La juridiction de renvoi interroge également la

Cour sur le point de savoir si le juge national est tenu d'enjoindre aux parties de résilier le contrat conclu en violation de ladite obligation (58).

132. Le pouvoir d'injonction est la possibilité donnée au juge d'enjoindre à une partie de faire ou de ne pas faire tel acte qu'il détermine, éventuellement sous la sanction d'une astreinte. Le juge saisi d'un litige peut ainsi donner l'ordre à un particulier ou à l'administration de prendre une mesure dans un sens déterminé lorsque le jugement implique nécessairement que l'une des parties au litige prenne cette mesure. Ce pouvoir constitue un instrument utile pour assurer l'exécution des décisions de justice et pour faire face aux difficultés et au refus d'exécution de la chose jugée.

133. Le principe selon lequel le juge national peut adresser une injonction ne fait l'objet d'aucune réglementation communautaire à l'heure actuelle. En outre, ce principe n'est pas appliqué de façon uniforme dans les États membres, notamment lorsque l'injonction est adressée à l'administration.

135. Comme nous l'avons indiqué, en l'état actuel du droit communautaire, c'est dans le cadre de leur ordre juridique interne et conformément aux principes d'effectivité et d'équivalence que les États membres doivent déterminer la nécessité et, le cas échéant, les conditions dans lesquelles le pouvoir d'injonction doit être reconnu. Dans cette mesure, les États membres doivent se fonder sur les principes qui sont à la base de leur système juridictionnel national. Ils doivent examiner la mesure dans laquelle ce pouvoir d'injonction s'insère dans l'ensemble des voies de droit existantes et doivent tenir compte des pouvoirs qui sont déjà conférés au juge national. Dans le cadre de cette appréciation, les États membres doivent être soucieux de garantir la pleine exécution des décisions de justice qui ont été rendues quant à l'existence des droits invoqués sur le fondement du droit communautaire. En poursuivant cet objectif, les États membres doivent tendre à garantir la pleine efficacité du droit communautaire et à assurer la protection des droits qu'il confère aux justiciables.

136. À cet égard, enjoindre la résiliation du contrat, si elle n'est pas commandée par le droit communautaire, peut apparaître comme la sanction la mieux à même d'assurer l'efficacité du droit communautaire et la protection des droits des justiciables. Cela peut notamment être le cas lorsqu'il s'agit d'une violation particulièrement grave des dispositions du droit communautaire, comme celles exigeant une publicité adéquate ou une mise en concurrence préalable des soumissionnaires. À cet égard, nous pouvons nous inspirer des dispositions que le législateur communautaire a adoptées dans ce cadre, à l'article 2 quinquies inséré par la directive 2007/06 (60).

137. Dans son ordonnance de renvoi, le Landgericht Frankfurt am Main soutient que la Stadt Frankfurt am Main était tenue de résilier le contrat de concession de services à la modification duquel elle avait consenti.

138. Pour soutenir son point de vue, la juridiction de renvoi fait valoir que les principes dégagés par le législateur communautaire à l'article 2 de la directive 89/665 et réaffirmés par la Cour dans l'arrêt Commission/Allemagne (61) sont applicables par analogie aux procédures de passation des concessions de services.

139. Dans cet arrêt, la Cour, saisie sur le fondement de l'article 228 CE, a condamné la République fédérale d'Allemagne pour ne pas avoir résilié un contrat relatif à l'élimination des déchets de la ville de Brunswick (Allemagne), conclu en méconnaissance de la directive 92/50. La République fédérale d'Allemagne s'est fondée sur les dispositions de l'article 2, paragraphe 6, second alinéa, de la directive 89/665 pour soutenir que les réparations dont pouvaient bénéficier les entreprises lésées suffisaient à sanctionner le manquement commis par le pouvoir adjudicateur. La Cour n'a pas suivi ce raisonnement. Selon elle, cette disposition règle le rapport existant entre un État membre et ses ressortissants, mais elle ne règle pas la relation entre un État membre et la Communauté et ne permet donc pas à celui–ci d'échapper à sa propre responsabilité en droit communautaire. En maintenant les effets du contrat en cause, le manquement de la République fédérale d'Allemagne a donc perduré et l'atteinte à la libre prestation des services risquait de subsister pendant toute la durée d'exécution de celui–ci. Selon la Cour, la résiliation du contrat s'imposait donc non seulement pour garantir la pleine exécution d'un arrêt constatant un manquement, mais également pour assurer le respect du droit communautaire.

140. Contrairement à la juridiction de renvoi, nous ne pensons pas que les principes dégagés dans le cadre du contentieux des marchés publics soient purement et simplement transposables au contentieux des concessions de services, et ce pour deux raisons.

141. Premièrement, nous rappelons que les États membres n'ont pas souhaité légiférer en ce qui concerne la procédure de passation des concessions de services, et ce contrairement aux nombreux textes qui ont été adoptés dans le cadre de la passation des marchés publics. Nous ne pouvons donc pas faire fi de l'absence de réglementation communautaire en la matière et appliquer, par analogie, les règles précises et contraignantes visées dans la directive 89/665.

142. Deuxièmement, il nous semble délicat d'apprécier de la même façon les conséquences qu'il convient de tirer d'un manquement à l'obligation de transparence selon qu'il s'agit d'un marché public ou d'une concession de services publics. En effet, dans le cas de cette dernière, les sanctions ne doivent pas avoir seulement pour objet d'assurer le respect de la légalité ou de sanctionner un comportement fautif du pouvoir adjudicateur. Elles ont aussi et peut-être surtout pour objet d'assurer le bon fonctionnement des services publics et de préserver l'intérêt général à la satisfaction duquel le contrat concourt.

143. Ainsi, l'injonction, si elle doit notamment assurer la pleine efficacité du droit communautaire, devrait pouvoir faire l'objet d'une appréciation au cas par cas par le juge national. L'objet de celle-ci devrait être apprécié compte tenu de tous les aspects pertinents d'une affaire, tels que le comportement du pouvoir adjudicateur, la nature de l'illégalité commise et l'ensemble des intérêts susceptibles d'être lésés, en particulier l'intérêt général.

144. Dans le cadre de la présente affaire, le principe selon lequel le juge national peut adresser une injonction est acquis en Allemagne. Il ressort de l'ordonnance de renvoi que le juge national peut exercer ce pouvoir en vertu de l'article 1004, paragraphe 1, du code civil allemand (Bürgerliches Gesetzbuch, ci-après le «BGB») (62), dans deux types de situations:

– lorsqu'une personne est lésée en raison d'une atteinte à des intérêts protégés par la loi, tels que la vie, l'intégrité corporelle et la personnalité, la santé, la liberté et la propriété, ou

– lorsqu'une personne est lésée en raison de la violation d'une «loi visant à protéger autrui» au sens de l'article 823, paragraphe 2, du BGB.

145. Dans le cadre du présent litige, il incombera au juge de renvoi de vérifier si le droit procédural national, et, en l'occurrence, l'article 823, paragraphe 2, du BGB, permet à la juridiction compétente d'adresser à l'administration une injonction lorsque celle-ci a violé l'obligation de transparence et de lui enjoindre de résilier le contrat conclu avec FES et de ne plus consentir à un changement de sous-traitant (63).

146. À cette fin, il lui appartiendra, premièrement, d'apprécier si cette obligation constitue, au sens de ladite disposition, une «loi visant à protéger autrui». Ainsi que l'a expliqué le juge de renvoi dans les motifs de sa deuxième question préjudicielle, tel sera le cas si ladite obligation constitue un principe du droit coutumier.

148. Si la juridiction de renvoi considère que l'obligation de transparence constitue bien, au sens de l'article 823, paragraphe 2, du BGB, une «loi visant à protéger autrui», celle-ci devra alors s'assurer que les conditions dans lesquelles le juge national peut adresser une injonction en cas de violation de l'obligation de transparence sont équivalentes à celles prévues dans le cadre d'un litige fondé sur la méconnaissance du droit interne. Il lui appartiendra également de s'assurer que ces modalités ne rendent pas pratiquement impossible ou excessivement difficile l'exercice des droits conférés par l'ordre juridique communautaire.

149. Dans le cadre du présent litige, l'objectif est de garantir la pleine efficacité du droit communautaire en sanctionnant de façon effective les manquements à l'obligation de transparence et en prévenant une violation imminente de celle-ci par une nouvelle application abusive de la clause de sous-traitance figurant à l'article 30, IV, du contrat de concession.

150. C'est compte tenu de cet objectif qu'il appartiendra au juge de renvoi d'apprécier s'il y a lieu d'enjoindre à la Stadt Frankfurt am Main et, le cas échéant, à FES de résilier les contrats conclus en violation du droit communautaire. À cet égard et ainsi qu'il ressort de l'ordonnance de renvoi, le Landgericht Frankfurt am Main soutient que la violation de l'obligation de transparence est susceptible de constituer un motif sérieux de résiliation du contrat de concession, au sens de l'article 314 du BGB (65).

151. C'est également compte tenu de cet objectif qu'il lui appartiendra d'apprécier s'il y a lieu d'enjoindre à l'administration ainsi qu'à FES de ne pas procéder, dans des circonstances telles que celles du litige au principal, à un changement de sous–traitant en ce qui concerne la fourniture et l'entretien des toilettes publiques qui devront être installées dans les gares de Kornmarkt, de Galluswarte et de Rödelheim.

152. Par conséquent, nous proposons à la Cour de répondre à la juridiction de renvoi que, lorsque la juridiction nationale compétente constate la violation de l'obligation de transparence dans le cadre d'une procédure de passation d'une concession de services, le droit communautaire, en l'état actuel, ne requiert pas des États membres la reconnaissance au profit de cette juridiction d'un pouvoir d'injonction à l'égard des parties au litige. Il appartient à l'ordre juridique interne de chacun des États membres de définir, en conformité avec les principes communautaires d'équivalence et d'effectivité, les modalités procédurales permettant au juge national compétent d'assurer la pleine efficacité du droit communautaire et la pleine exécution de la décision de justice qui a été rendue quant à l'existence des droits invoqués sur le fondement de celui-ci.

VI – Conclusion

153. Au vu des considérations qui précèdent, nous proposons à la Cour de répondre de la manière suivante aux questions préjudicielles posées par le Landgericht Frankfurt am Main:

«1) Lorsque, dans le cadre d'une procédure de passation d'une concession de services, l'identité du sous–traitant est un élément essentiel sur lequel le pouvoir adjudicateur s'est fondé pour attribuer la concession, l'obligation de transparence requiert des États membres qu'ils organisent une nouvelle procédure de mise en concurrence lorsque le concessionnaire souhaite procéder à un changement de sous–traitant avant même l'exécution des premières prestations et sans qu'il ait été avancé de raisons légitimes. Il appartient à la juridiction nationale compétente d'apprécier si le nom, la renommée et l'expertise technique du sous–traitant que la Frankfurter Entsorgungs- und Service GmbH a présenté lors de la remise de son offre ont été un élément essentiel sur lequel la Stadt Frankfurt am Main s'est fondée pour attribuer la concession à cette entreprise.

2) Une entité à capital mixte, telle que la Frankfurter Entsorgungs- und Service GmbH, créée dans le cadre d'un partenariat avec la Stadt Frankfurt am Main, constitue un 'organisme de droit public' au sens de l'article 1er, sous b), de la directive 92/50/CEE du Conseil, du 18 juin 1992, portant coordination des procédures de passation des marchés publics de services, telle que modifiée par la directive 2001/78/CE de la Commission, du 13 septembre 2001, lorsqu'il est démontré, d'une part, que cette entité satisfait à des besoins d'intérêt général qui sont dépourvus de caractère industriel ou commercial et, d'autre part, que sa gestion et sa direction sont sous la dépendance étroite de la collectivité publique.

Ladite entité répond à des besoins d'intérêt général au sens de l'article 1er, sous b), deuxième alinéa, premier tiret, de la directive 92/50, telle que modifiée, lorsqu'elle se charge de la collecte et du traitement des déchets ainsi que du nettoyage urbain sur le territoire de la collectivité publique. Afin d'évaluer si ces besoins sont dépourvus de caractère industriel ou commercial, il appartiendra à la juridiction nationale compétente d'apprécier les conditions dans lesquelles la Frankfurter Entsorgungs- und Service GmbH exerce son activité et, en particulier, l'état de la concurrence dans ces secteurs.

Une telle entité est sous la dépendance étroite de la collectivité publique au sens de l'article 1er, sous b), deuxième alinéa, troisième tiret, de la directive 92/50, telle que modifiée, lorsque sa gestion et ses organes de direction, d'administration ou de surveillance sont contrôlés par cette dernière. Afin de cerner la mesure exacte dans laquelle la gestion de la Frankfurter Entsorgungs- und Service GmbH est contrôlée par la Stadt Frankfurt am Main, il appartiendra à la juridiction nationale compétente d'apprécier si la collectivité publique peut, à travers le droit de veto dont elle dispose à l'assemblée générale ou à travers la composition desdits organes de l'entreprise, assurer un contrôle actif sur la gestion de cette entité et influencer, de la même manière, ses décisions en matière de passation des concessions de services.

32 – Ordonnance de renvoi, p. 5 et 6.

33 – Alors que le contrat de concession a été conclu avec la Stadt Frankfurt am Main les 20 et 22 juillet 2004, FES a invité la requérante et l'intervenante à présenter des offres pour les prestations publicitaires et pour la fourniture de modules de toilettes respectivement les 5 janvier et 28 juillet 2005. C'est à ce stade que la requérante a été écartée en tant que sous-traitante.

34 – En l'occurrence, nous ne voyons aucun élément dans le dossier permettant de penser que FES pouvait se prévaloir d'un motif légitime pour ne pas recourir aux services du sous-traitant qu'elle a présenté lors de la remise de son offre. Comme le relève le juge de renvoi, ce changement n'est pas compréhensible dans la mesure où la requérante a proposé à FES une rémunération annuelle largement supérieure à celle de l'intervenante.

35 – Les conditions visées à l'article 2 de la directive 80/723 pour qu'une entité soit qualifiée d'«entreprise publique» recoupent celles visées à l'article 1er de la directive 92/50 pour qu'une entité soit qualifiée de «pouvoir adjudicateur».

39 – Depuis son arrêt du 11 janvier 2005, Stadt Halle et RPL Lochau (C-26/03, Rec. p. I-1), relatif à l'attribution d'un marché public de services à une société d'économie mixte, la Cour a considéré que la participation d'une entreprise privée, fût-elle minoritaire, dans le capital d'une société à laquelle participe également le pouvoir adjudicateur en cause exclut que ce pouvoir adjudicateur puisse exercer sur cette société un contrôle analogue à celui qu'il exerce sur ses propres services (point 49). 42 – Selon une jurisprudence établie, il doit s'agir de besoins que, pour des raisons liées à l'intérêt général, l'État ou une collectivité territoriale choisissent en général de satisfaire eux-mêmes ou à l'égard desquels ils entendent conserver une influence déterminante (arrêt Ing. Aigner, précité, point 40 et jurisprudence citée). La Cour a ainsi reconnu que tel est le cas de la fabrication d'imprimés officiels tels que les passeports, les permis de conduire ou les cartes d'identité (arrêt du 15 janvier 1998, Mannesmann Anlagenbau Austria e.a., C-44/96, Rec. p. I-73), de l'entretien des forêts nationales (arrêt du 17 décembre 1998, Commission/Irlande, C-353/96, Rec. p. I-8565), de la gestion d'une université (arrêt 3 octobre 2000, University of Cambridge, C–380/98, Rec. p. I–8035) ou bien encore de la gestion d'un réseau public de télécommunication (arrêt Telaustria et Telefonadress, précité).

43 – Dans l'arrêt du 12 décembre 2002, Universale–Bau e.a. (C–470/99, Rec. p. I–11617), la Cour a reconnu que l'organisme ne doit pas nécessairement avoir été chargé de cette mission dès l'origine.

48 – Dans l'arrêt Adolf Truley, précité, la Cour a considéré que l'existence d'une concurrence développée ne permet pas, à elle seule, de conclure à l'absence d'un besoin d'intérêt général ayant un caractère autre qu'industriel ou commercial (point 61).

49 – Arrêt Korhonen e.a., précité (points 55 à 59).

50 – Nous précisons, d'après le site Internet de FES, que cette entreprise tire ses origines de l'Office municipal pour la gestion des déchets et le nettoyage urbain.

52 – Voir arrêt Adolf Truley, précité (point 69 et jurisprudence citée).

53 – Nous notons que l'assemblée générale de FES ne peut adopter de décision qu'à la majorité des trois quarts. Si la Stadt Frankfurt am Main détient 51 % du capital de cette entreprise, cette participation n'est donc pas suffisante pour lui permettre d'adopter seule des décisions dans le cadre de cette assemblée.

54 – Points 21 et 24. Dans cette affaire, le financement public correspondait aux bourses destinées aux étudiants et aux subventions versées pour promouvoir les travaux de recherche de l'université, et non aux versements effectués par l'État en contrepartie de prestations de services accomplies par l'université.

55 – Arrêt University of Cambridge, précité (point 25).

56 – Ce conseil, comme son nom l'indique, a pour mission de contrôler et de surveiller la gestion de la société. Très souvent, le conseil de surveillance peut assurer un contrôle d'opportunité comme de régularité, en opérant, notamment, les vérifications qu'il juge opportunes ou en présentant à l'assemblée générale ses observations sur les comptes annuels de la société. Il peut également disposer de pouvoirs particuliers lui permettant, par exemple, de nommer des membres du directoire ou son président, ou encore d'autoriser la cession de participations. Le président du conseil de surveillance assume généralement deux types de fonctions tenant généralement à la convocation du conseil et à la surveillance des débats. Le rôle et les fonctions du conseil de surveillance sont précisés par la loi et codifiés dans les statuts de la société dont nous ne disposons pas (voir Cozian, M., Viandier, A., et Deboissy, F., Droit des sociétés, 17e édition, Litec, Paris, 2004, p. 286 et 287).

58 – Cette quatrième question préjudicielle est formulée de telle manière que nous ignorons si le contrat visé par le juge de renvoi est le contrat de concession de services conclu entre la Stadt Frankfurt am Main et FES ou le contrat de sous-traitance conclu par la suite entre le concessionnaire et DSM. En effet, il ressort de l'ordonnance de renvoi que la requérante ne conteste pas la décision par laquelle la Stadt Frankfurt am Main a attribué la concession de services à FES. Elle ne demande donc pas la résiliation du contrat de concession conclu avec cette dernière entreprise. En revanche, la requérante conteste la décision par laquelle la Stadt Frankfurt am Main a autorisé, sur le fondement de l'article 30, IV, du contrat de concession, le changement de sous-traitant. Par son action devant le juge national, la requérante vise, en substance, à priver d'effet le contrat de sous-traitance conclu entre FES et DSM. Quant à la juridiction de renvoi, elle soutient dans son ordonnance que la Stadt Frankfurt am Main était tenue de résilier le contrat de concession de services à la modification duquel elle avait consenti. Dans le doute, nous considérerons que cette question vise les deux hypothèses.

60 – En vertu de cette disposition, un marché doit être déclaré en tout ou en partie dépourvu d'effets lorsqu'il a été conclu sans qu'un avis de marché ait été préalablement publié au Journal officiel de l'Union européenne, ou lorsque le soumissionnaire lésé n'a pas eu la possibilité d'engager un recours précontractuel ou dans le cas très particulier des marchés fondés sur un accord-cadre ou sur un système d'acquisition dynamique visés par la directive 2004/18. L'article 2 sexies inséré par la directive 2007/66 permet néanmoins aux États membres de prévoir des sanctions de substitution, compte tenu notamment de la gravité de la violation, du comportement du pouvoir adjudicateur et, le cas échéant, de la portée de l'annulation des obligations contractuelles. Il peut s'agir de pénalités financières ou d'un abrègement de la durée du marché.

Il ressort de l'ordonnance de renvoi que ladite disposition a été appliquée par analogie à d'autres atteintes (et, en particulier, aux atteintes portées à la vie, à l'intégrité corporelle, à la personnalité, à la santé et à la liberté) et à certains comportements illégaux.

65 – Aux termes de cette disposition, «[c]haque partie peut, pour un motif sérieux, résilier un contrat à durée indéterminée sans être tenue de respecter un délai de préavis. Il y a motif sérieux lorsque, eu égard aux circonstances de l'espèce et après avoir mis en balance les intérêts des deux parties, il ne peut pas être raisonnablement attendu de la partie qui résilie qu'elle maintienne la relation contractuelle jusqu'au terme convenu ou jusqu'à l'expiration d'un délai de préavis».

Questions referred

Are the principle of equal treatment expressed inter alia in Articles 12 EC, 43 EC and 49 EC and the prohibition in Community law of discrimination on grounds of nationality to be interpreted as meaning that the consequent duties of transparency for public authorities, namely to use an appropriate degree of advertising to enable the award of service concessions to be opened up to competition and the impartiality of the procurement procedure to be reviewed (see the judgments of the Court of Justice in Case C-324/98 Telaustria, paragraphs 60 to 62; Case C-231/03 Coname, paragraphs 17 to 22; Case C-458/03 Parking Brixen, paragraphs 46 to 50; Case C-410/04 ANAV, paragraph 21; and C-260/04 Commission v Italy, paragraph 24), require national law to provide an unsuccessful tenderer with a claim to an order restraining an imminent breach of those duties and/or prohibiting the continuation of such a breach of duty?

If Question 1 is answered in the negative: Do those duties of transparency form part of the customary law of the European Communities, in the sense that they are already applied continually and constantly, equally and generally, and are recognised as a binding rule by those concerned?

Do the duties of transparency mentioned in Question 1 require, in the case also of an intended amendment to a service concession contract - including the substitution of a subcontractor who was mentioned as part of the tender - that the negotiations on this are again opened up to competition with an appropriate degree of advertising, or what would be the criteria for requiring such an opening up?

Are the principles and duties of transparency mentioned in Question 1 to be interpreted as meaning that in the case of service concessions, in the event of a breach of duty, a contract concluded as a result of the breach and intended to create or amend a continuing obligation must be terminated?

Are the principles and duties of transparency mentioned in Question 1 and Article 86(1) EC, referring also if necessary to Article 2(1)(b) and (2) of the Transparency Directive 80/723/EEC [1] and Article 1(9) of the Procurement Coordination Directive 2004/18/EC, [2] to be interpreted as meaning that an undertaking is subject to those duties of transparency, as a public undertaking or contracting authority, if it was set up by a regional or local authority for the purpose of waste disposal and street cleaning but also operates in the free market, it belongs to that regional or local authority to the extent of a 51% holding, but decisions of shareholders can be taken only by a three-quarters majority,

the regional or local authority appoints only a quarter of the members of the supervisory board of the undertaking, including the chairman, and it achieves more than half its turnover from bilateral contracts for waste disposal and street cleaning in the territory of that regional or local authority, which reimburses itself by means of municipal taxes on its residents?

Action brought on 29 December 2008 - Evropaïki Dynamiki v Commission

(Case T-591/08)

Language of the case: English

Parties

Applicant: Evropaïki Dynamiki - Proigmena Systimata Tilepikoinonion Pliroforikis kai Tilematikis AE (Athens, Greece) (represented by: N. Korogiannakis and P. Katsimani, lawyers)

Defendant: Commission of the European Communities

Form of order sought

annul EUROSTAT's decision to select the bid of the applicant, filed in response to the open Call for Tenders for the "Statistical Information Technologies", Lot 2 "SDMX development" and Lot 3 "SDMX support" as second contractor of the cascade mechanism (OJ 2008/S 120-159017) communicated to the applicant by two separate letters dated 17 October 2008 and all further related decisions of EUROSTAT including the one to award the contract to the successful contractor; order EUROSTAT to pay the applicant's damages suffered on account of the tendering procedure in question for an amount of EUR 4 326 000;

order EUROSTAT to pay the applicant's legal and other costs and expenses incurred in connection with this application, even if the current application is rejected.

Pleas in law and main arguments

By means of its application the applicant seeks the annulment pursuant to Article 230 EC of the decisions of EUROSTAT to select the bid of the applicant, filed in response to the open Call for Tenders for the "Statistical Information Technologies", Lot 2 "SDMX development" and Lot 3 "SDMX support" as second contractor of the cascade mechanism (OJ 2008/S 120-159017) which were communicated to the applicant by two separate letters dated 17 October 2008, as well as the award of damages pursuant to Article 235 EC.

The applicant claims that EUROSTAT committed various manifest errors of assessment, whereas fundamental rules and principles of public procurement have been allegedly infringed by the contracting authority. It is submitted that the evaluation of the applicant's tender was deficient, that EUROSTAT failed to state reasons, denied to address the applicant's detailed administrative appeal and associated observations and that it did not present the results of its internal examination to the applicant.

The applicant further submits that the treatment of the candidates was discriminatory; that the exclusion criteria were not complied with by one of the members of the winning consortium and that Articles 93(1) and 94 of the Financial Regulation were infringed. Moreover, the applicant contends that should the Court find that the defendant infringed the Financial Regulation and/or the principles of transparency and of equal treatment, given the fact that the Court will rule on the application - in all likelihood - after the contract has been fully executed, the applicant requests monetary compensation EUR 4 326 000 from EUROSTAT, corresponding to its estimated gross profit from the public procurement procedure Lot 2 and Lot 3, should it have been awarded the contract.

(Case T-589/08)

Language of the case: English

Parties

Applicant: Evropaïki Dynamiki - Proigmena Systimata Tilepikoinonion Pliroforikis kai Tilematikis AE (Athens, Greece) (represented by: N. Korogiannakis, P. Katsimani, M. Dermitzakis, lawyers)

Defendant: Commission of the European Communities

Form of order sought

annul the decisions of the Commission to evaluate the applicant's bids as not successful and award the contracts to the successful contractor;

order the Commission to pay the applicant's damages suffered on account of the tendering procedure in question for an amount of 920 000 EUR to be increased up to 1 700 000 EUR depending on the final amount of the CITL project;

order the Commission to pay the applicant's legal and other costs and expenses incurred in connection with this application, even if the current application is rejected.

Pleas in law and main arguments

In the present case the applicant seeks the annulment of the defendant's decisions to reject its bids submitted in response to a call for an open tender ENV.C2/FRA/2008/0017 regarding the "Emission Trading Scheme - CITL/CR"[1] and to award the contract to the successful contractor. The applicant further requests compensation for the alleged damages in account of the tender procedure.

In support of its claims the applicant puts forward two pleas in law.

First, it argues that the Commission committed several manifest errors of assessment while evaluating the three bids submitted by the applicant to the three Lots of the tender respectively.

Second, the applicant submits that the Commission failed to observe the principles of transparency and equal treatment and therefore infringed relevant provisions reflecting these principles such as Articles 92 and 100 of the financial regulation[2]. Moreover, the applicant argues that the contracting authority infringed its obligation to sufficiently state reasons for its decision. It claims as well that the Commission failed to provide it with additional information that it requested after the award decision regarding the merits of the successful tenderer. Furthermore, the applicant submits that the contracting authority applied criteria that were not set out in advance and thus were unknown to the candidates.

Arrêt

Faits à l'origine du litige

1 Par un avis de marché du 14 juin 2008, publié au Supplément au Journal officiel de l'Union européenne (JO 2008, S 115), la Commission des Communautés européennes a lancé l'appel d'offres DG ENV.G.1/SER/2008/0050 visant à adjuger le marché de services intitulé « Modélisation de l'occupation des sols – mise en œuvre ».

2 L'objectif de ce marché est de « réaliser, à l'aide d'outils de modélisation et de bases de données existants, une série d'évaluations des scénarios stratégiques ayant une répercussion sur l'occupation des sols dans l'U[nion européenne] qui soient centrés sur les arbitrages mettant en jeu l'occupation des sols et les impacts environnementaux ».

3 Le point 3.3 du cahier des charges, joint à l'avis de marché, indique les critères sur la base desquels l'attribution du marché est effectuée. Outre le prix indiqué pour l'exécution du contrat, cette attribution tient compte, aux termes dudit point, des critères suivants :

« – Critère d'attribution n° 1 – Compréhension (maximum 30 points) : Ce critère sert à évaluer si le soumissionnaire a compris toutes les questions en jeu ainsi que la nature du travail à réaliser et le contenu des produits finals ;

– critère d'attribution n° 2 – Méthode (maximum 40 points) : Ce critère sert, d'une part, à évaluer dans quelle mesure la méthode proposée permet de traiter de manière réaliste et structurée les questions sur lesquelles repose l'offre et, d'autre part, à déterminer si les méthodes proposées correspondent aux besoins décrits par la Commission ;

– critère d'attribution n° 3 – Gestion du projet et disponibilité (maximum 30 points) : Les offres seront évaluées du point de vue de la qualité de l'organisation de l'équipe, du temps attribué à chacun des membres de l'équipe et de la disponibilité des ressources nécessaires pour permettre l'exécution des tâches contractuelles. L'offre doit contenir une description claire de ces aspects. »

4 Les soumissionnaires doivent obtenir au moins 18, 24 et 18 points pour les premier, deuxième et troisième critères respectivement et totaliser un minimum de 65 points (point 3.4 du cahier des charges). Les offres qui remplissent chacun des critères et qui ont recueilli au moins 65 points seront considérées comme techniquement satisfaisantes. Le prix sera alors divisé par le nombre total de points attribués pour obtenir le quotient prix/qualité. Le contrat sera attribué au soumissionnaire ayant présenté l'offre dont le quotient prix/qualité est le plus faible (point 6 du cahier des charges).

5 Trois offres ont en l'espèce été présentées : les soumissionnaires étaient, respectivement, le centre de recherche d'une université néerlandaise (ci-après le « centre de recherche ») et trois sous-traitants, la requérante, Proges – Progetti di sviluppo Srl, sans sous-traitant, ainsi qu'une troisième entité, avec trois sous-traitants. Seules deux de ces trois offres, celles du centre de recherche et du troisième soumissionnaire, ont obtenu une note suffisante au stade de l'évaluation au regard des critères d'attribution.

6 Il ressort du procès-verbal du comité d'évaluation, dont une copie a été transmise par la Commission à la requérante en annexe à la défense, que celle-ci n'a pas obtenu les notes minimales requises, et ce tant pour chaque critère d'attribution du marché que pour le total des points. Ses notes étaient de 8 points sur 30 pour la compréhension du projet, de 9 points sur 40 pour la méthode et de 10,6 points sur 30 pour la gestion du projet et la disponibilité. La note totale obtenue par la requérante, soit 27,6 points pour un minimum requis de 65 points, a donc eu pour effet de l'exclure de l'étape suivante portant sur l'évaluation de la proposition économique.

7 Par lettre du 29 octobre 2008, la Commission a indiqué à la requérante que son offre n'avait pas été sélectionnée ainsi que les raisons pour lesquelles cette offre n'avait pas satisfait aux critères d'attribution (ci-après la « décision attaquée »). Cette lettre indiquait également que des informations complémentaires pouvaient être communiquées sur demande. La requérante a présenté une demande en ce sens le 10 novembre 2008. La Commission, par lettre du 18 novembre 2008, lui a communiqué le nom de l'attributaire du marché ainsi que des informations sur la note obtenue par ce dernier et sur les critères d'attribution utilisés par le comité d'évaluation.

Procédure et conclusions des parties

8 Par requête déposée au greffe du Tribunal le 23 décembre 2008, la requérante a introduit le présent recours.

9 Sur rapport du juge rapporteur, le Tribunal (troisième chambre) a décidé d'ouvrir la procédure orale. Dans le cadre des mesures d'organisation de la procédure, les parties ont été invitées à répondre à une série de questions et la Commission à produire une série de documents auxquels il était fait référence dans l'avis de marché.

10 Par lettre de la requérante du 10 novembre 2009 et par lettre de la Commission du 9 novembre 2009, les parties ont présenté leurs réponses aux questions du Tribunal et la Commission a produit les documents demandés.

11 Les parties ont été entendues en leurs plaidoiries et en leurs réponses aux questions posées par le Tribunal lors de l'audience du 25 novembre 2009.

12 La requérante conclut à ce qu'il plaise au Tribunal :

– annuler la décision attaquée et adopter toutes les mesures qui en découlent, notamment en ce qui concerne la réparation des dommages ;

– condamner la Commission aux dépens.

13 La Commission conclut à ce qu'il plaise au Tribunal :

– rejeter le recours en tant qu'irrecevable ou non fondé ;

– condamner la requérante aux dépens.

En droit

Sur la recevabilité

Sur le défaut d'intérêt à agir de la requérante

14 La Commission soutient que le recours est irrecevable pour défaut d'intérêt à agir. En l'absence d'une demande d'annulation visant explicitement la décision d'attribution du marché litigieux au soumissionnaire retenu à l'issue de l'évaluation des offres, le présent recours devrait être déclaré irrecevable dans son ensemble. La Commission invoque, à cet égard et par analogie, l'arrêt du Tribunal du 17 février 2000, Micheli e.a./Commission (T–183/97, Rec. p. II–287, points 33 à 54).

15 Le Tribunal relève que la requérante dispose bien d'un intérêt à agir à l'encontre de la décision attaquée, dès lors que la Commission y rejette l'offre qu'elle lui avait présentée en vue d'obtenir le marché litigieux. La décision attaquée met donc un terme aux chances de la requérante d'obtenir l'attribution du marché pour lequel elle avait soumissionné, la Commission considérant que l'offre proposée ne satisfait pas aux trois critères d'attribution définis par l'avis de marché.

16 Cette appréciation n'est pas remise en cause par la solution retenue dans l'arrêt Micheli e.a./Commission, point 14 supra (points 33 à 54). Dans cette affaire, les requérants demandaient l'annulation d'une décision arrêtant une liste de réserve relative à des propositions d'actions pouvant bénéficier d'un financement communautaire. Cette décision avait pour conséquence d'exclure leur proposition d'action. Pour conclure qu'il n'y avait plus lieu de statuer sur le recours, le Tribunal a examiné les deux types d'intérêt à agir évoqués par les requérants. Sur le premier type d'intérêt, qui consistait en la défense du prestige scientifique des requérants, le Tribunal a relevé que leur capacité scientifique n'avait pas été prise en considération, directement ou indirectement, lors de l'exclusion de leur proposition de la liste de réserve. Sur le second type d'intérêt, lié à la réalisation de la proposition pour laquelle ils demandaient un financement communautaire, le Tribunal a indiqué que, en toute hypothèse, la proposition litigieuse ne pouvait pas bénéficier des fonds communautaires, puisqu'ils étaient épuisés et ne pouvaient être affectés à la liste de réserve. Le raisonnement suivi par le Tribunal dans l'arrêt Micheli e.a./Commission, point 14 supra, s'explique dès lors au vu des circonstances de cette affaire et n'est pas susceptible, en tant que tel, d'être appliqué en l'espèce, le présent recours concernant un appel d'offres pour lequel il ne peut y avoir qu'un seul attributaire et non des propositions d'actions pouvant bénéficier d'une contribution communautaire.

17 Par ailleurs, si la décision attaquée devait être annulée, cela pourrait avoir une incidence sur la légalité de la décision d'attribution du marché litigieux, qui est intervenue à un stade postérieur à celui du rejet de l'offre de la requérante, sans que cette offre ait été examinée (voir points 5 à 7 ci-dessus). Dans cette hypothèse, il appartiendrait à la Commission de prendre les mesures que comporterait l'exécution d'un tel arrêt. L'annulation de la décision attaquée serait également susceptible d'avoir des conséquences en ce qui concerne une éventuelle demande en réparation du préjudice subi.

18 La première fin de non-recevoir avancée par la Commission doit donc être rejetée.

Sur l'absence de clarté de la requête

20 Le Tribunal rappelle que, en vertu de l'article 44, paragraphe 1, sous c), du règlement de procédure, toute requête doit indiquer l'objet du litige et l'exposé sommaire des moyens invoqués. Indépendamment de toute question de terminologie, cette présentation doit être suffisamment claire et précise pour permettre à la partie défenderesse de préparer sa défense et au Tribunal d'exercer son contrôle juridictionnel. Afin de garantir la sécurité juridique et une bonne administration de la justice, il est nécessaire, pour qu'un recours soit recevable au regard de cette disposition, que les éléments essentiels de fait et de droit sur lesquels celui-ci se fonde ressortent, à tout le moins sommairement, mais d'une façon cohérente et compréhensible, de la requête elle-même (ordonnance du Tribunal du 28 avril 1993, De Hoe/Commission, T–85/92, Rec. p. II–523, point 20).

21 S'il convient d'admettre que l'énonciation des moyens du recours n'est pas liée à la terminologie et à l'énumération du règlement de procédure et que la présentation de ces moyens, par leur substance plutôt que par leur qualification légale, peut suffire, c'est à la condition toutefois que lesdits moyens se dégagent de la requête avec suffisamment de netteté. En outre, la seule énonciation abstraite des moyens dans la requête ne répond pas aux exigences du règlement de procédure et les termes « exposé sommaire des moyens », qui y sont employés, signifient que la requête doit expliciter en quoi consiste le moyen sur lequel le recours est basé (ordonnance De Hoe/Commission, point 20 supra, point 21).

24 De même, il n'est pas possible à la lecture de la requête de comprendre clairement quelles sont les règles matérielles prétendument violées dans la présente affaire, à l'exception de l'avis de marché, qui y est évoqué plusieurs fois. Cette indication ne peut donc se comprendre que comme renvoyant à un moyen tiré de la violation des dispositions de l'avis de marché, lequel complète le moyen tiré de la dénaturation du contenu du projet présenté par la requérante auquel la requête fait plusieurs fois précisément référence.

25 La requête doit ainsi être comprise, comme cela a été confirmé par la requérante lors de l'audience, comme visant à obtenir l'annulation de la décision attaquée en ce que la Commission dénaturerait le contenu du projet présenté par la requérante et violerait les dispositions de l'avis de marché.

26 En outre, à supposer même que le Tribunal considère que le chef de conclusions de la requérante visant à obtenir l'annulation de la décision attaquée et l'adoption de toutes les mesures qui en découlent, notamment en ce qui concerne la réparation des dommages, puisse être interprété en ce sens qu'il concerne, d'une part, une demande d'annulation de la décision attaquée et, d'autre part, une demande en réparation du préjudice subi, force est de constater qu'une telle demande en réparation ne fait pas l'objet de la moindre précision de la part de la requérante. Or, une requête visant à la réparation de dommages causés par une institution doit contenir les éléments qui permettent d'identifier le comportement que la requérante reproche à l'institution, les raisons pour lesquelles elle estime qu'un lien de causalité existe entre le comportement et le préjudice qu'elle prétend avoir subi ainsi que le caractère et l'étendue de ce préjudice (arrêts du Tribunal du 10 juillet 1997, Guérin automobiles/Commission, T-38/96, Rec. p. II-1223, point 42, et du 3 février 2005, Chiquita Brands e.a./Commission, T-19/01, Rec. p. II–315, point 65).

27 Il y a donc lieu de déclarer irrecevable le présent recours en ce qui concerne la demande en réparation du préjudice subi, pour autant qu'il puisse être considéré qu'une telle demande ait été présentée par la requérante.

28 En conséquence, le présent recours n'est recevable qu'en ce qui concerne les moyens pris de la dénaturation du projet présenté par la requérante et de la violation de l'avis de marché, lesquels peuvent être réunis dans le cadre de l'appréciation du fond.

Sur le fond

29 En substance, la requérante critique, dans le cadre de son argumentation relative à la dénaturation de son projet et à la violation de l'avis de marché, l'évaluation faite par la Commission de chacun des trois critères d'attribution mentionnés dans le cahier des charges (voir point 3 ci-dessus).

Sur l'évaluation du premier critère d'attribution

30 Le premier critère d'attribution du marché visait à « évaluer si le soumissionnaire a compris toutes les questions en jeu ainsi que la nature du travail à réaliser et le contenu des produits finals » (point 3.3 du cahier des charges). Pour être considéré comme techniquement apte, le soumissionnaire devait obtenir au moins 18 points sur un maximum de 30 points (point 3.4 du cahier des charges).

31 La décision attaquée indique ce qui suit en ce qui concerne ce critère :

« Critère d'attribution nº 1 : compréhension (min. 18 – max. 30 points)

L'offre témoigne d'une très mauvaise compréhension des questions en jeu ainsi que de la nature du travail à réaliser et du contenu des produits finals. L'offre se focalise exclusivement sur la définition d'un système DPSIR [Drives-Pressure-State-Impacts-Responses]. La page 10 de l'offre suggère même l'utilisation potentielle de modèles d'occupation des sols, alors que l'objet du marché consistait justement à bâtir un modèle d'occupation des sols et à mener l'évaluation de scénarios… »

32 Cette explication, communiquée à la requérante dans la décision attaquée, est reprise du procès-verbal du comité d'évaluation des offres. Il ressort de ce procès-verbal que la requérante a obtenu la note de 8 points sur 30 en ce qui concerne le premier critère d'attribution, tandis que l'offre retenue a obtenu une note de 27,4 points sur 30.

33 En réponse à la demande faite en ce sens par la requérante, la Commission, dans une lettre du 18 novembre 2008, lui a indiqué les raisons pour lesquelles l'offre du centre de recherche avait été choisie. Ces raisons, connues de la requérante quand elle a introduit son recours, ne sont pas contestées dans la présente affaire.

– Arguments des parties

34 La requérante fait valoir que la Commission, dans la décision attaquée, lui reproche « de manière contradictoire, confuse et généralisée » d'avoir présenté une offre qui témoigne d'une « très mauvaise compréhension des questions en jeu ainsi que de la nature du travail à réaliser et du contenu des produits finals ». Selon la requérante, son offre n'avait pas pour objet de proposer un nouveau modèle d'occupation des sols, mais précisait plutôt, avec au moins douze pages d'explications, le modèle qu'elle avait examiné en fonction de ce qui était indiqué dans l'avis de marché. Celui-ci était donc parfaitement compris. La requérante conteste également l'appréciation selon laquelle « l'offre se focalise exclusivement sur la définition d'un système DPSIR ». Cette appréciation dénaturerait le contenu de son offre, qui se concentrerait sur plusieurs autres projets. Elle serait aussi techniquement erronée et non motivée. Enfin, la requérante considère que l'appréciation selon laquelle « la page 10 de [son] offre suggère même l'utilisation potentielle de modèles d'occupation des sols, alors que l'objet du marché consistait justement à bâtir un modèle d'occupation des sols et à mener l'évaluation de scénarios », est erronée.

35 La Commission conteste cette analyse en relevant que l'offre de la requérante n'expliquait pas la manière dont celle-ci entendait concrètement élaborer le modèle demandé.

– Appréciation du Tribunal

36 Selon une jurisprudence constante, à la lumière de laquelle seront examinées toutes les évaluations critiquées dans la présente affaire, le pouvoir adjudicateur dispose d'un large pouvoir d'appréciation quant aux éléments à prendre en considération en vue de la prise de décision de passer un marché sur appel d'offres et le contrôle du Tribunal doit se limiter à la vérification du respect des règles de procédure et de motivation ainsi que de l'exactitude matérielle des faits, de l'absence d'erreur manifeste d'appréciation et de détournement de pouvoir (arrêts du Tribunal du 27 septembre 2002, Tideland Signal/Commission, T–211/02, Rec. p. II–3781, point 33, et du 6 juillet 2005, TQ3 Travel Solutions Belgium/Commission, T–148/04, Rec. p. II–2627, point 47).

37 En l'espèce, il convient de relever que l'offre de la requérante se limite à reproduire les différents éléments constitutifs décrits dans le cahier des charges pour indiquer, sans démonstration technique probante, que cette offre permettrait de répondre à ce qui était demandé dans l'avis de marché.

39 Dans ce cadre, l'une des principales tâches du contractant était de définir le cadre de modélisation selon les recommandations prévues par le cahier des charges (voir point 1.3.A du cahier des charges). Ce cadre devait répondre aux besoins des différentes directions générales de la Commission, notamment en termes d'évaluation ex ante et d'analyses d'impact. Il devait également permettre d'estimer les incidences sur les plans économique, environnemental et social des modifications de l'occupation des sols à différentes échelles allant de l'Union au troisième niveau de la nomenclature d'unités territoriales statistiques (NUTS-3). Le contractant devait également définir des scénarios de références et des scénarios stratégiques sur la base des critères énoncés dans le cahier des charges (voir point 1.3.B du cahier des charges).

42 À titre d'illustration, on peut relever, comme le fait la Commission dans ses écritures sans être contredite par la requérante, que l'offre de cette dernière ne prend pas en considération les différents niveaux d'intégration évoqués par le cahier des charges, qui vont de l'Union à l'échelon NUTS-3. De même, l'examen des données présentées dans les tableaux illustratifs 2.1 à 3.5 de l'offre permet de constater qu'elles ne concernent pas le territoire de l'Union, mais ceux du Yemen et du Brésil. C'est à bon droit que la Commission considère qu'aucun élément ne permet de comprendre en quoi ces données et le modèle utilisé pour les rassembler pourraient répondre aux objectifs définis dans l'avis de marché.

43 Par ailleurs, de manière générale, il y a lieu de relever que l'offre de la requérante n'explique pas comment le modèle envisagé et les exemples fournis sont à même de satisfaire les besoins des directions générales de la Commission en ce qui concerne l'évaluation antérieure ou postérieure des impacts environnementaux, économiques et sociaux en matière d'utilisation des sols compte tenu des différents scénarios d'évolution économique, démographique et climatique qui sont à envisager. C'est ainsi à bon droit que la Commission relève qu'il peut sembler paradoxal d'indiquer, en page 12 de l'offre, que l'accent est mis sur la « simplicité d'utilisation de ce modèle par des usagers non spécialisés », comme cela est requis par l'avis de marché, tout en ajoutant aussitôt que « pour fonctionner correctement, ce modèle nécessite des bases de données et des modèles de simulation qui devront être développés et gérés par des usagers sectoriels expérimentés ». Le cahier des charges prévoyait, à cet égard, que l'interface du module demandé soit adaptée aux besoins des utilisateurs finals à la Commission et qu'elle constitue un « système analytique facile à utiliser » (point 1.3.A du cahier des charges), or l'offre ne précise pas comment le système proposé pourrait répondre à cette demande.

44 Il ne peut donc être reproché au comité d'évaluation d'avoir considéré que « l'offre témoigne d'une très mauvaise compréhension des questions en jeu ainsi que de la nature du travail à réaliser et du contenu des produits finals ».

45 En ce qui concerne la critique de la requérante relative à l'appréciation contenue dans la décision attaquée selon laquelle son « offre se focalise exclusivement sur la définition d'un système DPSIR », il y a lieu de relever que cette appréciation n'est pas à prendre au pied de la lettre comme le fait valoir la requérante en expliquant, dans sa réponse écrite à une question du Tribunal sur ce point, que seuls 3 des 43 paragraphes de son offre font expressément référence au système DPSIR, mais au sens large.

46 Cette appréciation reprend ainsi, en substance, l'affirmation faite par la requérante dans son offre s'agissant de la « définition du cadre de modélisation » :

« Le cadre de modélisation que nous proposons reprend la logique du DPSIR, tout en proposant un développement innovant de celle-ci qui vise à la rendre plus efficace dans l'analyse des dynamiques socioéconomiques et environnementales, en empruntant à cet effet des approches conceptuelles et méthodologiques largement utilisées dans d'autres disciplines (c'est-à-dire le développement de bases de données et les applications logicielles). Nous décrirons ci-après en quoi consiste la logique innovante que nous utilisons, en montrant dans le même temps comment celle-ci se rattache au cadre DPSIR et de quelle façon elle intègre et accroît les possibilités de ce dernier. »

47 L'appréciation contenue dans la décision attaquée ne dénature donc pas le contenu de l'offre de la requérante. Cette appréciation n'est également pas, comme l'affirme la requérante, non motivée et techniquement erronée. Elle ne fait que synthétiser le contenu du cadre de modélisation proposé dans l'offre de la requérante. Il importe peu, à cet égard, que, comme le fait observer la requérante, « le DPSIR a[it] été développé et couramment utilisé par l'Agence européenne pour l'environnement », ce que, au demeurant, la Commission ne conteste nullement.

50 Cette observation, comme celles qui la précèdent, ne dénature pas le contenu de l'offre de la requérante pas plus qu'elle ne viole l'avis de marché. L'appréciation qui sous-tend cette observation est d'ailleurs confirmée par l'affirmation faite par la requérante dans la réplique, où elle indique que « non seulement elle n'a entendu proposer aucun nouveau modèle d'occupation des sols, mais, en plus, elle a précisé, avec au moins douze pages d'explications, le modèle qu'elle aurait examiné en fonction de ce qui était indiqué dans l'avis de marché », alors que l'objectif de l'avis de marché n'était pas d'« examiner » un modèle, mais d'en créer un nouveau, à savoir un cadre de modélisation capable de compléter et d'intégrer les données obtenues dans le cadre de projets de recherche précédents en matière d'occupation des sols compte tenu de différents scénarios d'évaluation.

Sur l'évaluation du deuxième critère d'attribution

52 Le deuxième critère d'attribution du marché visait « d'une part, à évaluer dans quelle mesure la méthode proposée permet[tait] de traiter de manière réaliste et structurée les questions sur lesquelles repos[ait] l'offre et, d'autre part, à déterminer si les méthodes proposées correspond[ai]ent aux besoins décrits par la Commission » (point 3.3 du cahier des charges). Pour être considéré comme techniquement apte, le soumissionnaire devait obtenir au moins 24 points sur un maximum de 40 points (point 3.4 du cahier des charges).

53 La décision attaquée indique ce qui suit en ce qui concerne ce critère :

« Critère d'attribution nº 2 : méthode (min. 24 – max. 40 points)

À cause de la mauvaise compréhension à laquelle il a été fait référence ci-dessus, la méthode proposée se concentre exclusivement sur les flux d'utilisation des sols et sur une simulation SIG [système d'information géographique]. L'offre ne fournit aucune explication en ce qui concerne l'intégration des différents modèles. »

54 Cette explication, communiquée à la requérante dans la décision attaquée, est reprise du procès-verbal du comité d'évaluation des offres. Il ressort de ce procès-verbal que la requérante a obtenu la note de 9 points sur 40 en ce qui concerne le deuxième critère d'attribution, tandis que l'offre retenue a obtenu une note de 34,8 points sur 40.

55 En réponse à la demande faite en ce sens par la requérante, la Commission, dans une lettre du 18 novembre 2008, lui a indiqué les raisons pour lesquelles l'offre du centre de recherche avait été choisie. Ces raisons, connues de la requérante quand elle a introduit son recours, ne sont pas contestées dans la présente affaire.

– Arguments des parties

56 La requérante soutient que la décision attaquée dénature son offre en ce que la Commission soutiendrait qu'elle n'a pas entendu proposer le développement d'un modèle d'occupation des sols, mais s'est contentée d'en suggérer l'utilisation éventuelle. Or, son projet indiquerait explicitement qu'un modèle d'occupation des sols intégrant les différents modèles issus du sixième programme-cadre de recherche serait développé. De plus, onze pages de l'offre seraient consacrées à l'explication des méthodes d'intégration des différents modèles d'occupation des sols requis par l'avis de marché et à l'exposé d'exemples concrets.

57 La Commission conteste cette analyse en se référant au contenu de l'offre de la requérante.

– Appréciation du Tribunal

58 En ce qui concerne l'allégation selon laquelle l'évaluation présentée dans la décision attaquée serait erronée parce que la méthode proposée ne se concentrerait pas exclusivement sur les flux d'utilisation des sols et sur une simulation SIG, il convient de relever que, dans son offre, la requérante se limite à formuler des affirmations générales sans les étayer par une véritable description des modèles proposés ou des modalités concrètes selon lesquelles elle entend se servir des données existantes et intégrer les modèles proposés. Cette offre ne fait que fournir des éléments qui ne permettent qu'une simple représentation graphique des flux d'occupation des sols, ce que démontrent d'ailleurs les différentes illustrations qui y sont présentées. Le modèle d'occupation des sols suggéré ne correspond donc pas au modèle demandé dans l'avis de marché, qui doit démontrer sa capacité à coordonner les différentes instances compétentes en matière d'occupation des sols et à assurer l'interface vers et entre les différentes bases de données existantes.

59 En ce qui concerne l'allégation selon laquelle l'évaluation précitée serait erronée parce que onze pages de l'offre seraient consacrées à l'explication des méthodes d'intégration des différents modèles d'occupation des sols requis par l'avis de marché, force est de constater que lesdites pages ne contiennent pas d'explication détaillée et concrète relative à une telle intégration. La description fournie reste très générale et les exemples indiqués ne sont pas directement pertinents eu égard à l'objet du marché litigieux, ainsi qu'il a déjà été exposé dans le cadre de l'appréciation des arguments relatifs à l'évaluation du premier critère (voir point 41 ci-dessus).

Sur l'évaluation du troisième critère d'attribution

61 Au titre du troisième critère d'attribution du marché, « les offres [devaient être] évaluées du point de vue de la qualité de l'organisation de l'équipe, du temps attribué à chacun des membres de l'équipe et de la disponibilité des ressources nécessaires pour permettre l'exécution des tâches contractuelles », les offres devant « contenir une description claire de ces aspects » (point 3.3 du cahier des charges). Pour être considéré comme techniquement apte, le soumissionnaire devait obtenir au moins 18 points sur un maximum de 40 points (point 3.4 du cahier des charges).

62 La décision attaquée indique ce qui suit en ce qui concerne ce critère :

Le soumissionnaire propose une équipe compacte, en expliquant comment les tâches principales seront attribuées à chaque membre. Cependant, il existe de sérieuses inquiétudes quant à la disponibilité du personnel, notamment en ce qui concerne une prétendue implication à plein temps du directeur général pendant la durée du projet : dans une large mesure, cela paraît irréaliste. De plus, comme aucun détail n'est fourni à propos des ressources qui seront allouées à chaque tâche, il n'est pas possible d'appréhender convenablement l'approche et la gestion de la mise en œuvre du projet. Un autre point, qui revêt la même importance, concerne la composition de l'équipe et ses compétences professionnelles ; celle-ci justifie d'une expérience très limitée dans le domaine de la modélisation de l'occupation des sols, et plus exactement dans le développement d'outils d'assistance basés sur le SIG. Le défaut de représentativité géographique des membres de l'équipe doit également être noté, auquel il faut ajouter une très faible expérience des projets européens. »

63 Cette explication, communiquée à la requérante dans la décision attaquée, est reprise du procès-verbal du comité d'évaluation des offres. Il ressort de ce procès-verbal que la requérante a obtenu la note de 10,6 points sur 30 en ce qui concerne le troisième critère d'attribution, tandis que l'offre retenue a obtenu une note de 27,4 points sur 30.

64 En réponse à la demande faite en ce sens par la requérante, la Commission, dans une lettre du 18 novembre 2008, lui a indiqué les raisons pour lesquelles l'offre du centre de recherche avait été choisie. Ces raisons, connues de la requérante quand elle a introduit son recours, ne sont pas contestées dans la présente affaire.

65 Premièrement, la requérante soutient que la Commission, dans la décision attaquée, relève, « de manière injustifiée et péremptoire », que l'implication de son directeur dans l'exécution du projet ne serait pas réaliste. Au contraire, le curriculum vitae du directeur, joint à l'offre de la requérante, démontrerait qu'il a toujours participé à la totalité de ses projets de manière active et satisfaisante. De plus, la taille de la requérante ne laisserait aucun doute quant à la faisabilité de l'investissement à plein temps de son directeur dans la réalisation d'un projet de quatorze mois. L'avis de marché ne prévoirait d'ailleurs aucune limite de taille en ce qui concerne les entreprises participantes.

66 Deuxièmement, la requérante soutient que l'affirmation contenue dans la décision attaquée selon laquelle son personnel impliqué dans le projet ne bénéficierait pas d'une représentativité géographique suffisante est dépourvue de toute pertinence au regard de l'avis de marché, qui prévoit que la sélection se fera en considération du meilleur rapport qualité/prix.

67 Troisièmement, la requérante fait valoir que l'affirmation selon laquelle elle aurait une expérience limitée des projets européens ne renvoie pas à un élément exigé par l'avis de marché. Une évaluation menée sur cette base serait arbitraire et discriminatoire. Les expériences européennes ne seraient pas plus déterminantes que les expériences auprès des Nations unies et de l'Union internationale pour la conservation de la nature mises en avant par la requérante. Par ailleurs, le centre de recherche déclarerait sur son site Internet que 80 % du chiffre d'affaires de son département « Recherche internationale » provient de financements octroyés dans le cadre du sixième programme de recherche de l'Union, d'où doivent être tirés les modèles à utiliser pour le développement du modèle d'occupation des sols faisant l'objet de l'avis de marché. Le marché serait ainsi attribué à une société qui a déjà reçu des financements communautaires dans le cadre du programme dont on souhaite utiliser les résultats.

68 La Commission conteste cette analyse.

69 À titre liminaire, il convient de rappeler que, pour être évaluée au regard du troisième critère d'attribution, l'offre soumise devait, aux termes du point 3.3 du cahier des charges, contenir une description claire de la qualité de l'organisation de l'équipe, du temps attribué à chacun de ses membres et de la disponibilité des ressources nécessaires pour permettre l'exécution des tâches contractuelles. À cet égard, la Commission relève, dans la décision attaquée, qu'« aucun détail n'est fourni à propos des ressources qui seront allouées à chaque tâche, [et qu']il n'est pas possible d'appréhender convenablement l'approche et la gestion de la mise en œuvre du projet ».

70 Cette appréciation n'est pas contestée par la requérante, qui se limite à contester les appréciations exposées dans la décision attaquée en ce qui concerne la disponibilité de son personnel, et notamment du directeur général, sa représentativité géographique et son expérience des projets européens.

71 Il y a donc lieu de tenir compte de cette appréciation non contestée dans le cadre de l'examen de l'évaluation effectuée par la Commission au titre du troisième critère d'attribution.

72 En ce qui concerne l'allégation selon laquelle ce serait « de manière péremptoire et injustifiée » que le comité d'évaluation a considéré qu'« il existe de sérieuses inquiétudes quant à la disponibilité du personnel, notamment en ce qui concerne une prétendue implication à plein temps du directeur général pendant la durée du projet : dans une large mesure, cela paraît irréaliste », il convient de relever que la « disponibilité des ressources » est expressément mentionnée dans le cahier des charges au nombre des différents éléments permettant d'évaluer les offres dans le cadre du troisième critère d'attribution.

73 La requérante ne peut donc reprocher à la Commission d'avoir pris en compte des données relatives à la disponibilité des ressources humaines dans son évaluation. À ce titre, la petite taille de la requérante et le faible nombre de personnes y travaillant permettent effectivement de supposer, en l'absence de détails fournis sur ce point dans son offre, qu'il pourrait lui être difficile d'assumer le marché en cause compte tenu de ses autres activités. Ces observations valent tout particulièrement pour son directeur général, la Commission prenant soin d'indiquer que ce ne sont pas ses compétences qui sont mises en cause, mais simplement sa disponibilité pour le projet compte tenu de ses autres obligations en tant que dirigeant d'entreprise.

74 Ce premier grief doit donc être rejeté.

76 Lors de l'audience, la Commission a indiqué que ces éléments ne renvoient pas à de nouveaux critères d'attribution, appliqués de manière discriminatoire. Il se serait seulement agi, pour le comité d'évaluation, d'apprécier l'offre de la requérante dans le cadre du troisième critère d'attribution. Aucun de ces éléments n'aurait été invoqué pour contester à la requérante toute possibilité de mener à bien le marché, comme celle-ci l'affirmerait sans autre forme de démonstration.

77 Quels que soient les doutes que peuvent susciter l'argumentation présentée par la Commission lors de l'audience, il y a lieu de relever que, à supposer même que la requérante se soit vu attribuer le maximum de points au regard du troisième critère d'attribution (30 points sur 30), cela ne suffirait pas pour lui permettre d'atteindre le minimum de points requis par l'appel d'offres. En effet, dans cette hypothèse, la requérante n'aurait obtenu que 8, 9 et 30 points, soit 47 points sur les 65 requis pour que son offre soit considérée comme techniquement satisfaisante.

78 En conséquence, même si le Tribunal jugeait les griefs relatifs au troisième critère d'attribution en partie fondés en ce qui concerne les appréciations relatives à la représentativité géographique des membres de l'équipe et à l'expérience des projets européens, ces griefs devraient tout de même être rejetés comme inopérants au vu du rejet des griefs de la requérante en ce qui concerne le premier et le deuxième critères d'attribution.

79 Enfin, il convient de relever que l'observation de la requérante en ce qui concerne les fonds communautaires prétendument octroyés par le passé au centre de recherche est sans incidence sur l'appréciation de l'évaluation du comité d'évaluation en ce qui concerne le projet de la requérante, seule évaluation à faire l'objet de la présente affaire.

80 Il ressort de ce qui précède que les griefs de la requérante relatifs à l'appréciation de son offre au regard du troisième critère d'évaluation doivent être rejetés.

81 Au vu de l'ensemble des considérations qui précèdent, il convient donc de rejeter le présent recours.

Sur les dépens

82 Aux termes de l'article 87, paragraphe 2, du règlement de procédure, toute partie qui succombe est condamnée aux dépens, s'il est conclu en ce sens. La requérante ayant succombé, il y a lieu de la condamner aux dépens, conformément aux conclusions de la Commission.

Par ces motifs,

LE TRIBUNAL (troisième chambre)

déclare et arrête :

1) Le recours est rejeté.

2) Proges – Progetti di sviluppo Srl est condamnée à supporter ses propres dépens ainsi que ceux de la Commission européenne.

Action brought on 23 December 2008 - Proges v Commission

(Case T-577/08)

Language of the case: Italian

Parties

Applicant: Proges srl (Rome, Italy) (represented by: M. Falcetta, lawyer)

Defendant: Commission of the European Communities

Forms of order sought

Annul the contested decision, thereby giving rise to all consequential measures, including compensation for damages;

- Order the defendant to pay the costs of the proceedings, together with all related fees and expenses.

Pleas in law and main arguments

The present action is brought against the measure by which the Commission declined to award the applicant the contract covered by invitation to tender ENV.G.1./SER/2008/0050 for the creation of land use models and, in particular, for the assessment of environmental impact.

In support of its claims, the applicant submits that:

the decision was incorrect in so far as it stated that the applicant's bid focused exclusively on the Driving force-Pressure-State-Impact-Response (DPSIR) model; in any event, the tender specifications specifically require the integrated use of 'social, economic and environmental institutional indicators of land use changes', with DPSIR being the most internationally established tool for the management and integration of such indicators. Moreover, DPSIR has been developed and properly used by the European Environment Agency. The tool in fact proposed by the applicant is a DPSIR model updated in accordance with an innovative methodology and already successfully used in several projects of the United Nations and the International Union for the Conservation of Nature (IUCN);

contrary to what is stated in the contested decision, it is specifically stated in the applicant's bid that a land use model will be developed integrating the various models arising from the Sixth Framework Research Programme;

there is no reason to doubt the appropriateness of involving the applicant's director in the implementation of the project;

geographical representativeness is rightly not referred to in the invitation to tender since the project is not concerned with development, integration and/or inter-European cohesion. Furthermore, it is not understood on what basis, for the purposes of assessing a company, European experience is deemed more valuable than the United Nations and IUCN experience possessed by the applicant.

Defendant: Commission of the European Communities

Form of order sought

annul DG TAXUD's decision to reject the bid of the applicant, filed in response to the open Call for Tender TAXUD/2007/AO-005 (TIMEA) for the "Provision of services for the Community computer applications in the customs, excise and taxation areas" (OJ 2008/S 203-268728) which was communicated to the applicant by letter dated 26 September 2008 and all further related decisions of the Commission including the one to award the contract to the successful contractor; order DG TAXUD to pay the applicant's damages suffered on account of the tendering procedure in question for an amount of EUR 7 638 125;

order DG TAXUD to pay the applicant's legal and other costs and expenses incurred in connection with this application, even if the current application is rejected.

Pleas in law and main arguments

By means of its application the applicant seeks the annulment pursuant to Article 230 EC of the European Commission's (DG TAXUD) decision to reject the bid filed by the applicant in response to the open Call for Tenders TAXUD/2007/AO-005(TIMEA) for the "Provision of services for the Community computer applications in the customs, excise and taxation areas" (OJ 2008/S 203-268728) which was communicated to the applicant by letter dated 26 September 2008, as well as the award of damages pursuant to Article 235 EC.

The applicant claims that the Evaluation Committee committed various manifest errors of assessment with regards to the evaluation of the tender. According to the applicant, the Evaluation Committee deviated from the standard policy of the Commission and ignored the provisions included in the tender specifications of TIMEA, which suggest that the contracting authorities should contact the tenderer in the context of the selection phase of a Call for Tenders, and ask for additional information or clarifications. It is further submitted that Article 100 of the Financial Regulation and the principles of good administration and of legitimate expectations were breached by the contracting authority. In addition, the applicant claims that the contracting authority misused its powers and violated the principles of transparency and equal treatment provided for in Article 93(1) of the Financial Regulation.

The applicant claims that the defendant failed to provide the applicant with an adequate analysis of the outcome of the verifications carried out further to the applicant's comments on the evaluation report.

The applicant contends that the defendant used abusively the selection criteria in order to de-select the applicant's tender. By doing so, it infringed Articles 134(2) and 148(3) of Commission Regulation (EC, Euratom) No 2342/2002[1], as well as Article 32(2) of Directive 92/50[2].

Action brought on 3 December 2008 - Evropaïki Dynamiki v ECHA

(Case T-542/08)

Language of the case: English

Parties

Applicant: Evropaïki Dynamiki - Proigmena Systimata Tilepikoinonion Pliroforikis kai Tilematikis AE (Athens, Greece) (represented by: N. Korogiannakis, P. Katsimani, and M. Dermitzakis, lawyers)

Defendant: European Chemicals Agency

Form of order sought

annul European Chemicals Agency's decision to reject the bid of the applicant, filed in response to the open Call for Tender ECHA/2008/24 for the "Development of a Chemical Safety Assessment tool" (OJ 2008/S 115-152918), communicated to the applicant by an undated letter received by the applicant on 25 September 2008 and all subsequent decisions of ECHA including that to award it to the successful contractor;

order ECHA to pay the applicant's damages suffered on account of the tendering procedure in question for an amount of EUR 1 500 000;

order ECHA to pay the applicant's legal costs incurred in connection with this application even if the current application is rejected.

Pleas in law and main arguments

By means of its application, the applicant seeks the annulment of the European Chemicals Agency's ("ECHA") decision which was notified to it by way of a letter on 25 September 2008 informing the applicant that its bid submitted in the framework of the contract ECHA/2008/24 for the "Development of a Chemical Safety Assessment tool" (OJ 2008/S 115-152918) had not been selected and that the contract had been attributed to TRASYS SA.

The applicant claims that the Evaluation Committee committed multiple errors of assessment in relation to the award criteria, whereas fundamental rules and basic principles of public procurement were allegedly infringed by the contracting authority. Moreover, it is submitted that the ECHA misused its powers in the tender evaluation, infringed the Financial Regulation, and/or the principles of transparency and of equal treatment and that it used vague terms or insufficient motivation to substantiate its decision. Finally, the applicant contends that the defendant breached an essential procedural requirement, deriving from Article 158a of Commission Regulation (EC, Euratom) No 478/2007[1], providing for a standstill period before signing the contract with the successful tenderer. The applicant claims that the defendant has deliberately delayed communicating with the applicant in order to be able to finalise the signature of the contract with the wining tenderer before it received any comments from the applicant, thus annulling the spirit and purpose of the standstill period.

In addition, the applicant requests monetary compensation equal to EUR 1 500 000, corresponding to the estimated gross profit from the aforementioned public procurement procedure, should it have been awarded the contract. The applicant submits that its claim for damages is based upon its substantiated arguments that there has been a sufficiently serious breach of a superior rule of law for the protection of the individual and that the institutions concerned manifestly and gravely disregarded the limits on the exercise of their powers.

ORDER OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE COURT OF FIRST INSTANCE

23 January 2009 (*)

(Application for interim measures – Public procurement – Rejection of a tender – Application for suspension of operation of a measure – Loss of opportunity – No urgency)

In Case T–511/08 R,

Unity OSG FZE, established at Sharjah (United Arab Emirates), represented by C. Bryant and J. McEwen, Solicitors, applicant,

v

Council of the European Union, represented by G. Marhic and A. Vitro, acting as Agents, European Union Police Mission in Afghanistan (EUPOL Afghanistan), established in Kabul (Afghanistan), defendants,

APPLICATION for suspension of operation of the decision taken by EUPOL Afghanistan in the course of a tendering procedure to reject the applicant's tender and to award to another tenderer the contract for the provision of guarding and close protection services in Afghanistan,

THE PRESIDENT OF THE COURT OF FIRST INSTANCE OF THE EUROPEAN COMMUNITIES

makes the following

Order

Background to the dispute, procedure and forms of order sought by the parties

1 In December 2007, the European Union Police Mission in Afghanistan (EUPOL Afghanistan), established pursuant to Council Joint Action 2007/369/CFSP of 30 May 2007 (OJ 2007 L 139, p. 33), had entered into a contract with the applicant, Unity OSG FZE, for the provision of security services. That contract was valid until 30 November 2008.

2 At the end of September 2008, EUPOL Afghanistan published a service procurement notice relating to the provision of guarding and close protection services in Afghanistan, which was intended to replace the then contract as from 1 December 2008 for an initial duration of 12 months, with the possibility of an extension. The purpose of the contract was, essentially, to ensure the full and continued protection of all EUPOL Afghanistan staff in the city of Kabul and other areas of Afghanistan, and the security services required included guarding, close protection and residential security. It was estimated that fulfilment of the obligations under the contract would require approximately 67 positions of diverse categories, involving some 118 persons.

3 Having submitted a request to participate in the tendering procedure and received an invitation to tender, the applicant submitted its tender on 12 November 2008, that is, within the period prescribed in that regard.

4 On 23 November 2008, the applicant received a letter from EUPOL Afghanistan informing it that its tender had been rejected and that the contract had been awarded to ArmorGroup ('the contested decision'). By letter of 24 November 2008, the applicant protested to EUPOL Afghanistan against its elimination from the procedure and indicated that it intended to challenge the award of the contract.

5 The applicant took the view that there had been unlawful contact between EUPOL Afghanistan and ArmorGroup during the procurement procedure in question, and brought an action for annulment of the contested decision by application lodged at the Registry of the Court of First Instance on 27 November 2008.

6 By a separate document lodged at the Court Registry on the same date, the applicant brought the present application for interim measures in which it claims, in essence, that the President of the Court should:

– suspend the operation of the contested decision, pursuant to Article 105(2) of the Rules of Procedure of the Court of First Instance, pending the adoption of a final order in the present proceedings for interim measures and, in any event, until the Court has ruled on the main action;

– order any such other forms of interim relief considered appropriate;

– order the Council and EUPOL Afghanistan to pay the costs.

7 In its written observations on the application for interim measures, lodged at the Court Registry on 5 December 2008, the Council contends that the President of the Court should:

– dismiss the application for interim measures;

– order the applicant to pay the costs.

8 EUPOL Afghanistan did not lodge any pleading.

9 On 1 December 2008, the President of the Court put questions to the parties in writing. The applicant and the Council replied to those questions within the prescribed period.

Law

10 Under Articles 242 EC and 243 EC in conjunction with Article 225(1) EC, the judge hearing an application for interim measures may, if he considers that circumstances so require, order that application of an act contested before the Court of First Instance be suspended or prescribe any necessary interim measures.

11 Article 104(2) of the Rules of Procedure provides that an application for interim measures must state the subject-matter of the proceedings, the circumstances giving rise to urgency and the pleas of fact and law establishing a prima facie case for the interim measures applied for. Thus, suspension of the operation of an act or interim measures may be ordered if it is established that such an order is justified, prima facie, in fact and in law and that it is urgent in so far as it must, in order to avoid serious and irreparable harm to the applicant's interests, be made and produce its effects before a decision is reached in the main action. Those conditions are cumulative, so that an application for interim measures must be dismissed if any one of them is absent (order of the President of the Court in Case C–268/96 P(R) SCK and FNK v Commission [1996] ECR I–4971, paragraph 30).

12 In addition, in the context of that overall examination, the judge hearing the application enjoys a broad discretion and is free to determine, having regard to the specific circumstances of the case, the manner and order in which those various conditions are to be examined, there being no rule of Community law imposing a preestablished scheme of analysis within which the need to order interim measures must be assessed (orders of the President of the Court in Case C–149/95 P(R) Commission v Atlantic Container Line and Others [1995] ECR I–2165, paragraph 23, and of 3 April 2007 in Case C–459/06 P(R) Vischim v Commission, not published in the ECR, paragraph 25).

13 Finally, it is important to note that Article 242 EC lays down the principle that actions do not have suspensory effect (orders of the President of the Court in Case C–377/98 R Netherlands v Parliament and Council [2000] ECR I–6229, paragraph 44, and Case T–191/98 R II Cho Yang Shipping v Commission [2000] ECR II–2551, paragraph 42). It is only in exceptional cases, therefore, that the judge hearing an application for interim measures may order that application of an act contested before the Court be suspended or prescribe interim measures.

14 Having regard to the documents in the case, the President considers that he has all the information needed in order to rule on the present application for interim measures and that it is not necessary first to hear oral argument from the parties.

15 In the circumstances of the present case, it is necessary to consider, first, whether the condition of urgency is satisfied.

16 The applicant submits that, if its application for interim measures is dismissed, it will suffer serious and irreparable damage as a result of the implementation of the contract at issue, which was due to commence on 1 December 2008. In view of various factors relating to the nature of the contract and the applicant's position as incumbent contractor, it will be affected in a manner that distinguishes it from other unsuccessful tenderers and will suffer harm for which it cannot adequately be compensated by the award of pecuniary damages, since the harm will be much more than merely financial.

17 The nature of the former contract and the new contract is, according to the applicant, such that the handover between contractors will entail a significant upheaval for the applicant. It will be obliged to move equipment and personnel out of Afghanistan and redeploy them elsewhere or to sell its equipment and dismiss its staff. Accordingly, personnel who were due to arrive in Afghanistan on 4 December 2008 could not travel there and the applicant will be obliged to redeploy them elsewhere or to terminate their contracts of employment, which will involve significant upheaval, given the scale and nature of the contracts concerned.

18 Furthermore, the applicant's ability to perform the contract will be irremediably prejudiced, even if it secures the annulment of the contested decision. The applicant's tender was submitted on the basis of the local experience of its personnel, its situation in Kabul and its equipment. If the contract between EUPOL Afghanistan and ArmorGroup is implemented as planned, the applicant will be obliged to minimise the resulting financial impact by selling its equipment, releasing its employees or redeploying them elsewhere. Having done so, the applicant will, in the event of a new tendering procedure, not be in a position to submit a tender of equivalent strength to that which it had submitted. Moreover, the applicant will no longer have its premises in Kabul available as a base from which to operate and its position will therefore be disadvantaged.

19 The applicant further submits that its ability to retain its security licence in Afghanistan will be irremediably prejudiced. The retention of that licence effectively depends on the applicant's participation in contracts such as that at issue in the present case. Moreover, if it loses its security licence, the applicant's capacity to carry out other work in Afghanistan will be affected as a result.

20 Finally, the loss of the contract at issue will cause serious damage to the reputation of the applicant as the incumbent contractor. That is particularly apparent when combined with the possible loss of the applicant's security licence. Those effects cannot be adequately quantified or compensated by the award of damages at a later stage.

21 The Council contends that the claims put forward by the applicant do not meet the required standard of proof that it will suffer serious and irreparable damage before a decision is reached in the main action. Consequently, the condition relating to the urgency of the interim measures applied for is not satisfied.

Findings of the President

22 It must be noted that the urgency of an application for interim measures must be assessed in relation to the necessity for an interim order in order to prevent serious and irreparable damage to the party applying for those measures. It is for that party to prove that it cannot wait for the outcome of the main proceedings without suffering damage of that kind (see orders of the President of the Court in Case T–151/01 R Duales System Deutschland v Commission [2001] ECR II–3295, paragraph 187; Case T–195/05 R Deloitte Business Advisory v Commission [2005] ECR II–3485, paragraph 124; and of 25 April 2008 in Case T–41/08 R Vakakis v Commission, not published in the ECR, paragraph 52 and case-law cited).

23 Where harm depends on the occurrence of a number of factors, it is enough for that harm to be foreseeable with a sufficient degree of probability (orders of the President of the Court of Justice in Case C–335/99 P(R) HFB and Others v Commission [1999] ECR I–8705, paragraph 67, and of the Court of First Instance in Case T–369/03 R Arizona Chemical and Others v Commission [2004] ECR II–205, paragraph 71; see also, to that effect, order in Case C–280/93 R Germany v Council [1993] ECR I–3667, paragraphs 32 to 34). However, the applicant is still required to prove the facts which are deemed to attest to the probability of serious and irreparable damage (orders in Arizona Chemical and Others v Commission, paragraph 72, and HFB and Others v Commission, paragraph 67).

24 It is therefore necessary to consider whether, in the present case, the applicant has established with a sufficient degree of probability that it will suffer serious and irreparable damage if the interim measures it seeks are not granted.

25 As regards the seriousness of the damage pleaded in the present case, it must be noted that this is said to have been suffered on the occasion of a tendering procedure for the award of a contract. However, the purpose of such a procedure is to enable the authority concerned to select from a number of competing tenders that which appears to the authority to comply best with predetermined selection criteria. Moreover, the Community body which initiates such a procedure has a broad discretion with regard to the factors to be taken into account for the purpose of deciding to award the contract (Case T–145/98 ADT Projekt v Commission [2000] ECR II–387, paragraph 147; Case T–169/00 Esedra v Commission [2002] ECR II–609, paragraph 95; and Joined Cases T–376/05 and T–383/05 TEA-CEGOS and Others v Commission [2006] ECR II–205, paragraph 50).

26 Therefore, a company taking part in a tendering procedure never has an absolute guarantee that it will be awarded the contract, but must always keep in mind the possibility that the contract could be awarded to another tenderer. Under those circumstances, the adverse financial consequences which the company in question would suffer as a result of the rejection of its tender have, generally, to be considered to be part of the normal commercial risk which each company active in the market must face (order of the Judge hearing the application for interim measures of 14 September 2007 in Case T–211/07 R AWWW v Eurofound, not published in the ECR, paragraph 41).

27 It follows that the loss of an opportunity to be awarded and to perform a public contract forms an integral part of exclusion from the tendering procedure in question and cannot be regarded as constituting in itself serious damage, whether or not a specific assessment is made of the seriousness of the precise prejudice alleged in each case considered (see, to that effect, order in Deloitte Business Advisory v Commission, paragraph 150).

28 Therefore, the applicant undertaking's loss of an opportunity to be awarded and to perform the contract in the tendering procedure would constitute serious damage if it had shown to the requisite legal standard that it would have been able to derive sufficiently sizeable benefits from the award and performance of that contract. Furthermore, the seriousness of material damage must be assessed inter alia in the light of the size of the applicant undertaking (see, to that effect, order in Deloitte Business Advisory v Commission, paragraphs 151 and 156 and case-law cited).

29 In the present case, it must be held that the applicant has not produced any evidence at all to permit the inference, particularly in the light of its size, that the loss which it may suffer would be sufficiently serious to justify interim measures being ordered. In particular, it has not described the global, regional or local nature of its business of providing security services, indicating whether it was part of a group of undertakings which operate in a number of geographical markets or whether, on the contrary, the bulk of its turnover was achieved through EUPOL Afghanistan. However, as regards essential elements of fact and law establishing urgency, such information, substantiated by numerical data, should have been included in the application for interim measures (see, to that effect, orders of the President of the Court in Case T–236/00 R Stauner and Others v Parliament and Commission [2001] ECR II–15, paragraph 34; Case T–306/01 R Aden and Others v Council and Commission [2002] ECR II–2387, paragraph 52; and Case T–85/05 R Dimos Ano Liosion and Others v Commission [2005] ECR II–1721, paragraph 37).

30 Therefore, in the absence of relevant evidence in the application for interim measures, the President is not in a position to determine whether, for the applicant, the loss of an opportunity to obtain the income arising from the performance of the contract in question would be sufficiently serious to justify ordering interim measures.

31 It should be added that the pecuniary damage claimed by the applicant cannot be regarded as being irreparable, or even reparable only with difficulty, since it may be the subject of subsequent financial compensation. The applicant has, in particular, failed to show that it would be unable to obtain such compensation by means of an action for damages under Article 288 EC (see, to that effect, order of the President of the Court in Case T–303/04 R European Dynamics v Commission [2004] ECR II–3889, paragraph 72 and case-law cited).

32 It is true that the applicant maintains that its damage cannot be adequately compensated by the award of pecuniary damages. However, the applicant submitted a tender for the contract at issue. It would be possible, therefore, in any future damages action, to compare that tender with the tender accepted by EUPOL Afghanistan (see, to that effect, order of the President of the Court of 15 July 2008 in Case T–202/08 R CLL Centres de langues v Commission, not published in the ECR, paragraph 79).

33 In that context, it is apparent from the recent case-law of the Court of Justice that, where the Court of First Instance awards damages on the basis of the economic value attributed to the damage suffered as a result of a loss of income, that reparation is, generally, capable of complying with the requirement to ensure that the individual damage actually suffered by the party concerned because of the particular unlawful acts of which it was the victim is fully compensated (see, to that effect, Case C–348/06 P Commission v Girardot [2008] ECR I–833, paragraph 76).

34 It follows from this that, should the applicant be successful in the main action, an economic value can be attributed to the damage suffered as a result of the loss of the opportunity to win the disputed tender procedure, which is capable of complying with the requirement that the individual damage actually suffered be fully compensated (see, to that effect, order in Vakakis v Commission, paragraph 67).

35 In the light of the foregoing, the interim measures sought could be justified in the circumstances of the present case only if it were apparent that in the absence of such measures the applicant would be in a situation which could endanger its very existence or irretrievably alter its position in the market (see, to that effect, order in European Dynamics v Commission, paragraph 73).

36 The applicant has not, however, adduced proof that, in the absence of the interim measures sought, it would be liable to be placed in such a situation.

37 The applicant has failed to provide data concerning its size and financial situation (see paragraph 29 above). Moreover, although the applicant submits that, if it did not obtain the contract at issue, it would suffer serious upheaval owing to the fact that it would have to move equipment out of Afghanistan, redeploy or dismiss its staff and give up its premises in Kabul, these are mere assertions which are not substantiated by any evidence that could lead the President to conclude that the applicant's existence will be endangered until the Court rules on the main action.

38 Furthermore, as regards in particular the argument that the applicant would be obliged to dismiss some of its employees, it is settled case-law that, in order to establish that the condition of urgency is met, an applicant is required to show that the suspension of operation sought is necessary in order to protect his own interests. However, in order to establish urgency, an applicant cannot plead damage to an interest which is not personal to him, such as for example to the rights of third parties (see order of the President of the Court in Case T–316/04 R Wam v Commission [2004] ECR II–3917, paragraph 28 and case-law cited). Therefore, the damage suffered by the applicant's employees cannot properly be invoked in order to substantiate the urgency of the suspension of operation sought. It is not damage to interests which are personal to the applicant (see, to that effect, orders of the President of the Court of 2 August 2006 in Case T–69/06 R Aughinish Alumina v Commission, not published in the ECR, paragraph 81, and in Case T–31/07 R Du Pont de Nemours (France) and Others v Commission [2007] ECR II–2767, paragraphs 147 and 168).

39 In so far as the applicant pleads damage to its reputation, suffice it to note that participation in a public tendering procedure, by nature highly competitive, involves risks for all the participants and the elimination of a tenderer under the tender rules is not in itself in any way prejudicial. Where an undertaking has been unlawfully eliminated from a tendering procedure, there is even less reason to believe that it is liable to suffer serious and irreparable harm to its reputation, since its exclusion is unconnected with its competences and the subsequent annulling judgment will in principle allow any harm to its reputation to be made good (see order in Deloitte Business Advisory v Commission, paragraph 126 and case-law cited).

40 The applicant also maintains that the damage it will suffer is not confined to financial damage. In that regard, it complains of the risk of losing its security licence in Afghanistan and its capacity to carry out other work in that country if it were to lose the contract at issue. Nevertheless, again, these are mere assertions which are not substantiated by any evidence capable of being reviewed by the President. In particular, the applicant has failed to adduce evidence to show that the loss alone of the contract at issue would prevent it from being able to provide other security services on the same scale in the future or from participating in any tendering procedures launched by EUPOL Afghanistan in that sphere.

41 In any event, the applicant states that, without interim measures, any remedy granted to it after 30 November 2008 (date of the end of its contract with EUPOL Afghanistan) will have little practical effect and that its position will be irrevocably altered from 1 December 2008 (commencement date of the contract between EUPOL Afghanistan and ArmorGroup). Thus the applicant itself claims that, after those dates, the damage will have been caused and consequently cannot be 'prevented', as referred to in the case-law cited in paragraph 22 above, by the adoption of the interim measure sought. However, the purpose of proceedings for interim relief is not to ensure reparation for damage (orders of the President of the Court in Case T–47/03 R Sison v Council [2003] ECR II–2047, paragraph 41, and of 27 August 2008 in Case T–246/08 R Melli Bank v Council, not published in the ECR, paragraph 53).

42 Having regard to the foregoing, it must be concluded that the applicant has not established with the requisite degree of probability that, if the President does not grant the interim measures applied for, it will suffer serious and irreparable harm.

43 Therefore, the application for interim measures must be dismissed for lack of urgency, and there is no need to consider whether the application may be deemed admissible and, if so, whether the other conditions for the grant of the suspension of operation sought are satisfied.

On those grounds,

THE PRESIDENT OF THE COURT OF FIRST INSTANCE

hereby orders:

1. The application for interim measures is dismissed.

2. Costs are reserved.

Applicant: International Confederation of Societies of Authors and Composers (CISAC) (Neuilly-sur-Seine, France) (represented by: J.-F. Bellis and K. Van Hove, lawyers)

Defendant: Commission of the European Communities

Form of order sought

— annul Article 3 of the Commission decision of 16 July 2008 relating to a proceeding under Article 81 EC and Article 53 EEA (Case COM/C2/38.698 — CISAC); and

— order the Commission to pay the costs.

Pleas in law and main arguments

By means of this application, the applicant seeks the annulment, pursuant to Article 230 EC, of Article 3 of the Commission decision of 16 July 2008 (Case COM/C2/38.698 — CISAC), determining that 24 of CISAC's EEA based societies engaged in a concerted practice in violation of Article 81 EC and Article 53 EEA 'by coordinating the territorial delineations of the reciprocal representation mandates granted to one another in a way which limits a licence to the domestic territory of each collecting society'.

Language of the case: English

Parties

Applicant: Unity OSG FZE (Dubai, United Arab Emirates) (represented by: C. Bryant and J. McEwen, lawyers)

Defendants: Council of the European Union and European Union Police Mission in Afghanistan ("EUPOL Afghanistan")

Form of order sought

Annul the decision of the European Union Police Mission in Afghanistan ("EUPOL Afghanistan") (i) to reject the applicant's tender in relation to the contract for provision of guarding and close protection services in Afghanistan, (ii) to award the contract to another tenderer as communicated to the applicant by letter of 23 November 2008; order the defendant to bear the applicant's costs pursuant to Article 87 of the Rules of Procedure of the Court of First Instance.

Pleas in law and main arguments

On 19 December 2007, the applicant entered into a contract with the European Union Police Mission in Afghanistan[1] ("EUPOL Afghanistan") for the provision of security services. In September 2008, EUPOL Afghanistan issued a public procurement notice concerning the provision of guarding and close protection services which was published[2] on the European Commission's website in relation to the "EuropeAid" programme and in accordance to the provisions of Title V of Part One of the Financial Regulation 1605/2002[3] ("the Financial Regulation") and the detailed rules for the implementation of the Financial Regulation contained in Commission Regulation 2342/2002[4].

The applicant seeks the annulment of the decision of EUPOL Afghanistan of 23 November 2008, by which the applicant was informed that its tender had not been successful and that the contract would be awarded to Armor Group, on the basis of the following grounds:

First, the applicant claims that the defendant infringed the principles of equal treatment and non-discrimination provided for in Article 89(1) of the Financial Regulation.

Second, the applicant submits that the conditions applicable to contacts between the contracting authority and tenderers during the procurement process as set out in Article 99 of the Financial Regulation and in Articles 120(2)(d) and 148 of the Implementing Rules have been infringed.

Third, the applicant contends that the requirement to advertise a contract opportunity first in the Official Journal of the European Union, before being advertised elsewhere, as set out in Article 121 of the Implementing Rules, was infringed. According to the applicant, this requirement was infringed since the contract was advertised on the EuropAid website first, rather than in the Official Journal.

Fourth, the applicant submits that the requirement to respect the minimum time-limits under the accelerated restricted procedure laid down in Article 142(1) of the Financial Regulation has been infringed.

Fifth, the applicant claims that the defendant failed to respect the requirement set out in Article 158(a) of the Implementing Rules, for a standstill period between the decision on contract award and signature of the contract. In addition, the applicant puts forward that the defendant failed to provide an adequate statement of reasons, in accordance with Article 253 EC.

Action brought on 6 October 2008 - Evropaïki Dynamiki v BEI

(Case T-461/08)

Language of the case: English

Parties

Applicant: Evropaïki Dynamiki - Proigmena Systimata Tilepikoinonion Pliroforikis kai Tilematikis AE (Athènes, Greece) (represented by: N. Korogiannakis and P. Katsimani, lawyers)

Defendant: European Investment Bank

Form of order sought

Annul the decision of the European Investment Bank to evaluate the applicant's bid as not successful and award the contract to the successful contractor;

Order the European Investment Bank to pay the applicant's damages suffered on account of the tendering procedure in question for an amount of EUR 1 940 000.00;

Order the European Investment Bank to pay the applicant's legal and other costs and expenses incurred in connection with this application, even if the current application is rejected.

Pleas in law and main arguments

By means of its application pursuant to Articles 230 EC and 235 EC, the applicant seeks, on one hand, the annulment of the decision of the European Investment Bank of 26 July 2008 to reject the bid of the applicant filed in response to the open Call for Tenders "EIB-Assistance in the Maintenance Support and Development of the loans front Office system (SERAPIS) at the European Investment Bank" (OJ 2007/S 176-215155), and on the other hand, compensation for damages.

The applicant claims that the outcome of the tender has not been communicated to it and that it came only incidentally to its knowledge that a contract award notice had been published in the Official Journal[1] of 26 July 2008. The applicant argues that the contested decision was taken by the defendant in violation of the principles of transparency and of equal treatment, and of the relevant provisions of the EIB's Guide for Procurement and the EC law on public procurement. It is submitted moreover that by not notifying the applicant of its award decision, by failing to provide sufficient justification of its decision to award the contract to another tenderer, by setting criteria that result in unequal treatment, by mixing selection and award criteria, by using a discriminatory evaluation formula of a ratio 75%/25%, the defendant allegedly failed to ensure undistorted competition through repeated infringements of the obligation of transparency and equal treatment.

The applicant furthermore claims that should the Court find that the defendant infringed the community law of public procurement and/or principles of legal transparency and of equal treatment, the applicant requests monetary compensation equal to 50% of EUR 3 880 000.00 (EUR 1 940 000.00) from EIB, corresponding to the estimated gross profit from the aforementioned public procurement procedure, should the contract have been awarded to the applicant.

The applicant further requests the Court to condemn the defendant to pay the applicant's legal costs even if the Court rejects the application, in accordance with Article 87(3)(b) of the Rules of Procedure of the Court of First Instance, since it considers that it was the defendant's deficient evaluation of the applicant's tender, as well as the failure to state reasons and inform the applicant timely on the relative merits of the successful tenderer that forced the applicant to seek legal redress before this Court.

[1] - OJ 2008/S 144-192307

Further, it is submitted that the Commission misapplied Article 88(2) EC and Article 14(1) of Regulation (EC) No 659/1999 in targeting Elliniki Nafpigokataskevastiki, which was not the beneficiary of the aid, by ordering it to stop the Indemnification Guarantee.

Also, the applicants claim that the Commission's argument alleging circumvention of the effet utile of recovery wrongly relies on the assumption that circumvention occurs by the simple granting of the Indemnification Guarantee.

Finally, the applicants submit that the Commission misapplied Article 296 EC in that it does not allow HSY to carry on a certain degree of civil activities which are of an ancillary nature in order to sustain the operation of the whole shipyard.

(1) This consortium founded Elliniki Nafpigokataskevastiki in order to harbour the holding in HSY.
(2) HDW is wholy owned by ThyssenKrupp Marine Systems which also acquired Ferrostaaal's shares in Elliniki Nafpigokataskevastiki in 2005.

Defendant: Office for Official Publications of the European Communities

Form of order sought

— Annul the decision of the Office for Official Publications of the European Communities (OPOCE) to reject the bid of the applicant, filed in response to open Call for Tender AO 10185 for 'Computing Services — maintenance of the SEI-BUD/AMD/CR systems and related services' (OJ 2008/S 43-058884) communicated to the applicant by letter dated 20 June 2008 and to award the contract to the successful contractor;

— Order OPOCE to pay the applicant's damages suffered on account of the tendering procedure in question in the amount of EUR 1 444 930;

— Order OPOCE to pay the applicant's legal and other costs and expenses incurred in connection with this application, even if the current application is rejected.

Pleas in law and main arguments

In the present case the applicant seeks the annulment of the defendant's decision to reject its bid submitted in response to a call for an open tender AO 10185 regarding the 'Computing Services — maintenance of the SEI-BUD/AMD/CR systems and related services' and to award the contract to the successful contractor. The applicant further requests compensation for the alleged damages on account of the tendering procedure.

In support of its claims the applicant argues that by awarding the aforementioned tender to another bidder the defendant failed to comply with its obligations foreseen in the financial regulation (1), its implementing rules and Directive 2004/18/EC (2) as well as with the principles of transparency, equal treatment and proportionality.

The applicant moreover submits that the contracting authority infringed its obligation, foreseen in the above mentioned applicable rules, to sufficiently state reasons for its decision. Furthermore, the applicant alleges that the contracting authority used the criteria that were not expressively included in the call for tender, mixed evaluation with award criteria, therefore infringing the tender specifications, and committed several manifest errors of assessment which resulted in the rejection of the applicant's bid.

The applicant requests, hence, that the decision to reject its bid and to award the contract to the successful tenderer be annulled and that the defendant is ordered to pay, in addition to the applicant's legal expenses related to the proceedings, the damages suffered by the applicant on account of the tendering procedure.

Applicant: Evropaïki Dynamiki - Proigmena Systimata Tilepikoinonion Pliroforikis kai Tilematikis AE (Athens, Greece) (represented by: N. Korogiannakis, P. Katsimani, and M. Dermitzakis, lawyers)

Defendant: European Chemicals Agency

Form of order sought

annul European Chemicals Agency's decision to reject the bid of the applicant, filed in response to the open Call for Tender ECHA/2008/24 for the "Development of a Chemical Safety Assessment tool" (OJ 2008/S 115-152918), communicated to the applicant by an undated letter received by the applicant on 25 September 2008 and all subsequent decisions of ECHA including that to award it to the successful contractor;

order ECHA to pay the applicant's damages suffered on account of the tendering procedure in question for an amount of EUR 1 500 000;

order ECHA to pay the applicant's legal costs incurred in connection with this application even if the current application is rejected.

Pleas in law and main arguments

By means of its application, the applicant seeks the annulment of the European Chemicals Agency's ("ECHA") decision which was notified to it by way of a letter on 25 September 2008 informing the applicant that its bid submitted in the framework of the contract ECHA/2008/24 for the "Development of a Chemical Safety Assessment tool" (OJ 2008/S 115-152918) had not been selected and that the contract had been attributed to TRASYS SA.

The applicant claims that the Evaluation Committee committed multiple errors of assessment in relation to the award criteria, whereas fundamental rules and basic principles of public procurement were allegedly infringed by the contracting authority. Moreover, it is submitted that the ECHA misused its powers in the tender evaluation, infringed the Financial Regulation, and/or the principles of transparency and of equal treatment and that it used vague terms or insufficient motivation to substantiate its decision. Finally, the applicant contends that the defendant breached an essential procedural requirement, deriving from Article 158a of Commission Regulation (EC, Euratom) No 478/2007[1], providing for a standstill period before signing the contract with the successful tenderer. The applicant claims that the defendant has deliberately delayed communicating with the applicant in order to be able to finalise the signature of the contract with the wining tenderer before it received any comments from the applicant, thus annulling the spirit and purpose of the standstill period.

In addition, the applicant requests monetary compensation equal to EUR 1 500 000, corresponding to the estimated gross profit from the aforementioned public procurement procedure, should it have been awarded the contract. The applicant submits that its claim for damages is based upon its substantiated arguments that there has been a sufficiently serious breach of a superior rule of law for the protection of the individual and that the institutions concerned manifestly and gravely disregarded the limits on the exercise of their powers.

Cadre juridique

2 L'article 100, paragraphe 2, du règlement financier dispose :

Toutefois la communication de certains éléments peut être omise dans les cas où elle ferait obstacle à l'application des lois, serait contraire à l'intérêt public, porterait préjudice aux intérêts commerciaux légitimes d'entreprises publiques ou privées ou pourrait nuire à une concurrence loyale entre celles-ci. »

3 L'article 101 du règlement financier dispose :

Cette décision doit être motivée et portée à la connaissance des candidats ou des soumissionnaires. »

4 L'article 149, paragraphes 1 et 2, des modalités d'exécution prévoit :

2. Le pouvoir adjudicateur communique, dans un délai maximal de quinze jours calendrier à compter de la réception d'une demande écrite, les informations mentionnées à l'article 100, paragraphe 2, du règlement financier. »

Antécédents du litige et procédure

5 Par courrier du 7 avril 2008, le Parlement européen a informé la requérante, AIB-Vinçotte Luxembourg (AVLUX ASBL), qu'il envisageait la passation d'un marché public relatif à un « Projet d'extension du bâtiment Konrad Adenauer à Luxembourg » contenant deux lots, à savoir le lot A (mission de surveillance des nuisances dues aux travaux) et le lot B (mission d'organisme de contrôle agréé).

6 La requérante a présenté son offre le 19 mai 2008.

7 Par courrier du 2 octobre 2008 (ci-après la « décision attaquée »), le Parlement a informé la requérante que son offre n'avait pas été retenue et qu'il lui était possible d'obtenir, sur demande écrite, les caractéristiques et les avantages relatifs à l'offre retenue ainsi que le nom de l'attributaire du marché.

8 Par courrier du 3 octobre 2008, la requérante a sollicité du Parlement des informations concernant les caractéristiques et les avantages de l'offre retenue ainsi que le nom de l'attributaire du marché.

9 Par courrier du 9 octobre 2008, le Parlement a communiqué à la requérante le nom des attributaires ainsi que des informations relatives à leur classement et à celui de la requérante.

10 Par courrier du 16 octobre 2008, la requérante a énoncé certains arguments qui, selon elle, iraient à l'encontre d'une telle attribution et a demandé une suspension de la procédure d'adjudication en vue d'un examen complémentaire de son offre.

11 Par courrier du 29 octobre 2008, le Parlement a informé la requérante que, en vertu du principe de précaution, il avait provisoirement suspendu la signature du contrat avec l'attributaire du marché afin de pouvoir analyser les motivations développées dans le courrier de la requérante du 16 octobre 2008. Cependant, il a considéré qu'aucun des arguments développés dans ledit courrier ne lui paraissait être de nature à remettre en cause l'attribution du marché. Il a dès lors fixé un délai de cinq jours ouvrables pour que la requérante puisse lui fournir des éléments nouveaux, faute de quoi il procéderait à la signature du contrat.

13 Par courrier du 28 novembre 2008, le Parlement a informé la requérante que la signature du contrat avec l'attributaire du lot B du marché avait été suspendue et que l'analyse de ses arguments était en cours. En outre, il lui a demandé des informations complémentaires concernant son offre.

14 Par requête déposée au greffe du Tribunal le 2 décembre 2008, la requérante a introduit le présent recours visant à l'annulation de la décision attaquée.

15 Par courrier du 30 janvier 2009, le Parlement a informé la requérante qu'il avait décidé d'annuler la procédure de passation du marché en cause.

16 Par acte séparé déposé au greffe du Tribunal le 12 février 2009, le Parlement a déposé une demande de non-lieu à statuer.

17 Le 9 mars 2009, la requérante a déposé des observations sur la demande de non-lieu de statuer.

Conclusions des parties

18 La requérante conclut à ce qu'il plaise au Tribunal :

– annuler la décision attaquée ;

– lui réserver tous les autres droits, voies, moyens et actions, et notamment la condamnation du Parlement à des dommages et intérêts en rapport avec le préjudice subi ;

– condamner le Parlement aux dépens.

19 Dans sa demande de non-lieu à statuer, le Parlement conclut à ce qu'il plaise au Tribunal :

– constater que le recours est devenu sans objet et qu'il n'y a plus lieu de statuer ;

– régler les dépens conformément à l'article 87, paragraphe 6, du règlement de procédure du Tribunal.

20 Dans ses observations sur la demande de non-lieu à statuer, la requérante conclut à ce qu'il plaise au Tribunal :

– donner acte à la requérante qu'elle se rapporte à la sagesse du Tribunal quant au bien-fondé de la demande de non-lieu à statuer ;

– condamner le Parlement aux dépens de la procédure y compris les frais d'avocat exposés par la requérante ;

– à titre subsidiaire, si les frais d'avocat n'étaient pas remboursables au titre des dépens, condamner le Parlement au paiement des frais au titre des frais frustratoires et vexatoires ;

– lui réserver tous les autres droits, voies, moyens et actions, et notamment la condamnation du Parlement à des dommages et intérêts en rapport avec le préjudice subi.

En droit

21 La demande de non-lieu à statuer du Parlement soulève un incident de procédure qu'il convient, en vertu de l'article 114, paragraphe 3, du règlement de procédure, de régler sans ouvrir la procédure orale, le Tribunal s'estimant suffisamment éclairé par les pièces du dossier.

22 Il y a lieu de relever que, en l'espèce, la procédure d'attribution du marché litigieux n'a pas été achevée, l'appel d'offres litigieux ayant été annulé par le Parlement le 30 janvier 2009. Cette décision a été communiquée à la requérante par courrier recommandé.

23 À cet égard, il convient d'observer que le règlement financier et les modalités d'exécution ne comportent aucune disposition imposant expressément au pouvoir adjudicateur qui a procédé à un appel d'offres de mener à son terme une procédure d'attribution d'un marché (voir, en ce sens et par analogie, arrêt de la Cour du 18 juin 2002, HI, C–92/00, Rec. p. I–5553, point 41 ; ordonnance de la Cour du 16 octobre 2003, Kauppatalo Hansel, C–244/02, Rec. p. I–12139, point 30, et arrêt du Tribunal du 17 décembre 1998, Embassy Limousines & Services/Parlement, T–203/96, Rec. p. II–4239, point 55). Il ressort, en particulier, de l'article 101 du règlement financier, de l'article 149, paragraphe 1, des modalités d'exécution, ainsi que du point 7 de la lettre d'invitation à soumissionner du 7 avril 2008, d'une part, que le pouvoir adjudicateur peut, jusqu'à la signature du contrat, soit renoncer au marché, soit annuler la procédure de passation du marché, sans que les candidats ou les soumissionnaires puissent prétendre à une quelconque indemnisation et, d'autre part, que cette décision doit être motivée et portée à la connaissance des candidats ou des soumissionnaires dans les meilleurs délais. Lesdites dispositions ne prévoient pas, en outre, que la décision de renoncer au marché ou d'annuler la procédure de passation du marché soit limitée aux cas exceptionnels ou soit nécessairement fondée sur des motifs graves (ordonnance du Tribunal du 19 octobre 2007, Evropaïki Dynamiki/EFSA, T–69/05, non publiée au Recueil, point 51 ; voir également, en ce sens et par analogie, arrêts de la Cour du 16 septembre 1999, Fracasso et Leitschutz, C–27/98, Rec. p. I–5697, points 23 et 25 ; HI, précité, point 40, et ordonnance Kauppatalo Hansel, précitée, point 29).

24 En l'espèce, il y a lieu de constater que, par l'adoption de la décision du 30 janvier 2009 annulant l'appel d'offres, le Parlement a rendu la décision attaquée caduque, dès lors qu'il n'existait plus de marché à attribuer. Il a adopté cette décision, après avoir estimé qu'aucune des offres soumises ne répondait pleinement aux objectifs du marché. Dans sa demande de non-lieu à statuer, il a ainsi énoncé qu'il s'était avéré que le soumissionnaire retenu par la décision attaquée ne détenait pas la capacité d'exécuter l'ensemble du marché, parce qu'il ne disposait pas de tous les agréments nécessaires à la totalité des contrôles, tandis que l'offre de la requérante avait été considérée comme inacceptable, puisque le prix qu'elle proposait dépassait très largement les estimations du Parlement.

25 Dans ces circonstances, la caducité de la décision attaquée, qui a engendré sa disparition de l'ordre juridique communautaire, produit des effets équivalant à ceux d'un arrêt d'annulation, sans préjudice du droit de la requérante de contester, le cas échéant, dans le cadre d'un recours distinct, la légalité de la décision d'annulation de l'appel d'offres. En effet, un arrêt qui annulerait la décision attaquée n'entraînerait aucune conséquence juridique supplémentaire par rapport aux conséquences découlant de sa caducité. La requérante ne conserve, dès lors, aucun intérêt à obtenir l'annulation de la décision attaquée. Il s'ensuit que le présent recours est devenu sans objet et que, par conséquent, il n'y a plus lieu de statuer (voir, en ce sens, ordonnance Evropaïki Dynamiki/EFSA, précitée, point 53, et la jurisprudence citée).

26 En ce qui concerne le deuxième chef de conclusions de la requête, la requérante, en faisant valoir qu'elle veut se réserver « tous autres droits, voies, moyens et actions », indique uniquement qu'elle entend se réserver la possibilité d'exercer d'autres recours.

27 À cet égard, il y a lieu de relever que le contentieux communautaire ne connaît pas de voie de recours permettant au juge de « donner acte » à une partie de ce qu'elle se réserve le droit de former un recours (arrêt du Tribunal du 14 février 2001, Sodima/Commission, T–62/99, Rec. p. II–655, point 28).

28 Partant, le deuxième chef de conclusions de la requête est irrecevable.

29 À la lumière des considérations qui précèdent, il y a lieu de constater que le recours est devenu sans objet et qu'il n'y a plus lieu de statuer.

Sur les dépens

30 Selon l'article 87, paragraphe 6, du règlement de procédure, en cas de non-lieu à statuer, le Tribunal règle librement les dépens.

31 La requérante estime avoir tout fait pour éviter une procédure devant le Tribunal, contrairement au Parlement. Elle considère que l'annulation de la procédure de passation du marché en cause a été décidée uniquement en raison des observations et des contestations qu'elle a émises. Par ailleurs, elle estime que cette décision d'annulation serait fondée sur une « analyse approfondie de l'ensemble des pièces du dossier », que le Parlement n'aurait effectuée qu'après le dépôt du présent recours en annulation.

32 En l'espèce, le Parlement a suspendu la signature du contrat avec le soumissionnaire initialement choisi sur la base des contestations de la requérante. Cette dernière a introduit le présent recours dans le délai prévu par l'article 230 CE. C'est donc dans ces circonstances que le Parlement a procédé à une analyse approfondie de l'ensemble des pièces du dossier et a adopté la décision d'annulation du marché en cause.

33 Au vu de ces considérations, le Tribunal estime qu'il sera fait une juste appréciation des circonstances de l'espèce en décidant que le Parlement supportera l'ensemble des dépens.

Par ces motifs,

LE TRIBUNAL (cinquième chambre)

ordonne :

1) Il n'y a plus lieu de statuer sur le présent recours.

2) Le Parlement européen est condamné aux dépens.

Action brought on 2 December 2008 - AIB-Vinçotte Luxembourg v Parliament

(Case T-524/08)

Language of the case: French

Parties

Applicant: AIB-Vinçotte Luxembourg ASBL (Luxembourg, Luxembourg) (represented by R. Adam, lawyer)

Defendant: European Parliament

Form of order sought

annul the decision of the European Parliament of 2 October 2008 rejecting the offer made by the applicant in connection with call for tenders INLO - A - BATI LUX - 07 268 & 271 - 00 for the refurbishment and extension of the Konrad Adenauer Building, Luxembourg, reserve to the applicant all other rights, remedies, pleas and actions, in particular an order that the Parliament pay damages in connection with the loss incurred;

in any event, order the Parliament to pay the costs.

Pleas in law and main arguments

The applicant contests the Parliament's decision to reject its offer submitted in connection with the call for tenders for lot B of the contract relating to the projected extension and refurbishment of the KAD building in Luxembourg - Tasks of an approved inspection body (OJ 2008 S 193-254240).

In support of its application, the applicant puts forward four pleas in law:

manifest error of assessment on the part of the Parliament, in that (i) the association to which the contract was awarded did not have the necessary authorisations to perform the tasks requested, as required in the tender specifications, and (ii) that association's offer stated a price that was abnormally low having regard to the criteria in the specifications; infringement of the obligation to state reasons, in that (i) the Parliament did not state the specific benefits of the offer accepted in comparison with the applicant's offer, thus not enabling the applicant to identify the reasons why its offer was not accepted, and (ii) the applicant was not put in a position to know whether the assessment committee met and, if so, what its conclusions were;

infringement of the principles of diligence, good administration and transparency, as the Parliament failed to provide the explanations requested within a reasonable time; infringement of the provisions of the administrative specifications, in that neither the contested decision nor the subsequent letters mentioned remedies.

Faits, procédure et arguments des parties

1 Par lettre du 4 juin 2008 (ci-après l'« acte attaqué »), la Commission des Communautés européennes a notifié aux requérantes, Bull SAS, Unisys Belgium et Tata Consultancy Services (TCS) SA, le rejet de l'offre qu'elles avaient soumise dans le cadre de la procédure d'appel d'offres DIG IT/R2/PO/2007/024, au motif qu'elles n'avaient pas passé le stade de l'évaluation financière des offres, en raison de prix anormalement bas. La Commission a précisé qu'elle avait décidé de ne pas attribuer de contrat à la suite de cet appel d'offres. Elle a indiqué qu'elle entamerait une procédure négociée afin d'attribuer ce contrat, conformément à l'article 127, paragraphe 1, sous a), du règlement (CE, Euratom) n° 2342/2002 de la Commission, du 23 décembre 2002, établissant les modalités d'exécution du règlement (CE, Euratom) n° 1605/2002 du Conseil portant règlement financier applicable au budget général des Communautés européennes (JO L 357, p. 1, ci-après les « modalités d'exécution »). Les soumissionnaires ayant participé à l'appel d'offres public infructueux seraient invités à participer à cette procédure négociée. Les requérantes recevraient en temps utile les documents visant ladite procédure.

2 Par requête déposée au greffe du Tribunal le 11 août 2008, les requérantes ont demandé l'annulation de l'acte attaqué.

3 Par lettre déposée au greffe du Tribunal le 26 mai 2009, les requérantes ont informé le Tribunal, conformément à l'article 99 du règlement de procédure du Tribunal, qu'elles se désistaient de leur recours et ont demandé que chacune des parties supporte ses propres dépens.

4 Par lettre déposée au greffe du Tribunal le 4 juin 2009, la Commission a fait savoir au Tribunal qu'elle ne s'opposait pas à ce désistement. Elle a cependant demandé au Tribunal que les requérantes soient condamnées à supporter ses dépens, outre leurs propres dépens, conformément à l'article 87, paragraphe 5, premier alinéa, du règlement de procédure. La Commission précise qu'il n'existe aucun accord entre les parties à cet égard.

5 Par lettre déposée au greffe du Tribunal le 12 juin 2009, les requérantes ont indiqué que leur désistement était justifié par la circonstance que, au terme de la procédure négociée PN/2008/057 lancée par l'acte attaqué, le marché litigieux leur avait été finalement attribué. Les requérantes font cependant valoir que, alors que l'acte attaqué avait selon elles été adopté de manière irrégulière, leur désistement était la conséquence de l'adoption régulière d'une nouvelle décision à la suite de la modification du cahier des charges dans le cadre de la procédure négociée. Il ne serait dès lors pas équitable qu'elles doivent supporter les dépens de la Commission. Les requérantes soutiennent également que, à cause de l'acte attaqué, elles ont dû attendre une année entière et investir des moyens supplémentaires aux fins de la nouvelle procédure d'examen des offres.

6 Par lettre déposée au greffe du Tribunal le 29 juillet 2009, la Commission a contesté les arguments des requérantes.

7 Premièrement, l'affirmation des requérantes selon laquelle la procédure négociée se serait substituée à la précédente procédure irrégulière serait manifestement erronée. Selon la Commission, la nouvelle décision d'attribution prise dans le cadre de la procédure négociée n'aurait ni annulé ni remplacé l'acte attaqué. Elle ne l'aurait pas non plus modifié dans la mesure où il s'agissait d'une « décision distincte et nouvelle ».

8 Deuxièmement, la Commission conteste l'affirmation des requérantes selon laquelle cette institution aurait modifié son cahier des charges dans le cadre de la mise en œuvre de la procédure négociée. Elle fait valoir qu'une telle modification est explicitement interdite par l'article 127, paragraphe 1, sous a), des modalités d'exécution. Au surplus, les requérantes n'auraient apporté aucune preuve concrète à l'appui de l'affirmation susvisée. En tout état de cause, contrairement à l'offre initiale, la nouvelle offre ne serait pas entachée des mêmes irrégularités, ce qui aurait permis à la Commission d'attribuer le marché litigieux aux requérantes.

9 Troisièmement, le fait que les requérantes ont dû attendre une année entière et investir des moyens supplémentaires aux fins de la nouvelle procédure ne saurait être une conséquence de l'acte attaqué.

Appréciation du Tribunal

10 Les requérantes ayant fait connaître par écrit au Tribunal qu'elles se désistaient de leur recours, il y a lieu, conformément à l'article 99 du règlement de procédure, d'ordonner la radiation de l'affaire du registre et de statuer sur les dépens.

11 Selon l'article 87, paragraphe 5, premier alinéa, du règlement de procédure, la partie qui se désiste de son recours est condamnée aux dépens, s'il est conclu en ce sens par l'autre partie. Toutefois, à la demande de la partie qui se désiste, les dépens sont supportés par l'autre partie, si cela apparaît justifié en vertu de l'attitude de cette dernière.

12 Il appartient donc aux requérantes d'établir que la Commission a adopté une attitude qui justifierait sa condamnation aux dépens de l'instance (voir, en ce sens, ordonnance du Tribunal du 22 octobre 1996, Carvel et Guardian Newspapers/Conseil, T–19/96, Rec. p. II–1519, point 24).

13 Il convient, en premier lieu, de relever que les requérantes n'établissent pas en quoi l'attitude adoptée par la Commission pourrait justifier la condamnation de celle-ci aux dépens. En effet, les requérantes ont présenté leur demande de désistement après avoir été informées, dans le cadre de la procédure négociée, qu'elles étaient les attributaires du marché litigieux. L'acte attaqué a été adopté par la Commission dans le cadre de la procédure ouverte DIGIT/R2/PO/2007/024 et non lors de la mise en œuvre de la procédure négociée PN/2008/057.

14 Il convient, en deuxième lieu, de relever que, bien que la procédure négociée ne puisse être engagée par la Commission qu'en présence de situations spécifiques, telles que celles d'offres irrégulières ou inacceptables soumises en réponse à une procédure ouverte et préalablement clôturée, prévues à l'article 127, paragraphe 1, sous a), des modalités d'exécution, il n'en reste pas moins qu'elle constitue une procédure autonome et distincte de toute autre procédure de passation de marchés et, en particulier, de la procédure ouverte, au sens de l'article 91 du règlement (CE, Euratom) n° 1605/2002 du Conseil, du 25 juin 2002, portant règlement financier applicable au budget général des Communautés européennes (JO L 248, p. 1).

15 En l'espèce, l'attribution du marché litigieux aux requérantes est intervenue au terme de la procédure négociée et non au terme de la procédure ouverte initialement contestée par les requérantes. C'est dans le cadre de la procédure négociée, à laquelle tous les soumissionnaires à la procédure d'appel d'offres ont été invités à participer, que les requérantes ont soumis à la Commission une nouvelle offre, différente de l'offre initiale, qui leur a permis ensuite de se voir attribuer le marché litigieux par la Commission. De plus, la procédure ouverte a été clôturée le 29 mai 2008 préalablement à l'ouverture de la procédure négociée.

16 Certes, ainsi que les requérantes le font valoir, leur désistement résulte du fait qu'elles se sont vu finalement attribuer le marché litigieux. Cependant, cette nouvelle décision d'attribution a été prise par la Commission dans le cadre de la procédure négociée, dans le respect des dispositions pertinentes en matière de marchés publics prévues dans le règlement n° 1605/2002 et dans les modalités d'exécution. À cet égard, il convient de relever que l'argument des requérantes tiré de la modification du cahier des charges n'a pas été étayé. En outre, cet argument est inopérant, dans la mesure où il se rapporte à la régularité du déroulement de la procédure négociée, laquelle présentait un caractère autonome par rapport à la procédure initiale ayant abouti à l'adoption de l'acte attaqué, ainsi qu'il a déjà été relevé (voir point 14 ci-dessus).

18 Dans ces circonstances, contrairement à ce que les requérantes prétendent, aucun élément ne permet de conclure que la Commission a adopté une attitude justifiant qu'elle supporte les dépens en application de l'article 87, paragraphe 5, premier alinéa, deuxième phrase, du règlement de procédure.

19 Au vu de tout ce qui précède, il y a lieu de condamner les requérantes aux dépens de l'instance, conformément à l'article 87, paragraphe 5, premier alinéa, première phrase, du règlement de procédure.

Par ces motifs,

LE TRIBUNAL (sixième chambre)

ordonne :

1) L'affaire T–333/08 est radiée du registre.

2) Bull SAS, Unisys Belgium et Tata Consultancy Services (TCS) SA sont condamnées à supporter leurs propres dépens, ainsi que ceux exposés par la Commission européenne.

Defendant: Commission of the European Communities

Form of order sought

— Annul the contested decision, namely:

  — the rejection of the tender of Consortium B-Trust

  — the decision not to award the contract

  — the decision to open a negotiated procedure;

— order the Commission to pay the costs.

Pleas in law and main arguments

The applicants challenge the Commission's decision to reject their tender submitted in connection with the call for tenders procedure concerning contract 'DIGIT/R2/PO/2007/024 — Managed services provision' (OJ 2007 S 159 — 197776) and the decision not to award the contract in the absence of satisfactory tenders and to open the negotiated procedure.

In support of their application, the applicants claim, first of all, that the contested decision was not taken in compliance with the rules for the conferral of powers within the Commission, since the decision was taken by an 'Acting Head of Unit'. The applicants take the view that it was not established that the author of the measure was in fact entitled to adopt such a decision in the Commission's name.

Secondly, the applicants submit that the Commission infringed its obligation to state reasons by not setting out, in its decision, the grounds on which it considered that certain prices in the applicant's tender were unusually low and that the tender did not comply with the relevant legal provisions in the event of performance of the contract in Brussels or Luxembourg.

Finally, the applicants consider that the Commission infringed the procedure for checking that the prices were lawful, in so far as (i) the Commission excluded the applicant's tender on the basis of the procedure in respect of unusually low prices, whereas the tender was financially sound, (ii) the Commission did not take into account the reasons provided by the applicants and (iii) the contested decision was not based on an accurate account of the facts.

Appeal brought on 14 August 2008 by Marianne Timmer against the order of the Civil Service Tribunal delivered on 5 June 2008 in Case F-123/06 Timmer v Court of Auditors

(2008/C 285/80)

Language of the case: French

Parties

Appellant: Marianne Timmer (Saint-Sauves-d'Auvergne, France) (represented by F. Rollinger, lawyer)

Other party to the proceedings: Court of Auditors of the European Communities

Form of order sought by the appellant

— Annul the order of 5 June 2008 in Case F-123/06 Marianne Timmer v Court of Auditors;

— Uphold the claim for compensation for loss suffered;

— Uphold the claim for costs against the Court of Auditors.

Pleas in law and main arguments

By this appeal, the applicant seeks annulment of the order of the Civil Service Tribunal of 5 June 2008 in Case F-123/06 Timmer v Court of Auditors whereby the Tribunal dismissed as inadmissible her action claiming, first that the Tribunal should annul her staff reports for the period 1984 to 1997 along with the connected and/or subsequent decisions, including that appointing the reporting officer concerned to the position of Head of the Dutch Unit in the Translation Department of the Court of Auditors and, second, a claim for damages to compensate for the loss allegedly suffered.

In support of her appeal, the applicant relies on six pleas in law alleging:

— distortion the facts capable of being inferred from the evidence submitted to the Tribunal and error in assigning the burden of proof;

— distortion of the applicant's request to the appointing authority of 29 July 2005 concerning compliance with Article 14 of the Staff Regulations of Officials of the European Communities in the version in force prior to the modification thereof by the entry into force Regulation No 723/2004 [1] inasmuch as that request did not seek the re-examination of the applicant's staff reports as indicated at paragraph 37 of the order under appeal;

— error in the legal classification of the pre-litigation complaint of 26 February 2006, the aim of which was the annulment of the staff reports and the decision on the applicant's career and not 'taking into account of numerous other new facts' (paragraph 41 of the order under appeal);

— failure to state reasons for the decision to reject the complaint;

— in the alternative, failure to state sufficient reasons for that decision to reject, inasmuch as the Tribunal should have examined the insufficiency of the reasons stated;

ayant pour objet, d'une part, l'annulation de la décision de la Commission, du 18 avril 2008, rejetant l'offre soumise par la partie requérante dans le cadre de l'appel d'offres intitulé « Communication via EUROPA – Site Internet officiel de l'UE et autres produits d'information et de communication imprimés et en ligne gérés par la direction générale de la Communication de la Commission européenne – Assistance éditoriale, graphique, technique et dans le domaine de la traduction à la conception, à la production et à la maintenance » (JO 2007, S 193 234221), ainsi que de la décision d'attribuer le marché à un autre soumissionnaire et, d'autre part, une demande de dommages et intérêts.

1 Par lettre déposée au greffe du Tribunal le 5 octobre 2009, la partie requérante a informé le Tribunal, conformément à l'article 99 du règlement de procédure du Tribunal, qu'elle se désistait de son recours et a demandé, en application de l'article 87, paragraphe 5, dudit règlement, que la partie défenderesse soit condamnée aux dépens.

2 Par lettre déposée au greffe du Tribunal le 19 octobre 2009, la partie défenderesse a fait savoir au Tribunal qu'elle ne s'opposait pas à la demande de désistement et a demandé que la partie requérante soit condamnée à l'ensemble des dépens, incluant ses propres dépens et les dépens supportés par la Commission.

Language of the case: French

Parties

Applicant: Tipik Communication Agency SA (Brussels, Belgium) (represented by: E. Gillet, L. Levi and C. Dubois, lawyers)

Defendant: Commission of the European Communities

Form of order sought

Annul the decision of the Commission, the date of which is unknown, by which it was decided to reject the tender submitted by the applicant in the award procedure for the public service contract concerning, inter alia, the EUROPA Internet site (PO/2007-31/C2);

Annul the decision of the Commission, the date of which is unknown, by which it was decided to award that public contract to the consortium led by the company European Service Network;

Order the defendant to indemnify the applicant for the loss suffered by reason of the adoption of those irregular decisions, which amounts to EUR 5 063 773.29, together with late-payment interest to run from the date of the judgment to be delivered by the Court of First Instance until payment in full. The rate of late-payment interest to be applied is to be calculated on the basis of the rate fixed by the European Central Bank for main refinancing operations, applicable during the period concerned, increased by three points;

Order the defendant to pay the costs.

Pleas in law and main arguments

The applicant contests the decision of the Commission to reject its tender submitted in the context of the invitation to tender for the contract entitled 'Communication via EUROPA - the official website of the EU and other online and printed information and communication products managed by the Directorate-General Communication of the European Commission - editorial, graphical and technical and translation assistance in design, production and maintenance' (OJ 2007 S 193-234221), and the decision to award the contract to the consortium led by European Service Network. In addition, the applicant seeks compensation for the loss allegedly caused by the errors committed by the Commission.

In support of its action, the applicant submits, principally, that the Commission should have excluded the consortium led by European Service Network from the procedure for the award of the contract, since one of the members of that consortium had been declared to be in serious breach of its contractual obligations in respect of a contract intended for services of OPOCE similar to those which are the subject-matter of the contract at issue.

In the alternative, the applicant submits that the Commission has committed a manifest error of assessment when examining the tender submitted by the consortium led by European Service Network in that it awarded to it the same mark as the applicant for the quality criterion, although it could not be certain as to the capacity of that consortium to supply satisfactory technical solutions in that regard.

The applicant submits that those irregularities are such as to render the Commission liable since, on the one hand, it committed an error and, on the other, it seriously and manifestly disregarded the limits imposed on its discretion.

ORDER OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE EIGHT CHAMBER OF THE COURT OF FIRST INSTANCE

3 February 2009 (*)

(Removal from the register)

In Case T-239/08,

Comtec Translations Ltd, established in Leamington Spa (United Kingdom), represented initially by L. R. Scott and E. Bentley, Solicitors, and subsequently by L. R. Scott, applicant,

v

Commission of the European Communities, represented by E. Manhaeve and N. Bambara, acting as Agents, assisted by A. Nucara, lawyer,

defendant,

APPLICATION for annulment of the Commission's Decision of 16 April 2008 rejecting the applicant's tender submitted in response to the call for tenders for the translation of documents relating to the policies and administration of the European Union from all EU official languages into English (call for tender No FL-GEN07-EN) (OJ 2007 S 180- 219517).

1 By letter lodged at the Registry of the Court of First Instance on 12 December 2008, the applicant informed the Court in accordance with Article 99 of the Rules of Procedure of the Court of First Instance that it wished to discontinue proceedings. The applicant opposed that it would be ordered to pay the costs in view of its fragile and limited resources.

2 By letter lodged at the Registry of the Court on 13 January 2009, the defendant informed the Court that it had no objections concerning the discontinuance of the proceedings and requested that, pursuant to Article 87(5) of the Rules of Procedure, the applicant be ordered to bear the costs.

3 The first subparagraph of Article 87(5) of the Rules of Procedure provides that a party who discontinues or withdraws from proceedings shall be ordered to pay the costs if they have been applied for in the observations of the other party on the discontinuance. However, upon application by the party who discontinues or withdraws from proceedings, the costs shall be borne by the other party if this appears justified by the conduct of that party. In the present case, the case-file does not show conduct on the part of the defendant such as to justify ordering the latter to pay the costs.

4 The case will therefore be removed from the register and the applicant be ordered to pay the costs.

On those grounds,

THE PRESIDENT OF THE EIGHT CHAMBER OF THE COURT OF FIRST INSTANCE

hereby orders:

1. Case T-239/08 is removed from the register of the Court of First Instance.

2. The applicant shall bear its own costs and those incurred by the defendant.

Action brought on 13 June 2008 - Comtec Translations v Commission

(Case T-239/08)

Language of the case: English

Parties

Applicant: Comtec Translations Ltd (Leamington Spa, United Kingdom) (represented by: L. R. Scott and E. Bentley, Solicitors)

Defendant: Commission of the European Communities

Form of order sought

Annul the decision letter and remit the applicant's bid for reconsideration;

Order the Commission to pay the applicant's costs.

By the present action the applicant seeks the annulment of the Commission's Decision of 16 April 2008 rejecting its tender submitted in the framework of the tender procedure for the conclusion of framework contracts for the translation of documents relating to the policies and administration of the European Union from all EU official languages into English (call for tender No FL-GEN07-EN)[1]. The reason given for not retaining the applicant's tender was insufficient technical or professional capacity and lack of, or insufficient proven professional experience.

In support of its action the applicant puts forward a single plea in law. It claims that the administrative procedure has been conducted irregularly and that its procedural rights have not been observed. The applicant submits that it has successfully provided translation into English within the Commission for several years in the framework of contracts previously signed and regularly renewed for which it has received satisfactory rankings regarding the quality of the services. The applicant claims that the evaluation committee's decision took no or no proper account of the successful performance of the applicant in submitting translation assignments to the Commission for 12 years neither it took into consideration the documents evidencing the technical and professional qualifications of the applicant's staff, quality managers and sub-contractors.

ayant pour objet une demande de mesures provisoires visant, en substance, à permettre au Centre de langues à Louvain-la-Neuve et -en-Woluwe (CLL Centres de langues) de participer à la procédure d'appel d'offres ADMIN/D1/PR/2008/004 concernant le marché « Formations linguistiques pour le personnel des institutions, organes et agences de l'Union européenne (UE) implantés à Bruxelles » et à suspendre la décision d'exclusion de la Commission jusqu'à ce que le Tribunal se soit prononcé sur le recours en annulation dirigé contre cette décision,

LE PRÉSIDENT DU TRIBUNAL DE PREMIÈRE INSTANCE

rend la présente

Ordonnance

Antécédents du litige

1 Par un avis de marché publié le 4 mars 2008 (ADMIN/D1/PR/2008/004), la Commission a lancé un appel d'offres, en application du titre V (« Passation des marchés publics ») de la première partie du règlement (CE, Euratom) nº 1605/2002 du Conseil, du 25 juin 2002, portant règlement financier applicable au budget général des Communautés européennes (JO L 248, p. 1, ci-après le « règlement financier »), pour la prestation de services dans le domaine des formations linguistiques pour le personnel des institutions, organes et agences de l'Union européenne (UE) implantés à Bruxelles.

2 À cette fin, elle a choisi d'attribuer le marché selon la procédure restreinte au sens de l'article 122, paragraphe 2, du règlement (CE, Euratom) nº 2342/2002 de la Commission, du 23 décembre 2002, établissant les modalités d'exécution du règlement financier (JO L 357, p. 1), tel que modifié par le règlement (CE, Euratom) nº 1261/2005 de la Commission, du 30 juillet 2005 (JO L 201, p. 3, ci-après le « règlement d'exécution »). En vertu de cette disposition, le marché sur appel à la concurrence est restreint lorsque tous les opérateurs économiques peuvent demander à participer et que seuls les candidats satisfaisant aux critères de sélection et invités par les pouvoirs adjudicateurs peuvent présenter une offre.

3 Le marché en cause est constitué de dix lots correspondant chacun à l'enseignement d'une langue ou d'un groupe de langues. L'avis de marché prévoit la conclusion d'un contrat d'une durée de 48 mois à compter de la date d'attribution du contrat. Ce contrat, qui sera attribué au soumissionnaire ayant remis l'offre économiquement la plus avantageuse, est destiné à remplacer, à partir du mois de janvier 2009, un contrat portant sur des services d'enseignement semblables que la Commission avait, en 2004, attribué au requérant, le Centre de langues à Louvain-la-Neuve et -en-Woluwe (CLL Centres de langues).

4 S'agissant des conditions de participation à la procédure en cause, l'avis de marché prévoit, au point III.2.1, que « les demandes de participation se font par lettre envoyée avant l'expiration de la date ou du délai visé au point IV.3.4 du présent avis », ce dernier point énonçant la date limite suivante : « 8.4.2008 (16 :00) ». Le point VI.3.2 de l'avis de marché attire expressément l'attention des intéressés sur le fait qu'ils doivent « présenter leur demande de participation en respectant strictement les conditions indiquées au point III.2 du présent avis, c'est-à-dire : […] envoyer leur candidature par lettre avant l'expiration de la date ou du délai visé au point IV.3.4 ». Le point VI.3.2 poursuit en précisant que « [l]es candidatures incomplètes pourront être écartées d'office ».

5 Ainsi qu'il ressort du procès-verbal d'ouverture des candidatures établi le 10 avril 2008 par la commission d'ouverture, quinze demandes de participation ont été introduites, dans le respect de la date limite précitée et en conformité avec les modalités prescrites dans le règlement d'exécution et l'avis de marché.

6 Le 18 avril 2008, soit dix jours après la date limite d'envoi des candidatures, la demande de participation du requérant est parvenue à la Commission. Cette demande portait sur les lots 2, 3, 4, 6, 7, 8, 9 et 10 du marché en cause.

7 Dans une lettre du 24 avril 2008, le requérant a expliqué ce dépôt tardif par le fait que, à la suite d'un « malentendu administratif », il n'avait pris connaissance de l'avis de marché que le 17 avril 2008. Le requérant a estimé que, en raison du caractère non contraignant du délai indiqué pour le dépôt des demandes de participation, la Commission avait le pouvoir, voire l'obligation, d'admettre la demande qu'il avait introduite le 18 avril, étant donné que son exclusion, alors qu'il avait en 2004 remporté un marché identique en déposant l'offre économiquement la plus avantageuse, affaiblirait sensiblement le niveau de concurrence.

8 Ainsi qu'il ressort du procès-verbal de réception et d'évaluation des candidatures établi le 20 mai 2008 par le comité d'évaluation, la Commission a exclu cinq candidatures, dont celle du requérant, des suites de la procédure.

9 Par lettre du 23 mai 2008, reçue le 27 mai 2008, la Commission a informé le requérant que sa candidature n'avait pas été retenue, au motif que sa demande de participation avait été déposée hors délai, soit le 18 avril 2008, alors que la date limite de dépôt avait été fixée au 8 avril 2008, à 16 heures (ci-après la « décision attaquée »).

Procédure et conclusions des parties

10 Par requête déposée au greffe du Tribunal le 5 juin 2008, le requérant a introduit un recours visant à l'annulation de la décision attaquée. Il reproche à la Commission, en substance, d'avoir estimé à tort qu'elle ne disposait d'aucun pouvoir d'appréciation quant à l'admission de sa candidature, bien que l'avis de marché ne prévoie pas de sanction en cas de demande de participation tardive, et d'avoir violé le principe de proportionnalité.

11 Par actes séparés déposés au greffe du Tribunal le même jour, le requérant a introduit une demande de procédure accélérée, au titre de l'article 76 bis du règlement de procédure du Tribunal, ainsi que la présente demande en référé, dans laquelle il conclut à ce qu'il plaise au président du Tribunal :

– ordonner à la Commission, au titre de l'article 105, paragraphe 2, du règlement de procédure, à titre provisoire et dans l'attente du prononcé de l'ordonnance qui mettra fin à la présente procédure de référé, de lui communiquer immédiatement le cahier des charges et de l'autoriser à participer pleinement à la phase d'appel d'offres ;

– suspendre la décision attaquée, jusqu'à ce que le Tribunal se soit prononcé sur le recours visant à l'annulation de cette décision ;

– accorder toutes autres mesures jugées appropriées ;

– condamner la Commission aux dépens.

12 Par ordonnance du 9 juin 2008, adoptée au titre de l'article 105, paragraphe 2, du règlement de procédure, il a été sursis à l'exécution de la décision attaquée jusqu'à la date de l'ordonnance mettant fin à la présente procédure de référé, d'une part, et ordonné à la Commission de communiquer immédiatement au requérant le cahier des charges relatif à la procédure d'appel d'offres litigieuse et de lui permettre de présenter une offre pour les lots 2, 3, 4, 6, 7, 8, 9 et 10 du marché en cause, d'autre part.

13 En exécution de cette ordonnance, la Commission a, le 10 juin 2008, transmis au requérant le cahier des charges en cause.

14 En outre, par lettre du même jour, la Commission a, sur demande du président du Tribunal, communiqué le calendrier prévisionnel des différentes étapes de la procédure d'appel d'offres en question.

15 Dans ses observations écrites sur la demande en référé, déposées au greffe du Tribunal le 18 juin 2008, la Commission conclut à ce qu'il plaise au président du Tribunal :

– rejeter la demande de suspension de la décision attaquée ;

– condamner le requérant aux dépens.

En droit

17 L'article 104, paragraphe 2, du règlement de procédure dispose que les demandes de mesures provisoires doivent spécifier l'objet du litige, les circonstances établissant l'urgence, ainsi que les moyens de fait et de droit justifiant à première vue (fumus boni juris) l'octroi de la mesure provisoire à laquelle elles concluent. Ces conditions sont cumulatives, de sorte que les demandes de mesures provisoires doivent être rejetées dès lors que l'une d'elles fait défaut [ordonnance du président de la Cour du 14 octobre 1996, SCK et FNK/Commission, C–268/96 P(R), Rec. p. I–4971, point 30].

18 En outre, dans le cadre de cet examen d'ensemble, le juge des référés dispose d'un large pouvoir d'appréciation et reste libre de déterminer, au regard des particularités de l'espèce, la manière dont ces différentes conditions doivent être vérifiées ainsi que l'ordre de cet examen, dès lors qu'aucune règle de droit communautaire ne lui impose un schéma d'analyse préétabli pour apprécier la nécessité de statuer provisoirement [ordonnances du président de la Cour du 19 juillet 1995, Commission/Atlantic Container Line e.a., C–149/95 P(R), Rec. p. I–2165, point 23, et du 3 avril 2007, Vischim/Commission, C–459/06 P(R), non publiée au Recueil, point 25].

Sur le fumus boni juris

20 Selon le requérant, la décision attaquée est illégale, dans la mesure où elle est fondée sur la thèse incorrecte selon laquelle les demandes de participation tardives doivent automatiquement être écartées. Cette thèse négligerait le fait que, en l'absence de disposition contraire contenue dans les règlements applicables ou dans l'avis de marché en cause, le pouvoir adjudicateur a la possibilité d'admettre les candidatures tardives. Or, la Commission aurait commis une erreur de droit en refusant d'exercer le pouvoir d'appréciation dont elle dispose en la matière.

22 Dans ce contexte, il conviendrait de faire une distinction entre une offre tardive et une demande de participation tardive. Si le strict respect du délai de dépôt d'une offre sert le double but d'éviter des fraudes et de garantir un traitement égal de tous les soumissionnaires, aucune de ces finalités n'entrerait en jeu lorsqu'il s'agit du délai de dépôt d'une demande de participation, étant donné qu'il n'y aurait pas de risque de fraude à ce stade de la procédure et que le délai imparti pour le dépôt des demandes de participation ne serait pas un délai pertinent pour le jeu de la concurrence.

23 Le requérant ajoute que la décision attaquée ne satisfait pas à l'obligation de motivation en ce que, premièrement, la Commission n'y indique pas pour quelle raison elle a omis de faire usage de son pouvoir d'admettre sa demande de participation, deuxièmement, elle s'est fondée sur une disposition non pertinente, à savoir l'article 143, paragraphe 1, du règlement d'exécution, qui ne traite que des modalités de communication, et, troisièmement, elle n'indique pas les voies de recours ouvertes au requérant.

24 Enfin, le requérant considère que la décision attaquée viole le principe de proportionnalité, la Commission ayant rejeté sa candidature, alors qu'elle aurait pu l'examiner, sans que cela ait perturbé le processus de sélection ou porté atteinte à l'égalité entre les candidats. Cette décision serait également contraire à l'article 123, paragraphe 1, du règlement d'exécution, qui prévoit que le nombre de candidats admis à soumissionner doit être suffisant pour assurer une concurrence réelle. En effet, l'exclusion du requérant, qui avait déposé l'offre économiquement la plus avantageuse en 2004, affaiblirait de manière très sensible le niveau de concurrence.

25 La Commission rétorque que la situation litigieuse, à savoir le dépôt tardif de candidature, est le résultat d'une négligence du requérant lui-même. La demande en référé viserait à réparer les conséquences de cette négligence. Cependant, passer outre ladite négligence porterait atteinte aux principes d'égalité des candidats, de transparence, de sécurité juridique ainsi que de protection de la confiance légitime et mettrait en péril le bon fonctionnement de la procédure.

26 La fixation d'une date limite pour le dépôt des candidatures serait conforme aux articles 140 et 143 du règlement d'exécution, selon lesquels les demandes de participation doivent être présentées avant une telle date.

27 Le grief tiré d'une violation de l'article 123, paragraphe 1, du règlement d'exécution méconnaîtrait que la finalité d'organiser des marchés publics aux meilleures conditions de concurrence possibles doit être conciliée avec le principe d'égalité d'accès aux marchés publics ainsi qu'avec les principes de transparence et de non-discrimination (considérant 26 du règlement d'exécution). Or, le respect de ces principes commanderait que les demandes non conformes aux modalités de remise prescrites dans l'avis de marché soient en principe écartées. La circonstance que le requérant a déposé l'offre économiquement la plus avantageuse lors du marché passé en 2004 ne pourrait lui donner un droit acquis à bénéficier d'un traitement de faveur.

29 Contrairement aux affirmations du requérant, la référence à l'article 143, paragraphe 1, du règlement d'exécution serait parfaitement pertinente, puisque la décision attaquée est motivée par le non-respect des modalités de remise des demandes de participation fondées sur cette disposition. Ces modalités de remise (télécopieur, envoi recommandé, dépôt direct) seraient décrites au point III.2.1 de l'avis de marché ; elles comporteraient l'indication selon laquelle les demandes de participation se font « par lettre envoyée avant l'expiration de la date ou du délai visé au point IV.3.4 ».

30 Enfin, l'indication des voies de recours ne relèverait pas de l'obligation de motivation au sens de l'article 253 CE. En tout état de cause, le requérant aurait été parfaitement au courant des voies de recours qui lui étaient ouvertes et n'aurait eu aucune difficulté à introduire son recours.

Appréciation du juge des référés

31 Afin de déterminer si la condition relative au fumus boni juris est remplie en l'espèce, il y a lieu de procéder à un examen prima facie du bien-fondé des griefs invoqués par le requérant à l'appui du recours principal et donc de vérifier si les arguments quant à la prétendue illégalité de la décision attaquée présentent un tel caractère sérieux qu'ils ne sauraient être écartés dans le cadre de la présente procédure en référé (voir, en ce sens, ordonnance du juge des référés du Tribunal du 28 septembre 2007, France/Commission, T–257/07 R, non encore publiée au Recueil, point 59, et la jurisprudence citée).

32 En l'espèce, le requérant reproche à la Commission, par son premier grief, d'avoir commis une erreur de droit en s'abstenant d'exercer le pouvoir d'appréciation dont elle disposerait en l'espèce et dans l'exercice duquel elle aurait pu, voire dû, admettre sa candidature tardive, étant donné qu'aucune disposition n'aurait imposé son exclusion de la procédure litigieuse.

33 À cet égard, il suffit de constater qu'aucun élément du dossier ne permet, à première vue, de conclure que la Commission aurait renoncé à exercer un éventuel pouvoir d'appréciation et qu'elle aurait « automatiquement » rejeté comme tardive la demande de participation du requérant. Au contraire, ainsi qu'il ressort de la décision attaquée, celle-ci a été adoptée « [a]près examen des demandes de participation reçues ». Par ailleurs, en réponse à un courrier du requérant du 30 mai 2008, la Commission a, par lettre du 3 juin suivant, motivé le maintien de cette décision par la nécessité « d'assurer le plein respect du principe d'égalité de traitement des candidats et de sécurité juridique », après avoir déclaré que ledit courrier du requérant avait « fait l'objet d'une étude approfondie ».

34 Il s'ensuit que le premier grief ne saurait, à première vue, être retenu dans la mesure où le requérant excipe d'une erreur de droit.

35 Cependant, il convient encore d'examiner s'il apparaît, prima facie, que la Commission, en rejetant la candidature du requérant comme étant hors délai, a commis une erreur manifeste d'appréciation dans l'exercice de son prétendu pouvoir d'appréciation.

36 Dans ce contexte, le requérant ne conteste pas que le pouvoir adjudicataire puisse fixer des délais et des dates limites. Il fait, cependant, valoir que la réglementation communautaire applicable ne confère à ces délais et dates limites aucun caractère contraignant, au moins pour ce qui est des demandes de participation.

37 Toutefois, une lecture des textes pertinents n'est, à première vue, pas de nature à confirmer cette thèse du requérant.

38 Ainsi, l'article 140 du règlement d'exécution place sur un pied d'égalité les offres et les demandes de participation en prévoyant, de manière globale, des « délais de réception des offres et demandes de participation ». Si ladite disposition souligne que ces délais sont des délais minimaux, en imposant au pouvoir adjudicataire de les fixer de manière suffisamment longue – le requérant ne reproche d'ailleurs pas à la Commission d'avoir fixé un délai minimal de réception trop court dans le cadre de la présente procédure –, il semble à priori évident que même de tels délais minimaux ont nécessairement un terme qu'il convient de respecter.

39 Ensuite, l'article 145, paragraphe 1, du règlement d'exécution énonce que ne sont ouvertes par le pouvoir adjudicataire que « les demandes de participation et offres qui ont respecté les dispositions de l'article 143 » du même règlement. Or, le paragraphe 1 dudit article 143, après avoir prévu que les modalités de remise des demandes de participation étaient déterminées par le pouvoir adjudicataire (lettre, moyen électronique ou télécopieur), renvoie à la « date limite » prévue, notamment, à l'article 140 du règlement d'exécution.

40 S'il est vrai que ce renvoi est opéré en ce qui concerne la confirmation, par lettre ou par moyen électronique, de demandes de participation faites par télécopieur, il paraît évident que la portée de cette date limite ne peut être réduite à la seule hypothèse d'une demande faite par télécopieur, mais doit être valable pour tous les moyens de communication admis dans le cadre d'une même procédure de passation d'un marché public, et ce d'autant plus que, en vertu de l'article 143, paragraphe 1, du règlement d'exécution, les différents moyens de communication doivent avoir un caractère non discriminatoire. Or, l'avis de marché en cause en l'espèce prévoit, au point III.2.1, que les demandes de participation se font par lettre ou par télécopieur. Il s'ensuit que la date limite fixée pour le dépôt de ces demandes doit être identique pour l'un et l'autre de ces moyens de communication.

41 Ainsi que la Commission l'a relevé à juste titre, les moyens de communication décrits à l'article 143, paragraphe 1, du règlement d'exécution et repris dans l'avis de marché, au point III.2.1, apparaissent indissociables du délai dans lequel les demandes de participation doivent être déposées : si le délai de dépôt n'est pas respecté, les modalités de communication prescrites sur la base dudit article ne semblent en effet pas non plus pouvoir être respectées.

42 Il résulte prima facie de ce qui précède que la Commission pouvait se fonder, à juste titre, sur les articles 140, 143 et 145 du règlement d'exécution pour fixer, dans l'avis de marché en cause, une date limite pour le dépôt des demandes de participation, soit le 8 avril 2008, à 16 heures, au plus tard, et pour décider que celles déposées hors délai seraient, le cas échéant, exclues de la procédure pour méconnaissance de l'article 143 dudit règlement.

44 Enfin, il importe de rappeler que le requérant, dans sa correspondance avec la Commission au cours de la procédure précontentieuse, s'est borné à expliquer par un « malentendu administratif » le non-respect de la date limite de dépôt prévue dans l'avis de marché, sans invoquer l'existence d'un cas fortuit, d'une force majeure ou d'une erreur excusable (voir point 7 ci-dessus).

45 Dans ces circonstances, il convient de conclure que, à première vue, la Commission, après avoir constaté que les demandes de participation qui avaient été présentées avant cette date limite étaient au nombre de quinze (voir point 5 ci-dessus), pouvait écarter la candidature du requérant, eu égard aux principes de sécurité juridique et d'égalité de traitement des candidats, sans commettre une erreur manifeste d'appréciation.

46 Par conséquent, le premier grief soulevé par le requérant ne saurait permettre d'établir l'existence d'un fumus boni juris.

47 Il en va de même pour ce qui est du grief tiré d'une violation de l'obligation de motivation, en ce que, dans la décision attaquée, la Commission n'indiquerait pas pour quelle raison elle s'est abstenue de faire usage de son pouvoir d'admettre la demande de participation du requérant et elle se serait fondée sur une disposition non pertinente, à savoir l'article 143, paragraphe 1, du règlement d'exécution. Ainsi qu'il vient d'être exposé, d'une part, ledit article apparaît tout à fait pertinent dans le présent contexte et, d'autre part, rien ne semble a priori permettre de conclure que la Commission aurait omis de faire usage de son prétendu pouvoir d'appréciation en rejetant la candidature du requérant.

49 S'agissant du grief tiré d'une violation du principe de proportionnalité, à première vue la Commission a pu considérer à bon droit qu'une admission de la candidature du requérant qui, en raison de son caractère tardif, n'était pas conforme aux règles imposées à tous les candidats aurait risqué de porter atteinte aux principes d'égalité de traitement et de transparence consacrés par l'article 98, paragraphe 1, du règlement financier. Dans une telle hypothèse, le requérant aurait en effet bénéficié d'un temps de préparation plus long que les autres candidats et sa candidature aurait été admise bien que ne respectant pas toutes les conditions de participation, alors que d'autres candidatures ne respectant pas non plus l'ensemble de ces conditions auraient été rejetées. Compte tenu de la nécessaire mise en balance des principes généraux en cause, il ne semble donc pas, à première vue, que la décision attaquée soit contraire au principe de proportionnalité.

50 En ce qui concerne le grief pris d'une violation de l'article 123, paragraphe 1, du règlement d'exécution, force est de constater que le premier alinéa de cette disposition, selon lequel le nombre de candidats invités à soumissionner ne peut être inférieur à cinq, ne semble manifestement pas avoir été violé, le nombre des candidats susceptibles d'être invités à soumissionner étant largement supérieur à cinq. Par ailleurs, ainsi que la Commission l'a fait observer, ce nombre de cinq ne paraît aucunement constituer un minimum absolu, étant donné que l'article 123, paragraphe 3, du règlement d'exécution permet au pouvoir adjudicataire de continuer la procédure même s'il ne reste plus qu'un seul candidat (« en invitant le ou les candidats »).

51 S'agissant enfin du troisième alinéa de l'article 123, paragraphe 1, du règlement d'exécution, aux termes duquel le nombre de candidats admis à soumissionner doit, en tout état de cause, être suffisant pour assurer une concurrence réelle, il convient de relever que tout indique, à première vue, que le nombre des candidats susceptibles d'être admis à soumissionner sera, en l'espèce, suffisant pour assurer une telle concurrence.

52 En tout état de cause, ainsi que la Commission l'a précisé, la question de savoir s'il existe suffisamment de candidats autorisés à soumissionner ne saurait, prima facie, remettre en cause la légalité d'une décision constatant qu'un candidat donné n'a pas déposé de demande de participation conforme aux modalités prescrites à l'article 145 du règlement d'exécution et dans l'avis de marché et que ce candidat n'est donc pas autorisé à participer aux étapes suivantes de la procédure. En effet, la question du nombre suffisant de candidats admis à soumissionner est examinée à un stade ultérieur, postérieur à celui de l'examen de la conformité des demandes déposées. À cette occasion, le pouvoir adjudicataire peut d'ailleurs être amené à renoncer au marché en cause et à en organiser un nouveau, s'il estime que le nombre des candidats n'est pas suffisant pour assurer une concurrence effective (voir, en ce sens, arrêt du Tribunal du 26 février 2002, Esedra/Commission, T–169/00, Rec. p. II–609, points 202 et 203).

53 Il résulte de ce qui précède que, sans préjudice des appréciations à effectuer dans le cadre du litige au principal, les griefs avancés par le requérant dans la présente procédure en référé ne permettent pas en l'état d'établir l'existence d'un fumus boni juris.

54 Ce n'est donc qu'à titre surabondant qu'il sera procédé ensuite à l'examen de l'urgence.

Sur l'urgence

55 Le requérant fait valoir qu'il risque de subir un préjudice grave et irréparable si les mesures provisoires demandées ne sont pas accordées. En effet, dès le mois de janvier 2009, date d'expiration de son contrat en cours avec la Commission, sa position sur le marché des langues en Belgique serait modifiée de manière irrémédiable. Par conséquent, un arrêt d'annulation survenant après cette date ne pourrait réparer le préjudice subi. Le requérant estime, par ailleurs, qu'il y a lieu d'écarter, pour le contentieux relatif aux marchés publics, la règle selon laquelle un préjudice est réparable s'il est susceptible de faire l'objet d'une compensation financière ultérieure.

56 En tout état de cause, à défaut d'adoption des mesures provisoires sollicitées, il serait impossible pour le requérant d'obtenir une réparation financière, dans l'hypothèse où la procédure au principal aboutirait ensuite à l'annulation de la décision attaquée. En effet, cette décision empêcherait le requérant de remettre une offre, de sorte qu'il ne pourrait jamais être comparé aux candidats admis à participer. Cela signifierait que, même si la décision attaquée était ultérieurement annulée, le contrat ne pourrait jamais être attribué au requérant.

57 Il aurait, certes, été jugé que des dommages et intérêts en réparation du préjudice subi peuvent constituer une réparation adéquate. Le montant d'une telle indemnisation serait, toutefois, fonction du préjudice économique engendré par la décision illégale, d'une part, et des chances que le requérant aurait eu d'obtenir le marché si la décision illégale n'avait pas été adoptée, d'autre part. En l'espèce, s'il est possible de calculer le manque à gagner subi par le requérant pour chacun des lots pour lesquels il a postulé, il serait extrêmement difficile, à défaut d'offre pouvant être comparée aux offres sélectionnées, de démontrer quelles auraient été ses chances d'obtenir le marché s'il avait été admis à présenter une offre. La possibilité théorique d'obtenir une telle indemnisation, incalculable en l'espèce, ne pourrait donc assurer une protection adéquate des intérêts du requérant en cas d'annulation.

58 Le requérant affirme que, en l'absence des mesures provisoires sollicitées, son existence et sa position sur le marché seront mises en péril dès le mois de janvier 2009. Son élimination entraînerait pour lui une perte financière considérable, correspondant à [confidentiel] (1) de son chiffre d'affaires total actuel. Comme le démontrerait son bilan pour l'année 2007, les cours dispensés au sein des institutions communautaires dans le cadre du marché attribué en 2004 correspondraient à un chiffre d'affaires annuel de [confidentiel] euros, sur un chiffre d'affaires total de [confidentiel] euros, soit [confidentiel] % de ce chiffre d'affaires total. Or, le marché en cause serait d'une importance identique, voire supérieure, au marché en cours d'exécution.

59 À la suite de cette réduction d'activités, le requérant devrait se défaire, faute de travail, d'une équipe d'environ [confidentiel] formateurs (sur un total d'environ [confidentiel] formateurs actifs), qui seraient aujourd'hui affectés exclusivement ou quasi exclusivement à l'enseignement des langues au sein des institutions communautaires et qui, en l'absence des mesures provisoires sollicitées, seraient dispersés à la fin de la relation contractuelle avec lesdites institutions. Par conséquent, à défaut de telles mesures, la décision attaquée aurait déjà produit des conséquences irréversibles avant qu'elle ne soit annulée.

60 En ce qui concerne plus particulièrement les « langues rares » (lots 7, 8 et 9 du marché en cause), auxquelles seraient affectés [confidentiel] formateurs, et les formations spécialisées pour traducteurs (lot 10 du marché en cause), auxquelles seraient affectés [confidentiel] formateurs, la mise en place de cette équipe d'enseignants aurait nécessité dix années d'investissements du requérant. Pour la plupart de ces langues, les cours donnés au sein des institutions communautaires représenteraient la très grande majorité, voire la quasi-totalité, de la demande à Bruxelles (Belgique). Le fait d'avoir constitué, en vue des marchés passés avec les institutions communautaires, une équipe très qualifiée enseignant ces langues aurait permis au requérant de proposer également un enseignement de ces langues aux particuliers et aux entreprises. À la suite de son exclusion du marché en cause, le requérant serait dans l'impossibilité de maintenir son offre dans ce domaine. De la même manière, le départ des formateurs spécialisés affaiblirait très sensiblement la possibilité pour le requérant de participer à d'autres marchés publics similaires.

61 Le requérant ajoute que le fait de travailler pour les institutions communautaires lui a permis d'être un « choix naturel » pour les enseignants de diverses nationalités venant s'installer en Belgique. La perte de la relation contractuelle avec ces institutions affecterait l'image du requérant dans le milieu des formateurs professionnels et sa capacité de recruter des enseignants de qualité à l'avenir. Le requérant devrait également se défaire de [confidentiel] employés, sur un total de [confidentiel], affectés à l'organisation des formations pour le personnel des institutions communautaires. En outre, il aurait développé un logiciel informatique spécifique pour les institutions communautaires. Ces investissements seraient tous perdus à la suite de l'élimination du requérant.

62 Il serait donc évident que la perte [confidentiel] de son chiffre d'affaires aurait des conséquences profondes sur la solidité financière du requérant et mettrait en péril son existence. De même, sa position sur le marché serait irrémédiablement modifiée en raison de la réduction drastique de son offre de langues, du départ d'[confidentiel] de ses formateurs et de [confidentiel] % environ de son personnel de gestion ainsi que de la difficulté de concourir à l'avenir pour des marchés similaires.

63 Selon la Commission, le requérant ne démontre pas en quoi un futur arrêt d'annulation dans la procédure au principal ne constituerait pas une réparation adéquate de son dommage. Ainsi, il n'exposerait pas qu'il serait impossible pour la Commission d'organiser, à la suite d'un tel arrêt, un nouvel appel d'offres pour se conformer à son obligation de prendre les mesures nécessaires pour protéger de manière appropriée les intérêts du requérant. Le requérant n'établirait donc pas l'existence d'un préjudice grave et irréparable.

64 Le requérant ne démontrerait notamment pas que, en l'absence de suspension de la décision attaquée, son existence serait mise en péril. Ainsi, la seule circonstance que le marché avec les Communautés européennes représente environ [confidentiel] de son chiffre d'affaires ne suffirait pas à cet égard, d'autant plus que le requérant bénéficie encore actuellement de cette source de chiffre d'affaires, et ce jusqu'en janvier 2009. Le requérant disposerait aussi d'une clientèle très diversifiée, constituée tant de particuliers que d'entreprises et d'institutions, ce qui lui permettrait largement de maintenir ses activités jusqu'à l'issue de la procédure au principal.

65 Quant à l'argument selon lequel sa structure serait irrémédiablement atteinte en cas de perte du marché, la Commission se réfère à des offres d'emploi publiées sur le site Internet du requérant pour constater que ce dernier travaille régulièrement, voire essentiellement, avec des indépendants ou indépendants complémentaires, y compris en matière de « langues rares ». La Commission en conclut que le requérant peut facilement réduire ou augmenter la masse de ses collaborateurs sans pour autant mettre sa structure ou son existence en péril. S'agissant des « langues rares » et notamment du lot 9, intitulé « arabe, japonais, mandarin, russe et autres langues hors Union européenne non mentionnées dans le lot 8 », il ne paraîtrait guère crédible de soutenir que seules les institutions communautaires seraient intéressées par ces langues. La preuve en serait que le requérant recherche actuellement des collaborateurs pour les cours adultes (hors institutions communautaires) dispensés dans ces langues. S'agissant des investissements, ils auraient été réalisés en vue de l'exécution des marchés antérieurs et devraient avoir été amortis dans ce cadre.

66 La Commission conclut que, compte tenu de la souplesse de sa méthode de travail, le requérant n'établit pas que l'absence des mesures provisoires sollicitées mettrait en péril son existence ou l'empêcherait de maintenir son offre dans les domaines en cause ou de reconquérir une fraction appréciable des parts de marché perdues.

67 Il y a lieu de rappeler que le caractère urgent d'une demande en référé doit s'apprécier par rapport à la nécessité qu'il y a de statuer provisoirement afin d'éviter qu'un préjudice grave et irréparable ne soit occasionné à la partie qui sollicite les mesures provisoires. C'est à cette dernière partie qu'il appartient d'apporter la preuve qu'elle ne saurait attendre l'issue de la procédure au principal sans avoir à subir un préjudice de cette nature (voir ordonnances du président du Tribunal du 15 novembre 2001, Duales System Deutschland/Commission, T–151/01 R, Rec. p. II–3295, point 187 ; du 20 septembre 2005, Deloitte Business Advisory/Commission, T–195/05 R, Rec. p. II–3485, point 124, et du 25 avril 2008, Vakakis/Commission, T–41/08 R, non publiée au Recueil, point 52, et la jurisprudence citée).

68 Lorsque le préjudice dépend de la survenance de plusieurs facteurs, il suffit qu'il apparaisse comme prévisible avec un degré de probabilité suffisant [ordonnance du président du Tribunal du 16 janvier 2004, Arizona Chemical e.a./Commission, T–369/03 R, Rec. p. II–205, point 71 ; voir également, en ce sens, ordonnances de la Cour du 29 juin 1993, Allemagne/Conseil, C–280/93 R, Rec. p. I–3667, points 32 à 34, et du président de la Cour du 14 décembre 1999, HFB e.a./Commission, C–335/99 P (R), Rec. p. I–8705, point 67]. La partie requérante demeure cependant tenue de prouver les faits qui sont censés fonder la perspective d'un tel dommage grave et irréparable (voir, en ce sens, ordonnance Arizona Chemical e.a./Commission, précitée, point 72 ; voir, également, ordonnance HFB e.a./Commission, précitée, point 67).

69 Il convient donc d'examiner si, en l'espèce, le requérant a démontré avec un degré de probabilité suffisant qu'il subira un préjudice grave et irréparable si les mesures provisoires qu'il sollicite ne lui sont pas octroyées.

70 S'agissant de la gravité du préjudice invoqué en l'espèce, il importe de rappeler que ce dernier serait subi à l'occasion d'une procédure d'appel d'offres pour l'attribution d'un marché. Or, une telle procédure a pour objet de permettre à l'autorité concernée de choisir, parmi plusieurs offres concurrentes, celle qui lui paraît le plus conforme aux critères de sélection prédéterminés. L'autorité communautaire qui institue une telle procédure dispose, par ailleurs, d'un large pouvoir d'appréciation quant aux éléments à prendre en considération en vue de la prise de la décision de passer le marché (arrêts ADT Projekt/Commission, précité, point 147, et Esedra/Commission, précité, point 95 ; arrêt du Tribunal du 14 février 2006, TEA-CEGOS e.a./Commission, T–376/05 et T–383/05, Rec. p. II–205, point 50).

71 Une entreprise qui participe à une telle procédure n'a, dès lors, jamais la garantie absolue que le marché lui sera adjugé, mais doit toujours tenir compte de l'éventualité de son attribution à un autre soumissionnaire. Dans ces conditions, les conséquences financières négatives pour l'entreprise en question, qui découleraient du rejet de son offre, font, en principe, partie du risque commercial habituel auquel chaque entreprise active sur le marché doit faire face (voir, en ce sens, ordonnance du juge des référés du Tribunal du 14 septembre 2007, AWWW/FEACVT, T–211/07 R, non publiée au Recueil, point 41).

72 Il s'ensuit que la perte d'une chance de se voir attribuer et d'exécuter un marché public est inhérente à l'exclusion de la procédure d'appel d'offres en cause et ne saurait être regardée comme constitutive, en soi, d'un préjudice grave, indépendamment d'une appréciation concrète de la gravité de l'atteinte spécifique alléguée dans chaque cas d'espèce (voir, en ce sens, ordonnance Deloitte Business Advisory/Commission, précitée, point 150).

73 Il convient d'ajouter que, selon une jurisprudence bien établie (voir ordonnance du président du Tribunal du 1er février 2001, Free Trade Foods/Commission, T-350/00 R, Rec. p. II-493, point 59, et la jurisprudence citée), l'urgence à ordonner une mesure provisoire doit résulter des effets produits par l'acte litigieux et non d'un manque de diligence du demandeur de ladite mesure. En effet, il incombe à ce dernier, au risque de devoir supporter lui-même le préjudice comme faisant partie des « risques de l'entreprise », de faire preuve d'une diligence raisonnable pour en limiter l'étendue.

74 En application de cette jurisprudence, la partie qui demande l'octroi d'une mesure provisoire doit supporter également des préjudices dont elle prétend qu'ils sont susceptibles de mettre en péril son existence même ou de modifier de manière irrémédiable sa position sur le marché.

75 Or, en l'espèce, il est de fait que le requérant était seul responsable de ce que sa demande de participation a été déposée dix jours après l'expiration du délai clairement imposé à cet effet dans l'avis de marché (voir points 4 et 6 ci-dessus). Le requérant n'a pas contesté que, dans l'avis de marché, la Commission avait laissé aux candidats un délai suffisant pour se manifester. En outre, le requérant, qui entretenait des relations contractuelles de longue date avec la Commission et qui avait obtenu le marché de formation linguistique précédent, était particulièrement bien placé pour savoir, en opérateur économique prudent et averti, qu'un nouvel avis devait être publié au courant de l'année 2008. Par ailleurs, il a lui-même déclaré qu'il avait de longue date préparé son dossier de candidature dans l'attente du renouvellement du marché précédent.

76 Il s'ensuit que la situation à l'origine de la présente demande en référé est le résultat d'une négligence du requérant. Ce dernier s'est borné à faire état d'un « malentendu administratif », sans établir ni même invoquer devant l'autorité adjudicatrice ou devant le juge des référés l'existence d'un cas fortuit, d'une force majeure ou d'une erreur excusable, qui aurait éventuellement pu être susceptible de permettre une dérogation à l'application stricte de la date limite fixée dans l'avis de marché.

77 Par conséquent, dès lors que le préjudice allégué en l'espèce serait, dans sa totalité, causé par l'absence de diligence du requérant lui-même, il ne saurait, indépendamment de sa prétendue gravité, justifier l'urgence à ordonner les mesures provisoires demandées.

78 S'agissant du préjudice d'ordre financier invoqué, il convient d'ajouter qu'il ne saurait être regardé comme irréparable, ou même difficilement réparable, dès lors qu'il peut faire l'objet d'une compensation financière ultérieure. Le requérant n'a, notamment, pas établi qu'il serait empêché d'obtenir une telle compensation par voie d'un éventuel recours en indemnité en vertu de l'article 288 CE (voir, en ce sens, ordonnance du président du Tribunal du 10 novembre 2004, European Dynamics/Commission, T-303/04 R, Rec. p. II-3889, point 72, et la jurisprudence citée).

79 Le requérant fait, certes, valoir qu'il serait extrêmement difficile, à défaut d'offre pouvant être comparée aux offres sélectionnées, de démontrer quelles auraient été ses chances d'obtenir le marché s'il avait été admis à présenter une offre (impossibilité de démontrer l'existence du lien de causalité requis). Il y a cependant lieu de rappeler que, le 10 juin 2008, le requérant s'est vu communiquer par la Commission le cahier des charges et qu'il a été autorisé, par l'ordonnance du 9 juin 2008, à présenter une offre pour les lots 2, 3, 4, 6, 7, 8, 9 et 10 du marché en cause (voir point 12 ci-dessus). Il serait donc possible, dans le cadre d'un éventuel futur litige indemnitaire, de comparer cette offre avec celle retenue par le pouvoir adjudicataire.

80 Il s'ensuit que, dans l'hypothèse où le requérant obtiendrait gain de cause au principal, il pourrait être attribué une valeur économique au préjudice qu'il a subi en raison de la perte de la chance de remporter le marché en cause, valeur économique qui est susceptible de satisfaire à l'obligation de réparation intégrale du dommage individuel effectivement subi (voir, en ce sens, ordonnance Vakakis/Commission, précitée, point 67). Or, il résulte d'une jurisprudence récente de la Cour que, lorsque le Tribunal accorde des dommages et intérêts sur la base de la valeur économique attribuée au préjudice subi en raison d'un manque à gagner, cette réparation est en principe susceptible de satisfaire à l'exigence d'assurer la réparation intégrale du préjudice individuel que la partie concernée a effectivement subi du fait des actes illégaux particuliers dont elle a été victime (voir, en ce sens, arrêt de la Cour du 21 février 2008, Commission/Girardot, C-348/06 P, non encore publié au Recueil, point 76).

81 Au vu de tout ce qui précède, il y a lieu de conclure que la condition relative à l'urgence n'est pas remplie.

82 En conséquence, la demande en référé doit être rejetée pour défaut tant de fumus boni juris que d'urgence.

Par ces motifs,

LE PRÉSIDENT DU TRIBUNAL

ordonne :

1) La demande en référé est rejetée.

2) Les dépens sont réservés.

Action brought on 5 June 2008 - CLL Centre de langues v Commission

(Case T-202/08)

Language of the case: French

Parties

Applicant: Centre de langues à Louvain-la-Neuve et -en-Woluwe (CLL Centre de langues) (Louvain-la-Neuve, Belgium) (represented by: F. Tulkens and V. Ost, lawyers)

Defendant: Commission of the European Communities

Form of order sought

Annul the rejection decision;

Order the Commission to bear its own costs and to pay those incurred by CLL.

Pleas in law and main arguments

The applicant disputes the Commission's decision to reject its application to participate in invitation to tender ADMIN/D1/PR/2008/004 regarding language training for staff at the European Union (EU) institutions, bodies and agencies in Brussels (OJ 2008 S 44-060121), on the ground that the application was submitted after the deadline stated in the contract notice.

In support of its action, the applicant submits that the contested decision is based on an incorrect supposition that the awarding authority is required to reject all late applications to participate. The applicant takes the view, on the contrary, that the awarding authority has a margin of discretion in that regard.

Furthermore, the applicant submits that the contested decision is not sufficiently reasoned, since the Commission has not explained why it has not exercised its discretionary powers.

Finally, the applicant raises a plea alleging breach of Article 123 of the implementing rules, [1] according to which the number of candidates invited to tender must be sufficient to ensure genuine competition, and the disproportionate nature of the rejection of the applicant's application.

(Article 97(2) of the Financial Regulation)

1. If, for a given contract, tenders appear to be abnormally low, the contracting authority shall, before rejecting such tenders on that ground alone, request in writing details of the constituent elements of the tender which it considers relevant and shall verify those constituent elements, after due hearing of the parties, taking account of the explanations received. ...

Article 148

Contacts between contracting authorities and tenderers

(Article 99 of the Financial Regulation)

1. Contact between the contracting authority and tenderers during the contract award procedure may take place, by way of exception, under the conditions set out in paragraphs 2 and 3.

3. If, after the tenders have been opened, some clarification is required in connection with a tender, or if obvious clerical errors in the tender must be corrected, the contracting authority may contact the tenderer, although such contact may not lead to any alteration of the terms of the tender.

Article 158a

Standstill period before signature of the contract

(Article 105 of the Financial Regulation)

1. The contracting authority shall not sign the contract or framework contract, covered by Directive 2004/18/EC, with the successful tenderer until 14 calendar days have elapsed.

That period shall run from either of the following dates:

(a) the day after the simultaneous dispatch of the award decisions and decisions to reject;

(b) where the contract or framework contract is awarded pursuant to a negotiated procedure without prior publication of a contract notice, the day after the contract award notice referred to in Article 118 has been published in the Official Journal of the European Union.

If necessary, the contracting authority may suspend the signing of the contract for additional examination if this is justified by the requests or comments made by unsuccessful or aggrieved tenderers or candidates or by any other relevant information received. The requests, comments or information must be received during the period set in the first subparagraph. In the case of suspension all the candidates or tenderers shall be informed within three working days following the suspension decision.

Except in the cases provided for in paragraph 2, any contract signed before the expiry of the period set in the first subparagraph shall be null and void.

Where the contract or framework contract cannot be awarded to the successful envisaged tenderer, the contracting authority may award it to the following best tenderer.

They shall award these public contracts by applying the open or restricted procedure. …'

Background to the dispute

4 With a view to the construction of a reference materials production hall in the grounds of the Institut des matériaux et mesures de référence (Institute for Reference Materials and Measurements) (IMMR) in Geel (Belgium), the Commission of the European Communities decided to award a public procurement contract ('the contract'). It opted for a restricted procedure within the meaning of the second subparagraph of Article 122(2) of the Implementing Regulation and, after publication of a contract notice on 31 May 2006, it launched a restricted call for tenders for that construction.

5 The applicant – Antwerpse Bouwwerken NV – took part in that procedure, as did Company C and two other undertakings. They were sent the contract documents, the administrative annex to which states, at point 25, that the contract is to be awarded to the cheapest tender, and that:

'Failure to state all the prices required in the take-off ["cost estimation summary"] will result in exclusion. That also applies where alterations are made to the [cost estimation summary] in response to comments submitted in good time by the tenderers.'

6 On 21 September 2007, the applicant submitted its tender. The tender price was EUR 10 315 112.32.

7 On 5 November 2007, the Commission Evaluation Committee drafted an initial evaluation report on the tenders submitted. That report states, inter alia, that '[Company C] has given a Unit Price for Item 03.09.15B but omitted to include it in the Global Price. EUR 973.76 should be added, giving a new total of EUR 9 728 946.14'; that '[Company C] also omitted to give a Unit price for Item E.9.26'; that '[n]o omissions were found in the tender of [the applicant]'; that '[Company C] and [other undertakings] all omitted to give prices for some items'; that, for that reason, '[their tenders] have to be considered non-conform'; and that, 'therefore the only conform offer was submitted by [the applicant]'. In view of that conclusion, the Evaluation Committee proposed that the contract be awarded to the applicant.

8 By letter of 27 February 2008, the applicant was informed by the Commission that:

– its tender had been selected for the award of the contract, while, nevertheless, its attention was drawn to the fact that no obligation was thereby placed on the Commission, given that the competent Commission departments may at any time abandon the idea of a procurement contract or cancel the award procedure, without the applicant being entitled to claim any compensation whatsoever;

– the contract could not be signed until after the expiry of a two-week period and the Commission reserved the right to suspend its signing of the contract pending additional examination should this be justified in the light of requests or comments made by the unsuccessful tenderers or of any other relevant information received.

9 In reply to a letter of 3 March 2008 from Company C requesting detailed explanations for the rejection of its tender, the Commission stated by letter of 10 March 2008 that Company C's tender had been rejected because it did not comply with the conditions laid down in the contract documents and in the administrative annex thereto. In that letter, the Commission included an extract from the evaluation report of 5 November 2007 stating, inter alia, that Company C had omitted to quote a price for Item E 9.26 of the cost estimation summary.

10 By letter of 11 March 2008, received by the Commission on the following day, Company C stated that the price for Item E 9.26 of the cost estimation summary – missing from its tender – could clearly be deduced from the price bid for Item E 9.13 in that summary, which was worded identically. Company C also submitted that it would be manifestly unjust, imprudent and contrary to the principle of economy to reject its tender on that ground alone, particularly as the price for Item E 9.26 accounted only for a tiny proportion of the total value of the contract.

11 By letter of 12 March 2008, the Commission informed the applicant that one of the unsuccessful tenderers had provided information which justified suspension of the signing of the contract, in accordance with Article 158a(1) of the Implementing Regulation.

12 By letter of 16 April 2008, the Commission asked Company C to confirm that its tender was to be understood as meaning that the price bid for Item E 9.26 of the cost estimation summary was the same as that for Item E 9.13 of the summary – that is to say, EUR 903.69 – and that, when that price was taken into consideration together with that for Item 03.09.15B, which Company C had mistakenly omitted to include in the calculation of the overall bid price, the overall price was EUR 9 729 849.83.

13 By two letters dated 22 April 2008 and received by the Commission on the same day, Company C confirmed that that understanding of its tender was correct.

14 On 23 April 2008, the Evaluation Committee drew up a new evaluation report on the tenders submitted, in which it states, inter alia, in point 3.2.1.3, that '[Company C] omitted to give a Unit price for Item E 9.26', but that 'in a clarification letter they mentioned that the price could be retrieved from item E 9.13 [(EUR 903.69)] since it is exactly the same item'. The Evaluation Committee adds that, '[b]ased on this clarification … EUR 903.69 should be added to their original offer', and that, '[a]s per the … Commission Legal Service, this event should be considered as a clarification to the offer and not as a modification'. The Evaluation Committee accordingly proposed that the contract be awarded to Company C. In that new evaluation report, the applicant's tender is presented as only the third cheapest tender.

15 By letter of 29 April 2008, received on 5 May 2008, the Commission informed the applicant that, ultimately, its tender had not been selected for award of the contract, on the ground that its bid price 'was higher than that bid by the successful tenderer'.

16 By letter of the same day, the Commission informed Company C that it had been awarded the contract.

17 In reply to a request made by the applicant, the Commission informed it, by letter of 6 May 2008, of the following additional reasons:

'When this voluminous file was first examined, you appeared to be the successful tenderer despite the fact that your price was noticeably higher than that of the successful tenderer. The reason for the initial rejection of that tenderer's tender was that no price could be found for a certain low-price item. That was also the position in the case of two other tenderers. Consequently, those tenders were initially regarded as non-compliant.

During the standstill period provided for in Article 158a of the [Implementing] Regulation, the other tenderers pointed out that the missing prices were in fact to be found in their tenders. As a consequence, the standstill period was suspended so that an additional examination could be carried out. It emerged from that examination that the prices, initially missing, were in fact stated and that those undertakings had therefore submitted compliant tenders. Accordingly, it was necessary to re-examine all the tenders. Given that one of those undertakings had submitted the cheapest tender, it has been selected as the successful tenderer in this procurement procedure.'

18 By letter of 15 May 2008, received by the applicant on the following day, the Commission sent the applicant a copy of the evaluation reports of 5 November 2007 and 23 April 2008.

Procedure and forms of order sought by the parties

19 By application lodged at the Registry of the Court on 30 May 2008, the applicant brought the present action. By separate document lodged on the same day, the applicant requested that the case be decided under the expedited procedure, pursuant to Article 76a of the Rules of Procedure of the Court; that request was refused by decision of 9 July 2008.

20 By another separate document lodged on 30 May 2008, the applicant also applied for interim relief in accordance with Article 243 EC and Article 104 et seq. of the Rules of Procedure, that action being registered as Case T–195/08 R. By order of the President of the Court of 15 July 2008 in Case T–195/08 R Antwerpse Bouwwerken v Commission, not published in the ECR, the application for interim relief was dismissed.

21 Acting upon a report of the Judge-Rapporteur, the Court (Fifth Chamber) decided to open the oral procedure and, by way of measures of organisation of procedure as provided for in Article 64 of the Rules of Procedure, asked the Commission to reply in writing to a question and to produce certain documents. The Commission complied with that request.

22 At the hearing on 10 June 2009, the parties presented oral argument and answered the questions put by the Court.

23 The applicant claims that the Court should:

– annul the decision, contained in the Commission's letter of 29 April 2008 as supplemented by its letter of 6 May 2008, rejecting the tender submitted by the applicant, and the Commission's decision of 23 April 2008 awarding the contract to Company C, notified to the applicant by letter of the Commission of 15 May 2008;

– declare the Commission to be non-contractually liable for the damage suffered by the applicant, to be quantified at a later date;

– order the Commission to pay the costs.

24 In the reply, the applicant assessed the damage suffered at EUR 619 000 and reserved the right to re-assess the damage in the course of the proceedings.

25 The Commission contends that the Court should:

– dismiss the action as inadmissible or, failing which, as unfounded;

– order the applicant to pay the costs.

The application for annulment

The subject-matter of the dispute

26 By its first head of claim, the applicant seeks annulment of (i) the Commission's decision of 29 April 2008 rejecting its tender and (ii) the Commission's 'decision' of 23 April 2008 awarding the contract to Company C. The applicant was informed of the latter decision by letter of the Commission of 15 May 2008.

27 Nevertheless, it is clear, as was pointed out in paragraph 18 above, that, by letter of 15 May 2008, the Commission merely sent the applicant the evaluation reports of 5 November 2007 and 23 April 2008 and that those reports do not contain any decision on the part of the Commission, but only proposals made by the Evaluation Committee concerning the award of the contract to the applicant and to Company C, respectively, which are not binding upon the Commission (see, to that effect, Case C–27/98 Fracasso and Leitschutz [1999] ECR I–5697, paragraphs 33 and 34, and Case T–145/98 ADT Projekt v Commission [2000] ECR II–387, paragraph 152).

28 It should also be borne in mind that provisional measures intended to pave the way for the decision awarding a public procurement contract, which is a decision drawn up under an internal procedure involving several stages, cannot themselves be contested in an action for annulment. Such an action can be brought only against the measures which definitively lay down the position of the Commission upon the conclusion of that internal procedure (see, to that effect, Case 60/81 IBM v Commission [1981] ECR 2639, paragraph 10, and Joined Cases T–10/92 to T–12/92 and T–15/92 Cimenteries CBR and Others v Commission [1992] ECR II–2667, paragraph 28), that is to say, in the present case, the decision rejecting the tender submitted by one tenderer and the decision awarding the contract to another tenderer.

29 It should also be observed that, in response to a request from the Court for a copy of its decision awarding the contract to Company C, the Commission stated that, at the material time, it was not the practice of the competent department to adopt a formal award decision but that, on the basis of the recommendations made in the evaluation report and after seeking a favourable opinion from an internal committee, that department forwarded to the successful tenderer the decision awarding it the contract and notified to the other tenderers the decision rejecting their tenders. At the hearing, the parties confirmed that point, which was recorded in the minutes.

30 In those circumstances, it must be concluded that the applicant's first head of claim is to be understood as seeking the annulment of the Commission's decision of 29 April 2008 awarding the contract to Company C and rejecting the applicant's tender ('the contested decision'). By letters of the same day, both Company C and the applicant were informed of that decision (see paragraphs 15 and 16 above).

Admissibility

Arguments of the parties

31 The Commission points out that the applicant's tender was only the third lowest tender. Consequently, if the Court were to uphold the action, the contract would be awarded to the tenderer ranked second lowest, and not to the applicant. Accordingly, the applicant has no interest in bringing the present action, which should on that ground be dismissed as inadmissible.

32 The applicant maintains that this preliminary plea of inadmissibility must be rejected for the reasons set out in the order in Case T–195/08 R Antwerpse Bouwwerken v Commission, paragraph 20 above (paragraphs 21 to 25).

Findings of the Court

33 It should be borne in mind that, according to settled case-law, an action for annulment brought by a natural or legal person is admissible only in so far as that person has an interest in the annulment of the contested measure (Case T–310/00 MCI v Commission [2004] ECR II–3253, paragraph 44 and the case-law cited). In order for such an interest to be present, the annulment of the contested measure must of itself be capable of having legal consequences (Joined Cases T–480/93 and T–483/93 Antillean Rice Mills and Others v Commission [1995] ECR II–2305, paragraph 59 and the case-law cited) and the action must be likely, if successful, to procure an advantage for the party who has brought it (see, to that effect, Case C–50/00 P Unión de Pequeños Agricultores v Council [2002] ECR I–6677, paragraph 21).

34 It must therefore be determined whether, in the present case, annulment of the contested decision is likely to procure an advantage for the applicant. The Commission contends that that is not the case, since, if the contested decision were to be annulled, the Commission would be entitled to award the contract to the tenderer whose tender was ranked second lowest rather than to the applicant, whose tender was ranked third lowest.

35 While it is indeed true that, if Company C's tender had to be rejected because of failure to comply with the conditions laid down in the contract documents, that would not automatically result in the contract being awarded to the applicant, it is also true that, although the Commission states in the evaluation report of 23 April 2008 that the undertaking ranked second lowest had omitted – just like Company C – to state a price for certain items in the cost estimation summary, the Commission nevertheless, in the light of the explanations provided by that undertaking, treated its tender (EUR 10 140 841.12) as being in compliance with the conditions laid down in the contract documents.

36 By the sole plea in law put forward in support of its application for annulment, the applicant disputes precisely the Commission's conclusion that an undertaking which had omitted to state in its tender the price for certain items in the cost estimation summary may none the less have its tender treated as being in compliance with the conditions laid down in the contract documents, in the light of the explanations provided by that undertaking.

37 It follows that, if Company C's tender were rejected because of the defect relied upon by the applicant, the Commission could be legally prevented from awarding the contract to the undertaking ranked second lowest, whose tender is liable to be vitiated by the same omission as the tender submitted by Company C. Accordingly, the undertaking ranked second lowest cannot be an impediment to the award of the contract to the applicant. As a consequence, the applicant has an interest in bringing proceedings and its application for annulment is admissible.

Substance

38 By its sole plea in law, the applicant alleges infringement of Article 91 of the Financial Regulation, Articles 122, 138 and 148 of the Implementing Regulation and Articles 2 and 28 of Directive 2004/18. The applicant notes that the contract was awarded upon the conclusion of a restricted procurement procedure, as is stated, moreover, in points 2 and 4.2 of the administrative annex to the contract documents. It is also apparent from point 25 of that annex that there was a single award criterion – the price bid by each tenderer – and that all the prices requested in the cost estimation summary must be stated, 'otherwise the tenderer will be excluded'.

39 Furthermore, under a restricted procedure, negotiation between the contracting authority and the tenderers is not possible. Nor may tenderers amend or supplement their tenders after submitting them. Consequently, a tender which does not comply with the conditions laid down in the contract documents must perforce be rejected by the contracting authority. Otherwise, the power to ask for clarification concerning tenders would be in breach of the principle of non-discrimination as between tenderers and the obligation of transparency under Article 2 of Directive 2004/18, which applies in the present case by virtue of the contract documents.

40 Furthermore, in Case C-243/89 Commission v Denmark [1993] ECR I-3353, paragraph 37, the Court of Justice held that the principle of the equal treatment of tenderers requires that all the tenders comply with the terms of the contract documents, so as to ensure an objective comparison of the various tenders submitted. That requirement would not be met if tenderers were permitted to enter reservations in their tenders which allowed them to depart from the 'basic terms' of the contract documents.

41 It is also apparent from the evaluation reports that, contrary to the clear instructions in point 25 of the administrative annex to the contract documents, the cost estimation summary was not completed in full in the tender submitted by Company C, since no price was quoted for Item E 9.26. That is why, in the evaluation report of 5 November 2007, the Evaluation Committee proposed that Company C's tender be rejected as failing to comply. In the evaluation report of 23 April 2008, however, the Evaluation Committee had altered its position, following the intervention on the part of Company C.

42 Such intervention is prohibited under a restricted procedure within the meaning of Article 122(2) of the Implementing Regulation, during which negotiation between the contracting authority and the tenderers is not permissible. Contrary to the opinion delivered by the Commission Legal Service, referred to in point 3.2.1.3 of the evaluation report of 23 April 2008, the letter of 22 April 2008 from Company C cannot be regarded as clarification, since it does not relate to an element which was already included in that undertaking's tender, but seeks rather to supplement that tender by inserting a price which did not appear there. In reality, the Commission allowed Company C to amend the tender which it had submitted, even though such amendment is prohibited under the restricted procedure followed in the present case.

43 Failure to quote a price for an item in the cost estimation summary cannot be regarded as a clerical error for the purposes of Article 148(3) of the Implementing Regulation, even if the missing price can be deduced from the price quoted for another item in that summary. That is confirmed by the fact that, in the evaluation report of 5 November 2007, the Evaluation Committee had already corrected a clerical error in Company C's tender – where it had omitted to take into consideration, for the purposes of calculating the overall price bid, the price quoted for Item 03.09.15 B in the cost estimation summary – and, as a result, the overall price was increased by EUR 973.76.

44 According to the applicant, the fact that Company C was permitted to supplement the tender which it had submitted constitutes a 'procedural error'. The Commission does not have any discretion in that regard and is under a duty to apply the rules of procedure strictly. Established case-law to the effect that the Commission has a broad discretion for the purposes of assessing the tenders submitted in a contract award procedure is irrelevant in the present case, which concerns a 'procedural error' and not a manifest error of assessment. For the same reason, the principle of proportionality is not applicable in the present case.

45 Even supposing that the Commission had discretion as to whether to take an incomplete cost estimation summary into account, it erred in that it decided to exclude the tenderer concerned and to inform the applicant that it had won the contract, and then changed its position and awarded the contract to that tenderer, following the latter's intervention. Moreover, according to the applicant, that conclusion is unaffected by the fact that, in its letter of 27 February 2008, the Commission reserved the right to suspend signing the contract with the applicant, since, after being told that it would be awarded the contract, the applicant had to take certain necessary action – such as refraining from taking part in other procurement procedures – in order to be ready to commence the construction works under the contract.

46 The applicant further submits that, although it is indeed correct that the wording of Items E 9.13 and E 9.26 in the cost estimation summary was identical, the fact remains that the price quoted by Company C for the second of those items cannot be deduced from the price quoted for the first. The same wording appears in other items in the summary, namely, Items E 9.05, E 9.22, E 9.31, E 9.37 and E 9.43. The applicant quoted different prices for each of those items. Since it was not possible to deduce the price bid by Company C for Item E 9.26, its tender should have been rejected by the Commission as incomplete, in accordance with the initial proposal of the Evaluation Committee.

47 Lastly, the applicant submits that the contested decision fails also to comply with the principle of transparency referred to in Article 2 of Directive 2004/18, since certain passages in the copies of the evaluation reports provided were obscured without objective justification. Consequently, the applicant maintains that, since it was not fully informed, the 'standstill period' provided for in Article 158a of the Implementing Regulation has not yet commenced.

48 The Commission contests the applicant's arguments.

Findings of the Court

49 According to the case-law, the Commission has a broad discretion with regard to the factors to be taken into account for the purposes of deciding to award a contract following an invitation to tender (Case T–169/00 Esedra v Commission [2002] ECR II–609, paragraph 95, and Joined Cases T–376/05 and T–383/05 TEA-CEGOS and Others v Commission [2006] ECR II–205, paragraph 50). In that context, the Commission also has a broad discretion in determining both the content and the application of the rules applicable to the award of a contract following a call for tenders (TEA-CEGOS and Others v Commission, paragraph 51).

50 In addition, although a contracting authority is required to draft the conditions relating to a call for tenders clearly and with precision, it is not required to make advance provision for all the situations, however rare, which could in practice arise (order of 20 April 2007 in Case C–189/06 P TEA-CEGOS and STG v Commission, not published in the ECR, paragraph 30).

51 A condition laid down in the contract documents must be interpreted in the light of its subject-matter, broad logic and wording (see, to that effect, order in TEA-CEGOS and STG v Commission, paragraph 50 above, paragraph 46). Where there is doubt, the contracting authority concerned may gauge the applicability of such a condition by conducting an examination of each individual case, taking into account all the relevant factors (see, to that effect, order in TEA-CEGOS and STG v Commission, paragraph 50 above, paragraph 31).

52 Furthermore, given the broad discretion enjoyed by the Commission, as referred to in paragraph 49 above, review by the Courts must be limited to checking that the rules governing the procedure and the stating of reasons have been complied with; that the facts are correct; and that there has been no manifest error of assessment or misuse of powers (see TEA-CEGOS and Others v Commission, paragraph 49 above, paragraph 50 and the case-law cited).

53 In the context of such a review, it is for the Court to determine, inter alia, whether the interpretation attributed by the Commission, as contracting authority, to a condition laid down in the contract documents is correct (see, to that effect, order in TEA-CEGOS and STG v Commission, paragraph 50 above, paragraph 46).

54 It should also be noted that Article 148(3) of the Implementing Regulation empowers the institutions to contact tenderers in the event that some clarification is required in connection with a tender, or if clerical errors contained in the tender must be corrected. It follows that that provision cannot be interpreted as imposing, in the exceptional, limited circumstances which it identifies, a duty on the institutions to contact tenderers (see, by analogy, Case T–19/95 Adia interim v Commission [1996] ECR II–321, paragraphs 43 and 44).

55 It can be otherwise only if, by virtue of the general principles of law, that power has evolved into an obligation on the part of the Commission to contact a tenderer (see, to that effect and by analogy, Adia interim v Commission, paragraph 54 above, paragraph 45).

56 That is the position, inter alia, where a tender has been drafted in ambiguous terms and the circumstances of the case, of which the Commission is aware, suggest that the ambiguity probably has a simple explanation and is capable of being easily resolved. In principle, it would be contrary to the requirements of sound administration for the Commission to reject the tender in such circumstances without exercising its power to seek clarification. It would be contrary to the principle of equal treatment to accept that, in such circumstances, the Commission enjoys an unfettered discretion (see, to that effect, Case T–211/02 Tideland Signal v Commission [2002] ECR II–3781, paragraphs 37 and 38).

57 In addition, the principle of proportionality requires that measures adopted by the institutions do not exceed the limits of what is appropriate and necessary in order to attain the objectives legitimately pursued, it being understood that, where there is a choice between several appropriate measures, recourse must be had to the least onerous and that the disadvantages caused must not be disproportionate to the aims pursued (Case C–157/96 National Farmers' Union and Others [1998] ECR I–2211, paragraph 60). That principle requires that, when the contracting authority is faced with an ambiguous tender and a request for clarification of the terms of the tender would be capable of ensuring legal certainty in the same way as the immediate rejection of that tender, the contracting authority must seek clarification from the tenderer concerned rather than opt purely and simply to reject the tender (see, to that effect, Tideland Signal v Commission, paragraph 56 above, paragraph 43).

58 However, it is also essential, in the interests of legal certainty, that the Commission be able to ascertain precisely what a tender submitted in the course of a procurement procedure means and, in particular, to determine whether the tender complies with the conditions set out in the contract documents. Thus, where a tender is ambiguous and the Commission is not in a position to establish, quickly and efficiently, what it actually means, that institution has no choice but to reject the tender (Tideland Signal v Commission, paragraph 56 above, paragraph 34).

59 Lastly, it is ultimately for the Court to determine whether a tenderer's replies to requests from the contracting authority for clarification can be regarded as explanations of the terms of the tender or whether those replies go beyond clarification and modify the substantive terms of the tender in relation to the conditions laid down in the contract documents (see to that effect, Esedra v Commission, paragraph 49 above, paragraph 52).

60 In the present case, it must first be determined whether, in a situation where a tenderer has omitted to quote, in the cost estimation summary accompanying its tender, the price for a particular item, the condition laid down in point 25 of the administrative annex to the contract documents must be interpreted as meaning that rejection of the tender is mandatory, as the applicant essentially submits, or whether, as the Commission submits, the tender cannot be rejected where there is a simple explanation for the clerical omission in question and the missing price can be deduced, easily and with certainty, from the price bid for another item in that summary.

61 In that regard, it should be noted that the condition laid down in point 25 of the administrative annex to the contract documents is intended to provide the contracting authority – in the present case, the Commission – with a detailed explanation regarding the way in which the overall price bid for the contract by each tenderer is broken down into individual prices for the various operations covered by that contract.

62 It must also be held, in the light of the clarifications on that subject provided by the parties at the hearing, that the obligation on each tenderer to quote a price for all the items in the cost estimation summary is intended to enable the Commission easily to verify the precise nature of the overall price bid by each tenderer and to determine whether it is normal, in accordance with Article 139(1) of the Implementing Regulation. Lastly, that obligation is intended to facilitate adaptation of the overall price bid for the contract in the event that additional work proves necessary, after the contract has been awarded, in the course of performance.

63 However, as regards the condition laid down in point 25 of the administrative annex to the contract documents, attainment of the above objectives is in no way affected by the Commission's interpretation of that provision to the effect that a tender is not incomplete and need not be rejected if the missing price for a particular item can be deduced with certainty from the price quoted for another item in the same cost estimation summary or, at the very least, after obtaining clarification of the terms of that tender from the tenderer who submitted it.

64 As the Commission states, in the latter situation, it is not a matter of inserting a new price bid in the cost estimation summary for the item concerned; rather, it is simply a matter of explaining the terms of the tender, in order to make it clear that the price bid for a particular item is to be understood as also having been bid for every other identical or similar item.

65 In such a case, a purely literal and strict interpretation of the condition laid down in point 25 of the administrative annex to the contract documents, as proposed by the applicant, would lead to the rejection of economically advantageous tenders because of clerical errors which are obvious and insignificant, a course of action which – as the Commission rightly points out – cannot, in the long run, be reconciled with the 'principle of economy' referred to in Article 27 of the Financial Regulation.

66 In the light of those considerations, it is necessary, next, to determine whether the Commission was correct in taking the view that the price quoted by Company C for Item E 9.26 of the cost estimation summary could, in the present case, be deduced with certainty from the price quoted by Company C for another item in the cost estimation summary, a view which led the Commission not to reject the tender submitted by that undertaking as failing to comply with the conditions laid down in the contract documents.

67 In that regard, it should be borne in mind that, on being informed of the Commission's decision to award the contract to the applicant, Company C initially asked the Commission, in accordance with Article 100(2) of the Financial Regulation, for details of the grounds on which its tender had been rejected. Once informed of those grounds, Company C, acting in accordance with Article 158a(1) of the Implementing Regulation and within the time-limits laid down in that provision, submitted observations in which it asked the Commission to award it the contract on the ground that the price for Item E 9.26 was not missing from the cost estimation summary accompanying its tender, since that price could easily be deduced from the price bid for Item E 9.13 (see paragraphs 9 and 10 above).

68 It should also be noted that it is apparent from the extracts of the summaries which accompanied the tenders submitted by the applicant and by Company C – produced by the Commission at the request of the Court – that Items E 9.05, E 9.13, E 9.22, E 9.26, E 9.31, E 9.37 and E 9.43 are all worded identically and concern an identical installation, that is to say, a semi-automatic switching centre for gas cylinders.

69 The difference between the seven items referred to above lies, first, in the location of the installation in question, since each item refers to a different site or laboratory. However, at the hearing, the parties stated that the location of that installation was not liable to affect its cost or, in consequence, the price bid for the corresponding item by each tenderer.

70 Secondly, those seven items can also be distinguished according to the type of gas for which the installation in question will be used. Thus, the installations covered by Items E 9.05, E 9.22, E 9.31, E 9.37 and E 9.43 will be used for non-combustible gases. On the other hand, the installations covered by Items E 9.13 and E 9.26 will be used for propane, which is a combustible gas.

71 At the hearing, the Commission stated – without being contradicted by the applicant – that the combustible or non-combustible nature of the gas concerned was liable to affect the cost of the installation in question and, therefore, the price bid for the corresponding item by each tenderer. The Court does indeed find that the extract of the cost estimation summary which accompanied the applicant's tender reveals that it bid the same price (EUR 880.69) for each of Items E 9.05, E 9.22, E 9.31, E 9.37 and E 9.43, which concern non-combustible gases, and a different price (EUR 1 016.92) for both Item E 9.13 and Item E 9.26, which concern a combustible gas.

72 With regard to Company C, it is apparent from the cost estimation summary which accompanied its tender that it also bid the same price (EUR 782.63) for each of Items E 9.05, E 9.22, E 9.31, E 9.37 and E 9.43. In addition, it bid EUR 903.69 for Item E 9.13, while it quoted no price in the cost estimation summary which accompanied its tender for Item E 9.26.

73 It should also be noted that, both in the applicant's tender and in that of Company C, the price bid for the installation in question, when it is intended to be used for non-combustible gases, represents 86.60% of the price bid for the same installation when it is intended to be used for propane, a combustible gas.

74 It follows that the Commission was right to find that the omission of a price for Item E 9.26 in the cost estimation summary accompanying Company C's tender constituted a simple clerical error in that tender or, at the very least, an ambiguity having a simple explanation and capable of being easily resolved. In the light of the points raised in paragraphs 68 to 73 above, the obvious conclusion is that the missing price for Item E 9.26 of the cost estimation summary for Company C's tender cannot be different from the price bid by that undertaking for Item E 9.13 (EUR 903.69) and that it was a mere oversight that Company C did not state that price for Item E 9.26.

75 In those circumstances, the Commission was entitled, in accordance with Article 148(3) of the Implementing Regulation and without failing to have due regard to the condition laid down in point 25 of the administrative annex to the contract documents, to request clarification from Company C regarding the terms of its tender.

76 It matters little that the request for clarification from Company C was made after it had submitted observations on the rejection of its tender. As the Commission rightly points out, if the Commission were not entitled, following the submission of observations under Article 158a(1) of the Implementing Regulation, to request clarifications which it considered necessary and, where appropriate, to withdraw its decision awarding the contract and to award it to another tenderer, that provision would be entirely devoid of meaning.

77 After obtaining, in response to its request for clarification from Company C, confirmation from that undertaking that its tender was indeed to be read in such a way that the price bid for Item E 9.26 was the same as that bid for Item E 9.13 (see paragraphs 12 and 13 above), the Commission rightly concluded that the tender complied with the conditions laid down in the contract documents and subsequently awarded the contract to Company C, since its tender was the cheapest.

78 The argument put forward by the applicant is not such as to call that conclusion into question. First, it should be noted that, contrary to the applicant's submissions, the Commission did not commence prohibited negotiations with Company C with a view to amending the tender submitted by that undertaking, but merely exercised its power under Article 148(3) of the Implementing Regulation to request clarification of the terms of that tender.

79 Secondly, with regard to the applicant's argument alleging breach of the principle of equal treatment as between tenderers, set out in both Article 2 of Directive 2004/18 and Article 89(1) of the Financial Regulation, it should be noted that that principle cannot prevent the Commission from exercising its power under Article 148(3) of the Implementing Regulation to ask for clarification concerning tenders, after opening those tenders, since it is stated that the Commission is obliged to treat all tenderers in a similar manner with regard to the exercise of that power (see, to that effect and by analogy, Tideland Signal v Commission, paragraph 56 above, paragraph 38).

80 In the present case, the Commission acted consistently with the principle of equal treatment of tenderers, since it did not request clarification only from Company C; rather, it requested clarification from all those whose tenders contained, in particular, the same error as that submitted by Company C, that is to say, which omitted to quote prices for certain items in the cost estimation summary accompanying their tenders (see paragraphs 7 and 17 above). The applicant was not asked to provide such clarification because it was unnecessary, since there was no price missing from the cost estimation summary accompanying its tender. Nevertheless, as is apparent from the evaluation report of 23 April 2008, the fact remains that the Evaluation Committee also made certain corrections to the applicant's tender, which led to a slight reduction in the overall price bid.

81 Lastly, it is necessary to reject the applicant's argument, summarised in paragraph 47 above, alleging that certain passages of the copies of the evaluation reports provided were obscured, in breach of the principle of transparency, with the consequence that the standstill period before signature of the contract, provided for in Article 158a(1) of the Implementing Regulation, has not yet commenced.

82 In that regard, it should first be noted that, at the hearing, the applicant was unable to explain the relevance of that standstill period to the present case, it having been established that there is no dispute whatsoever that the action was brought in good time.

83 Next, it should be noted that the applicant's request, to which the Commission responded by sending copies of the evaluation reports, was made after the contested decision was adopted. As a consequence, the question whether or not the Commission's response to that request was complete cannot have any bearing on the lawfulness of the contested decision, which is the only decision to which the application for annulment relates.

84 Lastly, it should be noted, in any event, that the principle of transparency, referred to in both Article 89(1) of the Financial Regulation and Article 2 of Directive 2004/18, must be reconciled with the protection of the public interest, of legitimate business interests of public or private undertakings, and of fair competition: that is the reason for the provision made in the second subparagraph of Article 100(2) of the Financial Regulation, under which it is possible to refuse to disclose certain details to a rejected tenderer, where non-disclosure is necessary to ensure that those requirements are satisfied.

85 It follows from all of the foregoing considerations that the sole plea in law put forward by the applicant in support of its application for annulment is unfounded and that, in consequence, that application must be dismissed.

The application for damages

Arguments of the parties

86 The applicant submits that the Commission unlawfully authorised Company C to amend or supplement its tender after that tender had been submitted, in breach of the provisions relied on in the application for annulment. That breach is sufficiently clear, since the Commission manifestly and gravely misused its discretion to evaluate the tenders and infringed higher-ranking rules of law intended to protect the interests of individuals, including, inter alia, the principles of non-discrimination and of transparency. Moreover, the damage suffered by the applicant is a direct consequence of the irregularities committed by the Commission. That damage is also imminent and foreseeable with a sufficient degree of certainty.

87 The applicant additionally submits that its application for damages is admissible. According to the applicant, uncertainty as to the extent of the damage suffered does not render inadmissible an action for damages brought on the basis of the second paragraph of Article 288 EC. It is apparent from settled case-law that quantification of the damage is to be reserved if, at the time when the action for damages is held to be well founded, the information needed in order to calculate the amount of the damage is not yet available. It follows, in the submission of the applicant, that the admissibility of an action for damages is not conditional upon the existence, at the time when the action is brought, of a precise calculation of the extent of the damage purportedly suffered.

88 The applicant states that it had attempted to secure the contract by means of an action for interim relief, and that it brought the main proceedings even though the outcome of the action for interim relief was not yet known. For the time being, therefore, it confined itself in the application to claiming that the Commission should be declared liable and reserved the right not to provide an assessment of the amount of the damage suffered until later. According to the applicant, it is also obvious that the purported damage is imminent and sufficiently certain, since it is common ground that its turnover will fall if it does not carry out the contract. Such a fall in turnover indisputably has a negative impact on its profits for the relevant financial year. Furthermore, Belgian legislation applies a flat rate to that damage, setting it at 10% of the value of the contract. The applicant has also produced a report from its company auditor, in which the damage which it has suffered is set at EUR 619 000, and it reserves the right to carry out, if necessary, a re-assessment of the damage. The rights of the defence of the Commission are in no way infringed, since the Commission can always enter, by way of defence, pleas relating to the applicant's assessment of the damage.

89 The Commission contends, principally, that the claim for damages is inadmissible, since the applicant merely claims that the Court should recognise the existence of the purported damage which the applicant has suffered on account of the Commission's conduct, without quantifying that damage. In Case T-461/93 An Taisce and WWF UK v Commission [1994] ECR II-733, paragraphs 42 and 43, the Court held that such a head of claim was inadmissible.

90 In the alternative, the Commission contends that the claim for damages must be dismissed as unfounded, since none of the three conditions required by the case-law is satisfied in the present case.

Findings of the Court

91 It is settled case-law that, in order for a claim for damages brought under the second paragraph of Article 288 EC to be well founded, a number of conditions must be satisfied: the alleged conduct on the part of the institution must be unlawful, actual damage must have been suffered and there must be a causal link between the conduct and the purported damage (Case 26/81 Oleifici Mediterranei v EEC [1982] ECR 3057, paragraph 16, and Case T-175/94 International Procurement Services v Commission [1996] ECR II-729, paragraph 44). If any one of those conditions is not satisfied, the action must be dismissed in its entirety and it is unnecessary to consider the other conditions (Case C-146/91 KYDEP v Council and Commission [1994] ECR I-4199, paragraphs 19 and 81, and Case T-170/00 Förde-Reederei v Council and Commission [2002] ECR II-515, paragraph 37).

92 In the present case, it has already been found on examination of the application for annulment that the contested decision is in no way unlawful.

93 Consequently, since the condition relating to the unlawfulness of the conduct of the Commission is not satisfied, the claim for damages must be dismissed as unfounded, without it being necessary to give a ruling as to admissibility.

Costs

94 Under Article 87(2) of the Rules of Procedure, the unsuccessful party is to be ordered to pay the costs if they have been applied for in the pleadings of the successful party. Since the applicant has been unsuccessful, it must be ordered to pay the costs, including those of the proceedings for interim relief, in accordance with the form of order sought by the Commission.

On those grounds,

THE GENERAL COURT (Fifth Chamber)

hereby:

1. Dismisses the action;

2. Orders Antwerpse Bouwwerken NV to pay the costs, including those relating to the proceedings for interim relief in Case T–195/08 R.

partie requérante,

contre

Commission des Communautés européennes, représentée par M. E. Manhaeve, en qualité d'agent, assisté de M^e^ M. Gelders, avocat, partie défenderesse,

ayant pour objet une demande de mesures provisoires formée dans le cadre d'une procédure d'appel d'offres lancée par la Commission pour la construction d'un bâtiment,

LE PRÉSIDENT DU TRIBUNAL DE PREMIÈRE INSTANCE
DES COMMUNAUTÉS EUROPÉENNES

rend la présente

Ordonnance

Antécédents du litige

1 Par un avis de marché publié le 31 mai 2006, la Commission a lancé un appel d'offres, en application du titre V (« Passation des marchés publics ») de la première partie du règlement (CE, Euratom) nº 1605/2002 du Conseil, du 25 juin 2002, portant règlement financier applicable au budget général des Communautés européennes (JO L 248, p. 1, ci-après le « règlement financier »), pour la construction d'une salle de production de matériaux de référence sur le terrain de l'Institut des matériaux et mesures de référence (IMMR) à Geel (Belgique).

2 À cette fin, elle a choisi d'attribuer le marché selon la procédure restreinte au sens de l'article 122, paragraphe 2, du règlement (CE, Euratom) nº 2342/2002 de la Commission, du 23 décembre 2002, établissant les modalités d'exécution du règlement financier (JO L 357, p. 1, ci-après le « règlement d'exécution »). En vertu de cette disposition, le marché sur appel à la concurrence est restreint lorsque tous les opérateurs économiques peuvent demander à participer et que seuls les candidats satisfaisant les critères de sélection et qui y sont invités simultanément et par écrit par les pouvoirs adjudicateurs peuvent présenter une offre.

3 La requérante, Antwerpse Bouwwerken NV, et trois autres entreprises ont participé à cette procédure. Elles se sont vu transmettre le cahier des charges, dont l'annexe administrative prévoit, en son point 25, que le marché sera attribué à l'offre la moins disante, en précisant :

« [T]ous les prix demandés sur le métré récapitulatif doivent être indiqués sous peine d'exclusion. Cela vaut également pour d'éventuelles modifications du métré intervenant à la suite de remarques déposées en temps utile par les candidats. »

4 Le 21 septembre 2007, la requérante a déposé son offre. Le prix offert s'élevait à 10 315 112,32 euros.

5 Par courrier du 27 février 2008 – signé par un des assistants « Finance et contrats » de l'unité « Support de gestion » de la direction IMMR au sein de la direction générale « Centre commun de recherche » –, la Commission a informé la requérante que :

– son offre avait été retenue pour l'attribution du marché, en attirant, toutefois, son attention sur le fait que cela ne créait aucune obligation à la charge de la Commission, étant donné que les services compétents de celle-ci pouvaient toujours renoncer au marché ou annuler la procédure de passation du marché, sans que la requérante puisse prétendre à une quelconque indemnisation ;

– le contrat ne pouvait être signé qu'à l'expiration d'un délai de deux semaines et que la Commission se réservait le droit de suspendre sa signature pour examen complémentaire si les demandes ou commentaires formulés par des soumissionnaires écartés, ou toute autre information pertinente reçue, le justifiaient.

6 Par lettre du 12 mars 2008, signée par le même assistant « Finance et contrats », la Commission a informé la requérante que l'un des soumissionnaires écartés avait fourni des informations de nature à justifier la suspension de la signature du contrat, conformément à l'article 158 bis, paragraphe 1, du règlement d'exécution, tel que modifié par le règlement (CE, Euratom) nº 478/2007 de la Commission, du 23 avril 2007 (JO L 111, p. 13).

7 Aux termes de cette disposition, le pouvoir adjudicateur peut suspendre la signature du contrat pour examen complémentaire lorsqu'il reçoit, dans un délai de quatorze jours à compter du lendemain de la date de notification simultanée des décisions d'attribution et de rejet des demandes, commentaires ou informations de la part des soumissionnaires écartés et que ces demandes, commentaires ou informations le justifient.

8 Par courrier du 29 avril 2008, signé par le chef de l'unité « Support de gestion » précitée, la Commission a informé la requérante que son offre n'avait finalement pas été retenue pour l'attribution du marché en cause, au motif que le prix offert par la requérante « était plus élevé que celui proposé par le soumissionnaire retenu » (ci-après la « décision du 29 avril 2008 »).

9 En réponse à une demande formulée par la requérante, la Commission lui a indiqué, par lettre du 6 mai 2008, les motifs supplémentaires suivants :

« Lors de la première évaluation de ce volumineux dossier, vous êtes apparu comme le vainqueur bien que votre prix fût sensiblement plus élevé que celui de l'attributaire actuel. La raison du rejet initial de ce candidat résidait dans le fait que, pour un petit poste de prix, le prix n'a pu être trouvé. Cela était également le cas des deux autres candidats. Par conséquent, ces offres ont, dans un premier temps, été considérées comme non conformes.

Pendant la période de statu quo prévue à l'article 158 bis du règlement [d'exécution], les autres candidats ont indiqué que les prix manquants se trouvaient bien dans leurs offres. Par conséquent, la période de statu quo a été suspendue pour examen complémentaire. Il est ressorti de la nouvelle analyse que les prix initialement manquants étaient en effet indiqués et que ces sociétés avaient donc déposé une offre conforme. Il y avait donc lieu de procéder à une nouvelle évaluation de toutes les offres. Étant donné que l'une de ces sociétés avait présenté l'offre la moins disante, elle a été désignée comme attributaire du marché. »

10 En outre, par lettre du 15 mai 2008, la Commission a communiqué à la requérante une copie du rapport d'évaluation du 5 novembre 2007, dans lequel le comité d'évaluation l'avait présentée comme étant le candidat le mieux placé, ainsi qu'une copie du rapport d'évaluation du 23 avril 2008, dans lequel un candidat initialement non retenu était désigné comme étant le candidat le mieux placé (ci-après le « soumissionnaire retenu »).

11 S'agissant du rapport d'évaluation du 5 novembre 2007, il y est énoncé expressément :

« [Le soumissionnaire retenu] a donné un prix unitaire pour le poste 03.09.15 B, mais a oublié de l'inclure dans le prix global. 973,76 euros devraient être ajoutés, ce qui donne un nouveau total de 9 728 946,14 euros.

[Le soumissionnaire retenu] a également oublié de donner un prix unitaire pour le poste E 9.26.

L'offre [de la requérante] ne comporte aucun oubli.

[…]

Étant donné que [le soumissionnaire retenu] et […] ont tous oublié d'indiquer des prix pour certains postes, leurs offres doivent être considérées comme non conformes. Par conséquent, la seule offre conforme a été déposée par [la requérante]. »

12 Le rapport d'évaluation du 23 avril 2008 énonce, quant à lui :

« [Le soumissionnaire retenu] a oublié de donner un prix unitaire pour le poste E 9.26. Toutefois, dans une lettre explicative, ils ont indiqué que le prix pouvait être déduit du poste E 9.13 (903,69 euros), car il s'agit exactement du même poste. Sur la base de cette explication […], 903,69 euros devraient être ajoutés à l'offre initiale […] cette situation devrait être considérée comme constituant une clarification […] »

13 Ce dernier rapport contient la décision du 23 avril 2008 attribuant le marché en cause au soumissionnaire retenu (ci-après la « décision du 23 avril 2008 »). Selon cette décision, l'offre de la requérante n'apparaît que comme étant la troisième offre la moins disante.

Procédure et conclusions des parties

14 Par requête déposée au greffe du Tribunal le 30 mai 2008, la requérante a introduit un recours visant, en substance, à l'annulation des décisions des 23 et 29 avril 2008 (voir points 8 et 13 ci-dessus), d'une part, et à l'engagement de la responsabilité non contractuelle de la Communauté pour le préjudice subi par la requérante, d'autre part. Elle reproche à la Commission, en substance, d'avoir violé la réglementation pertinente en permettant au soumissionnaire retenu de modifier son offre, après l'ouverture des offres soumises, par l'insertion du prix pour un poste que cette société avait initialement omis d'indiquer.

15 Par actes séparés déposés au greffe du Tribunal le même jour, la requérante a introduit une demande de procédure accélérée au titre de l'article 76 bis du règlement de procédure du Tribunal ainsi que la présente demande en référé, dans laquelle elle conclut à ce qu'il plaise au président du Tribunal :

– surseoir à l'exécution des décisions des 23 et 29 avril 2008 ;

– au cas où le contrat litigieux aurait déjà été conclu, suspendre son exécution jusqu'à ce que le Tribunal ait statué sur l'affaire au principal ;

– arrêter toute mesure provisoire utile ;

– condamner la Commission aux dépens.

16 Dans ses observations écrites déposées au greffe du Tribunal le 11 juin 2008, la Commission conclut à ce qu'il plaise au président du Tribunal :

– rejeter la demande en référé comme irrecevable ou non fondée ;

– condamner la requérante aux dépens.

18 L'article 104, paragraphe 2, du règlement de procédure dispose que les demandes de mesures provisoires doivent spécifier l'objet du litige, les circonstances établissant l'urgence, ainsi que les moyens de fait et de droit justifiant à première vue (fumus boni juris) l'octroi de la mesure provisoire à laquelle elles concluent. Ces conditions sont cumulatives, de sorte que les demandes de mesures provisoires doivent être rejetées dès lors que l'une d'elles fait défaut [ordonnance du président de la Cour du 14 octobre 1996, SCK et FNK/Commission, C–268/96 P(R), Rec. p. I–4971, point 30].

19 En outre, dans le cadre de cet examen d'ensemble, le juge des référés dispose d'un large pouvoir d'appréciation et reste libre de déterminer, au regard des particularités de l'espèce, la manière dont ces différentes conditions doivent être vérifiées ainsi que l'ordre de cet examen, dès lors qu'aucune règle de droit communautaire ne lui impose un schéma d'analyse préétabli pour apprécier la nécessité de statuer provisoirement [ordonnances du président de la Cour du 19 juillet 1995, Commission/Atlantic Container Line e.a., C–149/95 P(R), Rec. p. I–2165, point 23, et du 3 avril 2007, Vischim/Commission, C–459/06 P(R), non publiée au Recueil, point 25].

22 À cet égard, il convient de rappeler que, pour que des mesures provisoires, comme celles sollicitées par la présente demande en référé, puissent être ordonnées, la partie requérante doit, notamment, apporter la preuve de son intérêt à agir, qui constitue la condition essentielle et première de tout recours en justice (voir, en ce sens, ordonnance du président de la deuxième chambre de la Cour du 31 juillet 1989, S./Commission, 206/89 R, Rec. p. 2841, point 8, et ordonnance du président du Tribunal du 27 mars 2003, Linea CIG/Commission, T–398/02 R, Rec. p. II–1139, points 44 et 45). Selon une jurisprudence bien établie, un tel intérêt suppose que l'action en justice puisse, par son résultat, procurer un bénéfice à la partie qui l'a intentée (voir, en ce sens, ordonnance du Tribunal du 30 avril 2007, EnBW Energie Baden-Württemberg/Commission, T–387/04, Rec. p. II–1195, point 96, et la jurisprudence citée).

23 En l'espèce, il ressort du rapport d'évaluation du 23 avril 2008 que l'offre déposée par la requérante (prix global offert : 10 295 995,37 euros) n'est que la troisième offre la moins disante, de sorte qu'une éviction du soumissionnaire retenu n'aurait pas comme conséquence automatique que le marché serait attribué à la requérante. Toutefois, s'agissant de l'entreprise placée en deuxième position (prix global offert : 10 140 841,12 euros), le même rapport d'évaluation précise qu'elle avait, tout comme le soumissionnaire retenu, omis d'indiquer le prix pour certains postes, mais que son offre avait néanmoins été qualifiée par la Commission de conforme aux règles, compte tenu des éclaircissements apportés par cette entreprise.

24 À supposer donc que l'offre du soumissionnaire retenu soit entachée du vice que la requérante lui attribue du fait que cette offre aurait fait l'objet d'une modification ultérieure illégale (voir point 14 ci-dessus), l'offre placée en deuxième position serait susceptible d'être entachée précisément du même vice. Par conséquent, dans l'hypothèse où la décision attribuant le marché au soumissionnaire retenu devrait être déclarée illégale pour cette raison, la Commission pourrait être juridiquement empêchée de l'attribuer à l'entreprise placée en deuxième position, dont l'offre serait susceptible d'être entachée de la même illégalité. Dans ces circonstances, l'entreprise placée en deuxième position ne saurait être un obstacle à ce que le marché revienne à la requérante. Les mesures sollicitées par la présente demande, si elles étaient adoptées, pourraient donc lui procurer un bénéfice.

25 Il s'ensuit que la requérante dispose d'un intérêt à agir et que sa demande en référé est recevable.

Sur le fond

Arguments des parties

– Sur le fumus boni juris

26 La requérante reproche à la Commission, en substance, d'avoir violé les dispositions combinées de l'article 91 du règlement financier ainsi que des articles 122, 138 et 148 du règlement d'exécution et d'avoir enfreint les principes de transparence et d'égalité de traitement des soumissionnaires.

27 En effet, l'offre du soumissionnaire retenu aurait été incomplète, le métré n'ayant pas été entièrement rempli, du fait qu'il manquait un prix pour le poste E 9.26. Cette offre n'aurait donc pas été conforme à la prescription essentielle du point 25 de l'annexe administrative du cahier des charges, selon lequel tous les prix unitaires demandés devaient être indiqués sous peine d'exclusion de l'offre. Or, au lieu d'écarter le soumissionnaire retenu de la procédure, la Commission lui aurait, en violation des règles régissant les appels d'offres, permis de modifier son offre après son dépôt en déclarant que le prix manquant était identique à celui du poste E 9.13 et pouvait donc être déduit de ce dernier. Selon la requérante, cette modification de l'offre ne saurait être qualifiée de simple éclaircissement, étant donné qu'elle ne portait pas sur un élément déjà présent dans l'offre, mais consistait à compléter un prix unitaire manquant.

28 Par ailleurs, il ne serait pas correct de prétendre que le prix du poste E 9.26 pouvait être aisément déduit du prix du poste E 9.13. La description de ces deux postes serait, certes, identique (« centrale de commutation semi-automatique »), mais cette description apparaîtrait également dans d'autres postes, à savoir les postes E 9.05, E 9.22, E 9.31, E 9.37 et E 9.43. Or, les prix de tous ces postes ne seraient aucunement identiques. L'offre du soumissionnaire retenu aurait donc dû être écartée.

29 La Commission estime que son comportement n'est entaché d'aucune illégalité, la réglementation pertinente n'interdisant nullement tout contact entre le pouvoir adjudicataire et les soumissionnaires après l'ouverture des offres. Ainsi, l'article 148, paragraphe 3, du règlement d'exécution permettrait au pouvoir adjudicateur, dans le cas où une offre donnerait lieu à des demandes d'éclaircissement ou s'il s'agit de corriger des erreurs matérielles manifestes dans la rédaction de l'offre, de prendre l'initiative d'un contact avec le soumissionnaire, étant entendu que ce contact ne peut conduire à une modification des termes de l'offre.

30 Selon la Commission, le cas d'espèce correspond à la situation envisagée dans cette disposition, les offres autres que celle de la requérante ayant donné lieu à des demandes d'éclaircissement. L'éclaircissement apporté par le soumissionnaire retenu n'aurait entraîné aucune modification des termes de l'offre remise par cette société, mais n'aurait consisté qu'à corriger et à préciser ladite offre, et ce sur la base d'un élément qui y figurait déjà.

31 Dans la mesure où la requérante soutient que la description des postes E 9.13 et E 9.26 apparaît également dans les postes E 9.05, E 9.22, E 9.31, E 9.37 et E 9.43, sans que les prix offerts pour ces cinq derniers postes soient identiques, la Commission rétorque que, malgré l'identité de la description, il s'agit là de deux catégories de postes nettement différentes : les postes E 9.13 et E 9.26 concerneraient la commutation de gaz combustibles, alors que les postes E 9.05, E 9.22, E 9.31, E 9.37 et E 9.43 concerneraient celle de gaz non combustibles. Or, tant le soumissionnaire retenu que la requérante auraient offert un même prix pour tous les postes à l'intérieur de chacune des deux catégories concernées. Par conséquent, il aurait été admissible de déduire, par voie d'éclaircissement, le prix du poste E 9.26 de celui indiqué pour le poste E 9.13.

32 La Commission ajoute que le fait d'omettre de remplir un seul poste dans le métré récapitulatif ne saurait être qualifié de violation d'une disposition essentielle, le cahier des charges avec ses annexes étant un document extrêmement volumineux et le métré demandant l'indication du prix d'environ 1 500 postes. Le principe de proportionnalité s'opposerait donc à une approche trop sévère en la matière, et ce d'autant plus que le poste E 9.26 en question ne représenterait que 0,0092 % de la valeur totale du marché. Enfin, il conviendrait de tenir compte de la différence sensible de prix total entre l'offre de la requérante (10 295 995,37 euros) et celle du soumissionnaire retenu (9 729 849,83 euros), à savoir 566 145,54 euros. La Commission invoque, à cet égard, le principe d'économie en tant que principe général de bonne gestion financière (article 27 et considérants 3 et 11 du règlement financier).

33 La requérante fait valoir qu'elle risque de subir un préjudice grave et irréparable si les mesures provisoires demandées ne sont pas prises. En effet, sans l'adoption de ces mesures, l'arrêt prononcé dans la procédure au principal n'aurait plus aucun effet utile étant donné que, au moment de l'annulation des décisions attaquées, le contrat litigieux serait déjà conclu avec le soumissionnaire retenu et aurait déjà reçu une exécution partielle. En outre, cet arrêt, même s'il annulait lesdites décisions, ne réparerait pas entièrement le préjudice causé à la requérante, ce préjudice ne pouvant être réduit à un dommage financier et chiffrable.

34 Dans ce contexte, la requérante précise que, à la suite de la « décision du 27 février 2008 lui attribuant le marché », elle a adapté son planning de travail (notamment en affectant des effectifs à ce projet spécifique) à l'exécution du contrat litigieux, en annulant des projets sur le marché local et surtout en n'acceptant plus de nouveaux contrats. Elle souligne encore la pénurie importante sur le marché du travail d'ouvriers et d'ingénieurs spécialisés qui sont indispensables pour réaliser des marchés comme le contrat litigieux. Au cas où la requérante ne pourrait pas exécuter ledit contrat, elle se verrait obligée de mettre temporairement son personnel spécialisé au chômage technique, ce qui signifierait que ce personnel qualifié serait débauché par ses concurrents ou la quitterait de sa propre initiative, mettant ainsi en danger l'existence de celle-ci.

35 La requérante ajoute que l'attribution du marché en cause constitue, compte tenu de sa spécificité du point de vue technique, une référence importante pour les marchés suivants ayant un objet identique ou similaire. La perte de cette référence représenterait également pour la requérante un préjudice irréparable. Non seulement la spécificité de ce marché (techniques de laboratoire), mais également le maître d'ouvrage, à savoir la Commission, seraient d'une importance significative. D'un point de vue commercial, un maître d'ouvrage prestigieux représenterait une référence excellente pour les adjudicataires dans la perspective de projets futurs.

36 La Commission estime que, par ces arguments, la requérante n'a établi ni la gravité ni le caractère irréparable du préjudice invoqué. La présente demande en référé devrait donc être rejetée pour défaut d'urgence.

37 Dans les circonstances du cas d'espèce, il convient d'examiner d'abord si la condition de l'urgence est remplie.

38 À cet égard, il y a lieu de rappeler que le caractère urgent d'une demande en référé doit s'apprécier par rapport à la nécessité qu'il y a de statuer provisoirement afin d'éviter qu'un préjudice grave et irréparable ne soit occasionné à la partie qui sollicite les mesures provisoires. C'est à cette dernière partie qu'il appartient d'apporter la preuve qu'elle ne saurait attendre l'issue de la procédure au principal sans avoir à subir un préjudice de cette nature (voir ordonnances du président du Tribunal du 15 novembre 2001, Duales System Deutschland/Commission, T–151/01 R, Rec. p. II–3295, point 187 ; du 20 septembre 2005, Deloitte Business Advisory/Commission, T–195/05 R, Rec. p. II–3485, point 124, et du 25 avril 2008, Vakakis/Commission, T–41/08 R, non publiée au Recueil, point 52, et la jurisprudence citée).

40 Il convient donc d'examiner si, en l'espèce, la requérante a démontré avec un degré de probabilité suffisant qu'elle subira un préjudice grave et irréparable si les mesures provisoires qu'elle sollicite ne lui sont pas octroyées.

41 S'agissant de la gravité du préjudice invoqué en l'espèce, il importe de rappeler que ce dernier serait subi à l'occasion d'une procédure d'appel d'offres pour l'attribution d'un marché. Or, une telle procédure a pour objet de permettre à l'autorité concernée de choisir, parmi plusieurs offres concurrentes, celle qui lui paraît le plus conforme aux critères de sélection prédéterminés. L'autorité communautaire qui institue une telle procédure dispose, par ailleurs, d'un large pouvoir d'appréciation quant aux éléments à prendre en considération en vue de la prise de la décision de passer le marché (arrêts du Tribunal du 24 février 2000, ADT Projekt/Commission, T–145/98, Rec. p. II–387, point 147 ; du 26 février 2002, Esedra/Commission, T–169/00, Rec. p. II–609, point 95, et du 14 février 2006, TEA-CEGOS e.a./Commission, T–376/05 et T–383/05, Rec. p. II–205, point 50).

42 Une entreprise qui participe à une telle procédure n'a, dès lors, jamais la garantie absolue que le marché lui sera adjugé, mais doit toujours tenir compte de l'éventualité de son attribution à un autre soumissionnaire. Dans ces conditions, les conséquences financières négatives pour l'entreprise en question, qui découleraient du rejet de son offre, font, en principe, partie du risque commercial habituel, auquel chaque entreprise active sur le marché doit faire face (voir, en ce sens, ordonnance du juge des référés du Tribunal du 14 septembre 2007, AWWW/FEACVT, T–211/07 R, non publiée au Recueil, point 41).

43 Il s'ensuit que la perte d'une chance de se voir attribuer et d'exécuter un marché public est inhérente à l'exclusion de la procédure d'appel d'offres en cause et ne saurait être regardée comme constitutive, en soi, d'un préjudice grave, indépendamment d'une appréciation concrète de la gravité de l'atteinte spécifique alléguée dans chaque cas d'espèce (voir, en ce sens, ordonnance Deloitte Business Advisory/Commission, précitée, point 150).

45 En l'espèce, force est de constater que la requérante ne produit pas les éléments permettant de considérer, compte tenu en particulier de sa taille, que la perte qu'elle risque de subir serait suffisamment grave pour justifier l'octroi de mesures provisoires. Dès lors, au regard des éléments figurant dans la demande en référé, le juge des référés n'est pas en mesure de considérer que, pour la requérante, la perte d'une chance de percevoir les revenus résultant de l'exécution du marché en cause serait suffisamment grave pour justifier l'octroi de mesures provisoires.

46 Il en va de même du préjudice financier subi du fait que la requérante aurait, à la suite de la lettre du 27 février 2008 (voir point 5 ci-dessus), adapté son planning de travail à l'exécution du contrat litigieux, en annulant des projets sur le marché local et en n'acceptant plus de nouveaux contrats. À défaut d'éléments chiffrés produits par la requérante, le juge des référés ne saurait vérifier ni la réalité ni la gravité des actes par lesquels la requérante aurait elle-même été conduite à amplifier les conséquences négatives des décisions des 23 et 29 avril 2008.

47 Par ailleurs, tout préjudice causé par des actes que la requérante aurait pris en s'attendant à l'attribution du marché en cause résulterait de son propre comportement négligent. En effet, dans sa lettre du 27 février 2008 précitée, la Commission avait expressément attiré l'attention de la requérante sur le caractère précaire et révocable de cette « attribution ». En outre, la requérante, en opérateur économique prudent et averti, est censée connaître l'article 101 du règlement financier, aux termes duquel « le pouvoir adjudicateur peut, jusqu'à la signature du contrat, soit renoncer au marché, soit annuler la procédure de passation du marché, sans que les candidats ou les soumissionnaires puissent prétendre à une quelconque indemnisation ».

49 Il convient d'ajouter que le préjudice d'ordre financier allégué par la requérante ne saurait être regardé comme irréparable, ou même difficilement réparable, dès lors qu'il peut faire l'objet d'une compensation financière ultérieure. La requérante n'a, notamment, pas allégué qu'elle serait empêchée d'obtenir une telle compensation par voie d'un éventuel recours en indemnité en vertu de l'article 288 CE (voir, en ce sens, ordonnance du président du Tribunal du 10 novembre 2004, European Dynamics/Commission, T–303/04 R, Rec. p. II–3889, point 72, et la jurisprudence citée). Au contraire, dans son recours au principal, elle a expressément formulé des conclusions visant à condamner la Commission à lui réparer le préjudice subi.

50 Dans ce contexte, il résulte d'une jurisprudence récente de la Cour que, lorsque le Tribunal accorde des dommages et intérêts sur la base de la valeur économique attribuée au préjudice subi en raison d'un manque à gagner, cette réparation est en principe susceptible de satisfaire à l'exigence d'assurer la réparation intégrale du préjudice individuel que la partie concernée a effectivement subi du fait des actes illégaux particuliers dont elle a été victime (voir, en ce sens, arrêt de la Cour du 21 février 2008, Commission/Girardot, C–348/06 P, non encore publié au Recueil, point 76).

51 Il s'ensuit que, dans l'hypothèse où la requérante obtiendrait gain de cause au principal, il pourra être attribué une valeur économique au préjudice qu'elle a subi en raison de la perte de la chance de remporter l'appel d'offres litigieux, valeur économique qui est susceptible de satisfaire à l'obligation de réparation intégrale du dommage individuel effectivement subi (voir, en ce sens, ordonnance Vakakis/Commission, précitée, point 67).

52 À la lumière de ce qui précède, les mesures provisoires demandées ne se justifieraient, dans les circonstances de l'espèce, que s'il apparaissait que, en l'absence de telles mesures, la requérante se trouverait dans une situation susceptible de mettre en péril son existence même ou de modifier de manière irrémédiable sa position sur le marché (voir, en ce sens, ordonnance European Dynamics/Commission, précitée, point 73).

53 Or, la requérante n'a pas apporté la preuve que, en l'absence des mesures provisoires sollicitées, elle risquerait d'être placée dans une telle situation.

54 En effet, d'une part, elle s'est abstenue de fournir des données relatives à sa taille et à sa situation financière (voir point 45 ci-dessus). D'autre part, si la requérante fait valoir que, au cas où elle ne pourrait pas exécuter le contrat litigieux, son personnel spécialisé serait débauché par ses concurrents ou la quitterait de sa propre initiative, mettant ainsi en danger l'existence de la requérante, il y a lieu de constater qu'il s'agit là d'une pure affirmation qui n'est étayée par aucun élément de preuve susceptible de conduire le juge des référés à conclure que l'existence de la requérante sera mise en péril jusqu'à ce que le Tribunal statue sur l'affaire au principal.

55 La requérante soutient encore que le préjudice qu'elle subira ne saurait être réduit à un dommage financier et chiffrable, mais revêt aussi un caractère non financier. Ainsi, elle allègue que l'attribution du marché en cause constituerait, compte tenu de sa spécificité du point de vue technique, une référence importante pour les marchés suivants ayant un objet identique ou similaire et que la perte de cette référence représenterait pour la requérante un préjudice irréparable, d'autant plus qu'un maître d'ouvrage prestigieux, tel que la Commission, représenterait une référence excellente pour un adjudicataire dans la perspective de projets futurs.

56 Pour autant que la requérante entende invoquer ainsi une atteinte à sa réputation, il suffit de relever que la participation à une soumission publique, par nature hautement compétitive, implique des risques pour tous les participants et que l'élimination d'un soumissionnaire, en vertu des règles de la soumission, n'a, en elle-même, rien de préjudiciable. Lorsqu'une entreprise a été illégalement écartée d'une procédure d'appel d'offres, il existe d'autant moins de raisons de penser qu'elle risque de subir une atteinte grave et irréparable à sa réputation que, d'une part, son exclusion est sans lien avec ses compétences et, d'autre part, l'arrêt d'annulation qui s'ensuivra permettra en principe de rétablir une éventuelle atteinte à sa réputation (voir ordonnance Deloitte Business Advisory/Commission, précitée, point 126, et la jurisprudence citée).

57 Enfin, s'agissant de la prétendue perte d'une référence majeure à la suite de la perte du marché en cause et de la prétendue difficulté de soumissionner utilement à l'avenir dans le cadre de projets semblables, ainsi que la Commission le fait observer à juste titre, la requérante n'a pas encore acquis de référence par l'existence de la seule lettre du 27 février 2008 qui lui « attribuait » provisoirement le marché en cause, une telle référence n'étant créée que lorsque le contrat a été signé et que le marché a été complètement et convenablement exécuté. En tout état de cause, la requérante n'a pas démontré que cette référence lui était indispensable ni qu'elle serait empêchée à l'avenir de mener à bien d'autres projets de même envergure. Elle n'a en outre pas apporté d'éléments permettant de conclure qu'elle serait empêchée de participer aux futurs appels d'offres lancés par la Commission en relation avec l'IMMR.

58 Eu égard à ce qui précède, il y a lieu de considérer que la requérante n'a pas établi avec le degré de probabilité requis que, si le juge des référés ne lui accorde pas les mesures provisoires qu'elle sollicite, elle subira un préjudice grave et irréparable.

59 En conséquence, la demande en référé doit être rejetée pour défaut d'urgence, sans qu'il soit besoin d'examiner si les autres conditions d'octroi des mesures provisoires sollicitées sont remplies.

Par ces motifs,

LE PRÉSIDENT DU TRIBUNAL

Action brought on 30 May 2008 - Antwerpse Bouwwerken v Commission

(Case T-195/08)

Language of the case: Dutch

Parties

Applicant: Antwerpse Bouwwerken NV (Antwerp, Belgium) (represented by: J. Verbist and D. de Keuster, lawyers)

Defendant: Commission of the European Communities

Form of order sought

Annul (i) the decision of 29 April 2008, notified by the Commission by letter of 29 April 2008, received by the applicant on 5 May 2008, by which the Commission informed the applicant that the latter's tender had been unsuccessful, as further explained in a letter from the European Commission of 6 May 2008 and received by the applicant on 8 May 2008, in which the Commission sets out its reasons for its rejection decision, and (ii) the decision of 23 April 2008 on the award of the contract, notified by the Commission by letter of 15 May 2008, received by the applicant on 16 May 2008;

declare the Commission to be non-contractually liable for the damage suffered by the applicant, to be quantified at a later date;

order the Commission to pay the costs.

Pleas in law and main arguments

The applicant submitted a tender in response to the Commission's call for tenders for the construction of a reference materials production hall. [1] Ultimately, the applicant's tender was not selected by the Commission.

The applicant relies in its application on an infringement of Article 91 of Regulation 1605/2002 [2] and of Articles 122, 138 and 148 of Regulation 2342/2002 [3] in conjunction with Articles 2 and 28 of Directive 2004/18/EC. [4]

According to the applicant, it is apparent from the official records of selection of tenders that the successful tender did not comply with an essential tendering specification and that, consequently, it should have been rejected for failure to comply with the conditions of the contract. The intervention by the tenderer of the successful bid was not merely a case of the tender being clarified but of it being supplemented, which was not permissible at that stage of the procedure.

In addition, the decision on the award of the contract does not satisfy the principle of transparency, as essential elements of the assessment records, as provided to the applicant, have been rendered illegible.

Legal context

1 Article 118 of Council Regulation (EC) No 40/94 of 20 December 1993 on the Community trade mark (OJ 1994 L 11, p. 1), as amended (now Article 122 of Council Regulation (EC) No 207/2009 of 26 February 2009 on the Community trade mark (OJ 2009 L 78, p. 1)), is worded as follows:

'1. The Commission shall check the legality of those acts of the President of the Office in respect of which Community law does not provide for any check on legality by another body and of acts of the Budget Committee attached to the Office pursuant to Article 133.

2. It shall require that any unlawful acts as referred to in paragraph 1 be altered or annulled.

3. Member States and any person directly and personally involved may refer to the Commission any act as referred to in paragraph 1, whether express or implied, for the Commission to examine the legality of that act. Referral shall be made to the Commission within one month of the day on which the party concerned first became aware of the act in question. The Commission shall take a decision within three months. If no decision has been taken within this period, the case shall be deemed to have been dismissed.'

Factual background to the proceedings

2 The applicant, infeurope, is a company specialised in IT services. It participated in the call for tenders AO/026/06 issued by the Office for Harmonisation in the Internal Market (Trade Marks and Designs) (OHIM) for the purposes of the award of a public contract for consultancy, audit and study services.

3 The call for tenders at issue included two separate lots, the first of which covered OHIM's general activities and the second covered a certain number of technical fields.

4 After examining the tenders, OHIM was to select three tenderers and conclude a framework contract with each of them. If the tenderer ranked first proved unable to supply the services, OHIM was entitled to approach the second tenderer and, if it was also unable to supply the services, to approach the third tenderer.

5 The applicant submitted a tender for both lots. By letter dated 3 September 2007, received by the applicant on 4 September 2007, OHIM informed the applicant that its tender had been ranked third for both lots so that, in accordance with the tender specifications, it was offered a framework contract, as were the other two tenderers selected.

6 By letter of 4 September 2007, the applicant asked OHIM to provide it with more information. By letter of 17 September 2007, OHIM confirmed to the applicant that its tender had been ranked third in the final classification and provided details on the position of its tender with regard to the technical and financial evaluations as compared with those of the other two tenderers selected. By a second letter of 18 September 2007, the applicant requested more details from OHIM, which replied by letter of 21 September 2007 in which it stated the scores awarded to the three tenderers selected in respect of each type of evaluation and also informed the applicant of the identity of the tenderers ranked first and second.

7 Framework contracts were concluded with the first two tenderers in October 2007, then with the applicant on 12 November 2007. The performance of the first specific contracts with the first ranked contractor commenced at the beginning of November 2007.

8 The relevant contract award notice was published in the Official Journal of the European Union on 1 December 2007.

9 On 13 December 2007, on the basis of Article 118(3) of Regulation No 40/94, the applicant lodged an administrative appeal with the Commission, requesting the Commission to annul the tendering procedure at issue, the ensuing framework contracts and the specific contracts concluded under those framework contracts and to organise a new tendering procedure. It simultaneously sent a copy of that appeal to OHIM.

10 The Commission did not reply to the applicant's administrative appeal.

Procedure and forms of order sought by the parties

11 The applicant brought this action by application lodged at the Registry of the Court of First Instance on 13 May 2008.

12 By a separate document lodged at the Court Registry on 29 July 2008, the Commission raised an objection of inadmissibility under Article 114(1) of the Rules of Procedure of the Court of First Instance.

13 The applicant submitted its observations on that objection of inadmissibility on 15 September 2008.

14 In its application, the applicant claims that the Court should:

– declare that the Commission has failed to annul the decision awarding the framework contracts under OHIM's tendering procedure AO/026/06;

– declare that the Commission has failed to terminate the specific contracts concluded under those framework contracts;

– order the Commission to pay EUR 35 950, plus 4% interest on EUR 33 050 from 19 December 2006, plus 4% interest on EUR 2 900 from 14 December 2007, plus 8% interest on EUR 35 950 from the date of delivery of the judgment;

– order the Commission to pay EUR 646 631.27, plus 4% interest on that sum from 14 May 2008 and 8% interest thereon from the date of delivery of the judgment;

– order the Commission to pay the costs.

15 In its objection of inadmissibility, the Commission contends that the Court should:

– declare the action inadmissible;

– order the applicant to pay the costs.

16 In its observations on the objection of inadmissibility, the applicant in essence contends that the Court should:

– declare the objection of inadmissibility unfounded;

– in the alternative, in the event of the inadmissibility of the application for a declaration of failure to act, annul the Commission's implied decision to dismiss the applicant's administrative appeal of 13 December 2007.

17 In addition, the applicant requests the Court to order the Commission to produce certain documents relating to the tender evaluation procedure.

Law

18 Under Article 111 of the Rules of Procedure of the Court of First Instance, where an action brought before that court is manifestly inadmissible or manifestly lacking any foundation in law, the Court may, by reasoned order and without taking further steps in the proceedings, give a decision on the action.

19 In the present case, the Court considers itself to have sufficient information from the documents in the file to give a decision without taking further steps in the proceedings.

The application for a declaration of failure to act

20 The applicant has submitted an application for a declaration of failure to act under Article 232 EC. It requests the Court to declare that, despite a request to that effect in its administrative appeal of 13 December 2007, the Commission failed to annul the decision awarding the framework contracts under OHIM's tendering procedure AO/026/06 and to terminate the specific contracts concluded under those framework contracts.

21 The Commission has raised an objection of inadmissibility in support of which it puts forward four pleas alleging, respectively, that there was no failure to act on its part, that the applicant's administrative appeal to the Commission under Article 118 of Regulation No 40/94 was submitted out of time, that the application for a declaration of failure to act was lodged out of time and that the Commission has no power to annul acts of the President of OHIM.

Arguments of the parties

22 First, the Commission submits that Article 232 EC can be applied only where there is a pure omission on the part of the defendant institution where it is under a duty to act. In the present case, there was no failure to act contrary to the Treaty, since the Commission adopted a position, in the form of an implied dismissal, on the administrative appeal lodged by the applicant on 13 December 2007. In this connection it points out that, under Article 118(3) of Regulation No 40/94, if no decision has been taken by the Commission within three months of an administrative appeal lodged against an act of the President of OHIM, the case is deemed to have been dismissed. Therefore, the fact that when this action was brought the Commission had not replied to the applicant's administrative appeal of 13 December 2007 does not constitute a failure to act for the purpose of Article 232 EC and the action is on that basis inadmissible.

23 Secondly, the Commission points out that any person who intends to challenge the legality of an act of the President of OHIM which directly and personally involves it must refer that act to the Commission within one month of the day on which the party concerned first became aware of the act in question. According to the Commission, the act in question for the purposes of Article 118(3) of Regulation No 40/94 is OHIM's decision of 3 September 2007 to award the contract at issue, sent to the applicant on the same day. That decision was received by the applicant on 4 September 2007, the date on which it effectively became aware of the act in question. The Commission infers from this that the administrative appeal should have been lodged within one month of 4 September 2007, so that the administrative appeal of 13 December 2007 was lodged out of time. Therefore, the application for a declaration of failure to act under Article 232 EC is also inadmissible because the administrative appeal under Article 118(3) of Regulation No 40/94 was lodged out of time.

24 Thirdly, the Commission claims that, even if the administrative appeal was lodged in due time, the application for a declaration of failure to act should, in accordance with the second paragraph of Article 232 EC, have been made within four months of the date on which that administrative appeal was lodged, that is to say, on 13 April 2008 at the latest. Since the application in this case was lodged on 13 May 2008, the application for a declaration of failure to act is also inadmissible because it is out of time.

25 Fourthly, the Commission states that it does not have the power to annul or alter any decision taken by OHIM since, under Article 118(2) of Regulation No 40/94, it may only require that acts adopted by the President of OHIM be altered or annulled. Since the Commission did not have the power to adopt the annulment decision requested by the applicant, the latter was not entitled to bring an application for a declaration of failure to act against the Commission under Article 232 EC.

26 The applicant disputes the four grounds of inadmissibility put forward by the Commission.

27 First, the applicant submits that Article 232 EC is to be applied in the present case, since the implied dismissal under Article 118(3) of Regulation No 40/94, which results from the Commission's failure to define its position, does not allow the addressee of the decision to assess the content of that implied dismissal and cannot therefore constitute the definition of a position for the purpose of Article 232 EC.

28 Article 232 EC is also applicable on the ground that the expiry of the three-month period within which the Commission should have taken a decision pursuant to Article 118(3) of Regulation No 40/94 does not exclude the Commission's obligation to act in its capacity as the supervisory body of OHIM in order to ensure the legality of its acts, and the inaction of the Commission did not bring about a distinct change in the applicant's legal position.

29 Secondly, as regards the contention that the administrative appeal was lodged out of time, the applicant submits that the period of one month under Article 118(3) of Regulation No 40/94 should start to run from the time when it became aware of OHIM's infringements, that is to say, in the present case, during November 2007, and not from the receipt of the award decision on 4 September 2007. Therefore, the administrative appeal brought on 13 December 2007 is not out of time.

30 Thirdly, the applicant denies that the application for a declaration of failure to act was submitted out of time. The period of two months during which the institution concerned should define its position, under Article 232 EC, is displaced by the period of three months provided for in Article 118 (3) of Regulation No 40/94. Furthermore, the applicant specifies that the two-month period for the purpose of bringing an application for a declaration of failure to act can start to run only from the implied dismissal referred to in Article 118(3). In the present case, since the administrative appeal was lodged on 13 December 2007, the three-month period for defining a position on the administrative appeal expired on 13 March 2008 and the period for bringing an action for failure to act expired on 13 May 2008, the date on which this action was brought.

31 Fourthly, the applicant disputes the ground for inadmissibility based on the Commission's alleged lack of power to annul OHIM acts. It submits that it is for the Commission and not OHIM to take a decision on the legality of OHIM's acts. Even if the power to alter or annul an OHIM act rests exclusively with that body, the Commission has the power to take a decision which OHIM must strictly follow.

Findings of the Court

32 Community law provides that, in certain specific instances, silence on the part of an institution is deemed to amount to a decision where the institution has been called upon to express its view and has not done so by the end of a given period. In such cases, by an express provision, laying down a deadline by which an implied decision is deemed to have been taken and prescribing the tenor of the decision, an institution's inaction is deemed to be equivalent to a decision, without calling into question the system of remedies instituted by the Treaty (see, to that effect, Joined Cases T-189/95, T-39/96 and T-123/96 SGA v Commission [1999] ECR II-3587, paragraph 27).

33 That applies to Article 118 of Regulation No 40/94, which lays down a system for control of the legality of those acts of the President of OHIM in respect of which Community law does not provide for any check on legality by another body. That is true of acts adopted in the context of public procurement.

34 That control is entrusted to the Commission, before which an administrative appeal must be brought within one month of the day on which the party concerned first became aware of the act in question. At the end of that procedure, the Commission is to require, where appropriate, that the acts which it regards as unlawful be altered or annulled. The fact that a time-limit is laid down for bringing an administrative appeal attests to the obligatory nature – which has never been called into question by the applicant – of such an administrative procedure, which is a prerequisite of bringing an action before the Community Courts (see, to that effect and by analogy, Case T-411/06 Sogelma v EAR [2008] ECR II-0000, paragraphs 60 to 63). The Community legislature did not design the procedure laid down by Article 118 of Regulation No 40/94 as offering individuals an alternative remedy to that of an action before the Community Courts in order to protect their interests, unlike that which was provided for, for example, with regard to bringing a matter before the European Ombudsman, which is an alternative remedy to a direct action before the Community Courts (see, to that effect, order in Case T-294/04 Internationaler Hilfsfonds v Commission [2005] ECR II-2719, paragraphs 47 and 48).

35 Therefore, an action for failure to act seeking a declaration that the Commission has been guilty of inaction is not admissible in the context of a system such as that established by Article 118 of Regulation No 40/94, in which it is expressly provided that the Commission's inaction results in an implied dismissal. Any declaration that the Commission acted unlawfully is possible only in the context of an action for annulment brought against the final decision of the institution, in which it decides on the merits of the applicant's complaint, both where that decision is express and where it is deemed to have been adopted on the expiry of a specified period.

36 Having regard to the foregoing, and without it being necessary to examine the other grounds of inadmissibility relied on by the Commission, the application for a declaration of failure to act must be dismissed as manifestly inadmissible.

The application for annulment

Arguments of the parties

37 In its observations on the plea of inadmissibility, the applicant submits that, if the Court were to find its application for a declaration of failure to act inadmissible, it should be treated as an application for annulment of the Commission's implied decision of dismissal, which is deemed to have been adopted on the expiry of the period of three months from the day on which the administrative appeal was lodged. The conditions for bringing an action for annulment under Article 230 EC are fulfilled in the present case, since the implied decision is of direct and individual concern to the applicant, and the time-limit for bringing an action under the fourth paragraph of Article 230 EC was complied with in this case, since the action was brought within two months of the expiry of the three-month period after the administrative appeal was lodged on 13 December 2007. The applicant adds that Articles 230 EC and 232 EC merely prescribe one and the same method of recourse and that the new application for annulment does not in any way change the subject–matter of the proceedings.

Findings of the Court

38 Whilst Article 48(2) of the Rules of Procedure authorises, in certain circumstances, new pleas in law to be introduced in the course of proceedings, that provision cannot in any circumstances be interpreted as authorising the applicants to bring a new claim before the Community judicature and thereby to modify the subject-matter of the proceedings. In that context, it is not permissible to substitute a claim for annulment for the claim for a declaration of failure to act initially brought before the Court (see, to that effect, Case T-28/90 Asia Motor France and Others v Commission [1992] ECR II-2285, paragraph 43 and the case-law cited).

39 It follows that the applicant, which initially applied to the Court on the basis of Article 232 EC, is not entitled to request, even in the alternative, that its initial claim be converted into a claim for annulment on the basis of Article 230 EC and directed against the implied decision of dismissal which is deemed to have been adopted on the expiry of the three-month period after the administrative appeal was lodged on 13 December 2007.

The application for damages

Arguments of the parties

40 According to the Commission, the application for damages is inadmissible on two grounds. First, the action for damages should have been directed against OHIM under Article 114 of Regulation No 40/94 (now Article 118 of Regulation No 207/2009) and, secondly, there is neither a sufficiently serious breach of a rule of law nor a direct causal link between the damage suffered by the applicant and the Commission's inaction.

41 The applicant contends in reply, first, that the action for damages was correctly brought against the Commission as the supervisory body of OHIM and, secondly, that the examination of the conditions relating to whether there is a sufficiently serious breach of a rule of law, damage and a causal link is not relevant at the stage of examining the action's admissibility.

Findings of the Court

42 According to settled case-law, the action for damages was established by the Treaty as an independent form of action with a particular purpose to fulfil within the system of actions and subject to conditions for its use conceived with a view to its specific purpose. Thus it has been held that, although actions for annulment and for a declaration of failure to act seek a declaration that a legally binding measure is unlawful or that such a measure has not been taken, an action for damages seeks compensation for damage resulting from a measure, whether legally binding or not, or from conduct, attributable to a Community institution or body (see order of 17 October 2007 in Case T-454/05 Sumitomo Chemical Agro Europe and Philagro France v Commission, not published in the ECR, paragraphs 70 and 71 and the case-law cited).

43 However, an application for damages which is closely connected to an application for a declaration of failure to act is itself inadmissible (see order of 3 May 2004 in Case T-24/04 Leighton and Others v Council and Commission, not published in the ECR, paragraph 24 and the case-law cited).

44 The Court finds that the present application for damages is closely connected to an application for a declaration of failure to act and to an application for annulment which are manifestly inadmissible, as is apparent from the foregoing explanations.

45 It follows that the application for damages made in these proceedings is itself also manifestly inadmissible.

46 Consequently, the action must be dismissed in its entirety, without it being necessary to rule on the request that certain documents relating to the tender evaluation procedure be produced.

Costs

47 Article 87(2) of the Rules of Procedure provides that the unsuccessful party is to be ordered to pay the costs if they have been applied for in the successful party's pleadings.

48 In the present case, since the applicant has been unsuccessful, it must be ordered to pay the Commission's costs in accordance with the form of order sought by the Commission.

On those grounds,

THE COURT OF FIRST INSTANCE (Seventh Chamber)

hereby orders:

1. The action is dismissed.

2. infeurope shall pay the costs.

Ordonnance

Faits, procédure et conclusions

1 La requérante VDH Projektentwicklung GmbH (ci-après « VDH ») est une entreprise d'études de projets et de construction. Elle conçoit, bâtit et développe de grands hypermarchés, notamment pour la requérante Edeka Handelsgesellschaft Rhein-Ruhr (ci-après « Edeka »), une entreprise de vente de produits alimentaires au détail.

2 Fin 2002, les deux requérantes ont marqué leur intérêt pour l'acquisition de plusieurs terrains appartenant à la ville de Stolberg afin d'y construire un hypermarché. Kaufland Stiftung & Co. KG (ci-après « Kaufland ») s'était également montrée intéressée par l'acquisition des terrains et la construction d'un hypermarché. Les négociations se sont interrompues le 17 février 2003, après qu'il est apparu que les propriétaires de certains autres terrains n'étaient pas prêts à les mettre à disposition.

3 Alors que les requérantes n'avaient plus eu aucun contact avec la ville de Stolberg depuis le 17 février 2003, Kaufland a lancé, début février 2008, les travaux de construction d'un hypermarché sur les terrains en question. Ces travaux de construction avaient apparemment pour base, d'une part, une convention notariée du 31 juillet 2003 fixant des obligations de construction, telle que modifiée par un contrat modificatif du 14 février 2007, et, d'autre part, un contrat d'urbanisme du 11 février 2007.

4 Par lettre du 14 mars 2008, les requérantes ont saisi la Commission d'une demande tendant à l'application du mécanisme correcteur prévu à l'article 3 de la directive 89/665/CEE du Conseil, du 21 décembre 1989, portant coordination des dispositions législatives, réglementaires et administratives relatives à l'application des procédures de recours en matière de passation des marchés publics de fournitures et de travaux (JO L 395, p. 33), telle que modifiée. Elles y font valoir que la ville de Stolberg, Kaufland et l'entreprise générale pour le projet de construction n'ont pas respecté le droit communautaire, dans la mesure où, d'une part, la ville de Stolberg a passé un marché public de travaux sous forme d'une concession de travaux en vue de la construction d'un hypermarché Kaufland par la voie de l'adjudication de fait en faveur de Kaufland, et où, d'autre part, Kaufland a passé un marché public de travaux par la voie de l'adjudication de fait en faveur de l'entreprise générale.

5 Par requête enregistrée le 16 mai 2008, les requérantes ont formé le présent recours.

6 Les requérantes concluent à ce qu'il plaise au Tribunal de constater que la Commission s'est abstenue, en contravention avec le traité,

1. d'engager sans délai le mécanisme correcteur prévu à l'article 3 de la directive 89/665/CEE en ce qui concerne la conclusion d'une concession de travaux publics entre la ville de Stolberg et Kaufland au moyen de la convention du 31 juillet 2003, ainsi qu'au moyen du contrat d'urbanisme du 11 janvier 2007,

2. de notifier sans délai à la République fédérale d'Allemagne, conformément à l'article 3, paragraphe 2, de la directive 89/665/CEE, que la Commission estime que la conclusion d'une concession de travaux publics entre la ville de Stolberg et Kaufland au moyen de la convention du 31 juillet 2003, ainsi qu'au moyen du contrat d'urbanisme du 11 janvier 2007, est constitutive d'une violation claire et manifeste des dispositions du droit communautaire sur les marchés publics, et de demander à la République fédérale d'Allemagne de corriger cette violation par des mesures appropriées,

3. d'engager sans délai le mécanisme correcteur prévu à l'article 3 de la directive 89/665/CEE en ce qui concerne l'attribution, par Kaufland à l'entreprise générale, du contrat d'entreprise générale visant à la construction d'un hypermarché à Stolberg,

4. de notifier sans délai à la République fédérale d'Allemagne, conformément à l'article 3, paragraphe 2, de la directive 89/665/CEE, que la Commission estime qu'une violation claire et manifeste des dispositions du droit communautaire sur les marchés publics est constituée, et de demander à la République fédérale d'Allemagne de corriger cette violation par des mesures appropriées.

En droit

7 Lorsque le Tribunal est manifestement incompétent pour connaître d'un recours ou lorsque celui-ci est manifestement irrecevable ou manifestement dépourvu de tout fondement en droit, le Tribunal, en vertu de l'article 111 de son règlement de procédure, peut, sans poursuivre la procédure, statuer par voie d'ordonnance motivée.

8 En l'espèce, le Tribunal s'estime suffisamment éclairé par les pièces du dossier et décide, conformément à cet article, de statuer sans poursuivre la procédure.

9 S'agissant de la recevabilité du chef de conclusions visant à la constatation d'une carence de la part de la Commission, il importe de souligner que les articles 230 CE et 232 CE ne forment que l'expression d'une seule et même voie de droit. Il en résulte que, de même que l'article 230, quatrième alinéa, CE permet aux particuliers de former un recours en annulation contre un acte d'une institution dont ils ne sont pas les destinataires dès lors que cet acte les concerne directement et individuellement, l'article 232, troisième alinéa, CE doit être interprété comme leur ouvrant également la faculté de former un recours en carence contre une institution qui aurait manqué d'adopter un acte qui les aurait concernés de la même manière (arrêts de la Cour du 26 novembre 1996, T. Port, C-68/95, Rec. p. I-6065, point 59, et du Tribunal du 10 mai 2006, Air One/Commission, T-395/04, Rec. p. II-1343, point 25).

10 Dans la présente affaire, il convient donc d'apprécier si l'acte juridique à propos duquel les requérantes reprochent à la Commission sa carence les aurait directement et individuellement concernées. Eu égard aux circonstances de l'affaire, il convient d'abord d'apprécier le critère de l'intérêt direct.

11 Il est de jurisprudence constante que, pour concerner directement un requérant privé, au sens de l'article 230, quatrième alinéa, CE, l'acte communautaire entrepris doit produire directement des effets sur la situation juridique de l'intéressé et sa mise en oeuvre doit revêtir un caractère purement automatique et découler de la seule réglementation communautaire, sans application d'autres règles intermédiaires (voir, en ce sens, arrêts de la Cour du 5 mai 1998, Dreyfus/Commission, C-386/96 P, Rec. p. I-2309, point 43, et du Tribunal du 13 décembre 2000, DSTV/Commission, T-69/99, Rec. p. II-4039, point 24).

12 En l'espèce, il résulte de l'article 3 de la directive 89/665/CEE que la procédure qui y est prévue est une procédure purement bilatérale entre la Commission et l'État membre concerné. La notification à laquelle procède la Commission en vertu de l'article 3, paragraphe 2, de cette directive, et que, dans leurs deuxième et quatrième chefs de conclusions, les requérantes lui reprochent de n'avoir pas effectuée, n'a aucune incidence sur leur situation juridique mais oblige simplement l'État membre concerné à faire certaines communications à la Commission dans un délai de 21 jours calendaires.

13 La notification prévue à l'article 3, paragraphe 2, de la directive 89/665/CEE n'impose au surplus à l'État membre concerné aucune obligation de mise en œuvre purement automatique, mais lui laisse un pouvoir de choix quant à son action future. Ainsi en effet qu'il ressort du paragraphe 3 de cette disposition, l'État membre auquel la Commission adresse une notification en vertu du paragraphe 2 dispose de trois possibilités: soit confirmer que la violation a été corrigée, soit expliquer les raisons pour lesquelles celle-ci n'a pas été corrigée, soit encore communiquer une notification indiquant que la procédure de passation de marché a été suspendue. Il résulte en particulier du paragraphe 3, sous b), en combinaison avec le paragraphe 4, que l'État membre concerné n'est pas tenu de prendre d'autres mesures lorsque la violation alléguée fait déjà l'objet d'un recours juridictionnel en vertu de l'article 2, paragraphe 9. Or c'est précisément le cas en l'espèce, ainsi que l'admettent elles-mêmes les requérantes au point 22 de leur requête.

14 Quant à la simple « mise en œuvre » du mécanisme correcteur prévu à l'article 3 de la directive 89/665/CEE, que demandent les requérantes par leurs premier et troisième chefs de conclusions, elle ne les concerne a fortiori pas directement, puisqu'elle n'entraîne à elle seule aucun effet juridique. De tels effets n'interviennent au contraire qu'à la suite d'une notification concrète opérée en vertu du paragraphe 2 de cette disposition.

15 Les requérantes soutiennent être directement et individuellement concernées par cette mise en œuvre du mécanisme correcteur qu'elles demandent, au motif qu'elles conservent un vif intérêt dans l'acquisition des terrains auprès de la ville pour y construire un supermarché, ce qu'elles auraient d'ailleurs dit et répété à la ville de Stolberg. Il existerait ainsi une situation particulière qui les caractériserait par rapport à toute autre personne. Après épuisement de leurs possibilités résidant dans les procédures de recours engagées devant la chambre des marchés publics de la Bezirksregierung Köln, elles ne pourraient obtenir un arrêt des travaux, ainsi que l'interdiction de la poursuite du contrat posant des obligations de construction et du contrat d'entreprise générale, que par l'intervention de la Commission. Elles seraient donc particulièrement concernées par l'intervention qu'elles sollicitent.

16 Ces arguments ne sont toutefois pas de nature à démontrer que les requérantes sont directement concernées par une notification de la Commission au titre de l'article 3, paragraphe 2, de la directive 89/665/CEE.

17 En effet, les requérantes font certes valoir, sur un plan formel, qu'elles sont directement et individuellement concernées. Leurs arguments se rapportent toutefois uniquement, de par leur contenu, au critère de l'intérêt individuel et non à celui de l'intérêt direct, comme il ressort d'ailleurs de la formulation qu'elles emploient, selon laquelle il existerait « ainsi » une situation particulière qui les caractériserait par rapport à toute autre personne.

18 En vertu de l'article 87, paragraphe 2, du règlement de procédure, la partie qui succombe est condamnée aux dépens, s'il est conclu en ce sens.

19 Toutefois, dans la présente espèce, l'ordonnance en vertu de l'article 111 du règlement de procédure est rendue avant que la Commission ait pu conclure sur les dépens. Il y a donc lieu de faire application de l'article 87, paragraphe 3, du règlement de procédure, selon lequel le Tribunal peut répartir les dépens pour des motifs exceptionnels.

20 Les parties requérantes ayant succombé, il y a lieu de les condamner aux dépens.

Par ces motifs,

LE TRIBUNAL (deuxième chambre)

ordonne :

1) Le recours est rejeté comme manifestement irrecevable.

2) Les requérantes supportent leurs propres dépens.

THE COURT OF FIRST INSTANCE OF THE EUROPEAN COMMUNITIES (Seventh Chamber), composed of N.J. Forwood, President, D. Šváby and E. Moavero Milanesi (Rapporteur), Judges, Registrar: E. Coulon,

makes the following

Order

Legal context

1 Article 118 of Council Regulation (EC) No 40/94 of 20 December 1993 on the Community trade mark (OJ 1994 L 11, p. 1), as amended (now Article 122 of Council Regulation (EC) No 207/2009 of 26 February 2009 on the Community trade mark (OJ 2009 L 78, p. 1)), is worded as follows:

'1. The Commission shall check the legality of those acts of the President of the Office in respect of which Community law does not provide for any check on legality by another body and of acts of the Budget Committee attached to the Office pursuant to Article 133.

2. It shall require that any unlawful acts as referred to in paragraph 1 be altered or annulled.

3. Member States and any person directly and personally involved may refer to the Commission any act as referred to in paragraph 1, whether express or implied, for the Commission to examine the legality of that act. Referral shall be made to the Commission within one month of the day on which the party concerned first became aware of the act in question. The Commission shall take a decision within three months. If no decision has been taken within this period, the case shall be deemed to have been dismissed.'

Factual background to the proceedings

2 The applicant, infeurope, is a company specialised in IT services. It participated in the call for tenders AO/042/05 for the award of the contract for software maintenance relating to the core business systems of the Office for Harmonisation in the Internal Market (Trade Marks and Designs) (OHIM) on trade marks and designs, issued by OHIM in July 2006.

3 After examining the tenders, OHIM was to select three tenderers and conclude a framework contract with each of them. If the tenderer ranked first proved unable to supply the services, OHIM was entitled to approach the second tenderer and, if it was also unable to supply the services, to approach the third tenderer.

4 The applicant participated in the procedure at issue and submitted a tender.

5 OHIM adopted the contract award decision for the call for tenders at issue on 12 April 2007. That decision was communicated to the applicant by letter on the same day. In that letter OHIM informed the applicant that its tender had been ranked third so that, in accordance with the tender specifications, it was offered a contract, as were the other two tenderers selected.

6 The applicant acknowledged receipt of that letter in a letter sent to OHIM on 16 April 2007. By the same letter the applicant also asked OHIM to provide it with more information.

7 By letter of 16 April 2007, received by the applicant on 17 April 2007, OHIM informed it of the identity of the other two tenderers selected, confirmed that its tender had been ranked third in the final classification and provided details in a table on the position of its tender with regard to the technical and financial evaluations as compared with those of the other two tenderers selected.

8 In accordance with the award decision, framework contracts were concluded with the first two tenderers in May 2007, then with the applicant on 24 May 2007, and the first specific contracts with the first ranked contractor commenced at the end of July 2007.

9 The relevant contract award notice was published in the Official Journal of the European Union on 16 June 2007.

10 On 11 May 2007, on the basis of Article 118(3) of Regulation No 40/94, the applicant lodged its first administrative appeal with the Commission, in which it disputed the legality of OHIM's decisions ranking its tender in third position. The Commission informed the applicant on 3 October 2007 that its appeal had been dismissed.

11 The applicant lodged a second administrative appeal on 2 December 2007, requesting the Commission to annul the tendering procedure at issue as well as the framework contracts and ensuing specific contracts and to organise a new tendering procedure. It simultaneously sent a copy of that appeal to OHIM.

12 The Commission did not reply to the applicant's second administrative appeal.

Procedure and forms of order sought by the parties

13 The applicant brought this action by application lodged at the Registry of the Court of First Instance on 9 May 2008.

14 By a separate document lodged at the Court Registry on 31 July 2008, the Commission raised an objection of inadmissibility under Article 114(1) of the Rules of Procedure of the Court of First Instance.

15 The applicant submitted its observations on that objection of inadmissibility on 30 September 2008.

16 In its application, the applicant claims that the Court should:

– declare that the Commission has failed to annul the decision awarding the framework contracts under OHIM's tendering procedure AO/042/05;

– declare that the Commission has failed to terminate the specific contracts concluded under those framework contracts;

– order the Commission to pay EUR 37 002, plus 4% interest on EUR 31 650 from 29 August 2006, plus 4% interest on EUR 3 650 from 3 December 2007, plus 4% interest on EUR 1 702 from 3 May 2008 and 8% interest on EUR 37 002 from the date of delivery of the judgment;

– order the Commission to pay EUR 1 209 037, plus 4% interest on that sum from 3 May 2008 and 8% interest thereon from the date of delivery of the judgment;

– order the Commission to pay the costs.

17 In its objection of inadmissibility, the Commission contends that the Court should:

– declare the action inadmissible;

– order the applicant to pay the costs.

18 In its observations on the objection of inadmissibility, the applicant in essence contends that the Court should:

– declare the objection of inadmissibility unfounded;

– in the alternative, in the event of the inadmissibility of the application for a declaration of failure to act, annul the Commission's implied decision to dismiss the applicant's administrative appeal of 2 December 2007.

19 In addition, the applicant requests the Court to order the Commission to produce certain documents relating to the tender evaluation procedure.

20 By a document lodged at the Court Registry on 25 August 2008, European Dynamics SA applied to intervene in support of the form of order sought by the Commission.

21 The Commission and the applicant lodged their observations on the application to intervene on 10 and 17 November 2008 respectively.

Law

22 Under Article 111 of the Rules of Procedure of the Court of First Instance, where an action brought before that court is manifestly inadmissible or manifestly lacking any foundation in law, the Court may, by reasoned order and without taking further steps in the proceedings, give a decision on the action.

23 In the present case, the Court considers itself to have sufficient information from the documents in the file to give a decision without taking further steps in the proceedings.

The application for a declaration of failure to act

24 The applicant has submitted an application for a declaration of failure to act under Article 232 EC. It requests the Court to declare that, despite a request to that effect in its administrative appeal of 2 December 2007, the Commission failed to annul the decision awarding the framework contracts under OHIM's tendering procedure AO/042/05 and to terminate the specific contracts concluded under those framework contracts.

25 The Commission has raised an objection of inadmissibility in support of which it puts forward four pleas alleging, respectively, that there was no failure to act on its part, that the applicant's administrative appeal to the Commission under Article 118 of Regulation No 40/94 was submitted out of time, that the application for a declaration of failure to act was lodged out of time and that the Commission has no power to annul acts of the President of OHIM.

Arguments of the parties

26 First, the Commission submits that Article 232 EC can be applied only where there is a pure omission on the part of the defendant institution where it is under a duty to act. In the present case, there was no failure to act contrary to the Treaty, since the Commission adopted a position, in the form of an implied dismissal, on the administrative appeal lodged by the applicant on 2 December 2007. In this connection it points out that, under Article 118(3) of Regulation No 40/94, if no decision has been taken by the Commission within three months of an administrative appeal lodged against an act of the President of OHIM, the case is deemed to have been dismissed. Therefore, the fact that when this action was brought the Commission had not replied to the applicant's administrative appeal of 2 December 2007 does not constitute a failure to act for the purpose of Article 232 EC and the action is on that basis inadmissible.

27 Secondly, the Commission points out that any person who intends to challenge the legality of an act of the President of OHIM which directly and personally involves it must refer that act to the Commission within one month of the day on which the party concerned first became aware of the act in question. According to the Commission, the act in question for the purposes of Article 118(3) of Regulation No 40/94 is OHIM's decision of 12 April 2007 to award the contract at issue, sent to the applicant on the same day. That decision was received by the applicant on 16 April 2007 at the latest, the date on which it effectively became aware of the act in question. The Commission infers from this that the administrative appeal should have been lodged within one month of 16 April 2007, so that the administrative appeal of 2 December 2007 was lodged out of time. Therefore, the application for a declaration of failure to act under Article 232 EC is also inadmissible because the administrative appeal under Article 118(3) of Regulation No 40/94 was lodged out of time.

28 Thirdly, the Commission claims that, even if the administrative appeal was lodged in due time, the application for a declaration of failure to act should, in accordance with the second paragraph of Article 232 EC, have been made within four months of the date on which that administrative appeal was lodged. The case was first referred to the Commission on 11 May 2007, so that the application for a declaration of failure to act should have been made on 11 September 2007 at the latest. Since the application in this case was lodged on 9 May 2008, the application for a declaration of failure to act is also inadmissible because it is out of time.

29 Fourthly, the Commission states that it does not have the power to annul or alter any decision taken by OHIM since, under Article 118(2) of Regulation No 40/94, it may only require that acts adopted by the President of OHIM be altered or annulled. Since the Commission did not have the power to adopt the annulment decision requested by the applicant, the latter was not entitled to bring an application for a declaration of failure to act against the Commission under Article 232 EC.

30 The applicant disputes the four grounds of inadmissibility put forward by the Commission.

31 First, the applicant submits that Article 232 EC is to be applied in the present case, since the implied dismissal under Article 118(3) of Regulation No 40/94, which results from the Commission's failure to define its position, does not allow the addressee of the decision to assess the content of that implied dismissal and cannot therefore constitute the definition of a position for the purpose of Article 232 EC.

32 Article 232 EC is also applicable on the ground that the expiry of the three-month period within which the Commission should have taken a decision pursuant to Article 118(3) of Regulation No 40/94 does not exclude the Commission's obligation to act in its capacity as the supervisory body of OHIM in order to ensure the legality of its acts, and the inaction of the Commission did not bring about a distinct change in the applicant's legal position.

33 Secondly, as regards the contention that the administrative appeal was lodged out of time, the applicant submits that the period of one month under Article 118(3) of Regulation No 40/94 should start to run from the time when it became aware of OHIM's infringements, that is to say, in the present case, during November 2007, and not from the receipt of the award decision on 16 April 2007. Therefore, the administrative appeal brought on 2 December 2007 is not out of time.

34 Thirdly, the applicant denies that the application for a declaration of failure to act was submitted out of time. The period of two months during which the institution concerned should define its position, under Article 232 EC, is displaced by the period of three months provided for in Article 118 (3) of Regulation No 40/94. Furthermore, the applicant specifies that the two-month period for the purpose of bringing an application for a declaration of failure to act can start to run only from the implied dismissal referred to in Article 118(3). In the present case, since the administrative appeal was lodged on 2 December 2007, the three-month period for defining a position on the administrative appeal expired on 2 March 2008 and the period for bringing an action for failure to act expired on 2 May 2008, a time-limit which is to be extended by 10 days on account of distance as provided for in Article 102(2) of the Rules of Procedure, so that the action had to be brought on 12 May 2008 at the latest. Since this action was brought on 9 May 2008, it was therefore not brought out of time.

35 Fourthly, the applicant disputes the ground for inadmissibility based on the Commission's alleged lack of power to annul OHIM acts. It submits that it is for the Commission and not OHIM to take a decision on the legality of OHIM's acts. Even if the power to alter or annul an OHIM act rests exclusively with that body, the Commission has the power to take a decision which OHIM must strictly follow.

Findings of the Court

36 Community law provides that, in certain specific instances, silence on the part of an institution is deemed to amount to a decision where the institution has been called upon to express its view and has not done so by the end of a given period. In such cases, by an express provision, laying down a deadline by which an implied decision is deemed to have been taken and prescribing the tenor of the decision, an institution's inaction is deemed to be equivalent to a decision, without calling into question the system of remedies instituted by the Treaty (see, to that effect, Joined Cases T-189/95, T-39/96 and T-123/96 SGA v Commission [1999] ECR II-3587, paragraph 27).

37 That applies to Article 118 of Regulation No 40/94, which lays down a system for control of the legality of those acts of the President of OHIM in respect of which Community law does not provide for any check on legality by another body. That is true of acts adopted in the context of public procurement.

38 That control is entrusted to the Commission, before which an administrative appeal must be brought within one month of the day on which the party concerned first became aware of the act in question. At the end of that procedure, the Commission is to require, where appropriate, that the acts which it regards as unlawful be altered or annulled. The fact that a time-limit is laid down for bringing an administrative appeal attests to the obligatory nature – which has never been called into question by the applicant – of such an administrative procedure, which is a prerequisite of bringing an action before the Community Courts (see, to that effect and by analogy, Case T-411/06 Sogelma v EAR [2008] ECR II-0000, paragraphs 60 to 63). The Community legislature did not design the procedure laid down by Article 118 of Regulation No 40/94 as offering individuals an alternative remedy to that of an action before the Community Courts in order to protect their interests, unlike that which was provided for, for example, with regard to bringing a matter before the European Ombudsman, which is an alternative remedy to that of a direct action before the Community Courts (see, to that effect, order in Case T–294/04 Internationaler Hilfsfonds v Commission [2005] ECR II-2719, paragraphs 47 and 48).

39 Therefore, an action for failure to act seeking a declaration that the Commission has been guilty of inaction is not admissible in the context of a system such as that established by Article 118 of Regulation No 40/94, in which it is expressly provided that the Commission's inaction results in an implied dismissal. Any declaration that the Commission acted unlawfully is possible only in the context of an action for annulment brought against the final decision of the institution, in which it decides on the merits of the applicant's complaint, both where that decision is express and where it is deemed to have been adopted on the expiry of a specified period.

40 Having regard to the foregoing, and without it being necessary to examine the other grounds of inadmissibility relied on by the Commission, the application for a declaration of failure to act must be dismissed as manifestly inadmissible.

The application for annulment

Arguments of the parties

41 In its observations on the plea of inadmissibility, the applicant submits that, if the Court were to find its application for a declaration of failure to act inadmissible, it should be treated as an application for annulment of the Commission's implied decision of dismissal, which is deemed to have been adopted on the expiry of the period of three months from the day on which the administrative appeal was lodged. The conditions for bringing an action for annulment under Article 230 EC are fulfilled in the present case, since the implied decision is of direct and individual concern to the applicant, and the time-limit for bringing an action under the fourth paragraph of Article 230 EC was complied with in this case, since the action was brought within two months of the expiry of the three-month period after the administrative appeal was lodged on 2 December 2007. The applicant adds that Articles 230 EC and 232 EC merely prescribe one and the same method of recourse and that the new application for annulment does not in any way change the subject–matter of the proceedings.

Findings of the Court

42 Whilst Article 48(2) of the Rules of Procedure authorises, in certain circumstances, new pleas in law to be introduced in the course of proceedings, that provision cannot in any circumstances be interpreted as authorising the applicants to bring a new claim before the Community judicature and thereby to modify the subject-matter of the proceedings. In that context, it is not permissible to substitute a claim for annulment for the claim for a declaration of failure to act initially brought before the Court (see, to that effect, Case T-28/90 Asia Motor France and Others v Commission [1992] ECR II-2285, paragraph 43 and the case-law cited).

43 It follows that the applicant, which initially applied to the Court on the basis of Article 232 EC, is not entitled to request, even in the alternative, that its initial claim be converted into a claim for annulment on the basis of Article 230 EC and directed against the implied decision of dismissal which is deemed to have been adopted on the expiry of the three-month period after the administrative appeal was lodged on 2 December 2007.

The application for damages

Arguments of the parties

44 According to the Commission, the application for damages is inadmissible on two grounds. First, the action for damages should have been directed against OHIM under Article 114 of Regulation No 40/94 (now Article 118 of Regulation No 207/2009) and, secondly, there is neither a sufficiently serious breach of a rule of law nor a direct causal link between the damage suffered by the applicant and the Commission's inaction.

45 The applicant contends in reply, first, that the action for damages was correctly brought against the Commission as the supervisory body of OHIM and, secondly, that the examination of the conditions relating to whether there is a sufficiently serious breach of a rule of law, damage and a causal link is not relevant at the stage of examining the action's admissibility.

Findings of the Court

46 According to settled case-law, the action for damages was established by the Treaty as an independent form of action with a particular purpose to fulfil within the system of actions and subject to conditions for its use conceived with a view to its specific purpose. Thus it has been held that, although actions for annulment and for a declaration of failure to act seek a declaration that a legally binding measure is unlawful or that such a measure has not been taken, an action for damages seeks compensation for damage resulting from a measure, whether legally binding or not, or from conduct, attributable to a Community institution or body (see order of 17 October 2007 in Case T-454/05 Sumitomo Chemical Agro Europe and Philagro France v Commission, not published in the ECR, paragraphs 70 and 71 and the case-law cited).

47 However, an application for damages which is closely connected to an application for a declaration of failure to act is itself inadmissible (see order of 3 May 2004 in Case T-24/04 Leighton and Others v Council and Commission, not published in the ECR, paragraph 24 and the case-law cited).

48 The Court finds that the present application for damages is closely connected to an application for a declaration of failure to act and to an application for annulment which are manifestly inadmissible, as is apparent from the foregoing explanations.

49 It follows that the application for damages made in these proceedings is itself also manifestly inadmissible.

50 Consequently, the action must be dismissed in its entirety, without it being necessary to rule on the request that certain documents relating to the tender evaluation procedure be produced.

51 Since this action must be declared manifestly inadmissible, it is not necessary to rule on the application to intervene submitted by European Dynamics in support of the form of order sought by the Commission (see, to that effect, order in Case C-341/00 P CNPA and Others v Commission [2001] ECR I-5263, paragraphs 33 to 39).

Costs

52 Article 87(2) of the Rules of Procedure provides that the unsuccessful party is to be ordered to pay the costs if they have been applied for in the successful party's pleadings.

53 In the present case, since the applicant has been unsuccessful, it must be ordered to pay the Commission's costs in accordance with the form of order sought by the Commission.

54 In respect of the costs connected with the application to intervene, pursuant to Article 87(6) of the Rules of Procedure, European Dynamics, the applicant and the Commission must be ordered to bear their own costs.

On those grounds,

THE COURT OF FIRST INSTANCE (Seventh Chamber)

hereby orders:

1. The action is dismissed.

2. infeurope shall bear its own costs and pay those incurred by the Commission.

3. It is not necessary to rule on the application to intervene submitted by European Dynamics SA.

4. infeurope, the Commission and European Dynamics shall bear their own costs in connection with the application to intervene.

Form of order sought declare that the European Commission has failed to annul the decision of awarding the framework contracts under the call for tenders procedure AO/042/05 of the OHIM on software maintenance; declare that the European Commission has failed to terminate the specific contracts concluded under the said framework contracts;

order the European Commission to pay to the applicant the sum of EUR 37 002 plus 4 % interest on the amount of EUR 31 650 from 29August 2006, plus 4% interest on the amount of EUR 3 650 from 3 December 2007, plus 4% interest on the amount of EUR 1 702 from 3 May 2 08; respectively 8% interest on sum of EUR 37 002 from the date of judgment; order the European Commission to pay to the applicant the sum of EUR 1 209 037 plus 4% interest on the said sum from 3 May 2008, respectively 8 % interest on the said sum from the date of judgment; order the European Commission to produce certain documents relating to the procedure for evaluating the tenders;

order the European Commission to pay the costs.

Pleas in law and main arguments

The applicant seeks the declaration that the Commission failed to annul the decision taken by the Office for Harmonisation in the Internal Market (OHIM) awarding multiple framework contracts for the provision of IT maintenance services under the tender procedure AO/042/05 "E-Alicante: software maintenance relating to OHIM core business systems (management and registration of trade marks and designs)"[1] and that it has failed to terminate the corresponding specific contracts under the framework.

The applicant claims that the tender process as well as the implementation of the specific contracts further to the tender suffer from a series of severe irregularities such as: the irregular award criteria, an incorrect composition of the evaluation committee, the fact that the contracts were awarded after the expiry of the period of tender offers' validity and that the OHIM agreed on various considerable changes to the terms of the specific contracts.

The applicant claims that the OHIM, as contracting authority, had breached the principles of equal treatment, of transparency and of good administration and had misused the instrument of framework contracts. It had further infringed a number of stipulations in the Financial Regulation[2].

The applicant claims that the Commission, as supervisory body of the OHIM[3], had failed to take appropriate action against these infringements. The applicant maintains that the discretion of the Commission whether or not to take action against the breaches of law and establish legality is reduced to zero thus entailing an obligation to act.

Furthermore, the applicant asks to be compensated for the damages suffered as a result of the irregularities in the said tendering procedure and its subsequent implementation.

« Référé – Avis d'adjudication de marché visant à encourager le développement économique dans la partie septentrionale de Chypre – Demande de sursis à exécution – Défaut d'urgence »

Dans l'affaire T–122/08 R,

République de Chypre, représentée par M. P. Kliridis, en qualité d'agent, partie requérante,

contre

Commission des Communautés européennes, représentée par MM. P. van Nuffel et I. Zervas, en qualité d'agents,

partie défenderesse,

ayant pour objet une demande de sursis à l'exécution d'un avis d'adjudication adopté par la Commission et visant à encourager le développement économique dans la partie septentrionale de Chypre concernant la mise en place d'une unité de gestion de programme en appui à la mise en œuvre de projets d'investissement dans le domaine de l'eau, des eaux usées et des déchets solides,

LE PRÉSIDENT DU TRIBUNAL DE PREMIÈRE INSTANCE

rend la présente

Ordonnance

1 En janvier 2008, la Commission a lancé un avis d'appel d'offres pour l'attribution d'un marché de services dans la partie septentrionale de Chypre, à savoir l'avis EuropeAid/126316/C/SER/CY « Mise en place d'une unité de gestion de programme en appui à la mise en œuvre de projets d'investissement dans le domaine de l'eau, des eaux usées et des déchets solides ». Cet avis (ci-après l'« avis litigieux ») comporte un calendrier pour le déroulement de la procédure d'attribution du marché, selon lequel les manifestations d'intérêt pour présenter des offres devaient être communiquées à la Commission au mois de février 2008, le début de l'exécution du marché étant prévu vers le mois de juillet 2008, de telle sorte que l'attribution du marché et la conclusion du contrat auront probablement lieu avant ce mois de juillet.

3 Par requête déposée au greffe du Tribunal le 14 mars 2008, la République de Chypre a introduit un recours visant, en substance, à l'annulation de l'avis litigieux.

4 Par acte séparé, déposé au greffe du Tribunal le 19 mars 2008, la République de Chypre a introduit la présente demande en référé, dans laquelle elle conclut à ce qu'il plaise au président du Tribunal :

– à titre principal, suspendre la procédure d'adjudication et/ou interdire la signature du contrat faisant l'objet de l'avis litigieux jusqu'au prononcé de l'arrêt dans la procédure au principal ;

– à titre subsidiaire, s'il apparaît que le marché a déjà été attribué et/ou que le contrat a déjà été conclu, surseoir à l'exécution de ce contrat jusqu'au prononcé de l'arrêt dans la procédure au principal ;

– ordonner, au titre de l'article 105, paragraphe 2, du règlement de procédure du Tribunal, que la procédure d'attribution du marché ou que l'exécution de celui-ci soit suspendue jusqu'à ce qu'il ait été statué sur les conclusions présentées ci-dessus à titre principal et subsidiaire ;

– prendre toute autre mesure jugée adéquate ;

– condamner la Commission aux dépens.

5 Dans ses observations écrites déposées au greffe du Tribunal le 8 avril 2008, la Commission conclut à ce qu'il plaise au président du Tribunal :

– à titre principal, déclarer la demande en référé irrecevable ;

– à titre subsidiaire, la rejeter comme non fondée ;

– condamner la République de Chypre aux dépens.

6 Il y a lieu de constater que l'argumentation présentée par la République de Chypre pour établir l'urgence ainsi que les moyens de fait et de droit justifiant à première vue (fumus boni juris) l'octroi des mesures provisoires sollicitées est, en substance, identique à celle qu'elle avait présentée dans le cadre des affaires T–54/08 R, T–87/08 R, T–88/08 R et T–91/08 R à T–93/08 R ayant conduit à l'ordonnance du 8 avril 2008. Or, par cette ordonnance, les demandes en référé introduites dans ces affaires ont été rejetées au motif que la condition relative à l'urgence n'était pas remplie.

7 Dans ces circonstances, il y a lieu de renvoyer à la motivation de l'ordonnance du 8 avril 2008 (voir, s'agissant de la faculté pour le juge communautaire de motiver une décision par renvoi à une décision antérieure statuant sur des questions substantiellement identiques, arrêt de la Cour du 25 octobre 2005, Crailsheimer Volksbank, C–229/04, Rec. p. I–9273, points 47 à 49, et arrêt du Tribunal du 11 juillet 2007, Sison/Conseil, T-47/03, non encore publié au Recueil, point 102) et de rejeter également la présente demande en référé.

Par ces motifs,

LE PRÉSIDENT DU TRIBUNAL

ordonne :

1) La demande en référé est rejetée.

2) Les dépens sont réservés.

(Case T-121/08)

Language of the case: Dutch

Parties

Applicant: PC-Ware Information Technologies BV (Amsterdam, Netherlands) (represented by: L. Devillé, lawyer)

Defendant: Commission of the European Communities

Form of order sought

Declare the action for annulment admissible;

Annul the decision of the Directorate-General of the European Commission, communicated to the applicant by letter of 11 January 2008, which rejected the applicant's tender for public procurement contract DIGIT/R2/2007/022 - LAR 2007 and awarded the contract to the successful tender;

Declare that the Commission's action was unlawful and gives rise to the Commission's liability;

In the alternative, if the contract has already been carried out when the Court gives judgment or the decision can no longer be declared void, order the Commission to pay damages of EUR 654 962.38 as compensation for the loss suffered by the applicant in regard to that procedure;

Order the Commission to pay the costs of the proceedings and other costs even if the action is dismissed.

Pleas in law and main arguments

The applicant took part in public procurement procedure DIGIT/R2/2007/022 - LAR 2007 - Large account reseller Microsoft products (LAR 2007) (OJ 2007 S 183-223062), whose objective was to establish a framework contract for a single source purchase channel, covering the acquisition of Microsoft software products and licences. The applicant contests the Commission's decision to award that contract to another undertaking.

In support of its application, the applicant submits, first, that insufficient reasons are given for the decision. The applicant states that upon the submission of its offer it stated expressly that it gave the highest possible reduction on the basis of Article 40 of the Belgian Law of 14 July 1991 on trade practices and consumer information and protection, which prohibits sales at a loss. The Commission failed to give sufficient reasons in the decision with regard to the application of that prohibition and compliance with the principle of equal treatment.

Secondly, the applicant submits that it is apparent that the successful offer infringes Article 40 of the abovementioned Belgian Law of 14 July 1991. According to the applicant, the Commission should have refused the successful offer pursuant to Article 55 of Directive 2004/18/EC, [1] Article 139(1) and Article 146(4) of Regulation No 2342/2002 [2] and the principles of good administration.

LE PRÉSIDENT DU TRIBUNAL DE PREMIÈRE INSTANCE

rend la présente

Ordonnance

1 En décembre 2007, la Commission a lancé un avis d'appel d'offres pour l'attribution d'un marché de services dans la partie septentrionale de Chypre, à savoir l'avis EuropeAid/125672/C/SER/CY « Assistance technique à l'élevage du bétail ». Cet avis (ci-après l'« avis litigieux ») comporte un calendrier pour le déroulement de la procédure d'attribution du marché, selon lequel les manifestations d'intérêt pour présenter des offres devaient être communiquées à la Commission au mois de février 2008, le début de l'exécution du marché étant prévu vers le mois de juillet 2008, de telle sorte que l'attribution du marché et la conclusion du contrat auront probablement lieu avant ce mois de juillet.

3 Par requête déposée au greffe du Tribunal le 7 mars 2008, la République de Chypre a introduit un recours visant, en substance, à l'annulation de l'avis litigieux.

4 Par acte séparé, déposé au greffe du Tribunal le 19 mars 2008, la République de Chypre a introduit la présente demande en référé, dans laquelle elle conclut à ce qu'il plaise au président du Tribunal :

– à titre principal, suspendre la procédure d'adjudication et/ou interdire la signature du contrat faisant l'objet de l'avis litigieux jusqu'au prononcé de l'arrêt dans la procédure au principal ;

– à titre subsidiaire, s'il apparaît que le marché a déjà été attribué et/ou que le contrat a déjà été conclu, surseoir à l'exécution de ce contrat jusqu'au prononcé de l'arrêt dans la procédure au principal ;

– ordonner, au titre de l'article 105, paragraphe 2, du règlement de procédure du Tribunal, que la procédure d'attribution du marché ou que l'exécution de celui-ci soit suspendue jusqu'à ce qu'il ait été statué sur les conclusions présentées ci-dessus à titre principal et subsidiaire ;

– prendre toute autre mesure jugée adéquate ;

– condamner la Commission aux dépens.

5 Dans ses observations écrites déposées au greffe du Tribunal le 8 avril 2008, la Commission conclut à ce qu'il plaise au président du Tribunal :

– à titre principal, déclarer la demande en référé irrecevable ;

– à titre subsidiaire, la rejeter comme non fondée ;

– condamner la République de Chypre aux dépens.

6 Il y a lieu de constater que l'argumentation présentée par la République de Chypre pour établir l'urgence ainsi que les moyens de fait et de droit justifiant à première vue (fumus boni juris) l'octroi des mesures provisoires sollicitées est, en substance, identique à celle qu'elle avait présentée dans le cadre des affaires T–54/08 R, T–87/08 R, T–88/08 R et T–91/08 R à T–93/08 R ayant conduit à l'ordonnance du 8 avril 2008. Or, par cette ordonnance, les demandes en référé introduites dans ces affaires ont été rejetées au motif que la condition relative à l'urgence n'était pas remplie.

7 Dans ces circonstances, il y a lieu de renvoyer à la motivation de l'ordonnance du 8 avril 2008 (voir, s'agissant de la faculté pour le juge communautaire de motiver une décision par renvoi à une décision antérieure statuant sur des questions substantiellement identiques, arrêt de la Cour du 25 octobre 2005, Crailsheimer Volksbank, C–229/04, Rec. p. I–9273, points 47 à 49, et arrêt du Tribunal du 11 juillet 2007, Sison/Conseil, T-47/03, non encore publié au Recueil, point 102) et de rejeter également la présente demande en référé.

Par ces motifs,

LE PRÉSIDENT DU TRIBUNAL

ordonne :

1) La demande en référé est rejetée.

2) Les dépens sont réservés.

1 By letter lodged at the Registry of the Court of First Instance on 10 November 2008, the applicants informed the Court in accordance with Article 99 of the Rules of Procedure of the Court of First Instance that they wished to discontinue proceedings.

2 By letter lodged at the Registry of the Court on 19 November 2008, the defendant informed the Court that it had no objections to raise concerning the discontinuance of the proceedings. Defendant: Commission of the European Communities

Form of order sought

Annul in its entirety the decision of the Commission of 23 November 2007 rejecting the tender from the applicant in response to the call for tender No EAC/21/2007 'European survey on language competences', in so far as it infringes EU law and is based on manifest errors of assessment;

annul in its entirety the decision of the Commission awarding the contract related to this call for tender to the SurveyLang Consortium, in so far as it infringes EU law and is based on manifest errors of assessment; and order, pursuant to Article 87(2) of the Rules of Procedure of the CFI, the Commission to pay the costs of the applicant.

Pleas in law and main arguments

The applicants submitted a bid in response to the defendant's call for tender concerning the 'European survey on language competences' (OJ 2007/S 61-074161), as rectified (OJ 2007/S 109-133727). The applicants contest the defendant's decision of 23 November 2007 to reject their bid and to award the contract to another tenderer.

In support of their application, the applicants submit that the contested decision violates the principle of equal treatment, Article 100(1) of the financial regulation[1] and the tender specifications.

Furthermore, the applicants claim that the Commission committed a manifest error of assessment of the qualitative criteria laid down in the tender specifications, which in turn led to a manifest error of assessment in the setting of the bidders' respective scores.

Finally, the applicants allege that the Commission breached the principle of good administration by failing to exercise due care during the tender procedure.

ORDONNANCE DU PRÉSIDENT DU TRIBUNAL

8 avril 2008 (*)

« Référé – Avis d'adjudication de marchés visant à encourager le développement économique dans la partie septentrionale de Chypre – Demandes de sursis à exécution – Défaut d'urgence »

République de Chypre, représentée par M. P. Kliridis, en qualité d'agent, partie requérante,

contre

Commission des Communautés européennes, représentée par MM. P. van Nuffel et I. Zervas, en qualité d'agents,

partie défenderesse,

ayant pour objet des demandes de sursis à l'exécution de plusieurs avis d'adjudication adoptés par la Commission et visant à encourager le développement économique dans la partie septentrionale de Chypre dans les secteurs de l'énergie, de l'environnement, de l'agriculture, des télécommunications, de l'éducation ainsi que de la gestion des récoltes et de l'irrigation,

LE PRÉSIDENT DU TRIBUNAL DE PREMIÈRE INSTANCE

rend la présente

Ordonnance

Cadre juridique

1 L'acte relatif aux conditions d'adhésion à l'Union européenne de la République tchèque, de la République d'Estonie, de la République de Chypre, de la République de Lettonie, de la République de Lituanie, de la République de Hongrie, de la République de Malte, de la République de Pologne, de la République de Slovénie et de la République slovaque, et aux adaptations des traités sur lesquels est fondée l'Union européenne (JO 2003, L 236, p. 33), comporte des protocoles qui, en vertu de son article 60, en font partie intégrante et parmi lesquels figure le protocole n° 10 sur Chypre (JO 2003, L 236, p. 955, ci-après le « protocole n° 10 »).

2 Le protocole n° 10 prévoit en son article 1er, paragraphe 1, que l'application de l'acquis communautaire est suspendue dans les zones de la République de Chypre où le gouvernement chypriote n'exerce pas un contrôle effectif (ci-après les « zones en cause »). Toutefois, aux termes de son article 3, paragraphe 1, rien dans ce protocole n'empêche l'adoption de mesures visant à favoriser le développement économique des zones en cause.

3 C'est pour atteindre cet objectif que le Conseil, en application de l'article 308 CE et donc statuant à l'unanimité, a adopté le règlement (CE) n° 389/2006 , du 27 février 2006, portant création d'un instrument de soutien financier visant à encourager le développement économique de la communauté chypriote turque et modifiant le règlement (CE) n° 2667/2000 relatif à l'Agence européenne pour la reconstruction (JO L 65, p. 5).

4 Selon l'article 1er, paragraphes 1 et 2, du règlement n° 389/2006 , l'accent est mis sur l'intégration économique de l'île et l'amélioration des contacts entre les deux communautés, l'aide devant bénéficier, notamment, aux collectivités locales et aux instances remplissant des fonctions d'intérêt général dans les zones en cause, tandis que le paragraphe 3 de cet article prévoit expressément que l'octroi de l'aide ne constitue pas une reconnaissance d'une autorité publique autre que le gouvernement chypriote dans les zones en cause.

5 En vertu de l'article 2 du règlement n° 389/2006 , l'aide est notamment utilisée pour favoriser la promotion du développement social et économique, plus particulièrement en ce qui concerne le développement rural, le développement des ressources humaines et le développement régional, ainsi que le développement et la restructuration des infrastructures, plus particulièrement dans les secteurs de l'énergie et des transports, de l'environnement, des télécommunications et de l'approvisionnement en eau. En outre, l'aide est destinée à favoriser la réconciliation, l'instauration d'un climat de confiance et le soutien à la société civile, ainsi que le rapprochement entre la communauté chypriote turque et l'Union européenne.

6 S'agissant des appels d'offres, l'article 9, paragraphe 4, du règlement n° 389/2006 énonce que les fournitures et matériaux acquis au titre d'un contrat financé dans le cadre dudit règlement doivent tous provenir, notamment, du territoire douanier de la Communauté européenne ou des zones en cause.

Antécédents des litiges

7 En novembre et en décembre 2007, la Commission a lancé six avis d'appels d'offres pour l'attribution de marchés dans la partie septentrionale de Chypre, à savoir l'avis EuropeAid/125051/D/SUP/CY « Modernisation de la gestion du secteur de l'énergie – 'Comptage de l'énergie et compensation d'énergie réactive' », l'avis EuropeAid/126225/C/SER/CY « Assistance technique à des travaux de génie civil pour l'infrastructure de gestion des déchets et pour la restauration d'aires de dépôt », l'avis EuropeAid/125242/C/SER/CY « Assistance technique à la mise en œuvre du programme sectoriel relatif au développement rural », l'avis EuropeAid/126172/C/SER/CY « Développement et restructuration de l'infrastructure de télécommunications – 'Formation, développement des capacités et gestion de projets' », l'avis EuropeAid/126111/C/SER/CY « Assistance technique à la reforme en cours du secteur de l'enseignement primaire et secondaire » et l'avis EuropeAid/125671/C/SER/CY « Assistance technique à l'exploitation des récoltes et à l'aménagement pour l'irrigation ».

8 Chacun de ces avis comporte un calendrier pour le déroulement de la procédure d'attribution du marché.

10 S'agissant des autres avis, les manifestations d'intérêt pour présenter des offres devaient être communiquées à la Commission au mois de janvier 2008, et la présélection des opérateurs invités à présenter une offre était prévue vers le mois de février 2008. Le début de l'exécution des différents marchés est prévu vers les mois de mai et de juin 2008, de telle sorte que l'attribution des marchés et la conclusion des contrats auront probablement lieu au mois d'avril 2008.

11 Le point 5 de chaque avis prévoit que le pouvoir adjudicateur est « la Communauté européenne, représentée par la Commission, au nom et pour le compte de la communauté chypriote turque ».

13 Le point 23 de l'avis faisant l'objet de l'affaire T–54/08 R et le point 28 des autres avis sont, en substance, rédigés comme suit :

– le Guide pratique des procédures contractuelles dans le cadre des actions extérieures de la Communauté européenne, applicable au présent marché, mentionne les conventions de financement régulièrement signées par la Commission et le pays tiers bénéficiaire. Ces conventions de financement sont habituellement complétées par des conventions-cadres entre la Commission et le pays bénéficiaire. Ces deux conventions régissent les règles de base suivies pour la mise en œuvre de l'aide financière dans le pays bénéficiaire, notamment les règles relatives à l'établissement et au droit de résidence, aux privilèges et immunités, aux régimes douaniers et fiscaux, ainsi qu'à l'importation et à l'exportation d'équipement et d'autres biens ;

– il n'y a aucune convention de ce type qui soit susceptible de s'appliquer à la communauté chypriote turque. Il n'existe pas de convention similaire avec la République de Chypre, qui est un État membre de l'Union européenne. Toutefois, le bénéficiaire accepte que :

  – l'attributaire soit exempté des droits de douane, des droits à l'importation, des redevances et de la taxe sur la valeur ajoutée (TVA) ou de toute autre taxe grevant les biens qui entrent dans la partie septentrionale de Chypre dans le cadre du marché financé par l'Union européenne. Le bénéficiaire délivre à l'attributaire des lettres d'exemption de tous les droits et taxes d'importation pour tous les biens importés en vue d'être intégrés dans des ouvrages permanents. Il fournit à l'attributaire l'aide nécessaire pour obtenir toutes les exonérations fiscales applicables ;

  – l'attributaire établisse les documents nécessaires, notamment en matière d'exemption, conformément aux exigences fixées par les douanes et par les autres autorités compétentes et à toute autre exigence raisonnable fixée par le pouvoir adjudicateur. L'attributaire est entièrement responsable de la présentation des documents de dédouanement des biens et il sera réputé avoir respecté toutes les procédures applicables (avant de soumettre l'offre) ;

  – les biens importés qui ne sont pas intégrés dans le marché ou utilisés dans le cadre de ce dernier soient réexportés une fois le marché terminé. S'ils ne sont pas exportés ou s'ils sont affectés à d'autres marchés, ils sont soumis aux droits qui leur sont applicables, dont l'attributaire doit s'acquitter ;

  – le paiement et le remboursement des impôts et taxes soient effectués dans la nouvelle livre turque (TRY) ;

  – le soumissionnaire doive prendre connaissance du règlement de la Ligne verte et considérer les implications des mouvements de marchandises à destination et en provenance des régions qui ne sont pas sous le contrôle effectif du gouvernement chypriote : règlement (CE) n° 866/2004 du Conseil, du 29 avril 2004, concernant un régime en application de l'article 2 du protocole n° 10 de l'acte d'adhésion de 2003 (JO L 161, p. 128) ;

  – le bénéficiaire veille à ce que l'attributaire obtienne des certificats d'exemption de la TVA sur le montant du marché ;

  – les biens et matériaux importés via la République de Chypre soient soumis à la TVA conformément à la directive 2006/112/CE du Conseil, du 28 novembre 2006, relative au système commun de TVA (JO L 347, p. 1) ;

  – le bénéficiaire aide l'attributaire à obtenir les licences d'importation nécessaires pour importer des biens dans la partie septentrionale de Chypre. Le pouvoir adjudicateur et le bénéficiaire aident l'attributaire à obtenir les exemptions fiscales et à accomplir les formalités douanières ;

  – le personnel expatrié de l'attributaire, ses employés et ses ouvriers soient exemptés de droits de douane, d'impôt sur le revenu, de taxes et autres charges sur leurs effets personnels et ceux de leur ménage pour autant que, une fois le marché terminé, ils soient exportés ou utilisés dans la partie septentrionale de Chypre conformément à la législation locale. Cette exonération ne s'appliquera pas au personnel local de la communauté chypriote turque et l'attributaire sera tenu de s'acquitter de ses éventuelles obligations en matière de déduction fiscale ;

– le pouvoir adjudicateur et le bénéficiaire aident l'attributaire à obtenir les autorisations nécessaires pour l'importation et la réexportation ultérieure de l'équipement professionnel nécessaire à l'exécution du contrat ;

– le pouvoir adjudicateur aide l'attributaire à obtenir les autorisations nécessaires pour ses salariés affectés à la mise en oeuvre du marché et pour les membres de leur famille proche, afin qu'ils puissent accéder à la partie septentrionale de Chypre, s'y établir, y travailler et en repartir, conformément aux exigences résultant de la nature même du marché ;

– lors de la préparation ou de l'exécution du marché, le soumissionnaire et/ou l'adjudicataire ne prenne aucune mesure susceptible d'impliquer la reconnaissance de toute autorité publique autre que le gouvernement chypriote.

14 Le 22 janvier 2008, la République de Chypre a contesté auprès de la Commission le contenu des avis en cause (ci-après les « avis » ou les « actes attaqués »), en demandant leur retrait et l'arrêt des procédures de passation des marchés.

Procédure et conclusions des parties

16 Par actes séparés, déposés au greffe du Tribunal les 7, 21 et 22 février 2008, la République de Chypre a introduit les présentes demandes en référé, dans lesquelles elle conclut à ce qu'il plaise au président du Tribunal :

– à titre principal, suspendre les procédures d'adjudication et/ou interdire la signature des contrats faisant l'objet des actes attaqués jusqu'au prononcé des arrêts dans les procédures au principal ;

– à titre subsidiaire, s'il apparaît que les marchés ont déjà été attribués et/ou que les contrats ont déjà été conclus, surseoir à l'exécution de ces contrats jusqu'au prononcé des arrêts dans les procédures au principal ;

– ordonner, au titre de l'article 105, paragraphe 2, du règlement de procédure du Tribunal, que les procédures d'attribution des marchés ou que l'exécution de ceux-ci soient suspendues jusqu'à ce qu'il ait été statué sur les conclusions présentées ci-dessus à titre principal et subsidiaire ;

– prendre toute autre mesure jugée adéquate ;

– condamner la Commission aux dépens.

17 Dans ses observations écrites déposées au greffe du Tribunal le 25 février ainsi que les 3 et 7 mars 2008, la Commission conclut à ce qu'il plaise au président du Tribunal :

– à titre principal, déclarer les demandes en référé irrecevables ;

– à titre subsidiaire, les rejeter comme non fondées ;

– condamner la République de Chypre aux dépens.

18 En date du 11 mars 2008, le juge des référés a posé certaines questions aux parties, qui y ont répondu par écrit dans le délai imparti.

En droit

19 Il importe de souligner que l'article 242 CE pose le principe du caractère non suspensif des recours (ordonnance du président de la Cour du 25 juillet 2000, Pays-Bas/Parlement et Conseil, C-377/98 R, Rec. p. I-6229, point 44, et ordonnance du président du Tribunal du 28 juin 2000, Cho Yang Shipping/Commission, T-191/98 R II, Rec. p. II-2551, point 42). C'est donc à titre exceptionnel que le juge des référés ordonne un sursis à exécution sollicité par le requérant.

20 En vertu des dispositions combinées des articles 242 CE et 243 CE, d'une part, et de l'article 225, paragraphe l, CE, d'autre part, le juge des référés peut, s'il estime que les circonstances l'exigent, ordonner le sursis à l'exécution d'un acte attaqué devant lui ou prescrire les mesures provisoires nécessaires.

21 L'article 104, paragraphe 2, du règlement de procédure dispose que les demandes de mesures provisoires doivent spécifier l'objet du litige, les circonstances établissant l'urgence ainsi que les moyens de fait et de droit justifiant à première vue (fumus boni juris) l'octroi de la mesure provisoire à laquelle elles concluent. Ainsi, le sursis à exécution et les mesures provisoires peuvent être accordés par le juge des référés s'il est établi que leur octroi est justifié à première vue en fait et en droit (fumus boni juris) et qu'ils sont urgents en ce sens qu'il est nécessaire, pour éviter un préjudice grave et irréparable aux intérêts du requérant, qu'ils soient édictés et sortent leurs effets dès avant la décision au principal. Ces conditions sont cumulatives, de sorte que les demandes de mesures provisoires doivent être rejetées dès lors que l'une d'elles fait défaut [ordonnance du président de la Cour du 14 octobre 1996, SCK et FNK/Commission, C-268/96 P(R), Rec. p. I-4971, point 30]. Le juge des référés procède également, le cas échéant, à la mise en balance des intérêts en présence (voir ordonnance du président de la Cour du 23 février 2001, Autriche/Conseil, C-445/00 R, Rec. p. I-1461, point 73, et la jurisprudence citée).

Sur les demandes en référé

– Sur la recevabilité

26 La Commission a des doutes sur la question de savoir si les avis et, notamment, les dispositions litigieuses peuvent être qualifiés d'actes d'une institution susceptibles de faire l'objet d'un recours en annulation et, par conséquent, d'une demande en référé. En effet, il ne serait pas certain qu'ils produisent des effets juridiques à l'égard de la République de Chypre. En tout état de cause, la Commission se réserve le droit d'exposer, dans le cadre des procédures au principal, son point de vue sur la recevabilité des recours en annulation.

27 La République de Chypre considère que ses recours en annulation sont recevables, car les avis sont des actes attaquables, à savoir des actes pris par une institution communautaire qui produisent des effets juridiques obligatoires (arrêt de la Cour du 6 mars 1979, Simmenthal/Commission, 92/78, Rec. p. 777) susceptibles d'affecter ses intérêts en modifiant sensiblement sa situation juridique. Elle ajoute qu'il est possible de demander l'annulation d'un avis de marché sans devoir attendre la décision d'attribution (arrêt de la Cour du 12 février 2004, Grossmann Air Service, C–230/02, Rec. p. I–1829, point 28). Enfin, le principe de protection juridictionnelle effective exigerait qu'un recours puisse être introduit à un stade où des infractions peuvent encore être corrigées. Une protection semblable devrait, par analogie, être accordée pour les marchés passés par les institutions communautaires.

– Sur le fumus boni juris

28 La République de Chypre soutient que les dispositions litigieuses sont incompatibles avec le règlement n° 389/2006 , avec le protocole n° 10 et avec l'article 299 CE ainsi qu'avec les obligations qui découlent de règles de droit international contraignant et des résolutions 541 (1983) et 550 (1984) du Conseil de sécurité des Nations unies. Dans les affaires autres que l'affaire T–54/08 R, la République de Chypre ajoute que les actes attaqués n'ont pas été publiés au Journal officiel de l'Union européenne, contrairement aux prescriptions de l'article 90 du règlement (CE, Euratom) n° 1605/2002 du Conseil, du 25 juin 2002, portant règlement financier applicable au budget général des Communautés européennes (JO L 248, p. 1, ci-après le « règlement financier »).

29 La République de Chypre précise que les dispositions litigieuses traitent la communauté chypriote turque comme si elle était une entité étatique autonome dotée d'une personnalité juridique et susceptible de bénéficier de l'aide en cause, alors que cette communauté est une fraction de sa population, à laquelle la Constitution de 1960 donne le droit d'être représentée dans ses institutions. Le règlement n° 389/2006 ne permettrait aucune autre conclusion. Au contraire, l'article 1er, paragraphe 2, de ce règlement définirait les bénéficiaires potentiels de l'aide sans y inclure la communauté chypriote turque en tant qu'entité autonome.

30 La République de Chypre reproche à la Commission de traiter la communauté chypriote turque comme si elle constituait un pays tiers. Dans les dispositions litigieuses, la Commission qualifierait cette communauté de « bénéficiaire » des aides en cause, ce qui reviendrait à la considérer comme un pays tiers. En effet, en vertu de l'article 5 du règlement n° 389/2006 , les actions relevant de ce règlement seraient mises en œuvre conformément au titre IV de la deuxième partie du règlement financier. Dans l'article 166, paragraphe 1, sous a), du règlement financier, le terme « bénéficiaire » serait défini comme étant soit un « pays tiers » soit un « organisme désigné par un pays tiers ». Partant, la communauté chypriote turque n'étant pas un organisme désigné par un pays tiers, force serait de conclure que la Commission la considère comme un pays tiers.

32 En vertu des dispositions litigieuses, l'attributaire serait exempté « des droits de douane, des droits à l'importation, des redevances et de la TVA ou de toute autre taxe grevant les biens qui entrent dans la partie septentrionale de Chypre ». En outre, ces mêmes dispositions indiqueraient que « le bénéficiaire délivre à l'attributaire des lettres d'exemption de tous les droits et taxes d'importation », que « l'attributaire établit les documents nécessaires, notamment en matière d'exemption, conformément aux exigences fixées par les douanes et par les autres autorités compétentes » et qu'il est créé un régime applicable aux importations et aux exportations de biens qui sont intégrés dans le marché ou utilisés aux fins de ce dernier, aux licences d'importation, aux taxes d'importation ainsi qu'à la fiscalité des revenus du personnel étranger et local de l'attributaire.

33 De même, la Commission semblerait reconnaître que, dans les zones en cause, où le marché sera exécuté, il y a une législation et une monnaie autres que celles de la République de Chypre alors que, en vertu de l'article 299 CE et du protocole n° 10, les zones en cause font partie du territoire de la République de Chypre et que, partant, la souveraineté sur ces zones est réservée à la

République de Chypre. De ce fait, la communauté chypriote turque non seulement n'aurait pas la capacité juridique requise pour conclure une convention susceptible de produire des effets contraignants, mais n'aurait même pas qualité pour adopter des actes unilatéraux produisant des effets contraignants sur le territoire de la République de Chypre. Conformément au principe de souveraineté exprimé à l'article 2, paragraphe 1, de la charte des Nations unies, il appartiendrait en principe à chaque État de légiférer sur son territoire et, corrélativement, un État ne pourrait, en principe, unilatéralement imposer des règles obligatoires que sur son propre territoire (ordonnance du Tribunal du 3 juillet 2007, Commune de Champagne e.a./Conseil et Commission, T-212/02, non encore publiée au Recueil, point 89).

34 De surcroît, aux termes des dispositions litigieuses, la Commission coopérerait avec les « autorités » du « bénéficiaire », c'est-à-dire avec la RTCN. Or, une telle coopération serait contraire aux résolutions 541 (1983) et 550 (1984) susmentionnées du Conseil de sécurité des Nations unies. La Communauté serait liée par les obligations qui découlent de la charte des Nations unies (arrêt du Tribunal du 21 septembre 2005, Yusuf et Al Barakaat International Foundation/Conseil et Commission, T-306/01, Rec. p. II-3533, point 243). À cet égard, la résolution 550 (1984) exclurait toute forme de coopération avec les « autorités » de la RTCN ainsi que toute reconnaissance d'« actes » de ces « autorités », comme l'imposition de droits de douane, de taxes d'importation, de redevances, de TVA, et l'exploitation d'aéroports et de ports, etc. Dans son arrêt du 5 juillet 1994, Anastasiou e.a. (C-432/92, Rec. p. I-3087, point 40), la Cour aurait expressément exclu toute coopération avec les autorités d'une entité telle que celle établie dans la partie nord de Chypre. Dans son avis consultatif sur la Namibie, la Cour internationale de justice aurait, quant à elle, souligné que les États membres des Nations unies doivent s'abstenir « de tous actes et en particulier de toutes relations » susceptibles d'aider ou de renforcer des régimes illégaux [avis sur les conséquences juridiques pour les États de la présence continue de l'Afrique du Sud en Namibie (Sud-Ouest africain) nonobstant la résolution 276 (1970) du Conseil de sécurité, Rec. CIJ 1971, p. 16, point 133 (2)].

35 La Commission emploierait, dans les dispositions litigieuses, l'expression « biens et matériaux importés via la République de Chypre », laissant ainsi clairement entendre que les zones en cause ne feraient pas partie de la République de Chypre, ce qui serait contraire à la fois au droit international, selon lequel le territoire de la République de Chypre inclurait les zones en cause, et au droit communautaire primaire, à savoir l'article 299 CE et le protocole n° 10. En outre, la Commission ferait allusion au « personnel local de la communauté chypriote turque » et le distinguerait du « personnel expatrié ». En vertu de cette distinction, les Chypriotes grecs seraient des « expatriés », ce qui indiquerait forcément que, pour la Commission, la communauté chypriote turque a sa propre base étatique et sa propre nationalité.

36 Enfin, en prévoyant que le soumissionnaire doit « prendre connaissance du règlement de la Ligne verte et considérer les implications des mouvements de marchandises à destination et en provenance » des zones en cause, la Commission reconnaîtrait que des biens et des personnes physiques peuvent entrer dans les zones en cause et en sortir en passant par les ports et les aéroports qui opèrent illégalement dans ces zones. Ce faisant, la Commission manifesterait un manque de respect pour la souveraineté de la République de Chypre qui, dans l'exercice de ses droits souverains, d'une part, aurait déclaré en 1974 la fermeture des ports d'Ammochostos, de Karavostasio et de Keryneia situés dans les zones en cause et, d'autre part, aurait désigné comme seuls aéroports chypriotes ceux de Larnaca et de Paphos, de sorte que les aéroports créés dans les zones en cause fonctionneraient illégalement. De ce fait, la Commission violerait le droit international, en vertu duquel la réglementation de l'entrée dans les ports et aéroports constitue un droit souverain des États (arrêt de la Cour internationale de justice du 27 juin 1986 dans l'affaire des activités militaires et paramilitaires au Nicaragua et contre celui-ci, Rec. CIJ 1986, p. 111, point 213).

l'interprétation qu'elle donne des dispositions litigieuses. Or, cette interprétation serait manifestement erronée. En effet, les actes attaqués devraient être interprétés conformément au règlement n° 389/2006, aux termes duquel aucune autre prétendue autorité publique n'est reconnue dans les zones en cause.

39 Selon la Commission, il n'est pas possible de reconnaître de prétendues autres autorités publiques dans les zones en cause par le biais d'avis d'adjudication de marchés. Les dispositions litigieuses auraient simplement pour objet d'informer les soumissionnaires des conditions en vigueur dans les zones en cause, afin qu'ils soient en mesure d'évaluer avec précision leurs dépenses et de mieux préparer leurs offres. Parallèlement, la description complète des conditions locales protégerait la Commission, en tant que pouvoir adjudicateur, contre de futures complications juridiques en cas de mise en demeure de l'adjudicataire : celui-ci ne pourrait justifier ni un retard en invoquant que les conditions locales lui créent des obstacles insurmontables dans l'exécution du marché et que ces conditions locales constituent un événement de force majeure, ni une modification imprévue des conditions qu'il connaissait ou devait connaître lorsqu'il a signé le contrat. La simple description des conditions locales dans le texte d'un tel avis ne pourrait aucunement être considérée comme un acte juridique officiel de reconnaissance de prétendues autorités publiques dans les zones en cause.

40 À supposer même que la description des conditions locales faite dans les dispositions litigieuses soit erronée et ne donne pas une image exacte des difficultés que risque de rencontrer l'adjudicataire lors de l'exécution de ses obligations contractuelles, cela ne signifierait pas forcément que les avis sont contraires au règlement n° 389/2006 et aux autres dispositions mentionnées par la République de Chypre.

41 Enfin, s'agissant du moyen tiré dans les affaires autres que l'affaire T–54/08 R de ce que les actes attaqués n'auraient pas été publiés au Journal officiel de l'Union européenne, la Commission allègue que ce moyen résulte apparemment d'un malentendu, lesdits actes ayant tous été publiés au Supplément au Journal officiel. À cet égard, elle renvoie aux copies jointes en annexe à ses observations déposées dans ces affaires.

– Sur l'urgence et la balance des intérêts en présence

42 La République de Chypre estime qu'il existe un grave danger pour sa souveraineté, son indépendance, son intégrité territoriale et son unité que la Commission reconnaisse l'entité sécessionniste dans les zones en cause et/ou encourage sa reconnaissance et/ou la soutienne financièrement, alors que cette entité doit son existence à l'utilisation de la violence par la Turquie et à des actes sécessionnistes illégaux qui ont été condamnés par l'Organisation des Nations unies et par la Communauté. Cela pourrait constituer un précédent pour des actes analogues de reconnaissance et/ou d'encouragement et/ou de soutien accomplis en faveur de l'entité sécessionniste par certains États membres de l'Union européenne et/ou par des pays tiers.

43 Le préjudice éventuel serait irréparable, car non indemnisable, en ce qu'il ne pourrait faire l'objet d'une compensation financière ultérieure (ordonnance du président du Tribunal du 20 juillet 2000, Esedra/Commission, T–169/00 R, Rec. p. II–2951, point 44).

44 Selon la République de Chypre, toute réparation du préjudice deviendra impossible si la Commission peut attribuer les marchés et/ou en commencer l'exécution aux conditions décrites dans les dispositions litigieuses. L'intérêt général de la République de Chypre ne saurait se comparer à l'intérêt économique d'un soumissionnaire lésé par les conditions d'un avis de marché et dont le préjudice économique peut être compensé soit par une indemnisation financière soit en lui permettant de participer à une nouvelle procédure de marché. Partant, la jurisprudence selon laquelle il y a ni urgence ni préjudice irréparable en raison de la probabilité de l'exécution complète ou quasi complète du contrat (ordonnance du président du Tribunal du 27 juillet 2004, TQ3 Travel Solutions Belgium/Commission, T–148/04 R, Rec. p. II–3027, points 53 et 55) serait dénuée de pertinence en l'espèce.

45 Par ailleurs, étant donné la nature du préjudice éventuel et le fait que les marchés peuvent être attribués et même exécutés avant le prononcé des arrêts dans les affaires au principal, la République de Chypre fait observer que, si les mesures demandées ne sont pas adoptées, la pleine efficacité de ces arrêts sera compromise [ordonnance du président de la Cour du 25 mars 1999, Willeme/Commission, C–65/99 P(R), Rec. p. I–1857].

46 S'agissant de la mise en balance des intérêts, la République de Chypre fait valoir que l'exécution des marchés selon les dispositions litigieuses créerait des faits accomplis qui lui causeraient un préjudice grave et irréparable. En revanche, le pouvoir adjudicateur ne courrait aucun risque. Le préjudice éventuel, uniquement dans l'hypothèse où le pouvoir adjudicateur serait contraint de verser des indemnités aux candidats soumissionnaires, serait d'ordre financier et donc non comparable à celui que subirait la République de Chypre si les mesures provisoires n'étaient pas prises. En toute hypothèse, un tel préjudice ne se produirait pas, puisque, aux termes de l'article 101, premier alinéa, du règlement financier, le pouvoir adjudicateur pourrait, jusqu'à la signature du contrat, soit renoncer au marché, soit annuler la procédure de passation du marché, sans que les candidats ou les soumissionnaires puissent prétendre à une quelconque indemnisation.

48 En ce qui concerne la balance des intérêts, la Commission soutient que l'octroi des sursis à exécution sollicités causerait un préjudice grave aux intérêts de tiers qui ne sont pas parties aux litiges et qui n'ont pas été entendus par le juge des référés, à savoir les habitants des zones en cause. Tout retard dans la mise en œuvre des mesures concernées par les contrats pérenniserait le sous-développement structurel et économique de ces zones et les conditions de vie difficiles de leurs habitants.

49 Or, il serait de jurisprudence bien établie que des mesures provisoires ne sont, en principe, pas accordées lorsque leur octroi peut avoir une incidence grave sur les intérêts de tiers qui n'ont pas été entendus par le juge des référés, de telles mesures ne pouvant se justifier que s'il apparaissait que, en leur absence, le requérant serait exposé à une situation susceptible de mettre en péril son existence même (ordonnances du président du Tribunal du 6 juillet 1993, CCE Vittel et CE Pierval/Commission, T-12/93 R, Rec. p. II-785, point 20, et du 17 janvier 2001, Petrolessence et SG2R/Commission, T-342/00 R, Rec. p. II-67, points 51 et 53 ; voir également ordonnance du président de la Cour du 22 mai 1978, Simmenthal/Commission, 92/78 R, Rec. p. 1129, points 18 et 19).

Appréciation du juge des référés

– Sur la recevabilité

50 Selon une jurisprudence constante, la recevabilité du recours au principal ne doit pas, en principe, être examinée dans le cadre d'une procédure de référé sous peine de préjuger l'affaire au principal. Ce n'est que quand l'irrecevabilité manifeste du recours au principal sur lequel se greffe la demande en référé est soulevée qu'il peut s'avérer nécessaire d'établir l'existence de certains éléments permettant de conclure, à première vue, à la recevabilité d'un tel recours [voir, en ce sens, ordonnance du président de la Cour du 12 octobre 2000, Federación de Cofradías de Pescadores de Guipúzcoa e.a./Conseil, C-300/00 P(R), Rec. p. I-8797, point 34 ; ordonnances du président du Tribunal du 15 janvier 2001, Stauner e.a./Parlement et Commission, T-236/00 R, Rec. p. II-15, point 42, et du 8 août 2002, VVG International e.a./Commission, T-155/02 R, Rec. p. II-3239, point 18], un tel examen de la recevabilité du recours au principal étant nécessairement sommaire, compte tenu du caractère urgent de la procédure de référé (ordonnance Federación de Cofradías de Pescadores de Guipúzcoa e.a./Conseil, précitée, point 35).

51 En effet, dans le cadre d'une demande en référé, la recevabilité du recours au principal ne peut être appréciée que de prime abord, et le juge des référés ne doit déclarer cette demande irrecevable que si la recevabilité du recours au principal peut être totalement exclue. En effet, statuer sur la recevabilité au stade du référé lorsque celle-ci n'est pas, prima facie, totalement exclue reviendrait à préjuger la décision du Tribunal statuant au principal (ordonnances du président du Tribunal Petrolessence et SG2R/Commission, point 49 supra, point 17 ; du 19 décembre 2001, Government of Gibraltar/Commission, T-195/01 R et T-207/01 R, Rec. p. II-3915, point 47, et du 7 juillet 2004, Região autónoma dos Açores/Conseil, T-37/04 R, Rec. p. II-2153, point 110).

52 En l'espèce, la Commission, loin de dénoncer l'irrecevabilité manifeste des recours en annulation sur lesquels se greffent les demandes en référé, s'est bornée à exprimer ses doutes à cet égard, tout en se réservant le droit de soulever la question de la recevabilité dans le cadre des procédures au principal. Dans ces circonstances, et eu égard au contenu des actes attaqués, il n'y a pas lieu pour le juge des référés d'examiner dans le cadre de la présente procédure de référé les doutes avancés par la Commission au regard de la recevabilité des recours au principal (voir, en ce sens, ordonnance du président de la Cour du 17 mars 1986, Royaume-Uni/Parlement, 23/86 R, Rec. p. 1085, point 21).

– Sur le fond

53 Il y a lieu de relever que les États membres sont responsables des intérêts considérés comme généraux sur le plan national, tels que ceux relatifs à la défense de leur souveraineté nationale. Par conséquent, ils peuvent, dans le cadre d'une procédure de référé, faire état d'un préjudice que la mesure communautaire contestée serait susceptible de causer à ces intérêts (voir, en ce sens, ordonnances de la Cour du 29 juin 1993, Allemagne/Conseil, C–280/93 R, Rec. p. I–3667, point 27, et du 12 juillet 1996, Royaume-Uni/Commission, C–180/96 R, Rec. p. I–3903, point 85).

54 En l'espèce, il est constant entre les parties que la République de Chypre est la seule entité étatique de l'île reconnue au niveau international et que les zones en cause font partie de son territoire et relèvent de sa seule souveraineté.

55 La République de Chypre considère néanmoins que les actes attaqués, notamment les dispositions litigieuses, ont, en substance, pour conséquence de traiter – en violation flagrante du droit international et du droit communautaire, notamment de l'article 299 CE, du protocole n° 10 et du règlement n° 389/2006 – la communauté chypriote turque de la même manière qu'une entité étatique indépendante. La République de Chypre estime que la Commission reconnaît ainsi au moins implicitement l'existence dans les zones en cause d'« autorités » qui ne relèvent pas du gouvernement chypriote ainsi que l'existence d'une législation et d'une monnaie autres que les siennes, tout en acceptant le transport de personnes ou de marchandises via des ports et des aéroports que, dans l'exercice de sa souveraineté, elle a déclaré fermés ou dont elle n'autorise pas le fonctionnement. Ce comportement de la Commission risquerait de compromettre sa souveraineté, son indépendance, son intégrité territoriale, son unité et son ordre constitutionnel.

56 Il s'avère donc que le préjudice invoqué par la République de Chypre, à savoir le risque d'une violation de sa souveraineté étatique, consiste précisément en la prétendue méconnaissance, par les actes attaqués, du droit international et du droit communautaire.

57 Eu égard à cette particularité du cas d'espèce, il convient d'examiner conjointement la condition relative à la présence d'un fumus boni juris et celle relative à l'urgence.

58 S'agissant de l'interdépendance entre ces deux conditions, il a certes été jugé que l'urgence doit d'autant plus être prise en considération que le fumus boni juris paraît sérieux (voir, en ce sens, ordonnance Autriche/Conseil, point 21 supra, point 110). Toutefois, la violation éventuelle d'une norme supérieure de droit par un acte ne saurait suffire à établir, par elle-même, la gravité et le caractère irréparable d'un éventuel préjudice causé par cette violation [voir, en ce sens, ordonnances du président de la Cour du 25 juin 1998, Antilles néerlandaises/Conseil, C–159/98 P (R), Rec. p. I–4147, point 62, et Pays-Bas/Parlement et Conseil, point 19 supra, point 45].

59 Par conséquent, il ne suffit pas pour la République de Chypre d'alléguer une atteinte flagrante au droit international et au droit communautaire pour établir la réunion des conditions de l'urgence, à savoir le caractère grave et irréparable du préjudice qui pourrait découler de cette atteinte, mais elle est tenue de prouver les faits qui sont censés fonder la perspective d'un tel préjudice [voir, en ce sens, ordonnance du président de la Cour du 14 décembre 1999, HFB e.a./Commission, C–335/99 P (R), Rec. p. I–8705, point 67 ; ordonnances du président du Tribunal du 15 novembre 2001, Duales System Deutschland/Commission, T–151/01 R, Rec. p. II–3295, point 188, du 25 juin 2002, B/Commission, T–34/02 R, Rec. p. II–2803, point 86, et du 7 juin 2007, IMS/Commission, T–346/06 R, non encore publiée au Recueil, points 121 et 123, et la jurisprudence citée].

60 Compte tenu de ces considérations, il y a lieu d'examiner tour à tour les différents préjudices invoqués par la République de Chypre.

61 Premièrement, s'agissant du préjudice qui serait constitué par le fait que le texte même des actes attaqués exprime une reconnaissance illégale de la RTCN dans les zones en cause, la Commission a relevé, à juste titre, que ce préjudice s'est déjà produit de façon irréversible lors de la publication desdits actes. À supposer même que les actes attaqués enfreignent effectivement le droit international et le droit communautaire, les sursis à exécution demandés ne seraient donc pas de nature à supprimer rétroactivement le préjudice invoqué. Les mesures provisoires n'étant pas de nature à éviter ce préjudice, il ne saurait être question d'urgence (voir, en ce sens, ordonnance Autriche/Conseil, point 21 supra, points 112 et 113).

62 Deuxièmement, la République de Chypre affirme qu'elle risque de subir un préjudice du fait que le mauvais exemple donné par la Commission pourrait inciter des États membres de la Communauté ou des pays tiers à se comporter pareillement en adoptant, eux aussi, des actes de reconnaissance ou de soutien à l'égard de la RTCN.

63 À cet égard, il suffit de constater à l'instar de la Commission que, à supposer établie l'illégalité de son comportement, il s'agirait là d'un préjudice purement hypothétique, étant donné que sa survenance dépend d'événements futurs et incertains. Or, un tel préjudice ne saurait justifier l'octroi des sursis à exécution demandés (voir, en ce sens, ordonnance Government of Gibraltar/Commission, point 51 supra, points 101 et 105). La République de Chypre n'a produit aucun élément susceptible d'établir, avec un degré de probabilité suffisant, l'imminence des conséquences préjudiciables qu'elle craint. Elle a plutôt admis, en réponse à une question posée par le juge des référés, qu'aucun pays n'avait déclaré publiquement qu'il attribuait au texte des actes attaqués l'interprétation qu'elle lui donnait ou qu'il était disposé à suivre l'exemple supposé de la Commission.

64 Troisièmement, les demandes en référé visent le préjudice causé par la prétendue violation du droit international et du droit communautaire pendant le déroulement des procédures de passation des marchés en cause, notamment à la suite de l'attribution des marchés par la signature des contrats prévus à cet effet et au cours de la mise en œuvre de ces contrats selon les conditions décrites dans les dispositions litigieuses. Ce préjudice est caractérisé par l'application effective des dispositions litigieuses qui entraîne, selon la République de Chypre, un soutien matériel et la reconnaissance illégale, en pratique et à l'instigation de la Commission, de la RTCN et d'autorités ainsi que de réglementations autres que les siennes dans les zones en cause. S'agissant de ce préjudice, il ne saurait être prétendu qu'il s'est déjà irréversiblement produit, ni qu'il est de nature purement hypothétique.

65 Il y a donc lieu d'examiner si la République de Chypre est parvenue à établir, à suffisance de droit, que ce préjudice spécifique avait un caractère grave et irréparable et que la condition relative à l'existence d'un fumus boni juris était, à première vue, satisfaite en ce qui concerne la prétendue illégalité des dispositions litigieuses et de leur mise en œuvre.

66 À cet égard, il convient de rappeler que la Cour, résumant la situation juridique de l'île de Chypre dans son arrêt Anastasiou e.a., point 34 supra (points 40 et 47), a, d'une part, expressément exclu toute coopération administrative avec les autorités d'une entité telle que celle établie dans la partie nord de Chypre, qui n'est reconnue ni par la Communauté ni par les États membres, ceux-ci ne reconnaissant d'autre État chypriote que la République de Chypre, et, d'autre part, jugé que la Communauté n'avait pas le droit d'intervenir dans les affaires intérieures de la République de Chypre, les problèmes résultant de la partition de fait de l'île relevant exclusivement de celle-ci, seul État internationalement reconnu.

67 Or, ainsi que le fait valoir la République de Chypre, le fait pour une institution communautaire telle que la Commission de prévoir dans des textes officiels, destinés à être mis en œuvre dans le cadre d'activités déployées dans les zones en cause, que le pouvoir adjudicateur est la Communauté, représentée par la Commission, « au nom et pour le compte de la communauté chypriote turque » (point 5 de chacun des actes attaqués), pourrait, à première vue, être interprété comme reflétant un soutien à l'entité détentrice des pouvoirs politiques réels dans les zones en cause, d'autant plus que la communauté chypriote turque est considérée comme bénéficiaire de l'aide communautaire octroyée, et ce apparemment sur le modèle des pays tiers qui bénéficient normalement de ce type d'aide.

68 Il convient d'ajouter que les dispositions litigieuses paraissent prévoir que l'exécution, dans les zones en cause, des marchés attribués doit avoir lieu dans le respect d'une législation et d'une monnaie autres que celles de la République de Chypre, l'attributaire étant exempté des taxes grevant les biens qui entrent dans les zones en cause, ce qui revient à ce qu'un régime propre à la communauté chypriote turque et applicable aux importations et aux exportations de biens est pris en compte, tout comme d'ailleurs une fiscalité particulière des revenus du personnel étranger et local de l'attributaire dans les zones en cause. En outre, il est question d'autorités de cette communauté ainsi que de l'existence de certains actes, comme l'imposition de droits de douane et de taxes. Enfin, la mention de « matériaux importés via la République de Chypre » laisse, à première vue, entendre que les zones en cause ne font pas partie de la République de Chypre, alors que le droit international, l'article 299 CE et le protocole n° 10 prévoient que le territoire de la République de Chypre inclut les zones en cause.

69 Si l'argumentation de la République de Chypre peut donc apparaître suffisamment pertinente pour caractériser un fumus boni juris, on ne saurait, en revanche, affirmer à première vue que la Commission a commis une violation manifeste et grave du droit international et communautaire, de sorte que le prétendu préjudice résultant de cette violation ne saurait être qualifié de grave (voir, par analogie, ordonnance de la Cour du 29 juin 1994, Commission/Grèce, C-120/94 R, Rec. p. I-3037, points 91 et 92).

70 À cet égard, il convient de constater que les actes attaqués, malgré leur caractère officiel, n'ont pas de vocation politique intrinsèque et n'ont pas, notamment, vocation à aborder la problématique de l'éventuelle réunification de l'île de Chypre. Ils ne comportent pas non plus de déclaration par laquelle la Commission reconnaîtrait expressément la communauté chypriote turque ou la RTCN en tant qu'entité détentrice du pouvoir politique dans les zones en cause.

71 Il s'agit de textes de nature technique destinés à fournir aux soumissionnaires des informations utiles leur permettant de décider, en connaissance de cause, de leur participation à la procédure de soumission et de préparer leurs dossiers d'offre. Dans cette optique, il apparaît que les actes attaqués, en employant les formules critiquées ci-dessus, font état de la situation des rapports de force actuels, en vue d'informer les soumissionnaires de la manière la plus complète et fidèle possible, certes de façon ambiguë, mais sans pour autant révéler une atteinte délibérée et manifeste à la souveraineté de la République de Chypre.

72 En particulier, il importe de relever que les actes attaqués contiennent des déclarations expresses, univoques et inconditionnelles aux termes desquelles, d'une part, ces actes n'impliquent la reconnaissance d'aucune autorité publique autre que le gouvernement chypriote dans les zones en cause et, d'autre part, ils obligent les soumissionnaires et les adjudicataires de ne prendre aucune mesure susceptible d'impliquer une telle reconnaissance. Dans ces circonstances, il ne saurait, à première vue, être considéré que les actes attaqués constituent une atteinte grave à la souveraineté de la République de Chypre.

73 En outre, les actes attaqués étant tous explicitement fondés sur le règlement n° 389/2006, il y a lieu de rappeler que ce règlement prévoit, en son article 1er, paragraphe 3, que l'octroi du soutien financier en question ne constitue pas une reconnaissance d'une autorité publique autre que le gouvernement chypriote dans les zones en cause. De plus, ces actes rappellent que les soumissionnaires et les attributaires doivent être conscients des contextes politique, diplomatique et juridique caractérisant l'île de Chypre et s'abstenir de tout contact de nature politique avec les deux communautés.

74 Enfin, le règlement n° 389/2006 qui a été adopté à l'unanimité, et partant avec l'approbation de la République de Chypre, et dont la légalité n'a pas été remise en cause par celle-ci, emploie, quant à lui, l'expression « communauté chypriote turque » – notamment dans son titre, son considérant 2 ainsi que son article 1er, paragraphe 1, et son article 2, quatrième tiret – d'une manière ambiguë telle qu'il ne saurait être exclu, au moins à première vue, que cette expression, tenant compte de la situation des rapports de force actuels, vise à désigner la partie de la population chypriote regroupée dans les seules zones en cause. Or, le principe d'un soutien financier communautaire à destination de cette communauté n'est pas contesté par la République de Chypre. Par ailleurs, l'article 1er, paragraphe 2, du règlement n° 389/2006 prévoit expressément que ce soutien bénéficie, notamment, aux collectivités locales et aux instances remplissant des fonctions d'intérêt général dans les zones en cause, ce qui semble impliquer, au moins à première vue et compte tenu de la situation prévalant sur l'île, certains contacts avec des entités chargées de fonctions administratives dans la mise en œuvre dudit soutien.

75 S'agissant de l'invocation de l'arrêt Anastasiou e.a. aux points 34 et 66 ci-dessus qui interdirait toute coopération administrative avec la RTCN et toute ingérence dans les affaires intérieures de la République de Chypre, force est de constater que ce ne serait pas la Commission elle-même qui, lors de l'exécution des actes attaqués, procéderait à une coopération administrative directe avec l'une ou l'autre des « autorités » de la RTCN. Il ne saurait non plus être prétendu que ces actes interviendraient directement dans les affaires intérieures de la République de Chypre.

76 Il résulte de ce qui précède que les illégalités dénoncées par la République de Chypre dans le présent contexte n'entachent que la rédaction et la mise en œuvre des modalités du soutien financier visant à encourager le développement économique de la communauté chypriote turque, dans le cadre et au titre du règlement n° 389/2006 , et que ces illégalités ne sauraient être qualifiées de graves.

77 Par conséquent, le préjudice causé par ces illégalités, à savoir la violation de la souveraineté de la République de Chypre, ne saurait non plus être considéré comme grave.

78 Du reste, ce préjudice n'apparaît pas irréparable. En effet, eu égard à la nature exclusivement morale du préjudice, le juge des référés estime qu'une éventuelle annulation des actes attaqués au terme des procédures au principal en constituerait une réparation suffisante. En effet, de tels arrêts d'annulation mettraient formellement en évidence que la Commission a fait preuve d'un comportement illégal en matière de passation de marchés en portant atteinte à la souveraineté de la République de Chypre, ce qui donnerait satisfaction à cette dernière.

79 Cette solution est confirmée par la mise en balance des intérêts en cause. Ainsi que la Commission l'a relevé à juste titre (voir points 48 et 49 ci-dessus), l'octroi des sursis à exécution sollicités porterait atteinte aux intérêts de tiers qui ne sont pas parties à la présente procédure et n'ont pas été entendus par le juge des référés. En effet, les mesures d'aide communautaire prévues par le règlement n° 389/2006 et lancées par le biais des actes attaqués – relatifs à l'assistance technique dans le domaine écologique, dans le secteur rural, en matière de télécommunications et dans le secteur de l'enseignement – sont d'une grande importance pour la qualité de la vie des habitants des zones en cause. Tout retard dans la mise en œuvre de ces mesures risquerait de pérenniser le sous-développement structurel et économique de ces zones et les conditions de vie difficiles de leurs habitants, d'autant plus que l'aide communautaire vise, aux termes de l'article 2 du même règlement, la promotion du développement social et économique, notamment rural, le développement des infrastructures ainsi que le rapprochement entre la communauté chypriote turque et l'Union européenne.

80 Au vu de tout ce qui précède, il y a lieu de conclure que la condition relative à l'urgence n'est pas remplie, de sorte que les présentes demandes en référé doivent être rejetées, sans qu'il soit nécessaire de se prononcer sur la question de savoir si la République de Chypre conserve un intérêt à demander le sursis à l'exécution de l'avis EuropeAid/125051/D/SUP/CY faisant l'objet de l'affaire T–54/08 R, après que cet avis a été déclaré infructueux (voir point 9 ci-dessus).

Par ces motifs,

ordonne :

1) Les affaires T–54/08 R, T–87/08 R, T–88/08 R et T–91/08 R à T–93/08 R sont jointes aux fins de la présente ordonnance.

2) Les demandes en référé sont rejetées.

3) Les dépens sont réservés.

Order

Facts and procedure

1 On 13 June 2007, the Commission published a Service Procurement Notice for consultancy services to prepare the Turkish Cypriot community for the implementation of the acquis communautaire in the field of rural development policy – call for tenders EuropeAid/125241/C/SER/CY ('the disputed tender procedure').

2 Under the call for tenders, in order to be short-listed, potential candidates for the contract were to apply by 13 July 2007, demonstrating that they fulfilled a number of selection and award criteria, including: economic and financial capacity (turnover of more than EUR 1 million); professional capacity (more than 10 permanent staff working in the field of specialisation); and technical capacity (experience in agricultural rural development programmes).

3 On 31 August 2007, the Commission published the names of the three short-listed candidates, namely: (i) Agriconsulting Europe S.A. ('Agriconsulting'); (ii) Company H; and (iii) Vakakis International S.A. ('Vakakis').

4 On 5 October 2007, the Commission sent an invitation to tender to Vakakis. The deadline for receipt of the tenders was 23 November 2007. That deadline was subsequently extended to 28 November 2007. The invitation to tender included instructions to tenderers specific to the procedure in question, a Draft Contract Agreement and Special Conditions, administrative compliance and evaluation grids, and reference to the Practical Guide to Contract procedures for EC external actions of October 2007 ('the PRAG rules').

5 On 27 November 2007, Vakakis, on behalf of a consortium of seven partners, submitted a detailed tender to the Commission.

6 On 5 December 2007, the Commission wrote to Vakakis seeking clarification of the Vakakis tender proposal. In particular, the Commission sought clarification as to whether Mr H, an expert mentioned in Vakakis' list of non-key experts, was aware that he had been proposed by Vakakis as a non-key expert, and that he was willing to work for the required period.

7 Vakakis responded before the deadline set by the Commission of 6 December 2007 at 14.00 hrs, stating that the Terms of Reference for the project in question did not require the tenderer to provide CVs and letters of commitment in relation to non-key experts. In addition, Vakakis responded that they had put forward only a list of names of experts with whom Vakakis had worked in the past and whom Vakakis could call upon as required. Vakakis further responded that their tender was based on the understanding that non-key experts would be proposed and selected only after the award of the contract, and that, although it had an agreement with the individuals listed in the indicative list of non-key experts to the effect that their names could be put forward indicatively where the position foreseen for them was not that of a key expert, no prior communication or arrangement had been made with them in relation to the specific project in question.

8 On the same day, 6 December 2007, the Commission wrote to Vakakis informing them that the Vakakis consortium would not be invited to interview ('the 6 December decision').

9 On 11 December 2007 Vakakis wrote to the Commission stating that it believed that its exclusion had been based on Vakakis' inclusion of Mr H in the list of non-key experts whilst it understood that Mr H had also been put forward as a key expert in a competing bid. According to Vakakis, exclusion based on this reason constituted an incorrect application of the instructions to tenderers and an infringement of the PRAG rules.

10 On 18 December 2007, the head of unit A3 in the Commission Directorate-General for Enlargement responded that, under the PRAG rules, the work of the evaluation committee was confidential and, furthermore, stressed that the contracting authority, in line with the instructions to tenderers, 'intends to interview two senior experts of each tenderer except for tenderers whose offer receive[s] an insufficient score in the initial technical evaluation'.

11 By letter of 19 December 2007, the Commission informed Agriconsulting that it had been awarded the contract under the disputed tender procedure, subject to the submission by Agriconsulting of evidence relating to Agriconsulting's financial and economic capacity, as well as its technical and professional capacity, according to the selection criteria specified in the procurement notice. That evidence was subsequently provided by Agriconsulting to the Commission.

12 On 21 December 2007, Vakakis received by fax an undated letter from the Commission informing it that it had not been successful in the tender because the technical offer had been considered not to meet the technical criteria sufficiently closely ('the 21 December decision').

13 On the same day, Vakakis wrote to the Commission stating that it believed that there had been administrative irregularities in the disputed tender procedure and questioning the evaluations it had received. By the same letter, Vakakis appealed against the 21 December decision in accordance with Article 16 of the instructions to tenderers. Under the PRAG rules, the Commission has 90 days from the date of receipt of the application to complete the administrative appeal.

14 By application lodged with the Registry of the Court of First Instance on 1 February 2008, registered under number T-41/08, Vakakis brought an action for annulment under Article 230 EC in which it seeks annulment of the 6 December decision and the 21 December decision. By the same application, Vakakis seeks to obtain from the Court of First Instance an order that the Commission provide certain documents relating to the activities of the evaluation committee and to the establishment of the short-list of tenderers.

15 By separate document lodged with the Registry of the Court of First Instance on the same day, registered under number T-41/08 R, Vakakis also made an application for adoption of interim measures and the suspension of the operation of the 6 December decision and of the 21 December decision under Articles 242 EC and 243 EC.

16 By e-mail of 8 February 2008, the Commission informed Agriconsulting that one of the unsuccessful tenderers had contested the disputed tender procedure before the Court of First Instance. In the same e-mail, the Commission also informed Agriconsulting of its intention not to sign the contract before the decision of this Court on the application for interim measures.

17 By a document lodged at the Registry of the Court of First Instance on 18 February 2008, the Commission submitted its written observations on the application for interim measures.

18 By a document lodged at the Registry of the Court of First Instance on 18 February 2008, Agriconsulting applied for leave to intervene in support of the form of order sought by the Commission.

Forms of order sought

19 The applicant requests the President of the Court of First Instance:

– to declare this application admissible;

– to suspend the 6 December decision;

– to suspend the 21 December decision;

– to propose, to the extent that it lies within the power of the Court so to do, the resumption of the technical evaluation of the tenders submitted in the context of the disputed tender procedure;

– in the event that a contract should be awarded before the application for interim measures has been heard, to suspend the performance of any contract arising from the disputed tender procedure, until such time as the main application before this Court has been decided upon;

– pursuant to Article 65(b) of the Rules of Procedure of the Court of First Instance, to request the Commission to provide certain documents in relation to the activities of the evaluation committee established to review the tenders submitted in the context of the disputed tender procedure as well as the establishment of the short-list of tenderers;

– to adopt all other necessary measures to eliminate the effects of the disputed conduct of the Commission and to take adequate steps to restore the applicant to its original position, or to make any additional order which the President considers necessary.

20 The relief sought by the applicant, although clearly referred to in the appropriate section of its application in the terms set out above, is in fact stated elsewhere in the application to comprise 'the suspension of the continuation of procurement procedure EuropeAid/125241/C/SER/CY, or the suspension of any contract deriving from that procedure'.

21 The Commission contends that the President of the Court of First Instance should:

– dismiss the application for interim measures;

– order the applicant to pay the costs incurred by the Commission.

Law

22 Under Articles 242 EC and 243 EC, in conjunction with Article 225(1) EC, the Court of First Instance may, if it considers that circumstances so require, order that application of the act contested before it be suspended or prescribe any necessary interim measures.

23 Article 104(2) of the Rules of Procedure of the Court of First Instance provides that applications for interim relief must state the circumstances giving rise to urgency and the pleas of fact and law establishing a prima facie case for the relief applied for. Those conditions are cumulative, so that an application for such relief must be dismissed if one of them is not fulfilled (order of the President of the Court of Justice in Case C-268/96 P(R) SCK and FNK v Commission [1996] ECR I-4971, paragraph 30, and order of the President of the Court of First Instance in Case T-350/00 R Free Trade Foods v Commission [2001] ECR II-493, paragraph 32). The Court hearing the application must also, where appropriate, weigh up the competing interests (order of the President of the Court of Justice in Case C-445/00 R Austria v Council [2001] ECR I-1461, paragraph 73).

24 In addition, in the context of that overall examination, the judge hearing the application has a wide discretion and is free to determine, having regard to the specific circumstances of the case, the manner and order in which those various conditions are to be examined, there being no rule of Community law imposing a pre-established scheme of analysis within which the need to order interim measures must be analysed and assessed (order of the President of the Court of Justice in Case C-149/95 P(R) Commission v Atlantic Container Line and Others [1995] ECR I–2165, paragraph 23, and order of the President of the Court of Justice of 3 April 2007 in Case C-459/06 P (R) Vischim v Commission, not published in the ECR, paragraph 25).

25 Furthermore, in the context of that overall examination, the court dealing with the application must exercise the broad discretion enjoyed by it to determine the manner in which those various conditions are to be examined in the light of the specific circumstances of each case (order of the President of the Court of Justice in Case C-393/96 P(R) Antonissen v Commission and Council [1997] ECR I-441, paragraph 28).

26 The relief sought must additionally be provisional inasmuch as it must not prejudge the points of law or fact in issue or invalidate in advance the effects of the decision subsequently to be given in the main action (order in Commission v Atlantic Container Line and Others, paragraph 22).

27 In the present case it is necessary to consider, first of all, to what extent the application for interim relief is admissible.

The admissibility of the application for interim relief

Locus standi

– Arguments of the parties

28 In its observations on the application for interim measures, the Commission submits that the entire application is inadmissible since the contested decisions are not addressed to the applicant and are not of direct and individual concern to it. According to the Commission, it is clear from the tender submitted by Vakakis on 27 November 2007 that the bid was made not on behalf of Vakakis International S.A. but rather on behalf of the consortium composed of seven companies listed therein of which the applicant was merely a member. The Commission further argues that the reason why correspondence with the consortium was conducted through Vakakis was that Vakakis had been indicated in section 2 of the Service Tender Submission Form as being the contact person for the consortium. According to the Commission, it follows that, notwithstanding the fact that the decisions in question were sent to Vakakis International S.A., such decisions were in fact addressed to the consortium as a whole and not merely to the applicant.

29 The Commission further contends that when an offer is made on behalf of a consortium, the bid can be seen only as an indivisible whole. Hence, only the consortium as such or an individual member duly authorised to represent the consortium has an interest in challenging the decision rejecting its tender.

30 Finally, according to the Commission, in this case the application is brought by the applicant on its own behalf, the other members of the consortium are not party to the action, nor is there any indication that the other members of the consortium have authorised the applicant to act on their behalf.

31 As stated in the covering letter accompanying the technical offer submitted to the Commission by Vakakis on 27 November 2007, that offer was submitted by Vakakis on behalf of a consortium comprising a number of undertakings, and in the letter Vakakis was indicated as ‘leader’ of the consortium. The cover page of the Technical Offer document indicates that the offer is presented by ‘Vakakis International S.A. in association with’ a number of partners.

32 The applicant claims, on the other hand, that the 21 December decision is addressed directly to Vakakis and, therefore, that it has standing under the terms of the fourth paragraph of Article 230 EC. As far as the 6 December decision is concerned, this decision is addressed to Vakakis as leader of the consortium. Accordingly, in the applicant's view, Vakakis must be considered to have standing either as the direct addressee of the decision or as a member of a closed class of seven known members of the consortium and to be directly affected by the decision to exclude it or the consortium.

– Findings of the President of the Court of First Instance

33 By virtue of the first subparagraph of Article 104(1) of the Rules of Procedure, an application to suspend the operation of any measure is admissible only if the applicant is challenging that measure in proceedings before the Court of First Instance. This rule requires that the main action from which the application for interim measures is derived may be effectively examined by the Court of First Instance.

34 According to settled case-law the issue of the admissibility of the main application should not, in principle, be examined in proceedings relating to an application for interim measures. Where, however, as in this case, it is contended that the main application from which the application for interim measures is derived is manifestly inadmissible, it may prove necessary to establish the existence of certain factors which would justify the prima facie conclusion that the main application is admissible (orders of the President of the Court of Justice in Case 221/86 R Groupe des droites européennes and Front national v Parliament [1986] ECR 2969, paragraph 19, and in Case 376/87 R Distrivet v Council [1988] ECR 209, paragraph 21; order of the President of the Court of First Instance in Case T-222/99 R Martinez and de Gaulle v Parliament [1999] ECR II-3397, paragraph 60).

35 In this case, the President of the Court considers that, based on the observations of the Commission, it is necessary to ascertain whether the application for annulment is likewise manifestly inadmissible.

36 The fourth paragraph of Article 230 EC provides that any natural or legal person may institute proceedings against a decision addressed to that person or against a decision which, although in the form of a regulation or a decision addressed to another person, is of direct and individual concern to the former.

37 The applicant is seeking annulment of decisions which are either directly addressed to it, or are addressed to it in its role as member and representative of a consortium, whose membership is identifiable in a closed class of seven undertakings.

38 Without prejudice to whether each of the two decisions in question constitutes a challengeable act for the purposes of Article 230 EC, therefore, such decisions, which, together, have the effect of excluding Vakakis and the other six members of the consortium from the disputed tender procedure, are prima facie liable to be of direct and individual concern to Vakakis.

39 Accordingly, the President finds that, as far as the locus standi of the applicant is concerned, prima facie the application for annulment is not manifestly inadmissible and that Vakakis must accordingly be allowed to bring the present proceedings for interim measures before this Court.

Compliance with the formal conditions concerning the documents lodged by the parties

40 It should be noted that the applicant in its application makes references in a general manner to its pleadings in the main proceedings.

41 Since failure to comply with the Rules of Procedure constitutes an absolute bar to proceedings, it is necessary for the President to consider of his own motion whether the relevant provisions of those Rules have been complied with.

42 Article 104(2) of the Rules of Procedure provides that applications for interim measures must state the pleas of fact and law establishing a prima facie case for the interim measures applied for.

43 Article 104(3) of the Rules of Procedure states that the application for interim relief is to be made by a separate document and in accordance with the provisions of Articles 43 and 44 of those Rules.

44 It follows, on reading those provisions of Article 104 of the Rules of Procedure together, that an application for interim relief must be sufficient in itself to enable the defendant to prepare its observations and the judge hearing the application to rule on it, where necessary, without other supporting information. In order to ensure legal certainty and the proper administration of justice, it is necessary, if such an application is to be admissible, that the essential elements of fact and law on which it is founded be set out in a coherent and comprehensible fashion in the application for interim relief itself. While the application may be supported and supplemented on specific points by references to particular passages in documents which are annexed to it, a general reference to other written documentation, even if it is annexed to the application for interim relief, cannot make up for the absence of essential elements in that application (see, for example, order of the President of the Court of First Instance in Case T-306/01 R Aden and Others v Council and Commission [2002] ECR II-2387, paragraph 52).

45 As the President of the Court ruled in the order in Case T-236/00 R Stauner and Others v Parliament and Commission [2001] ECR II-15, where some of the grounds contained in the application for interim relief and in the observations submitted in response are not set out in a manner consistent with the requirements of the abovementioned provisions of the Rules of Procedure, those grounds cannot be taken into consideration in order to establish the points of fact and law to which they relate.

46 In the present case, therefore, a decision will be made taking account solely of the arguments put forward by the parties in the pleadings which they have lodged in the proceedings for interim relief, as supported and supplemented on specific points by references to particular, identified, passages in documents which are annexed to them.

The substance of the application for interim relief

Urgency

– Arguments of the parties

47 The applicant takes the view that the condition relating to urgency is satisfied in this case.

48 The applicant submits, first, that if the interim measures applied for are not granted, it is highly probable that the effect of the tender timetable will be that the project which formed the subject-matter of the tender. will have already been performed when this Court's judgment is delivered in the main proceedings. The award of the contract and the completion of the project would render impossible a subsequent re-tender that would repeat the same competitive conditions as those of the contested procedure and, according to Vakakis, without the interim measures applied for, it would permanently lose the possibility to undertake the work covered by the disputed tender procedure. In addition, the applicant submits that even if this were not the case, once work begins on the contract, relations are developed and commitments made with third parties which are very difficult to unwind. This, according to the applicant, would result in Vakakis being deprived of its recognised right to full and effective legal protection.

49 Secondly, regarding the pecuniary damage it is likely to suffer, Vakakis submits that it is next to impossible to quantify the loss of the opportunity to participate in the disputed tender procedure and the negative consequences such a loss of opportunity may give rise to. It follows that there is no form of monetary compensation that can make up for the absence of a possibility to tender for the contract, and, therefore, the harm it is likely to suffer is irreparable. The granting of interim measures in the present case is the only possible remedy that will guarantee that the judgment in the main action has a useful effect.

50 Thirdly, the applicant claims that the alleged unlawful conduct of the Commission, which led to the exclusion of Vakakis from the disputed tender procedure, will prevent it from being able to meet future tender criteria, and, therefore, from being able to participate in future tenders.

51 The Commission, on the other hand, submits that the applicant's assertions in this respect are very general, and that the applicant has not even begun to discharge the burden of showing that any damage that it may suffer in the absence of interim measures would be serious and irreparable within the meaning of the case-law of the Community Courts.

– Assessment of the President of the Court

52 According to settled case-law, the urgency of an application for interim relief must be assessed in the light of the need for an interlocutory order in order to avoid serious and irreparable damage to the party seeking the relief. It is for that party to prove that it cannot await the outcome of the main proceedings without suffering damage of that kind (see order of the President of the Court of First Instance in Case T-151/01 R Duales System Deutschland v Commission [2001] ECR II-3295, paragraph 187 and the case-law cited).

53 Where damage depends on the occurrence of a number of factors, it is enough for that damage to be foreseeable with a sufficient degree of probability (order of the President of the Court of First Instance in Case T-369/03 R Arizona Chemical and Others v Commission [2004] ECR II-205, paragraph 71; see also, to that effect, the orders of the Court of Justice in Case C-280/93 R Germany v Council [1993] ECR I-3667, paragraphs 32 to 34, and of the President of the Court of Justice in Case C-335/99 P(R) HFB and Others v Commission [1999] ECR I-8705, paragraph 67). However, the applicant is still required to prove the facts which are deemed to show the probability of serious and irreparable damage (Arizona Chemical and Others v Commission, paragraph 72; see also, to that effect, HFB and Others v Commission, paragraph 67).

54 In that regard, it must be pointed out that, in order to be able to determine whether the damage which applicants fear is serious and irreparable and therefore provides grounds for ordering interim measures, the judge hearing the application must have hard evidence allowing him to determine the precise consequences which the absence of the measures applied for would in all probability entail for each of the undertakings concerned.

55 In the present case, the applicant submits, in essence, that if the contested decisions were annulled and if interim relief were not granted, the contract in issue in the invitation to tender could not be subject to a subsequent re-tender that would repeat the same competitive conditions as those of the contested procedure, and that this loss of opportunity would cause it to suffer serious and irreparable harm.

56 In this regard, it should be pointed out that if the contested decisions were annulled by the Court, the Commission would be required, under the first paragraph of Article 233 EC, to take the necessary measures to comply with the judgment, without prejudice to any obligations resulting from the application of the second paragraph of Article 288 EC (order of the President of the Court of First Instance in Case T–195/05 R Deloitte Business Advisory v Commission [2005] ECR II–3485, paragraph 128). Such measures could, in principle, include the launch of a new tender process, or the payment of compensation.

57 The President may not therefore prejudge the measures that the Commission might take to comply with a judgment annulling the contested decisions.

58 None the less, the general principle of the right to full and effective judicial protection means that parties before the Courts must be granted interim protection if this is necessary to ensure the full effectiveness of the subsequent definitive judgment, in order to prevent a lacuna in the legal protection afforded by the Community Courts (see, to that effect, order of the Court in Case 27/68 R Renckens v Commission [1969] ECR 274, the judgments in Case C-213/89 Factortame and Others [1990] ECR I-2433, paragraph 21, and Joined Cases C–143/88 and C-92/89 Zuckerfabrik Süderdithmarschen and Zuckerfabrik Soest [1991] ECR I–415, paragraphs 16 to 18; order of the President of the Court of Justice in Case C-399/95 R Germany v Commission [1996] ECR I-2441, paragraph 46; and order in Austria v Council, paragraph 111).

59 It must therefore be considered whether it has been shown with a sufficient degree of probability that the applicant is likely to suffer serious and irreparable damage if the interim relief applied for is not granted (see, to that effect, order of the President of the Court of Justice in Case C-180/01 P(R) Commission v NALOO [2001] ECR I-5737, paragraph 53).

60 In this context, it must first be determined whether, following a judgment annulling the contested decisions, the Commission could organise a new tendering procedure, which would repair the damage caused to the applicant and, if the answer to that question is in the negative, it must be assessed whether the applicant could be adequately compensated.

61 With regard to the possibility of the Commission organising a new tendering procedure, it must be pointed out that the Commission's provisional timetable for the disputed tender procedure provided that the contract would be signed on 7 January 2008 and that the provision of the contracted services would commence on 1 February 2008. The period of execution of the contract set out in the tender's provisional timetable is 24 months, with a possibility of extending the programme by a further 24 months.

62 Although the Commission has submitted in its observations that a new tender remains a possibility, it is therefore highly unlikely that, following a judgment in which the contested decisions were annulled, which would probably not be delivered until after the contract, or at least a large part of the contract, had been performed, a new tendering procedure would be organised by the Commission. It is unlikely, therefore, that the damage suffered by the applicant could be repaired by means of a new tender.

63 It must therefore be considered whether, and how, the damage suffered by the applicant could be repaired by means of financial compensation.

64 In this regard, it should be pointed out, the applicant contends that compensation in the form of monetary damages would not make good the loss it is likely to suffer in the absence of the interim measures requested, whereas suspension of the disputed tender procedure until the judgment in the main proceedings had been delivered would preserve the possibility of its performing the contract and consequently prevent it from suffering serious and irreparable harm. In particular, the applicant contends, first, that it is next to impossible to quantify the pecuniary damage which Vakakis is likely to suffer due to the loss of opportunity to participate in the disputed tender procedure, and, therefore, that such damage is irreparable. Secondly, according to Vakakis, the exclusion from the disputed tender procedure would prevent it from being able to meet the short-listing criteria of, and thus to participate in, similar tenders in the future. This would prejudice its position permanently and beyond repair.

65 As regards the first claim raised by the applicant, it should be recalled that the principle that the damage actually suffered must be made good in its entirety is a principle of law upheld by the Community judicature (see Joined Cases C-104/89 and C-37/90 Mulder and Others v Council and Commission [2000] ECR I-203, paragraph 227). Accordingly, it must be considered whether the damage which the applicant alleges it is likely to suffer could be made good in its entirety notwithstanding the alleged difficulty in quantifying it.

66 In this context it should be recalled that, in cases where damage is not hypothetical or a mere possibility, and the existence of the alleged damage is, therefore, undisputable, it may be possible to put an economic value on such damage despite the continuing uncertainty regarding its exact quantification (see to that effect Case C-243/05 P Agraz and Others v Commission [2006] ECR I-10833, paragraph 42). Specifically, in relation to loss of opportunity cases, it results from recent case-law of the Court of Justice that the award of damages by this Court on the basis of the attribution of an economic value to the damage suffered as a result of a loss of opportunity is capable, in principle, of complying with the requirement set out in the case-law that the individual damage actually suffered by the party concerned because of the particular unlawful acts of which it was the victim be fully compensated (see to that effect judgment of 21 February 2008 in Case C-348/06 P Commission v Girardot, not yet published in the ECR, paragraph 76).

67 It follows from the foregoing that, also in this case, should Vakakis be successful in the main proceedings, an economic value could be attributed to the damage suffered as a result of the loss of opportunity to win the disputed tender procedure, which would be capable of complying with the requirement that the individual damage actually suffered be fully compensated. The likelihood of such economic value accurately reflecting the actual damage suffered by the applicant is, on the other hand, an element which the President will consider, if necessary, when balancing the interests at stake.

68 Accordingly, the claim that the damage suffered by the applicant would be serious and irreparable based solely on the principle that it is not possible to quantify the loss of opportunity to participate in the disputed tender procedure and the negative consequences it may have cannot be entertained.

69 Secondly, however, the applicant contends that, in the absence of the interim measures requested, the damage caused by the alleged illegal conduct of the Commission, which led to the exclusion of Vakakis from the disputed tender procedure, would be serious and irreparable since, according to Vakakis, it would be prevented from being able to meet future tender criteria, and, therefore, from being able to participate in future tenders.

70 In particular, the applicant submits that it has focused heavily on providing services of the type covered by the disputed tender process to the Commission, has carried out projects in Turkey, Serbia, and Cyprus, and depends on the Community for much of its work. Since the criteria for the short-listing of candidates require that a candidate has specific experience in the type of services being tendered for in a determined period prior to the tender, that the tenderer has a minimum annual turnover, and that the tenderer has a specific number of permanent staff, Vakakis claims that losing the opportunity to compete for the contract tendered for is likely to have the result of excluding it from future tenders and, accordingly, to cause serious and irreparable harm to its business.

71 Although it cannot be excluded that consequences of this kind could in principle be deemed to give rise to serious and irreparable harm, as was pointed out by the Commission in its observations, the applicant's assertions in this respect remain very general, hypothetical and unsubstantiated statements, which do not satisfy the condition of foreseeability of harm to the requisite degree of probability. Indeed, the applicant has failed to provide any concrete evidence to support its claims and to establish to the requisite degree of probability that any damage that it may suffer in the absence of interim measures would be serious and irreparable within the meaning of the case-law of the Community judicature.

72 By way of example, the applicant has not brought any concrete evidence to demonstrate that the short-listing requirements mentioned above apply to all tenders in this sector, and has provided no detail in relation to such requirements. Furthermore, no concrete evidence was provided to support the applicant's statement that, should it fail to win the disputed tender process, it would not be in a position to meet the short-listing requirements mentioned above, by reference, for example, to current and projected turnover and employee headcount. Finally, no evidence was provided to demonstrate to the requisite level of probability that the applicant would not be in a position to provide the type of services in question to third parties or that it could focus on other sectors in which it might be active to amortise any losses it may suffer.

73 In the light of the foregoing, it must be held that the applicant has not established to the requisite degree of probability that without the interim measures sought it will suffer serious and irreparable harm.

Measures of inquiry

74 As part of its application for interim measures, the applicant requests the President to adopt measures of inquiry requiring the Commission to produce certain documents in relation to the activities of the evaluation committee established to review the tenders submitted in respect of the disputed tender process, as well as documents relating to the establishment of the short-list of tenderers.

75 The Commission, on the other hand, contends that the measures of inquiry requested are premature and entirely inappropriate in the context of the request for interim measures.

Findings of the President

76 It should first be noted that under the first subparagraph of Article 105(2) of the Rules of Procedure the President of the Court of First Instance is to decide whether a preparatory inquiry is necessary. Article 65 of the Rules of Procedure provides that measures of inquiry include the production of documents. Article 64 of the Rules of Procedure allows the Court to adopt measures of organisation of procedure, including the production of documents or any papers relating to the case.

77 It should next be noted that the documents at issue relate solely to the requirement that there be a prima facie case.

78 As the application for interim measures falls to be dismissed by reason of lack of urgency, without it being necessary to consider whether the other conditions for the grant of such measures are satisfied, in particular the requirement that there be a prima facie case, the President considers that the documents in question are not relevant to the current application for interim measures and that there is therefore no need to adopt the measures regarding the documents at issue which the applicant has applied for.

Application for leave to intervene

79 As Agriconsulting's application is an application for leave to intervene in support of the form of order sought by the Commission and against the form of order sought by the applicant, and considering that Vakakis' application is hereby dismissed, it is not necessary, in the interest of procedural efficiency, to rule on the request for leave to intervene.

80 In the circumstances of the present case, Agriconsulting must bear its own costs.

On those grounds,

THE PRESIDENT OF THE COURT OF FIRST INSTANCE

hereby orders:

1. The application for interim measures is dismissed.

2. The application for measures of inquiry or organisation of procedure is dismissed.

Action brought on 1 February 2008 - Vakakis v Commission

(Case T-41/08)

Language of the case: English

Parties

Applicant: Vakakis International - Symvouli gia Agrotiki Anaptixi AE (Athens, Greece) (represented by: B. O'Connor, Solicitor)

Defendant: Commission of the European Communities

Form of order sought

To declare this application admissible;

to annul the unreasoned decision of the European Commission of 6 December 2007 (Reference No A3 TF TCC(2007)106233) not to invite the consortium led by Vakakis International SA to be interviewed in respect of the service tender procedure "Technical Assistance to Support Rural Development Policy" number EuropeAid/125241/C/SER/CY;

to annul the decision of the European Commission of 21 December 2007 (Reference No A3 TF TCC(2007) 106667) to reject the tender submitted by Vakakis International SA on the basis that it did not meet the technical requirements;

pursuant to Article 65(b) of the Rules of Procedure of the Court of First Instance, to request the Commission to provide certain documents in relation to the activities of the evaluation committee established to review the tenders submitted in respect of the EuropeAid/125241/C/SER/CY tender procedure as well as the establishment of the short list of tenderers;

to make any additional order which the Court considers necessary;

to order the Commission to pay the costs.

Pleas in law and main arguments

The applicant claims that the Commission's letter of 6 December 2007 informing the applicant it would not be invited to interview constitutes a decision which lacks sufficient reasoning in breach of Article 253 EC. Moreover, the applicant submits that this stage is an essential element of the tender procedure to which all tenderers, even those failing to meet the technical standard required, should be invited in order to maintain a competitive environment. Furthermore, the applicant argues that the said decision is legally flawed since it is based on non-compliance with the administrative criteria instead of non-compliance to the technical standard required. This amounts, according to the applicant, to a misuse of powers conferred to the Commission in the framework of the tenders' evaluation procedure.

In addition, and with regards to both the above-mentioned decision and the decision of 21 December 2007, the applicant submits that they are incompatible with the terms of the Practical Guide to Contract Procedures for EC External actions. Finally, the applicant claims that the Commission decision of 21 December 2007 purported to justify an unreasoned earlier decision excluding the applicant from the tender and therefore is legally flawed.

Action brought on 22 January 2008 - Evropaïki Dynamiki v Commission

(Case T-39/08)

Language of the case: English

Parties

Applicant: Evropaïki Dynamiki - Proigmena Systimata Tilepikoinonion Pliroforikis kai Tilematikis AE (Athens, Greece) (represented by: N. Korogiannakis, lawyer)

Defendant: Commission of the European Communities

Form of order sought

Annul the decision of the Commission to evaluate the applicant's bid as not successful and award the contract to the successful contractor;

order the Commission to pay the applicant's damages suffered on account of the tendering procedure in question for an amount of EUR 441 564.50;

order the Commission to pay the applicant's legal and other costs and expenses incurred in connection with this application, even if the current application is rejected;

order the Commission to pay the applicant's legal and other costs and expenses incurred in connection with this application.

Pleas in law and main arguments

The applicant submitted a bid in response to the defendant's call for an open tender concerning hosting, management, enhancement, promotion and maintenance of the Commission's Internet portal on eLearning (elearningeuropa.info) (OJ 2007/S 87-105977). The applicant contests the defendant's decision of 12 November 2007 rejecting the applicant's bid and informing the applicant that the contract would be awarded to another tenderer. The applicant further requests compensation for the alleged damages caused by the tender procedure.

In support of its application, the applicant submits that the defendant committed manifest errors of assessment and failed to state reasons in accordance with Article 253 EC. Furthermore, the applicant alleges that the defendant confused evaluation criteria with award criteria when evaluating the bids and used evaluation criteria that were not disclosed to the tenderers before the deadline for submitting the offers. Finally, the applicant contends that the defendant violated the principle of non-discrimination.

Action brought on 18 January 2008 - Evropaïki Dynamiki v Commission

(Case T-32/08)

Language of the case: English

Parties

Applicant: Evropaïki Dynamiki - Proigmena Systimata Tilepikoinonion Pliroforikis kai Tilematikis AE (Athens, Greece) (represented by: N. Korogiannakis, lawyer)

Defendant: Commission of the European Communities

Form of order sought

Annul the decision of the Commission to evaluate the applicant's bid as not successful and award the contract to the successful contractor;

order the Commission to pay the applicant's damages suffered on account of the tendering procedure in question for an amount of EUR 65 565;

order the Commission to pay the applicant's legal and other costs and expenses incurred in connection with this application, even if the current application is rejected.

Pleas in law and main arguments

In support of its claims the applicant argues that, in the framework of the tendering procedure ENV.A.1/SER/2007/0032 for the "Market analysis in view of developing a new approach for the 'Environment for Young Europeans' website" (OJ 2007/S 83-100898) the European Commission failed to comply with its obligations foreseen in the Financial Regulation[1], its Implementing Rules and Directive 2004/18/EC[2].

The applicant moreover submits that the contracting authority committed several manifest errors of assessment which resulted in the rejection of its bid. Furthermore, the contracting authority allegedly infringed its obligation to state reasons for its decision and, in particular, to inform the applicant on the relative merits of the successful tenderer.

The applicant requests, hence, that the decision of the European Commission to reject its bid and to award the contract to the successful tenderer be annulled and that the defendant is ordered to pay all legal expenses related to the proceedings even in case the application is rejected. In the alternative, since the contract will most probably have been fully executed by the time the Court reaches its decision or if it is no longer possible to annul the decision, the applicant requests monetary compensation (damages) in accordance with Articles 235 and 288 EC.

5. The meeting and the joint committee may give their assent to the performance of the acts referred to in the previous paragraphs, even subject to the condition that certain instructions, obligations or acts must be carried out by the directors. In that case, the administrators shall draw up a report on compliance with those instructions within the period prescribed in the authorising act or, failing that, within 30 days running from the performance of the act in question.

6. Shareholding local authorities representing at least a 20th of the share capital, and every contracting shareholder, through the joint committee, may demand, if they consider that the company has not performed or is not in the process of performing the act in accordance with the authorisation given, the immediate calling of a meeting, pursuant to Article 2367(1) of the Civil Code, in order that the meeting may adopt the measures it considers expedient in the company's interest.

7. Carrying out acts subject to prior consent if the assent of the meeting or of the joint committee in the cases provided by the statutes has not been sought and obtained or failure to carry out the act in accordance with the authorisation given may constitute good cause for the dismissal of the directors.

8. If the board of directors does not intend to perform the act authorised by the meeting, it shall within 15 days of the meeting's decision adopt a reasoned ad hoc decision which must forthwith be sent to the shareholding local authorities and, as regards matters relating to the management of local public services, to the joint committee. The joint committee, so far as decisions relating to the organisation or management of local public services are concerned, may within 30 days of receipt of the communication from the board of directors adopt a decision confirming its opinion and/or its instructions. The act adopted shall be binding on the board of directors.

19 Article 16 of those statutes states:

'1. The company shall be directed by a board of directors with powers of ordinary and extraordinary administration, without prejudice to the powers which, by virtue of law or of these statutes:

(a) are reserved to the meeting,

(b) are conditional upon prior authorisation by the ordinary meeting,

(c) are reserved to the bodies exercising similar supervision mentioned in Article 8 bis et seq. of these statutes.

2. The board of directors shall consist of 3 (three) to 7 (seven) members, appointed by the meeting on the designation of the joint committee mentioned in Article 8 ter. In any case, it shall be for the contracting shareholders to appoint directly, to dismiss and replace a number of directors (including the chair of the board of directors) in proportion to the size of their holding and, in any event, more than half of them.

6. The board of directors shall adopt decisions relating to the organisation and management of local public services that are the subject of a direct award, in compliance with the guidelines adopted by the supervisory bodies mentioned in Article 8 bis et seq. in these statutes.

...'

The dispute in the main proceedings and the question referred for a preliminary ruling

20 Sea, which was after a tendering procedure awarded the contract for the service of collecting, transporting and disposing of solid urban and similar waste in the territory of the Comune di Ponte Nossa, provided that service for a period of three years, from 1 January 2004 to 31 December 2006.

21 Setco is a company limited by shares, owned by a number of municipalities in the Val Seriana, the majority shareholder being the Comune di Clusone.

22 By decision of 16 December 2006, the Comune di Ponte Nossa decided to become a minority shareholder in Setco with a view to the direct award to that company of the service in question from 1 January 2007.

23 On 23 December 2006 the municipalities holding shares in Setco, including the Comune di Ponte Nossa, adapted Setco's statutes so as to place that company under control similar to that exercised over their own departments, in accordance with Article 113(5)(c) of Legislative Decree No 267/2000.

24 By decision of 30 December 2006, the Comune di Ponte Nossa awarded the contract for the service of collecting, transporting and disposing of solid urban and similar waste in its territory to Setco directly, from 1 January 2007, without any previous tendering procedure.

25 On 2 January 2007 Sea brought an action before the Tribunale amministrativo regionale per la Lombardia (regional administrative court for the region of Lombardy) challenging the decisions of the Comune di Ponte Nossa of 16 and 30 December 2006.

26 Sea claimed, inter alia, that by awarding the service in question directly to Setco, the Comune di Ponte Nossa had infringed Article 113(5) of Legislative Decree No 267/2000 and Articles 43 EC, 49 EC and 86 EC, in so far as it does not exercise over Setco any control similar to that which it exercises over its own departments, as is required for the direct award of a service to an undertaking owned by the contracting authority.

27 The court making the reference considers that certain factors might give rise to doubts whether the Comune di Ponte Nossa exercises over Setco control similar to that which it exercises over its own departments.

28 First, it is possible that private persons might come to hold shares in Setco's capital, even though at present none does. The national court states in this respect that, despite the express exclusion in Article 1(4) of the statutes of any private holders of Setco's capital, such a holding does appear to be possible by virtue of Article 6(4) of the statutes and of Article 2355 bis of the Italian Civil Code.

29 Secondly, as regards the powers of control actually devolved on the Comune di Ponte Nossa in relation to Setco, the national court wonders whether control similar to that which that authority exercises over its own departments can exist when it has only a minority holding in that company.

30 In those circumstances, the Tribunale amministrativo regionale per la Lombardia has decided to stay proceedings and to refer the following question to the Court of Justice for a preliminary ruling:

'Is the direct award of a contract for the service of collecting, transporting and disposing of solid urban and similar waste to a wholly publicly owned company limited by shares, whose statutes have been amended as set out in the grounds of the decision, in order to comply with Article 113 of Legislative Decree No 267 of 18 August 2000, compatible with Community law and, in particular, with freedom of establishment or freedom to provide services, the prohibition of discrimination and the obligations relating to equal treatment, transparency and free competition, as referred to in Articles 12 EC, 43 EC, 45 EC, 46 EC, 49 EC and 86 EC?'

Concerning the question referred for a preliminary ruling

31 The first point to be noted is that the award of a service for collecting, transporting and disposing of urban waste, such as that at issue in the main proceedings, may, depending on the particular nature of the consideration for that service, fall within the definition of public service contracts or within that of a public service concession for the purpose of Article 1(2)(d) or Article 1(4) of Directive 2004/18.

32 So far as may be deduced from what is set out in the decision for reference and in the file sent to the Court of Justice by the court making that reference, the contract at issue in the main proceedings might constitute a public service contract, especially by reason of the fact that the contract concluded between Setco and the Comune di Ponte Nossa for the provision of the services in question provides for the Comune to pay Setco consideration for the services supplied by the latter.

33 It is possible for such a contract to fall within the ambit of Directive 2004/18, as being a service contract for the removal of waste belonging to Category 16 of Annex II A to that directive.

34 The decision for reference does not, however, contain the information needed in order to determine whether this is a public service contract or a public service concession or, in the latter case, whether all the conditions for the application of that directive have been satisfied. In particular, it does not make clear whether the amount of the contract at issue in the main proceedings crosses the threshold for application of that directive.

35 On any view, whether the case in the main proceedings concerns a service concession or a public service contract, and whether or not, in the latter case, such a service contract falls within the ambit of Directive 2004/18, are matters that do not influence the reply to be given by the Court of Justice to the question referred for a preliminary ruling.

36 Indeed, according to the Court's case-law, an invitation to tender is not mandatory when a contract for valuable consideration has been concluded with a body distinct from the local authority that is the contracting authority, in a situation in which that authority exercises control over that body, even if the cocontractor is a body legally distinct from the contracting authority, so long as the local body that is the contracting authority exercises over the legally distinct body in question control similar to that which it exercises over its own departments and so long as that body carries out the essential part of its activities with the controlling local authority or authorities (see, to that effect, Case C–107/98 Teckal [1999] ECR I–8121, paragraph 50).

37 That case-law is relevant for the interpretation of both Directive 2004/18 and Articles 12 EC, 43 EC, and 49 EC, and also of the general principles of which the latter are the specific expression (see, to that effect, Case C–26/03 Stadt Halle and RPL Lochau [2005] ECR I–1, paragraph 49, and Case C–458/03 Parking Brixen [2005] ECR I–8585, paragraph 62).

38 It is to be borne in mind that, despite the fact that certain contracts do not fall within the ambit of the Community public procurement directives, the contracting authorities concluding them are bound to comply with the fundamental rules of the Treaty (see, to that effect, Case C–324/98 Telaustria and Telefonadress [2000] ECR I–10745, paragraph 60, and the order of 3 December 2001 in Case C–59/00 Vestergaard [2001] ECR I–9505, paragraph 20).

39 So far as the award of public service contracts is concerned, contracting authorities must, in particular, comply with Articles 43 EC and 49 EC, and also observe the principles of equal treatment and non-discrimination on grounds of nationality, and the duty of transparency stemming therefrom as well (see, to that effect, Parking Brixen, paragraphs 47 to 49, and Case C–410/04 ANAV [2006] ECR I–3303, paragraphs 19 to 21).

40 Application of the rules set out in Articles 12 EC, 43 EC and 49 EC, and also of the general principles of which they are the specific expression, is, however, excluded if the local body which is the contracting authority exercises over the contracting entity control similar to that which the authority exercises over its own departments and if, at the same time, that entity carries out the essential part of its activities with the controlling authority or authorities (see, to that effect, Teckal, paragraph 50; Parking Brixen, paragraph 62; and Case C–480/06 Commission v Germany [2009] ECR I–0000, paragraph 34).

41 That the contracting entity is a company in no way excludes the application of the exception permitted by the case-law referred to in the previous paragraph. In ANAV the Court of Justice accepted that the case-law was applicable to a company limited by shares.

42 The national court observes that, despite the fact that, pursuant to Article 1(3) and (4) of Setco's statutes, access to Setco's capital is reserved to public entities, Article 6(4) of the statutes provides that Setco may issue preferential shares in order to encourage the widest ownership of shares at local level by citizens and economic operators or the ownership of shares by employees.

43 At the hearing, the Comune di Ponte Nossa stated that Article 6(4) ought to have been abrogated when Setco's statutes were amended on 23 December 2006, but that by mistake it had been retained. Again according to the Comune di Ponte Nossa, Article 6(4) has since been abrogated. It is for the national court to determine the truth of those particulars which might mean that it is excluded that Setco's capital could possibly be open to private investors.

44 The decision for reference raises the question whether a contracting authority can exercise over a company in which it holds shares, and with which it means to conclude a contract, control similar to that which it exercises over its own departments in a situation in which it is possible for private investors to enter the capital of the company concerned, even though that has not in fact happened.

45 In order to answer that question it is to be borne in mind that the fact of the contracting authority's holding, together with other public authorities, all the share capital in a contractor company, tends to indicate, but not conclusively, that that contracting authority exercises over that company control similar to that which it exercises over its own departments (see, to that effect, Case C–340/04 Carbotermo and Consorzio Alisei [2006] ECR I–4137, paragraph 37, and Case C–324/07 Coditel Brabant [2008] ECR I–0000, paragraph 31).

46 In contrast, the holding, even a minority holding, of a private undertaking in the capital of a company in which the contracting authority in question also has a holding too means that, on any view, it is impossible for that contracting authority to exercise over that company control similar to that which it exercises over its own departments (see, to that effect, Stadt Halle and RPL Lochau, paragraph 49, and Coditel Brabant, paragraph 30).

47 As a general rule, whether there actually exists a private holding in the capital of the company to which the public contract at issue is awarded must be determined at the time of that award (see, to that effect, Stadt Halle and RPL Lochau, paragraphs 15 and 52). It may also be relevant to take account of the fact that, when a contracting authority awards a contract to a company whose entire capital it holds, the national legislation applicable provides for the compulsory opening of that company, in the short term, to other capital (see, to that effect, Parking Brixen, paragraphs 67 and 72).

48 Exceptionally, special circumstances may require events occurring after the date on which the contract in question was awarded to be taken into consideration. Such is the case, in particular, when shares in the contracting company, previously wholly owned by the contracting authority, are transferred to a private undertaking shortly after the contract at issue has been awarded to that company by means of an artificial device designed to circumvent the relevant Community rules (see, to that effect, Case C–29/04 Commission v Austria [2005] ECR I–9705, paragraphs 38 to 41).

49 It is not, admittedly, inconceivable that shares in a company should be sold at any time to third parties. Nevertheless, to allow that mere possibility to keep in indefinite suspense the determination whether or not the capital of a company awarded a public procurement contract is public would not be consistent with the principle of legal certainty.

50 If a company's capital is wholly owned by the contracting authority, alone or together with other public authorities, when the contract in question is awarded to that company, opening of the company's capital to private investors may not be taken into consideration unless there exists, at that time, a real prospect in the short term of such an opening.

51 It follows that, in a situation such as that in the main proceedings, in which the capital of the contracting company is wholly public and in which there is no actual sign of any impending opening of that company's capital to private shareholders, the mere fact that private persons may hold capital in that company is not enough to support the conclusion that the condition relating to control by the public authority has not been satisfied.

52 That conclusion is not shaken by the considerations set out in paragraph 26 of Case C–231/03 Coname [2005] ECR I–7287, indicating that the fact that a company such as that concerned in the case giving rise to that judgment is open to private capital prevents it from being regarded as a structure for the 'in-house' management of a public service on behalf of the municipalities which form part of it. In that case, a public service was awarded to a company in which not all, but most, of the capital was public, and so mixed, at the time of that award (Coname, paragraphs 5 and 28).

53 It must, however, be made clear that if a contract were to be attributed, without being put out to competitive tender, to a public capital company in the circumstances indicated in paragraph 51 above, the fact that subsequently, but still during the period for which that contract was valid, private shareholders were permitted to hold capital in that company would constitute the alteration of a fundamental condition of the contract, which would require the contract to be put out for competitive tender.

54 Next, the question arises whether, when a public authority becomes a minority shareholder in a company limited by shares with wholly public capital for the purpose of awarding the management of a public service to that company, the control that public authorities which are members of that company exercise over it must, if it is to be classified as similar to the control they exercise over their own departments, be exercised by every one of those authorities individually or whether it may be exercised by them jointly.

55 The case-law does not require the control exercised over the contracting company in such a case to be individual (see, to that effect, Coditel Brabant, paragraph 46).

56 In a situation in which several public authorities choose to carry out certain of their public service tasks by having recourse to a company that they own in common, it is usually not possible for one of those authorities, having only a minority holding in that company, to exercise decisive control over the latter's decisions. In such a case, to require the control exercised by a public authority to be individual would have the effect of requiring a competitive tendering procedure in most cases in which such an authority seeks to become a member of a company owned by other public authorities for the purpose of awarding to that company the management of a public service (see, to that effect, Coditel Brabant, paragraph 47).

57 Such a result would not be in keeping with the system of Community rules on public procurement and concession contracts. It is accepted that it is open to a public authority to perform the public interest tasks entrusted to it by relying on its own administrative, technical and other resources, without being obliged to call on outside entities not belonging to its own departments (Stadt Halle and RPL Lochau, paragraph 48; Coditel Brabant, paragraph 48; and Commission v Germany, paragraph 45).

58 Public authorities may act in cooperation with other public authorities in making use of that opportunity to rely on their own resources in order to perform their public-service tasks (see, to that effect, Case C–295/05 Asemfo [2007] ECR I–2999, paragraph 57, and Coditel Brabant, paragraph 49).

59 It must, therefore, be recognised that when several public authorities own a company to which they entrust the performance of one of their public service tasks, the control which those public authorities exercise over that entity may be exercised by them jointly (see, to that effect, Coditel Brabant, paragraph 50).

60 With regard to a body that takes its decisions collectively, the procedure used for the taking of those decisions, in particular recourse to a majority decision, is immaterial (see Coditel Brabant, paragraph 51).

61 Nor is that conclusion shaken by Coname. It is true that the Court considered, in paragraph 24 of that judgment, that a 0.97% interest is so small that it cannot enable a municipality to exercise control over a concessionaire running a public service. However, in that passage of the judgment, the Court was not concerned with the question whether such control could be exercised jointly (Coditel Brabant, paragraph 52).

62 Furthermore, the Court has subsequently recognised, in Asemfo (paragraphs 56 to 61), that in certain circumstances the condition relating to the control exercised by the public contracting authority could be satisfied where such an authority held only 0.25% of the capital in a public undertaking (Coditel Brabant, paragraph 53).

63 It follows that, if a public authority becomes a minority shareholder in a company limited by shares with wholly public capital for the purpose of awarding the management of a public service to that company, the control that the public authorities which are members of that company exercise over it may be classified as similar to the control they exercise over their own departments when it is exercised by those authorities jointly.

64 The question asked by the national court seeks to ascertain also whether decision-making structures such as those provided for by Setco's statutes can enable the shareholder municipalities actually to exercise over the company they own control similar to that which they exercise over their own departments.

65 In order to determine whether the contracting authority exercises over the contracting company control similar to that which it exercises over its own departments, account has to be taken of all the legislative provisions and relevant circumstances

«Marchés publics — Procédures de passation — Marché relatif au service de collecte, de transport et d'élimination des déchets urbains — Attribution sans appel d'offres — Attribution à une société par actions dont le capital social est entièrement détenu par des collectivités publiques mais dont les statuts prévoient la possibilité d'une participation de capital privé»

Sommaire de l'arrêt

Libre circulation des personnes — Liberté d'établissement — Libre prestation des services — Attribution directe d'un marché public de services par une collectivité publique à une société par actions à capital entièrement public
(Art. 43 CE et 49 CE)

Les articles 43 CE et 49 CE, les principes d'égalité de traitement et de non-discrimination en raison de la nationalité ainsi que l'obligation de transparence qui en découle ne s'opposent pas à l'attribution directe d'un marché public de services à une société par actions à capital entièrement public dès lors que la collectivité publique qui est le pouvoir adjudicateur exerce sur cette société un contrôle analogue à celui qu'elle exerce sur ses propres services et que cette société réalise l'essentiel de son activité avec la ou les collectivités qui la détiennent.

Sous réserve de la vérification par la juridiction nationale du caractère opérant des dispositions statutaires concernées, le contrôle exercé par les collectivités actionnaires sur ladite société peut être considéré comme analogue à celui qu'elles exercent sur leurs propres services lorsque :

- l'activité de ladite société est limitée au territoire desdites collectivités et est essentiellement exercée au bénéfice de celles-ci, et

- au travers des organes statutaires composés de représentants desdites collectivités, celles-ci exercent une influence déterminante tant sur les objectifs stratégiques que sur les décisions importantes de ladite société.

Reference for a preliminary ruling - Tribunale Amministrativo Regionale per la Lombardia (Italy) - Interpretation of Articles 12 EC, 43 EC, 49 EC and 86 EC - Procedures for the award of public contracts - Public services for the collection, transport and disposal of urban waste - Direct award of a contract to a limited company with share capital belonging entirely to the public sector but where the statutes of that company allow for the possibility of private investment

Operative part of the judgment

It is not contrary to Articles 43 EC and 49 EC, the principles of equal treatment and of non-discrimination on grounds of nationality or the obligation of transparency arising therefrom for a public service contract to be awarded directly to a company limited by shares with wholly public capital so long as the public authority which is the contracting authority exercises over that company control similar to that which it exercises over its own departments and so long as the company carries out the essential part of its activities with the authority or authorities controlling it.

Without prejudice to the determination by the court making the reference of the effectiveness of the relevant provisions of the statutes, the control exercised over that company by the shareholder authorities may be regarded as similar to that which they exercise over their own departments in circumstances such as those of the case in the main proceedings, when:

that company's activity is limited to the territory of those authorities and is carried on essentially for their benefit, and through the bodies established under the company's statutes made up of representatives of those authorities, the latter exercise conclusive influence on both the strategic objectives of the company and on its significant decisions.

Judgment

1 This reference for a preliminary ruling concerns the interpretation of the first subparagraph of Article 29 of Council Directive 92/50/EEC of 18 June 1992 relating to the coordination of procedures for the award of public service contracts (OJ 1992 L 209, p. 1), as well as the general principles of Community law governing public contracts.

2 This reference for a preliminary ruling was made in the course of proceedings between Assitur Srl ('Assitur') and the Camera di Commercio, Industria, Artigianato e Agricoltura di Milano (Milan Chamber of Commerce, Industry, Crafts and Agriculture) concerning the compatibility with the abovementioned provisions and principles of national legislation precluding undertakings linked by a relationship of control or a relationship in which one undertaking exercises decisive influence over the other from participating – separately and as competing tenderers – in the same procedure for the award of a public contract.

Legal context

Community legislation

3 As part of Chapter 2 of Directive 92/50, entitled 'Criteria for qualitative selection', the first paragraph of Article 29 provides:

'Any service provider may be excluded from participation in a contract who:

(a) is bankrupt or is being wound up, whose affairs are being administered by the court, who has entered into an arrangement with creditors, who has suspended business activities or who is in any analogous situation arising from a similar procedure under national laws and regulations;

(b) is the subject of proceedings for a declaration of bankruptcy, for an order for compulsory winding-up or administration by the court or for an arrangement with creditors or of any other similar proceedings under national laws or regulations;

(c) has been convicted of an offence concerning his professional conduct by a judgement which has the force of res judicata;

(d) has been guilty of grave professional misconduct proven by any means which the contracting authorities can justify;

(e) has not fulfilled obligations relating to the payment of social security contributions in accordance with the legal provisions of the country in which he is established or with those of the country of the contracting authority;

(f) has not fulfilled obligations relating to the payment of taxes in accordance with the legal provisions of the country of the contracting authority;

(g) is guilty of serious misrepresentation in supplying or failing to supply the information that may be required under this Chapter.'

4 The second and third subparagraph of Article 3(4) of Council Directive 93/37/EEC of 14 June 1993 concerning the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts (OJ 1993 L 199, p. 54), defines the concepts of 'affiliated undertakings' and 'dominant influence' of one undertaking over another. As regards public works concession contracts, it states:

'Undertakings which have formed a group in order to obtain the concession contract, or undertakings affiliated to them, shall not be regarded as third parties.

An "affiliated undertaking" means any undertaking over which the concessionaire may exercise, directly or indirectly, a dominant influence or which may exercise a dominant influence over the concessionaire or which, in common with the concessionaire, is subject to the dominant influence of another undertaking by virtue of ownership, financial participation or the rules which govern it. A dominant influence on the part of an undertaking shall be presumed when, directly or indirectly in relation to another undertaking, it:

– holds the major part of the undertaking's subscribed capital, or – controls the majority of the votes attaching to shares issued by the undertakings, or – can appoint more than half of the members of the undertaking's administrative, managerial or supervisory body.'

National legislation

5 Directive 92/50 was transposed into Italian law by Legislative Decree No 157 of 17 March 1995 (GURI No 104 of 6 May 1995, ordinary supplement). That legislative decree does not prohibit undertakings between which there exists a relationship of control or which are affiliated to one another from participating in the same procedure for the award of public service contracts.

6 Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109 of 11 February 1994, the Framework Law on public works (GURI No 41 of 19 February 1994, 'Law No 109/1994) provides:

'Undertakings between which there exists one of the control relationships specified in Article 2359 of the Civil Code may not participate in the same tendering procedure.'

7 Article 2359 of the Civil Code, entitled 'Controlled companies and affiliated companies', provides:

'The following shall be regarded as controlled companies:

(1) companies in which another company holds the majority of the voting rights that may be exercised in ordinary shareholders' meetings;

(2) companies in which another company holds sufficient voting rights to exercise a dominant influence in ordinary shareholders' meetings;

(3) companies which are under the dominant influence of another company by virtue of particular contractual provisions entered into with the latter.

For the purposes of applying points (1) and (2) of the first paragraph, account shall also be taken of votes available to controlled companies, trust companies and intermediaries; no account shall be taken of votes available on behalf of third parties.

Companies over which another company exercises significant influence shall be regarded as affiliated. Such influence shall be presumed on the part of another company where, in ordinary general meetings, it can exercise at least one fifth of the votes, or one tenth if the company shares are quoted on regulated markets.'

8 Procedures for the award of public works contracts, public supply contracts and public service contracts are currently governed, in their entirety, by Legislative Decree No 163 of 12 April 2006 (GURI No 100 of 2 May 2006, ordinary supplement, 'Legislative Decree No 163/2006'). The last paragraph of Article 34 of that legislative decree provides:

'Tenderers between which there exists a relationship of control, of the kind envisaged in Article 2359 of the Civil Code, may not take part in the same tendering procedure. Contracting authorities shall also exclude from such procedures tenderers whose respective tenders are found, on the basis of unambiguous evidence, to be attributable to one and the same decision-making centre.'

The main proceedings and the question referred for a preliminary ruling

9 By notice of 30 September 2003, the Camera di Commercio, Industria, Artigianato e Agricoltura di Milano announced a public invitation to tender for the award, on a lowest-price basis, of a courier-service contract (for collection and delivery of correspondence and miscellaneous documentation) for the Camera di Commercio, Industria, Artigianato e Agricoltura di Milano and its company

CedCamera, for the three-year period 2004 to 2006. The basic bid price was EUR 530 000, excluding VAT.

10 Following examination of the documentation submitted by the tenderers, SDA Express Courier SpA ('SDA'), Poste Italiane SpA ('Poste Italiane') and Assitur were admitted to the tendering procedure.

11 On 12 November 2003, Assitur requested that SDA and Poste Italiane be excluded from the tendering procedure, because of links between those two companies.

12 An inquiry carried out in this connection at the request of the contracts commission showed that the entire share capital of SDA was held by Attività Mobiliari SpA, which in turn was wholly-owned by Poste Italiane. However, given that Legislative Decree No 157 of 17 March 1995, which governs public service contracts, does not prohibit undertakings of which one controls the other from participating in the same procedure for the award of a public contract, and that the inquiry carried out did not bring up any solid and consistent evidence such as to raise any suspicion that the principles of competition and secrecy of tender had, in this instance, been breached the contracting authority decided, by Decision No 712 of 2 December 2003, to award the contract to SDA, which had presented the lowest bid.

13 Assitur brought an action for annulment of that decision before the Tribunale Amministrativo Regionale per la Lombardia. Assitur submitted that, by virtue of Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/1994 – which, according to Assitur, in the absence of other specific legislation, applies also to service contracts – the contracting authority should have excluded from the procedure to award the contract undertakings linked by a relationship of control, as envisaged by Article 2359 of the Italian Civil Code.

14 The referring court states that Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/1994, which specifically governs works contracts, establishes a presumption, not open to rebuttal, that the tender of the controlled undertaking was known to the undertaking controlling it. Therefore, the legislature does not regard the relevant economic operators – given that they are closely linked by common interests – as capable of drawing up tenders of the requisite independence, soundness and reliability because they were closely linked to one another by their common interests. Consequently, Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/1994 precludes undertakings linked in that way from participating in the same tendering procedure and, where they are found to be participating, those undertakings must be excluded from the selection procedure. The referring court also notes that the concept of 'controlled undertaking' in Italian law is analogous to the concept of 'affiliated undertaking', the definition of which is laid down in Article 3(4) of Directive 93/37.

15 The referring court also states that, according to Italian case-law, a rule such as the one laid down in Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/1994 has the authority of a rule of public policy which is of general application. In actual fact, that rule reflects a general principle which goes beyond the field of public works and applies also to procedures for the award of service and supply contracts, notwithstanding the fact that, in relation to the two latter, no such specific provision exists. The legislature confirmed the approach taken by the case-law when it adopted the last paragraph of Article 34 of Legislative Decree No 163/2006, which currently governs all public contracts; however, that provision does not apply to the present case ratione temporis.

16 None the less, the referring court asks whether such an approach is compatible with the Community legal order and, in particular, with Article 29 of Directive 92/50, as interpreted by the Court of Justice in Joined Cases C–226/04 and C–228/04 La Cascina and Others [2006] ECR I–1347, paragraphs 21 to 23. That provision, which constitutes an expression of the principle of 'favor participationis' – whereby as many undertakings as possible should take part in the tendering procedure – comprises, according to that judgment, an exhaustive list of the grounds for exclusion from participation in a tendering procedure for the award of a service contract. Those grounds do not include the situation of undertakings linked by a relationship of control or decisive influence.

17 However, the referring court considers that Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/1994, as a provision intended to penalise any collusion between undertakings in a tendering procedure, is an expression of the principle of free competition. Consequently, it was adopted in strict compliance with the EC Treaty, in particular with Article 81 EC et seq., and is not really inconsistent with Article 29 of Directive 92/50.

18 In those circumstances, the Tribunale Amministrativo Regionale per la Lombardia decided to stay the proceedings and to refer the following question to the Court for a preliminary ruling:

‘Does Article 29 of Directive 92/50 …, in laying down seven grounds for exclusion from participation in procedures for the award of public service contracts, give an exhaustive list of grounds for exclusion and therefore preclude Article 10(1bis) of Law [No 109/1994] (now replaced by Article 34, last paragraph, of Legislative Decree [No 163/2006]) from imposing a prohibition to the effect that undertakings linked by a relationship of control may not participate in the same tendering procedure?’

The question referred for a preliminary ruling

19 For the purpose of answering that question, it must be noted that, according to the case-law of the Court of Justice, the seven grounds for excluding a contractor from participating in a public contract laid down in the first paragraph of Article 29 of Directive 92/50 relate to the professional honesty, solvency and reliability of the tenderer, in other words, his professional qualities (see, to that effect, La Cascina and Others, paragraph 21).

20 The Court of Justice emphasised in connection with the first paragraph of Article 24 of Directive 93/37, which reproduces the same grounds for exclusion as those mentioned in the first paragraph of Article 29 of Directive 92/50, that the intention of the Community legislature was to adopt in that provision only grounds for exclusion related to the professional qualities of the tenderer. In so far as it reproduces those grounds for exclusion, the Court considered that list to be exhaustive (see, to that effect, Case C-213/07 Michaniki [2008] ECR I-0000, paragraphs 42 and 43, as well as the case-law cited).

21 The Court added that that this exhaustive list does not, however, preclude the option for Member States to maintain or adopt, in addition to the grounds for exclusion, substantive rules designed, in particular, to ensure, as regards public contracts, observance of the principle of equal treatment of all tenderers and of the principle of transparency which constitute the basis of the directives on procedures for the award of public contracts, provided always that the principle of proportionality is observed (see, to that effect, Michaniki, paragraphs 44 to 48 and the case-law cited).

22 It is clear that a national legislative measure such as that at issue in the main proceedings is intended to prevent any potential collusion between participants in the same procedure for the award of a public contract and to safeguard the equal treatment of candidates and the transparency of the procedure.

23 It must therefore be considered that the first paragraph of Article 29 of Directive 92/50 does not preclude a Member State from laying down, in addition to the grounds for exclusion contained in that provision, other grounds for exclusion intended to guarantee respect for the principles of equality of treatment and transparency, provided that such measures do not go beyond what is necessary to achieve that objective.

24 It follows that the compliance with Community law of the national legislation at issue in the main proceedings must be examined again in the light of the principle of proportionality.

25 It should be recalled, in this connection, that the Community rules on public procurement were adopted in pursuance of the establishment of the internal market, in which freedom of movement is ensured and restrictions on competition are eliminated (see, to that effect, Case C–412/04 Commission v Italy [2008] ECR I–619, paragraph 2).

26 In this context of a single internal market and effective competition it is the concern of Community law to ensure the widest possible participation by tenderers in a call for tenders.

27 According to the order for reference, the provision at issue in the main proceedings, which is drafted in clear and binding terms, entails for the contracting authorities an absolute obligation to exclude from the procedure for awarding the contract those undertakings which submit separate and competing tenders, if those undertakings are linked by a relationship of control such as that contemplated by the national legislation at issue in the main proceedings.

28 However, it would run counter to the effective application of Community law to exclude systematically undertakings affiliated to one another from participating in the same procedure for the award of a public contract. Such a solution would considerably reduce competition at Community level.

29 Thus, clearly, in so far as it extends the prohibition on participation in the same procedure for the award of a contract to situations in which the relationship of control between the undertakings concerned has no effect on their conduct in the course of such procedures, the national legislation at issue in the main proceedings goes beyond what is necessary to achieve the objective of ensuring the application of the principles of equal treatment and transparency.

30 Such legislation, which is based on an irrebuttable presumption that tenders submitted for the same contract by affiliated undertakings will necessarily have been influenced by one another, breaches the principle of proportionality in that it does not allow those undertakings an opportunity to demonstrate that, in their case, there is no real risk of occurrence of practices capable of jeopardising transparency and distorting competition between tenderers (see, to that effect, Joined Cases C-21/03 and C-34/03 Fabricom [2005] ECR I-1559, paragraphs 33 and 35, and Michaniki, paragraph 62).

31 It should be pointed out in this connection that groups of undertakings can have different forms and objectives, which do not necessarily preclude controlled undertakings from enjoying a certain autonomy in the conduct of their commercial policy and their economic activities, inter alia, in the area of their participation in the award of public contracts. Moreover, as the Commission pointed out in its written observations, relationships between undertakings in the same group may be governed by specific provisions, for example, of a contractual nature, such as to guarantee both independence and confidentiality in the drawing-up of tenders to be submitted simultaneously by the undertakings in question in the same tendering procedure.

32 Against that background, the question whether the relationship of control at issue influenced the respective content of the tenders submitted by the undertakings concerned in the same public procurement procedure requires an examination and assessment of the facts which it is for the contracting authorities to carry out. A finding of such influence, in any form, is sufficient for those undertakings to be excluded from the procedure in question. However, a mere finding of a relationship of control between the undertakings concerned, by reason of ownership or the number of voting rights exercisable at ordinary shareholders' meetings is not sufficient for the contracting authority to automatically exclude those undertakings from the procedure for the award of the contract, without ascertaining whether such a relationship had a specific effect on their conduct in the course of that procedure.

33 Having regard to all the foregoing considerations, the answer to the question referred is that:

– the first paragraph of Article 29 of Directive 92/50 must be interpreted as not precluding a Member State from laying down, in addition to the grounds for exclusion contained in that provision, other grounds for exclusion intended to guarantee respect for the principles of equality of treatment and transparency, provided that such measures do not go beyond what is necessary to achieve that objective, and – Community law precludes a national provision which, while pursuing legitimate objectives of equality of treatment of tenderers and transparency in procedures for the award of public contracts, lays down an absolute prohibition on simultaneous and competing participation in the same tendering procedure by undertakings linked by a relationship of control or affiliated to one another, without allowing them an opportunity to demonstrate that that relationship did not influence their conduct in the course of that tendering procedure.

Costs

34 Since these proceedings are, for the parties to the main proceedings, a step in the action pending before the national court, the decision on costs is a matter for that court. Costs incurred in submitting observations to the Court, other than the costs of those parties, are not recoverable.

On those grounds, the Court (Fourth Chamber) hereby rules:

The first paragraph of Article 29 of Council Directive 92/50/EEC of 18 June 1992 relating to the coordination of procedures for the award of public service contracts must be interpreted as not precluding a Member State from laying down, in addition to the grounds for exclusion contained in that provision, other grounds for exclusion intended to guarantee respect for the principles of equality of treatment and transparency, provided that such measures do not go beyond what is necessary to achieve that objective.

Community law precludes a national provision which, while pursuing legitimate objectives of equality of treatment of tenderers and transparency in procedures for the award of public contracts, lays down an absolute prohibition on simultaneous and competing participation in the same tendering procedure by undertakings linked by a relationship of control or affiliated to one another, without allowing them an opportunity to demonstrate that that relationship did not influence their conduct in the course of that tendering procedure.

(Directive 92/50/EEC – First paragraph of Article 29 – Public service contracts – National legislation not allowing companies linked by a relationship of control or significant influence to participate, as competing tenderers, in the same procedure for the award of a public contract)

Summary of the Judgment

Approximation of laws – Coordination of procedures for the award of public service contracts – Directive 92/50 – Award of contracts
(Council Directive 92/50, Art. 29, first para.)

The first paragraph of Article 29 of Directive 92/50 relating to the coordination of procedures for the award of public service contracts must be interpreted as meaning that it does not preclude a Member State from laying down, in addition to the grounds for exclusion contained in that provision, other grounds for exclusion intended to guarantee respect for the principles of equality of treatment and transparency, provided that such measures do not go beyond what is necessary to achieve that objective.

However, Community law precludes a national provision which, while pursuing legitimate objectives of equality of treatment of tenderers and transparency in procedures for the award of public contracts, lays down an absolute prohibition on simultaneous and competing participation in the same tendering procedure by undertakings linked by a relationship of control or affiliated to one another, without allowing them an opportunity to demonstrate that that relationship did not influence their conduct in the course of that tendering procedure.

It would run counter to the effective application of Community law to exclude systematically undertakings affiliated to one another from participating in the same procedure for the award of a public contract. Such a solution would considerably reduce competition at Community level. Thus, where it extends the prohibition on participation in the same procedure for the award of a contract to situations in which the relationship of control between the undertakings concerned has no effect on their conduct in the course of such procedures, national legislation goes beyond what is necessary to achieve the objective of ensuring the application of the principles of equal treatment and transparency. Such legislation, which is based on an irrebuttable presumption that tenders submitted for the same contract by affiliated undertakings will necessarily have been influenced by one another, breaches the principle of proportionality in that it does not allow those undertakings an opportunity to demonstrate that, in their case, there is no real risk of occurrence of practices capable of jeopardising transparency and distorting competition between tenderers.

(Reference for a preliminary ruling from the Tribunale Amministrativo Regionale per la Lombardia (Italy))

(Public service contracts – Directive 92/50/EEC – Article 29 – National legislation precluding the simultaneous participation in a tendering procedure of undertakings which are linked by a relationship of control as defined by Article 2359 of the Italian Civil Code – Proportionality)

I – Introduction

1. The Tribunale Amministrativo Regionale per la Lombardia asks the Court to determine whether Article 29 of Council Directive 92/50/EEC of 18 June 1992 relating to the coordination of procedures for the award of public service contracts (2) ('Directive 92/50') which lays down seven grounds for exclusion from participation in service contracts, is an exhaustive list and therefore precludes national legislation from imposing a prohibition on the simultaneous participation in a tendering procedure of undertakings which are linked by a relationship of control as defined by Article 2359 of the Italian Civil Code ('Civil Code').

II – Legal framework

A – Community legislation

2. As part of Chapter 2 of Title VI of Directive 92/50, entitled 'Criteria for qualitative selection', Article 29 provides:

'Any service provider may be excluded from participation in a contract who:

(a) is bankrupt or is being wound up, whose affairs are being administered by the court, who has entered into an arrangement with creditors, who has suspended business activities or who is in any analogous situation arising from a similar procedure under national laws and regulations;

(b) is the subject of proceedings for a declaration of bankruptcy, for an order for compulsory winding-up or administration by the court or for an arrangement with creditors or of any other similar proceedings under national laws or regulations;

(c) has been convicted of an offence concerning his professional conduct by a judgment which has the force of res judicata;

(d) has been guilty of grave professional misconduct proven by any means which the contracting authorities can justify;

(e) has not fulfilled obligations relating to the payment of social security contributions in accordance with the legal provisions of the country in which he is established or with those of the country of the contracting authority;

(f) has not fulfilled obligations relating to the payment of taxes in accordance with the legal provisions of the country of the contracting authority;

(g) is guilty of serious misrepresentation in supplying or failing to supply the information that may be required under this Chapter.

...'

B – Italian legislation

3. Legislative Decree No 157 of 17 March 1995 implementing Directive 92/50/EEC on public service contracts (attuazione della direttiva 92/50/CEE in materia di appalti pubblici di servizi) ('Legislative Decree No 157/1995'), (3) does not impose any prohibition on the participation of undertakings linked by a relationship of control.

4. Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109, Framework Law on public works (Legge Quadro in materia di lavori pubblici) of 11 February 1994 (4) ('Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/94'), provides:

'Undertakings between which there exists one of the control relationships specified in Article 2359 of the Civil Code may not participate in the same tendering procedure.'

5. Article 2359 of the Civil Code, entitled 'Controlled Companies and Linked Companies', provides:

'The following shall be regarded as controlled companies:

(1) companies in which another company holds the majority of the voting rights that may be exercised in ordinary shareholders' meetings;

(2) companies in which another company holds sufficient voting rights to exercise a dominant influence in ordinary shareholders' meetings;

(3) companies which are under the dominant influence of another company by virtue of particular contractual provisions entered into with the latter.

For the purposes of applying points (1) and (2) of the first paragraph, account shall also be taken of votes available to controlled companies, trust companies and intermediaries; no account shall be taken of votes available on behalf of third parties.

Companies over which another company exercises significant influence shall be regarded as linked. Such influence shall be presumed on the part of another company where, in ordinary general meetings, it can exercise at least one fifth of the votes, or one tenth if the company shares are quoted on regulated markets.'

6. The last paragraph of Article 34 of the new public contracts code, approved by Legislative Decree No 163/06 of 12 April 2006 (Codice dei contratti pubblici relativi a lavori, servizi e forniture in attuazione delle direttive 2004/17/CE e 2004/18/CE) (5) ('Legislative Decree No 163/06') (not applicable to the present case ratione temporis), provides in relation to all contract procedures, that 'tenderers between which there exists a relationship of control, of the kind envisaged in Article 2359 of the Civil Code, may not take part in the same tendering procedure. Contracting authorities shall also exclude from such procedures tenderers whose respective tenders are found, on the basis of unambiguous evidence, to be attributable to one and the same decision-making centre'.

III – The main proceedings and the question referred for a preliminary ruling

7. By notice of 30 September 2003, the Camera di Commercio, Industria, Artigianato e Agricoltura di Milano ('CCIAAM') announced a public invitation to tender for the award, on a lowest-price basis, of a courier-service contract for the three-year period 2004 to 2006 for, inter alia, the CCIAAM, the basic bid price being EUR 530 000, excluding VAT.

8. Following examination of the administrative documentation submitted by the tenderers, SDA Express Courier Spa ('SDA'), Poste Italiane Spa ('Poste Italiane') and Assitur Srl ('Assitur') were admitted to the procedure.

9. On 12 November 2003, Assitur requested that, in accordance with the tendering conditions, which prohibited individual undertakings from also participating as part of a group, SDA and Poste Italiane should be excluded because of their close association.

10. After noting that SDA and Poste Italiane had taken part in the tendering procedure separately, the adjudication committee proceeded to open the bids. The adjudication committee then instructed the person conducting the procedure to check whether there were any links between SDA and Poste Italiane which might constitute an impediment to their participation in the tendering procedure.

11. As a result of the inquiry, it appeared that all the shares in SDA were held by Attività Mobiliari Spa, which in turn was wholly owned by Poste Italiane. The adjudication committee however pointed out that Legislative Decree No 157/1995, which implemented Directive 92/50 in Italy, does not impose any prohibition on the participation of undertakings linked by a relationship of control. The adjudication committee also observed that no solid and consistent evidence had emerged such as to raise any suspicion that the principles of competition and secrecy of tenders had been infringed. The adjudication committee proposed, therefore, that the service contract be awarded to SDA, which had submitted the lowest bid.

12. By Decision No 712 of 2 December 2003, the CCIAAM awarded the contract in question to SDA.

13. In its action before the referring court, Assitur seeks, inter alia, the annulment of the decision of 2 December 2003, as well as a declaration that it is entitled to be the successful tenderer. Assitur claims, inter alia, that the adjudication procedure infringed Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/94 and the tendering conditions. In particular, Assitur claims that by virtue of Article 10 (1bis) of Law No 109/94, which it considers also applies to service contracts, the contracting authority should have excluded from the procedure those companies in a relationship of control as envisaged by Article 2359 of the Civil Code.

14. The referring court considers that Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/94 provides in clear terms for the exclusion of companies between which there exists a relationship of control as envisaged by Article 2359 of the Civil Code. There is an irrebuttable presumption that the tender of the controlled company is known to the controlling party. Moreover, the referring court considers that in accordance with the national case-law on the matter, Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/94 is a rule which protects a vital interest of society ('norma di ordine pubblico') and thus applies not only to public work contracts but also to service and supply contracts. According to the referring court, it would appear therefore that the adjudication committee should have immediately ordered the exclusion of both SDA and Poste Italiane which are manifestly in a relationship of control as envisaged by Article 2359 of the Civil Code.

15. The referring court considers that the national legislative framework outlined above nevertheless raises interpretative problems regarding the compatibility of those rules with Community law, in particular with Article 29 of Directive 92/50 as interpreted by the Court in La Cascina and Others. (6) In that case the Court, after stating that Article 29 of Directive 92/50 lays down seven grounds for excluding candidates from participation in a contract, found that the Member States cannot provide for grounds of exclusion other than those mentioned in that provision.

16. The referring court notes however that the rule laid down by Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/94, the scope of which has been extended by Legislative Decree No 163/06, is intended to penalise the collusive conduct of closely linked undertakings in a tendering procedure. That rule thus enhances the application of the principle of freedom of competition and does not in reality conflict with Article 29 of Directive 92/50.

17. On the basis of those considerations, the Tribunale Amministrativo Regionale per la Lombardia decided, by decision of 5 December 2006, to stay proceedings and to refer the following question to the Court for a preliminary ruling:

'Does Article 29 of Directive 92/50/EEC, in laying down seven grounds for exclusion from participation in procedures for the award of public service contracts, give an exhaustive list of grounds for exclusion and therefore preclude Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/94 (now replaced by Article 34, last paragraph, of Legislative Decree No 163/06) from imposing a prohibition to the effect that undertakings linked by a relationship of control may not participate in the same tendering procedure?'

IV – The proceedings before the Court of Justice

18. Written and oral observations were submitted by the CCIAAM, SDA, Poste Italiane, the Italian Republic and the Commission. In addition, Assitur presented oral observations at the hearing of 4 December 2008.

V – Admissibility

19. CCIAAM and SDA consider that the question referred to the Court for a preliminary ruling is inadmissible. CCIAAM considers that it is clear from the order for reference that the referring court considers that there is a lacuna in Article 29 of Directive 92/50 as that provision does not provide for the exclusion of linked companies. The referring court is therefore not seeking an interpretation of Article 29 of Directive 92/50 but rather to add elements to that provision. SDA considers that given that the referring court has not established a link between SDA and Poste Italiane which would lead to a distortion of the tendering procedure, the referring court may not request the Court to rule on the matter. In effect, the question referred seeks solely to establish facts, a competence which lies exclusively with the national court.

20. In accordance with settled case-law, in the context of the cooperation between the Court and the national courts provided for by Article 234 EC, it is solely for the national court, before which the dispute has been brought and which must assume responsibility for the subsequent judicial decision, to determine in the light of the particular circumstances of the case both the need for a preliminary ruling in order to enable it to deliver judgment and the relevance of the questions which it submits to the Court. Consequently, where the questions submitted for a preliminary ruling concern the interpretation of Community law, the Court is, in principle, bound to give a ruling. (7)

21. However, the Court has also stated that, in exceptional circumstances, it must examine the conditions in which the case was referred to it by the national court, in order to assess whether it has jurisdiction. It is settled case-law that a reference from a national court may be refused only if it is quite obvious that the interpretation of Community law sought bears no relation to the actual facts of the main action or to its purpose, or where the problem is hypothetical or the Court does not have before it the factual or legal material necessary to give a useful answer to the questions submitted to it. (8)

22. That is not the case here.

23. In my view, it is clear from the order for reference that the Court is being called upon to clarify whether the referring court is required under Community law, and in particular in the light of Article 29 of Directive 92/50 and the case-law thereon, not to apply national legislation which provides for the exclusion from tendering procedures of companies linked by a relationship of control.

24. In the proceedings before the referring court, Assitur claims that, in accordance with Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/94, the CCIAAM should have excluded from the tendering procedure those companies which formed part of a relationship of control as envisaged in Article 2359 of the Civil Code. The CCIAAM, SDA and Poste Italiane on the other hand claim that pursuant to the judgment of the Court in La Cascina and Others, (9) Member States cannot provide for grounds of exclusion of candidates from tendering procedures other than those mentioned in Article 29 of Directive 92/50. The CCIAAM, SDA and Poste Italiane note that Article 29 of Directive 92/50 does not include in its exhaustive list of grounds of exclusion companies linked by a relationship of control. The referring court considers, however, that given that Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/94 is a provision intended to penalise collusive conduct by companies it enhances the due application of the principle of freedom of competition and is therefore in compliance with, inter alia, Article 81 EC et seq.

25. Clearly, therefore, the question submitted relates to the subject-matter of the main proceedings, as defined by the referring court, and the answer to that question may be useful to that court in enabling it to decide whether the exclusion of companies from the tendering procedure in question pursuant to Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/94 is in conformity with Community law.

26. Moreover, contrary to the assertion made by SDA, the question referred does not, in my view, seek to establish whether and to what extent SDA and Poste Italiane are in fact related. As SDA has rightly pointed out that is a matter which lies exclusively with the national court.

27. In those circumstances, I consider that the reference for a preliminary ruling should be held by the Court to be admissible.

VI – Substance

A – Observations submitted to the Court

28. At the hearing on 4 December 2008, Assitur stated that the list contained in Article 29 of Directive 92/50 is not exhaustive. In a case such as the present where two companies participate in a tender and one of them is 100% controlled by another, their participation must be considered unlawful as it undoubtedly infringes the principle of competition which must be protected.

29. According to CCIAAM, in the absence of any legal provision prohibiting controlled companies from participating in the procurement procedure for the award of public service contracts or any indication to that effect in the tender notice, Poste Italiane and SDA could not be automatically excluded from the procedure for the award of the contract in question. Moreover, the adjudicating authority verified that the relationship between SDA and Poste Italiane was not such as to affect the transparency and correct conduct of the adjudication procedure. A company's mere participation in the capital of another is not sufficient pursuant to Community law for exclusion from a tender where an operational link has not been established.

30. SDA, Poste Italiane and the Italian Republic consider that in accordance with the La Cascina and Others (10) case, Article 29 of Directive 92/50, which lays down seven grounds for excluding candidates from participating in a contract, ensures that Member States cannot provide for grounds of exclusion other than those mentioned therein. According to SDA, Article 29 of Directive 92/50 therefore precludes the adoption of national rules such as Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/94.

31. Poste Italiane also considers that Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/94 by introducing an absolute presumption of collusion where companies are linked by a relationship of control hinders rather than enhances the principles of competition. That provision prevents the simultaneous participation in a tender of companies where the relationship of control has not in fact resulted in collusion, thereby limiting the number of tenderers.

32. The Italian Republic considers that while Article 29 of Directive 92/50 provides for the exclusion of companies on the basis of their personal (and general) situation, Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/94 objectively regulates the different tenders by excluding those which are in reality the product of a single decision-making centre and which thus lack the necessary degree of independence, soundness and reliability. The purpose of the provision is to enable the adjudicating authority to ensure that the competitive nature of a tender procedure is effectively guaranteed and that all potential collusion is suppressed. The Italian Republic therefore considers that Article 29 of Directive 92/50 does not preclude the Member States from adopting exclusion clauses in order to deal with other objective situations where a multiplicity of tenders does not guarantee effective competition between those tenders.

33. The Commission considers that pursuant to the judgment in La Cascina and Others, Article 29 of Directive 92/50 lays down an exhaustive list of seven grounds for excluding candidates from participation in a contract, which relate to their professional honesty, solvency and reliability. Thus the Member States cannot provide for other grounds of exclusion based on a candidate's professional honesty, solvency and reliability. Article 29 does not however preclude Member States from adopting other grounds of exclusion which are not based on the candidate's professional honesty, solvency and reliability but rather on the need to ensure the correct functioning of the tender procedure and in particular respect for the principle of equality. Given that the offer of a company which is controlled by another will certainly be known and may even be 'controlled' by the latter, Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/94 is aimed at ensuring effective competition and equal treatment between tenderers. The Commission also highlights the fact that a group of companies may by means of concerted tenders influence the fixing of the threshold for abnormally low tenders thereby leading to the exclusion of tenderers who are not part of the group.

34. While Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/94 pursues a legitimate aim of ensuring equal treatment, the Commission considers that it is disproportionate in nature as it does not allow tenderers who are linked by a relationship of control to prove that their offers were in fact drawn up autonomously and without the contents of their offers being known by the controlling company. The Commission therefore considers that the irrebutable presumption contained in Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/94 may not in fact promote competition.

B – Assessment

35. In my view, it is clear from the judgment in La Cascina and Others that Article 29 of Directive 92/50 lays down in an exhaustive manner the seven grounds which a Member State may (11) invoke for excluding candidates from participation in a public service contract on the basis of criteria relating to their professional quality, namely, their professional honesty, solvency and reliability. (12)

36. Article 29 of Directive 92/50 therefore entails that the Member States cannot provide for additional grounds of exclusion based on a candidate's professional honesty, solvency and reliability. (13)

37. This approach has in fact been very recently confirmed by the Court in the Michaniki case (14) in relation to Article 24 of Council Directive 93/37/EEC of 14 June 1993 concerning the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts. (15) Article 24 of Directive 93/37 also lays down seven grounds for excluding candidates from participation in a contract on the basis of their professional honesty, solvency and reliability which mirror the grounds contained in Article 29 of Directive 92/50.

38. The exhaustive list of seven grounds set out in Article 29 of Directive 92/50 does not however preclude Member States from maintaining or adopting other rules which are designed, in particular, to ensure, in the field of public contracts, observance of the principle of equal treatment and the principle of transparency. Those principles, which lie at the heart of the directives on procedures for the award of public contracts must be observed by contracting authorities in any procedure for the award of such a contract and mean, in particular, that tenderers must be in a position of equality both when they formulate their tenders and when those tenders are being assessed by the contracting authority. A Member State is thus entitled to provide, for exclusionary measures designed to ensure observance of the principles of equal treatment of all tenderers and of transparency in procedures for the award of public contracts aside from the seven grounds for exclusion based on objective considerations of professional quality, which are listed exhaustively in Article 29 of Directive 92/50. (16)

39. As the Member States are best placed to identify, in the light of historical, economic or social considerations specific to them, situations likely to bring about breaches of the principles of equal treatment of all tenderers and of transparency in procedures for the award of public contracts, the Court confirmed in the Michaniki case that the Member States are thus granted a certain margin of discretion for the purpose of adopting measures intended to ensure respect for those principles. However, in accordance with the principle of proportionality, which constitutes a general principle of Community law, such measures must not go beyond what is necessary to achieve that objective. (17)

40. It is clear from the order for reference that the Italian legislature sought by the adoption of Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/94 to ensure the proper and transparent conduct of public procurement procedures. (18) According to the referring court, the Italian legislature considers that the free play of competition and rivalry will be irremediably and adversely affected by the submission of tenders which, although formally deriving from two or more legally distinct companies, can be traced back to a single centre of interests. Pursuant to the order for reference, the Italian legislature considers that this situation arises in those cases where undertakings are controlled or susceptible to significant influence, as envisaged by Article 2359 of the Civil Code. Accordingly, controlled companies cannot be regarded as third parties vis-à-vis the controlling companies and have no standing, therefore, to submit another tender in the same tendering procedure. (19)

41. In my view, it is clear from the above that Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/94 does not relate to candidates' professional honesty, solvency and reliability. Despite certain submissions made by the Commission at the hearing on 4 December 2008, I do not consider that Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/94 is aimed at excluding candidates which in accordance with Article 29(d) of Directive 92/50 have 'been guilty of grave professional misconduct proven by any means which the contracting authorities can justify'. Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/94 does not in fact address the behaviour of candidates but seeks to pre-empt situations where the very relationship between certain companies participating in tendering procedures would tend to distort that procedure. (20)

42. I therefore consider, on the basis of the information provided by the referring court, that Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/94 is aimed at ensuring the equal treatment of all tenderers and the transparency of procedures for the award of public contracts and that Community law must be interpreted as not precluding, in principle, the adoption of such national measures. The measure in question must however be compatible with the principle of proportionality. (21)

43. According to the referring court, Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/94 provides for the exclusion of companies from the tendering procedures where there exists a relationship of control. Moreover, the exclusion which is automatic is based on the presumption that the tender of the controlled company is known to the controlling party. That presumption is not open to rebuttal and thus cannot be overturned even by proof that the controlled company drew up its tender in an entirely independent manner.

44. In my view, a national measure, such as that at issue in the main proceedings, which leads to the automatic exclusion from tendering procedures of certain tenderers is disproportionate in nature as it does not allow tenderers which are linked by a relationship of control to prove that their tenders were in fact drawn up in a manner which would not in fact impair the equal treatment of tenderers and the transparency of procedures for the award of public contracts. (22)

VII – Conclusion

45. In the light of the foregoing considerations, I propose that the Court replies to the Tribunale Amministrativo Regionale per la Lombardia in the following manner:

– Article 29 of Council Directive 92/50/EEC of 18 June 1992 relating to the coordination of procedures for the award of public service contracts, must be interpreted as listing exhaustively the grounds based on objective considerations of professional quality which are capable of justifying the exclusion of a contractor from participation in a public service contract. However, Article 29 of that directive does not preclude a Member State from providing for further exclusionary measures designed to ensure observance of the principles of equal treatment of tenderers and of transparency, provided that such measures do not go beyond what is necessary to achieve that objective.

– Community law must be interpreted as precluding a national provision which, whilst pursuing the legitimate objectives of equal treatment of tenderers and of transparency in procedures for the award of public contracts, leads to the automatic exclusion from tendering procedures of tenderers between which there exists a relationship of control as defined by national law, without giving them an opportunity to prove that, in the circumstances of the case, that relationship had not led to an infringement of the principles of equal treatment of tenderers and of transparency.

11 – Member States are not in fact obliged to adopt such grounds of exclusion as the use of the term 'may' (rather than 'shall') in Article 29 of Directive 92/50 renders their adoption merely facultative. While it may be difficult to reconcile the fact that the adoption of such grounds of exclusion by Member States is facultative with the exhaustive nature of those grounds, the Court confirmed in La Cascina and Others that '… Article 29 of Directive 92/50 does not provide in this field for uniform application of the grounds of exclusion mentioned therein at Community level, since the Member States may choose not to apply those grounds of exclusion at all and opt for the widest possible participation in procedures for the award of public contracts or to incorporate them into national law with varying degrees of rigour according to legal, economic or social considerations prevailing at national level. In that context the Member States have the power to make the criteria laid down in Article 29 of Directive 92/50 less onerous or more flexible' (see paragraph 23).

16 – See to that effect paragraphs 44 to 47 of Michaniki and the case-law cited therein. In paragraph 47 of the judgment in Michaniki, the Court stated that '[i]t follows that*, in addition* to the grounds for exclusion based on objective considerations of professional quality, which are listed exhaustively in the first paragraph of Article 24 of Directive 93/37, a Member State is entitled to provide for exclusionary measures designed to ensure observance, in procedures for the award of public contracts, of the principles of equal treatment of all tenderers and of transparency' (emphasis added). In my view the use of the terms 'in addition' in the paragraph in question may give the impression that additional grounds may be added to the seven grounds of exclusion contained in Article 24 of Directive 93/37 and by analogy to those contained in Article 29 of Directive 92/50. This was clearly not the intention of the Court. I have used the terms 'aside from' in the text above, in order to stress that exclusionary measures designed to ensure observance of the principles of equal treatment of all tenderers and of transparency in procedures for the award of public contracts are of a different specie or nature to the exclusionary grounds contained in Article 24 of Directive 93/37 and Article 29 of Directive 92/50. The fact that Article 24 of Directive 93/37 and Article 29 of Directive 92/50 contain an exhaustive list of grounds for excluding candidates on the basis of their professional quality is, in my view confirmed by Article 45 of Directive 2004/18/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 31 March 2004 on the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts, public supply contracts and public service contracts (OJ 2004 L 134, p. 114). Article 45(2) of Directive 2004/18 replicates the seven grounds concerning professional quality contained in both Article 24 of Directive 93/37 and Article 29 of Directive 92/50. However, an entirely new and distinct category of compulsory grounds for exclusion of candidates is added in Article 45(1) of Directive 2004/18 based, inter alia, on candidates' convictions for participation in organised crime, corruption and fraud.

17 – See to that effect paragraphs 55, 56 and 48 of Michaniki (cited in footnote 14) and the case-law cited therein. While the Michaniki case concerns a national provision which establishes a general system of incompatibility between the sector of public works and that of the media and results in the exclusion from the award of public works contracts contractors who are also involved in the media sector, the ratio or principles of law underlining that ruling are, in my view, of general application in the field of procedures for the award of public contracts and are by no means specific or limited to the media sector. Thus national provisions which seek to give effect to the principles of equal treatment and transparency and which are proportionate in nature, do not, in principle, contravene the Community rules governing the procedures for the award of public contracts.

---

18 – The referring court clearly stated in the order for reference that Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/94 is a rule laid down for the protection of a vital interest of society ('norma di ordine pubblico'). According to the referring court Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/94 applies in general and thus to service and supply contracts, irrespective of whether the contracting authority has specifically imposed that provision (see point 14 above).

---

19 – The Italian Republic at the hearing referred to the fact that the national measure in question was adopted following a number of scandals which arose in the field of public tenders. In addition, the Commission gave examples in its written and oral pleadings of the manner in which a company which controls another could distort a tendering procedure in which both companies participate.

---

20 – Subject to verification by the referring court, Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/94 does not seem to address collusive behaviour in the sense of Article 81 EC. Article 10 (1bis) of Law No 109/94 appears rather to address situations where two or more formally distinct companies which in fact constitute one economic unit, simultaneously participate in a tendering procedure thereby impairing the equal treatment of all tenderers and the transparency of procedures for the award of public contracts. In the absence, inter alia, of an agreement or concerted practice between undertakings, Article 81 EC does not apply (see Case C–73/95 P Viho v Commission [1996] ECR I–5457, paragraphs 48 to 51).

---

---

22 – Indeed, the application of such a national measure may have the consequence that persons may be precluded from tendering procedures even though their participation in the procedure entails no risk whatsoever for the equal treatment of tenderers and the transparency of procedures for the award of public contracts.

Question referred

Does Article 29 of Directive 92/50/EEC, [1] in laying down seven grounds for exclusion from participation in service contracts, give an exhaustive list of cases of exclusion and therefore preclude Article 10(1bis) of Law No 109/94 (now replaced by Article 34, last paragraph, of Legislative Decree No 136/86) from imposing a prohibition on simultaneous participation in a tendering procedure of undertakings which are linked by a relationship of control?

Arrêt

1 Par sa requête, la Commission des Communautés européennes demande à la Cour de constater que, la commune de L'Aquila (Italie) (ci-après la «commune») ayant attribué un marché public de travaux concernant la conception et la réalisation d'une ligne de tramway sur pneus pour le transport en commun public dans cette ville au moyen d'une procédure telle que celle du «financement de projet», visant à l'attribution d'une concession de travaux, et ayant procédé à une modification du projet préliminaire sur lequel se fondait l'appel d'offres, postérieurement à la publication de l'avis de marché, la République italienne a manqué aux obligations qui lui incombent en vertu, respectivement, de la directive 93/37/CEE du Conseil, du 14 juin 1993, portant coordination des procédures de passation des marchés publics de travaux (JO L 199, p. 54), notamment de ses articles 7 et 11, ainsi que des articles 43 CE et 49 CE et des principes de transparence et de non-discrimination qui en constituent le corollaire.

Le cadre juridique

La réglementation communautaire

2 L'article 1er, sous a), de la directive 93/37 définit les marchés publics de travaux de la manière suivante:

«les 'marchés publics de travaux' sont des contrats à titre onéreux, conclus par écrit entre, d'une part, un entrepreneur et, d'autre part, un pouvoir adjudicateur défini au point b) et ayant pour objet soit l'exécution, soit conjointement l'exécution et la conception des travaux relatifs à une des activités visées à l'annexe II ou d'un ouvrage défini au point c), soit la réalisation, par quelque moyen que ce soit, d'un ouvrage répondant aux besoins précisés par le pouvoir adjudicateur».

3 L'article 1er, sous d), de ladite directive définit la concession de travaux publics dans les termes suivants:

«la 'concession de travaux publics' est un contrat présentant les mêmes caractères que ceux visés au point a), à l'exception du fait que la contrepartie des travaux consiste soit uniquement dans le droit d'exploiter l'ouvrage, soit dans ce droit assorti d'un prix».

4 L'article 7 de la directive 93/37 prévoit que, pour passer leurs marchés publics de travaux, les pouvoirs adjudicateurs appliquent soit la procédure ouverte, soit la procédure restreinte et qu'ils peuvent recourir à la procédure négociée dans certains cas exceptionnels, limitativement énumérés. Ces obligations ne s'appliquent pas à l'attribution des concessions de travaux publics.

5 L'article 11, paragraphes 2 et 3, de ladite directive prévoit:

«2. Les pouvoirs adjudicateurs désireux de passer un marché public de travaux par procédure ouverte, restreinte ou négociée dans les cas visés à l'article 7 paragraphe 2 font connaître leur intention au moyen d'un avis.

3. Les pouvoirs adjudicateurs désireux d'avoir recours à la concession de travaux publics font connaître leur intention au moyen d'un avis.»

La réglementation nationale

6 Les articles 37 bis à 37 quater de la loi n° 109, loi-cadre sur les travaux publics (legge quadro in materia di lavori pubblici), du 11 février 1994 (supplément ordinaire à la GURI n° 41, du 19 février 1994, ci-après la «loi n° 109/94») traitent de l'attribution des marchés publics de travaux financés, en tout ou en partie, par des personnes privées.

7 L'article 37 bis de cette loi permet à des personnes privées de présenter aux organismes adjudicateurs des propositions de réalisation de travaux publics ou de travaux d'utilité publique et de signer les contrats correspondants prévoyant le financement et la gestion des travaux.

8 L'article 37 ter de la même loi décrit la procédure de sélection du promoteur. Ainsi, il prévoit que les pouvoirs adjudicateurs évaluent la faisabilité des propositions présentées sous différents aspects: construction, urbanisme, environnement, qualité du projet, fonctionnalité, jouissance de l'ouvrage, accessibilité au public, rendement, coût de gestion et d'entretien, durée de la concession, délais de réalisation des travaux de la concession, tarifs applicables et méthode de révision, valeur économique et financière du plan et contenu du projet de convention. Ces pouvoirs doivent s'assurer qu'aucun élément n'empêche la réalisation de ces propositions et, après avoir examiné et comparé ces dernières et entendu les promoteurs qui le demandent, ils indiquent quelle proposition est d'intérêt public.

9 Dans ce cas, en application de l'article 37 quater de la loi n° 109/94, est mise en œuvre une procédure restreinte destinée à susciter la présentation de deux autres offres. La concession est ensuite attribuée dans le cadre d'une procédure négociée au cours de laquelle la proposition du promoteur initialement sélectionné et ces autres offres sont examinées. Au cours de cette procédure, ledit promoteur peut adapter sa proposition à celle que le pouvoir adjudicateur estime convenir le mieux. Si tel est le cas, il deviendra adjudicataire de la concession.

10 Cette procédure est désignée sous le nom de «financement de projet» («finanza di progetto»).

Les antécédents du litige et la procédure précontentieuse

11 Par décision n° 49, du 29 janvier 2002, la commune a constaté, en application de l'article 37 ter de la loi n° 109/94, la faisabilité et l'intérêt public d'une proposition présentée par le promoteur Raggruppamento CGRT (ci-après «CGRT»), relative à la conception et à la réalisation d'une ligne de tramway sur pneus pour le transport en commun public dans cette ville. Selon cette décision, le montant estimé des travaux était de 33 569 698,44 euros, dont 20 141 819,06 euros, soit 60 % de celui-ci, financés directement par le ministère des Infrastructures et des Transports (Ministero delle Infrastrutture e dei Trasporti) et 13 427 879,38 euros, soit les 40 % restants, financés par CGRT.

12 Par décision n° 212, du 26 mars 2002, la commune a lancé un appel d'offres pour l'attribution d'une concession de travaux en vue de la construction de cette ligne de tramway. L'avis de concession a été publié, notamment, au Journal officiel des Communautés européennes, série S, du 25 avril 2002, sous la référence 2002/S 81–063094.

13 Cet appel d'offres s'étant révélé infructueux, la commune a, par décision n° 798, du 27 novembre 2002, attribué cette concession à CGRT. La commune et CGRT ont conclu un contrat en conséquence de cette attribution le 2 décembre 2002.

14 Le point 12, sous c), du préambule de ce contrat indique que la personne qui sera chargée de la gestion du service de tramway par la voie d'un contrat de services à conclure avec la commune devra payer une redevance périodique à CGRT.

15 L'article 5 de ce contrat stipule, en ce qui concerne la rémunération du concessionnaire:

Comme mentionné au point 12, sous c), du préambule afin de garantir le respect des prévisions du plan économico-financier joint au projet préliminaire et, partant, la viabilité économique et financière de l'opération, le concessionnaire se verra attribuer à titre de rémunération, outre la contribution publique, le droit d'exploiter la ligne de tramway sur le plan tant opérationnel qu'économique, pendant toute la durée de la concession, ce droit pouvant être assorti de la perception d'une redevance spécifiée dans ledit plan économico-financier et due par le gestionnaire du service qui aura conclu un contrat de services avec le concédant, en contrepartie de ladite exploitation et pour l'utilisation de la ligne de tramway et des ouvrages connexes réalisés par le concessionnaire.

À cette fin, le concédant, eu égard à la nécessité de garantir l'équilibre économico-financier du concessionnaire et au fait qu'il est essentiel, à cet effet, que le gestionnaire du service assure ponctuellement le paiement de la redevance susmentionnée au concessionnaire, s'engage, par la présente convention et pour toute la durée de celle-ci, à prévoir expressément, dans le ou les appels d'offres et les documents annexes pour l'attribution du service de transport public lié à la ligne de tramway et en particulier dans le contrat de services régissant la prestation de ce service, l'obligation pour le gestionnaire du service de payer au concessionnaire ladite redevance, telle qu'indiquée dans le plan économico-financier annexé au projet préliminaire.»

16 D'après les éléments figurant au dossier, le montant de la redevance que le gestionnaire du service de tramway devrait payer à CGRT a été fixé à 1 446 079,32 euros par an pendant une période de trente ans.

17 À la date d'introduction du présent recours, la commune n'avait pas encore désigné de gestionnaire dudit service.

18 Par ailleurs, le projet préliminaire de l'ouvrage, sur lequel se fondait l'appel d'offres, a été modifié dans le projet définitif que CGRT a présenté après la publication de l'avis de concession. Ces modifications ont été approuvées par le ministère des Infrastructures et des Transports par note du 29 septembre 2004.

19 Sans que le coût total de l'ouvrage soit changé, le coût des travaux relevant de la catégorie «bâtiments civils et industriels», estimé à 2 948 695,88 euros dans le projet préliminaire, a été porté à 7 613 505,11 euros dans le projet définitif, tandis que le coût des travaux relevant de la catégorie «équipements de traction électrique», estimé à 3 956 137,32 euros dans le projet préliminaire, a été porté à 3 140 566,98 euros dans le projet définitif.

20 À la suite d'une plainte relative à l'attribution des travaux en cause, la Commission a pris contact, les 16 et 17 juin 2005, avec les autorités italiennes, lesquelles lui ont fourni certaines informations.

21 N'étant pas satisfaite des réponses données par ces autorités, la Commission a adressé à la République italienne une lettre de mise en demeure le 18 octobre 2005 et un avis motivé le 4 juillet 2006, avant de former le présent recours.

Sur le recours

22 À l'appui de son recours, la Commission invoque deux griefs.

Sur le premier grief

Argumentation des parties

23 La Commission fait valoir, par son premier grief, que le contrat conclu entre la commune et CGRT le 2 décembre 2002 constitue un marché public de travaux au sens du droit communautaire. Certes, la contrepartie des travaux, en l'espèce, consisterait en partie dans le droit d'exploiter l'ouvrage. Cependant, dans la mesure où CGRT n'exploite pas lui-même l'ouvrage, mais perçoit une redevance garantie par un tiers chargé de l'exploitation de celui-ci, CGRT n'assumerait pas le risque financier de cette exploitation. Par conséquent, cette opération ne pourrait être qualifiée de concession de travaux publics. Elle devrait être qualifiée de marché public de travaux et devrait respecter des procédures de passation y afférentes.

24 La passation de ce marché par la voie d'une procédure telle que celle du «financement de projet», qui vise à l'attribution d'une concession de travaux publics, serait contraire aux dispositions de la directive 93/37, et notamment à ses articles 7 et 11.

25 La République italienne estime que, en l'espèce, le schéma de la concession se réalise pleinement. Le concessionnaire réaliserait l'ouvrage moyennant un concours financier fixe ne dépassant pas 60 % du prix de celui-ci. Les risques liés à cette réalisation seraient assumés par le concessionnaire qui ne pourrait rien exiger en dehors de ce concours financier.

26 En ce qui concerne le droit d'exploiter l'infrastructure, le service de transport en commun serait réservé dans la commune à un seul opérateur, à savoir Azienda della Mobilità Aquilana SpA (ci-après «AMA»), celle-ci étant tenue d'appliquer à l'égard des utilisateurs un prix administré et d'utiliser une billetterie intégrée avec les autres services de transport. Pour cette raison, le droit pour CGRT d'exploiter l'ouvrage se transformerait en un droit de percevoir une redevance fixe de la part d'AMA. Il s'agirait là d'une modalité d'exploitation de l'ouvrage qui n'enlève pas à l'opération en cause son caractère de concession de travaux publics.

27 Il résulte de l'article 1er, sous d), de la directive 93/37, applicable à la date des faits, que la concession de travaux publics est un contrat présentant les mêmes caractéristiques qu'un marché public de travaux, à l'exception du fait que la contrepartie des travaux consiste soit uniquement dans le droit d'exploiter l'ouvrage, soit dans ce droit assorti d'un prix.

28 La Commission fait valoir que, en outre, la concession de travaux publics est caractérisée par le fait qu'elle implique un transfert du risque lié à l'exploitation de l'ouvrage vers le concessionnaire.

29 Sur ce point, la Cour a considéré que l'on est en présence d'une concession de services lorsque le mode de rémunération convenu tient dans le droit du prestataire d'exploiter sa propre prestation et implique que celui-ci prenne en charge le risque lié à l'exploitation des services en question (voir arrêt du 18 juillet 2007, Commission/Italie, C-382/05, Rec. p. I-6657, point 34 et jurisprudence citée).

30 Il résulte également de la jurisprudence que l'absence de transfert au prestataire du risque lié à la prestation des services indique que l'opération visée constitue un marché public de services et non pas une concession de services publics (voir, en ce sens, arrêts du 27 octobre 2005, Contse e.a., C-234/03, Rec. p. I-9315, point 22, et Commission/Italie, précité, points 35 et 37).

31 Ces considérations, établies en ce qui concerne les marchés et concessions de services, valent pour les marchés et concessions de travaux.

32 En l'espèce, si l'article 5 du contrat conclu le 2 décembre 2002 entre la commune et CGRT prévoit que cette dernière se verra attribuer à titre de rémunération, outre la contribution publique, le droit d'exploiter la ligne de tramway en question, il ressort de ce même article 5, du point 12, sous c), du préambule de ce contrat ainsi que des autres éléments du dossier que l'exploitation du tramway doit être assurée par un gestionnaire qui devra conclure un contrat de services, non pas avec le concessionnaire, mais avec le concédant qui fixera le montant à payer au concessionnaire.

33 Le montant de la redevance qui devrait être payée à CGRT par le futur gestionnaire du service de tramway s'élève à 1 446 079,32 euros par an pendant 30 ans. Il résulte des éléments figurant au dossier que ce montant fixe a été calculé pour assurer le paiement à CGRT de la fraction du coût de l'ouvrage, égale à 40 % de ce dernier, dont les pouvoirs publics italiens n'assurent pas directement le versement.

34 Dans une telle situation, CGRT n'assume pas les risques liés à l'exploitation de l'ouvrage en question.

35 Il s'ensuit qu'il convient de qualifier l'opération en cause de marché public de travaux et non pas de concession de travaux publics.

36 Il est constant que, en l'espèce, le montant estimé des travaux envisagés dépasse le seuil d'application de la directive 93/37.

37 Par conséquent lesdits travaux auraient dû être attribués conformément aux procédures prévues par la directive 93/37 pour la passation des marchés publics de travaux.

38 Il est constant que, en l'espèce, la procédure d'attribution appliquée par la commune ne correspond pas à ces procédures.

39 Par conséquent, il convient de considérer le premier grief invoqué par la Commission comme fondé.

Sur le second grief

Argumentation des parties

40 Par son second grief, la Commission affirme que la modification du projet préliminaire de l'ouvrage en cause, sur lequel se fondait l'appel d'offres, après la publication de l'avis de concession, est contraire aux articles 43 CE et 49 CE ainsi qu'aux principes de transparence et de non-discrimination qui en constituent le corollaire.

41 La République italienne estime que ce second grief est dénué de fondement. En effet, l'appel à la concurrence se serait déroulé sur la base d'un projet préliminaire à caractère expérimental et une série d'ajustements techniques se seraient révélés indispensables afin d'assurer la sécurité et la viabilité du projet. Par ailleurs, les modifications techniques qui ont été apportées n'auraient pas altéré les termes globaux de l'opération ni favorisé un opérateur au détriment d'un autre.

42 Tel qu'il est présenté dans la requête, le second grief est tiré d'une violation des règles applicables aux concessions, notamment des articles 43 CE et 49 CE, du principe de non-discrimination et de l'obligation de transparence, à l'exclusion des directives communautaires en matière de marchés publics. Au soutien de ce grief, la Commission cite exclusivement des arrêts de la Cour ayant pour objet des concessions et non pas des marchés publics.

43 Ce grief serait opérant dans l'hypothèse où l'opération en cause serait qualifiée de concession de travaux publics et non pas de marché public de travaux, contrairement à ce que la Commission fait valoir dans le cadre de son premier grief.

44 Or, la Cour a accueilli ce premier grief en constatant, au point 30 du présent arrêt, que l'opération en cause constitue un marché public de travaux et non pas une concession de travaux publics.

45 Dans ces conditions, il n'y a pas lieu pour la Cour de se prononcer sur le second grief invoqué par la Commission.

46 Compte tenu de l'ensemble des considérations qui précèdent, il convient de constater que la commune ayant attribué un marché public de travaux concernant la conception et la réalisation d'une ligne de tramway sur pneus pour le transport en commun public dans cette ville au moyen d'une procédure autre que celles prévues pour la passation des marchés publics de travaux par la directive 93/37, la République italienne a manqué aux obligations qui lui incombent en vertu de cette directive.

Sur les dépens

47 En vertu de l'article 69, paragraphe 2, du règlement de procédure, toute partie qui succombe est condamnée aux dépens, s'il est conclu en ce sens. La Commission ayant conclu à la condamnation de la République italienne et celle-ci ayant en substance succombé en ses moyens, il y a lieu de la condamner aux dépens.

Par ces motifs, la Cour (troisième chambre) déclare et arrête:

1) La commune de L'Aquila ayant attribué un marché public de travaux concernant la conception et la réalisation d'une ligne de tramway sur pneus pour le transport en commun public dans cette ville au moyen d'une procédure autre que celles prévues pour la passation des marchés publics de travaux par la directive 93/37/CEE du Conseil, du 14 juin 1993, portant coordination des procédures de passation des marchés publics de travaux, la République italienne a manqué aux obligations qui lui incombent en vertu de cette directive.

2) La République italienne est condamnée aux dépens.

Defendant: Italian Republic

Forms of order sought

The applicant claims that the Court should :

declare that, in so far as the Comune di L'Aquila has awarded a public works contract for the design and construction of a rubber tramway for public transport in the town of L'Aquila by means of a procedure akin to the "project financing" procedure, designed to culminate in the award of a works concession, and amended the preliminary project on which the tenders were to be based after publication of the contract notice, the Italian Republic has failed to fulfil its obligations under Council Directive 93/37/EEC[1] of 14 June 1993 concerning the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts and, in particular, Articles 7 and 11 thereof, as well as its obligations under Articles 43 EC and 49 EC and the principles of transparency and non-discrimination which constitute the corollary thereto; order the Italian Republic to pay the costs.

Pleas in law and main arguments

The Comune di L'Aquila (Municipality of L'Aquila) has awarded a public works contract for the design and construction of a rubber tramway for public transport in the town of L'Aquila by means of a "project financing" procedure designed to culminate in the award of a works concession, not a public works contract. The Comune di L'Aquila also amended - after publication of the contract notice - the preliminary project on which the tenders were to be based.

In the view of the Commission, the agreement between the Comune di L'Aquila and the construction group concerned constitutes a public works contract for the purposes of Community law. In consequence, the award of that contract by means of a procedure akin to the "project financing" procedure, designed to culminate in the award of a works concession, is contrary to the rules laid down in Directive 93/37 and, in particular, to Articles 7 and 11 thereof. Furthermore, the amendment, after publication of the contract notice, of the project on which the tenders were to be based is incompatible with the principles of transparency and non-discrimination, on which the freedom of establishment and the freedom to provide services, as provided for in Articles 43 EC and 49 EC, are based.

Judgment

1 By its application, the Commission of the European Communities asks the Court to declare that, by failing to include, in the works to be awarded by concession in the concession notice and in the tendering specifications relating to the award of a public concession for the construction, maintenance and operation of the link roads from the A-6 motorway to Segovia and Ávila, and for the maintenance and operation from 2018 of the Villalba-Adanero section of the A-6 motorway, certain works which were subsequently awarded with the contract, including works on the toll-free section of the A-6 motorway, the Kingdom of Spain has failed to fulfil its obligations under Article 3 of Directive 93/37/EEC of 14 June 1993 concerning the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts (OJ 1993 L 199, p. 54), and, accordingly, under Article 11(3), (6), (7), (11) and (12) thereof, and has infringed the principles of the EC Treaty, in particular those of equal treatment and non-discrimination.

Community legislation

2 Directive 93/37 states, in the fifth recital in the preamble thereto, that, '... in view of the increasing importance of concession contracts in the public works area and of their specific nature, rules concerning advertising should be included in this Directive'.

3 Pursuant to Article 1(c) of that directive:

'a "work" means the outcome of building or civil engineering ... works taken as a whole that is sufficient of itself to fulfil an economic and technical function'.

4 In accordance with the definition in Article 1(d) of that directive:

'"public works concession" is a contract of the same type as that indicated in (a) [concerning public works contracts] except for the fact that the consideration for the works to be carried out consists either solely in the right to exploit the construction or in this right together with payment'.

5 Article 3 of Directive 93/37 provides:

'1. Should contracting authorities conclude a public works concession contract, the advertising rules as described in Article 11(3), (6), (7) and (9) to (13), and in Article 15, shall apply to that contract when its value is not less than ECU 5 000 000.

...

4. Member States shall take the necessary steps to ensure that a concessionnaire other than a contracting authority shall apply the advertising rules listed in Article 11(4), (6), (7), and (9) to (13), and in Article 16, in respect of the contracts which it awards to third parties when the value of the contracts is not less than ECU 5 000 000. ...

...'

6 Article 11 of Directive 93/37, which forms part of Title III thereof, entitled 'Common advertising rules', provides:

'1. Contracting authorities shall make known, by means of an indicative notice, the essential characteristics of the works contracts which they intend to award and the estimated value of which is not less than the threshold laid down in Article 6(1).

...

3. Contracting authorities who wish to award a works concession contract shall make known their intention by means of a notice.

...

6. The notices referred to in paragraphs 1 to 5 shall be drawn up in accordance with the models given in Annexes IV, V and VI, and shall specify the information requested in those Annexes.

...

7. The contracting authorities shall send the notices referred to in paragraphs 1 to 5 as rapidly as possible and by the most appropriate channels to the Office for Official Publications of the European Communities. ...

...

9. The notices referred to in paragraphs 2, 3 and 4 shall be published in full in the Official Journal of the European Communities ...

10. The Office for Official Publications of the European Communities shall publish the notices not later than 12 days after their dispatch. In the case of the accelerated procedure referred to in Article 14, this period shall be reduced to five days.

11. The notice shall not be published in the official journals or in the press of the country of the contracting authority before the date of dispatch to the Office for Official Publications of the European Communities and it shall mention this date. It shall not contain information other than that published in the Official Journal of the European Communities.

12. The contracting authorities must be able to supply evidence of the date of dispatch.

7 The annexes referred to in Article 11(6) of Directive 93/37 contain model notices to be published by the contracting authority in the Official Journal of the European Communities. Annex IV to that directive concerns public works contracts, Annex V public works concession contracts and Annex VI contains the model notice where the concessionnaire wishes to conclude with third parties contracts for performance of work which have been awarded to it.

8 Article 15 of that directive provides:

'Contracting authorities who wish to award a works concession contract shall fix a time limit for receipt of candidatures for the concession, which shall not be less than 52 days from the date of dispatch of the notice.'

9 Article 61 of Directive 2004/18/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 31 March 2004 on the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts, public supply contracts and public service contracts (OJ 2004 L 134, p. 114), entitled 'Awarding of additional works to the concessionaire', provides:

'This Directive shall not apply to additional works not included in the concession project initially considered or in the initial contract but which have, through unforeseen circumstances, become necessary for the performance of the work described therein, which the contracting authority has awarded to the concessionaire, on condition that the award is made to the economic operator performing such work:

– when such additional works cannot be technically or economically separated from the initial contract without major inconvenience to the contracting authorities, or – when such works, although separable from the performance of the initial contract, are strictly necessary for its completion.

However, the aggregate value of contracts awarded for additional works may not exceed 50% of the amount of the original works concession contract.'

10 The Commission interpretative communication on concessions under Community law (OJ 2000 C 121, p. 2) states, in point 3.1.1 thereof, entitled 'Equality of treatment':

'...

[I]n certain cases, the grantor may be unable to specify his requirements in sufficiently precise technical terms and will look for alternative offers likely to provide various solutions to a problem expressed in general terms. In such cases, however, in order to ensure fair and effective competition, the specifications must always state in a non-discriminatory and objective manner what is asked of the candidates and above all the way in which they must draw up their bids. ...'

National legislation

11 Law 8 of 10 May 1972 on the construction, maintenance and exploitation of motorways under concession contracts, in the version in force since 1996 ('the Law on motorways'), provides in the second subparagraph of Article 8(2) thereof:

'... the construction of road infrastructure works, other than those included in the contract but affecting it, which are carried out in the area of impact of the motorway or which are necessary to organisation of the traffic, whose project and performance, or merely performance, the concessionaire is obliged to carry out as the consideration for the contract, shall form part of the business object of the concessionaire undertaking, …'

12 Royal Decree 597 of 16 April 1999 fixes as 20 km the area of impact of motorways.

The disputed operation

13 The A-6 motorway links Madrid to La Coruña and constitutes the main road axis linking the centre to the north and north-west of Spain. It is common ground that this is one of the major and busiest road arteries in that country. The section of that motorway between Madrid and Villalba is a toll-free section, approximately 40 km long, and crosses an area which is, in fact, urban. The section between the cities of Villalba and Adanero is a toll section, approximately 70 km long ('the toll section of the A-6 motorway'). It is common ground that those two motorway sections have for a long time had very heavy traffic and serious congestion problems.

14 Since 1968, the toll section of the A-6 motorway has been managed under a concession by the undertaking Ibérica de Autopistas SA ('Iberpistas'). That concession was granted until 29 January 2018.

15 By decree of 26 May 1997, the Spanish Ministry of Public Works announced its intention to include in the 'motorway plan', approved by the Spanish Government in February 1997, the construction of motorways connecting the cities of Segovia and Ávila to the A-6 motorway, since, 'having regard to the large traffic flows which currently exist and which cause traffic congestion …, the construction of the motorways connecting those cities with the current A-6 motorway is of exceptional public interest as regards their development'.

16 By notice published in the Official Journal of the European Communities (OJ S 115, 16 June 1999) ('the first notice') and by tender specifications approved by decree of 4 June 1999 (BOE No 136, 8 June 1999; 'the first tender specifications'), the Ministry of Public Works, acting as concession-granting authority, opened a procedure with a view to awarding a public works concession. Paragraph 2 of the first notice and clause No 2, paragraph 4, of the first tender specifications, the content of which was identical, set out the object of the concession to be awarded.

17 That object concerned the following works:

– the construction, maintenance and operation of the link roads on the toll section of the A-6 motorway with the cities of Ávila and Segovia,

– the maintenance and operation, from 30 January 2018, of the toll section of the A-6 motorway, for a period to be determined on the basis of the number of vehicles transiting that section, – construction of the bypass around the city of Guadarrama, a municipality on the toll section of the A-6 motorway, and – widening of a part of the toll-free section of the A-6 motorway, that is to say the section between Madrid and Villalba. A fourth lane was to be constructed in both directions with a view to increasing the capacity of the A-6 motorway over that section.

18 By decree of 7 July 1999 (BOE No 163, 9 July 1999), the concession-granting authority published new tender specifications ('the second tender specifications'). A new notice was published in the Official Journal of the European Communities (OJ S 137, 17 July 1999; 'the second notice'). The preamble to that second decree stated that, 'it is necessary for technical reasons to amend the [first tender] specifications, in order to redefine the object of the concession to be awarded and to make some changes in the definition of the duration of the concession'.

19 Paragraph 2 of the second notice and clause No 2 of the second tender specifications defined the object of the concession as follows:

'1. The construction, maintenance and operation of the toll section of the A-6 motorway, link with Segovia, …

2. The construction, maintenance and operation of the toll section of the A-6 motorway, link with Ávila. …

3. The maintenance and operation of the A-6 toll motorway, Villalba–Adanero section. …'

20 It follows that the second notice and second tender specifications did not mention in the object of the concession the construction of the Guadarrama bypass or the widening of part of the toll-free section of the A-6 motorway.

21 Clause No 3 of the second tender specifications referred to the 'administrative file'.

22 Paragraphs 13 and 16 of clause No 5 of the second tender specifications, the wording of which was the same in the first tender specifications, provided:

'13. Tenderers shall state expressly in their tenders the measures they intend to adopt in connection with the effects of the concession on the road network as a whole, local tourist interests, and the upkeep of monuments of historical or artistic interest, and in connection with the protection and conservation of the countryside and nature, without prejudice to compliance with the legislation in force in those fields.

16. Tenderers shall inform the authorities of the measures they propose to take for adequate traffic management between cities in the area affected by the construction of the sections that are the object of the concession, stating which of these measures they intend to implement at their own expense. The creative character and feasibility of these proposals will carry due weight in the award procedure, having regard to the high level of congestion in the areas where traffic will be affected by the roads that are the object of the concession.'

23 Clause No 10 of the second tender specifications, which was identical to that in the first tender specifications, listed the criteria which were to be taken into consideration in awarding the contract. Those criteria included:

– the viability of the tender submitted and the extent of the resources used (point III),

– the measures proposed for traffic and environmental management (point V).

24 Sub-criterion V.i stated:

'[t]he measures proposed for traffic management between cities, including those relating to the installation of a dynamic toll in the area affected by the construction of the sections which are the object of the concession, can obtain up to 75 points for their creativity, viability and efficiency'.

25 Clause No 29 of the second tender specifications stated that, with regard to the toll sections of the A-6 motorway connecting to Ávila and Segovia, the concessionnaire is required to ensure that traffic does not exceed a certain level, expressed in technical terms, at any point on the motorway and is required to widen the road where necessary at its own expense.

26 Finally, clause No 33 of the second tender specifications provided that the duration of the contract would be neither greater than 37 years nor less than 22 years, and that the exact duration of the contract, calculated in years, would be determined having regard to the actual trends in traffic on each of the different sections, which would be estimated 20 years after the commencement of the contract.

27 By virtue of Royal Decree 1724/1999 of 5 November 1999, the concession-granting authority awarded the concession to Iberpistas. Article 5 of that Royal Decree nevertheless provided for works to be carried out in addition to those listed in the second notice and in the second tender specifications. Thus, in addition to the construction of link roads to the toll section of the A-6 motorway with Ávila and Segovia, and the maintenance and operation of the toll section of the A–6 motorway between Villalba and Adanero, the following works were required:

– the construction of a third lane in each direction on the part of the toll section of the A-6 motorway between Villalba and the Valle de los Caídos junction ('works A'),

– the construction of a third reversible lane on the part of the toll section of the A-6 motorway between the Valle de los Caídos junction and the city of San Rafael, including the construction of a new tunnel ('works B'), and

– the construction of a fourth lane in each direction on the toll-free section of the A-6 motorway between Madrid and Villalba ('works C').

28 Works A, B and C are referred to below as 'additional works'.

29 It follows from the foregoing that works C were mentioned in the first notice and the first tender specifications, but not in the second. Works A and B were not mentioned in either the first or the second. With regard to the construction of a bypass around Guadarrama, which was listed in the first tender specifications but not in the second, it was not included in the object of the concession awarded to Iberpistas and in the end were not carried out.

30 It is apparent from the file that the link road between the toll section of the A-6 motorway and Segovia came into operation in 2003 and that the fourth lane on the toll-free section of the A-6 motorway (works C) came into operation on 1 January 2006. It is also apparent from the file that the other works were carried out in the meantime.

31 It is also apparent from a letter from the Spanish authorities, dated 28 November 2001, that the cost of the works expressly mentioned in the second notice and the second tender specifications, that is to say, the link roads between the toll section of the A-6 motorway and Segovia and Ávila, was EUR 151.76 million. That cost does not include that of the maintenance and operation works on the toll section of the A-6 motorway, the concession for which was granted from 30 January 2018. The cost of the three additional works was EUR 132.03 million.

The pre-litigation procedure

32 Being unsure as to the validity of the procedure which led to the grant of the concessions for the additional works in the light of the rules of Directive 93/37, on 30 April 2001 the Commission sent the Kingdom of Spain a letter of formal notice to which the Spanish authorities replied by letter of 27 June 2001. Since it did not consider the explanations given by that Member State to be satisfactory, on 18 July 2002, the Commission issued a reasoned opinion, to which that State replied by letters of 20 September 2002 and 13 March 2003.

33 On 25 July 2003, the Commission sent an additional letter of formal notice to the Kingdom of Spain concerning infringement of the principles of equal treatment and non-discrimination, to which Spain replied by letter of 28 October 2003. On 22 December 2004, the Commission sent an additional reasoned opinion concerning infringement of those principles, to which that Member State replied by letter of 3 March 2005. Not satisfied with that reply, the Commission instituted the present action.

The action

Admissibility

34 The Kingdom of Spain raises two pleas of inadmissibility. Firstly, it submits that the application does not satisfy the requirements of the Rules of Procedure of the Court, since the Commission has not provided evidence that the lawyer representing it is qualified to do so. Moreover, that institution has not shown that that lawyer is authorised to appear in the present case, since she is not acting as an agent of the Commission.

35 Secondly, the Kingdom of Spain raises a plea of inadmissibility alleging that the Commission's application lacks clarity, in so far as it refers without distinction to infringement of Articles 3 and 11 (3), (6), (7), (11) and (12) of Directive 93/37. The only provision of Article 3 capable of being taken into account in the present case is paragraph 1 thereof. In addition, the concession-granting authority entirely fulfilled its obligations under Article 11(3), (7), (11) and (12) of that directive in the present case. Furthermore, Article 11(6) thereof refers to Annexes IV, V and VI to that directive, although only Annex V is applicable to the present case. Accordingly, the subject-matter of the action is indeterminate.

36 With regard to the first plea of inadmissibility, the Commission was properly represented by three agents assisted by a lawyer. Moreover, the Commission attached to its application a copy of a document certifying that the lawyer in question is authorised to practice, within the meaning of Article 38(2) of the Rules of Procedure of the Court, as a lawyer before a court of a Member State, that is to say, the Kingdom of Spain.

37 In the same way, the second plea of inadmissibility cannot be accepted. It is unequivocally apparent from all the documents lodged before the Court that the action and the complaints of the Commission concern the failure to comply, in the procedure for award of the concession for the works in question, with the advertising obligations imposed on the concession-granting authority by the relevant provisions of Directive 93/37, since not all the works actually awarded and carried out were mentioned in the notice laid down for that purpose by those provisions.

38 Accordingly, in the present case there is no problem of clarity of the subject-matter such as to call into question the admissibility of the action.

39 The possibility that certain of the provisions of Directive 93/37 relied on by the Commission in support of its complaints may prove irrelevant to the present case does not render its action inadmissible.

Substance

Arguments of the parties

40 In essence, the Commission submits that the object of a concession, as described in the notice and in the tender specifications, and the works actually awarded must match. The object of the concession at issue was precisely defined in clause No 2 of the second tender specifications and concerns specific works, that is to say the link roads between the toll section of the A-6 motorway and Segovia and Ávila and the maintenance and operation of that section from 30 January 2018. However, the additional works were not mentioned in either the second notice or the second tender specifications.

41 The Kingdom of Spain's alleged failure to fulfil obligations thus consists, in the view of the Commission, in the fact that the Spanish authorities made a later extension to the object of the concession by awarding to Iberpistas works which had not been advertised and which were outside the geographical area covered by the object of the concession as advertised. That constitutes a failure to fulfil the obligations imposed on the Member States by virtue of the relevant provisions of Articles 3 and 11 of Directive 93/37.

42 The Commission argues that neither the alteration to the object of the concession in the second notice and the second tender specifications nor the wording of clauses No 5(13) and (16) and No 29 of the second tender specifications could give a reasonably aware and informed tenderer to understand that in fact it was requested by the competent authorities to submit proposals for carrying out works such as the additional works. Were that not the case, it would amount to accepting that tenderers could propose work on all the roads in the provinces of Madrid, Segovia and Ávila, since the traffic on those roads could be affected by the works forming the object of the concession.

43 In the view of the Commission, the fact that the additional works were not included in the object of the concession and that an averagely informed tenderer would not be able to deduce from the tender specifications that it could submit proposals relating to the performance of works of such wide scope favoured only Iberpistas, which was already the concessionaire for the toll section of the A-6 motorway and was aware of the real requirements of the awarding authority. However, neither the other candidates nor the potential tenderers could have known all the factors which were to be taken into consideration for award of the concession, which constitutes infringement of the principle of equal treatment of the tenderers.

44 The Kingdom of Spain submits, firstly, that, as is apparent from the second tender specifications, the invitation to tender was governed not only by those specifications but also by all the legislation applicable to invitation to tender procedures, that is to say, by the Law on motorways and by the general tender specifications approved by Decree No 215 of 25 January 1973. The aim of that legislation was to allow, in accord with the implementation of the abovementioned motorways plan, broad scope for initiatives from private undertakings both when submitting their tenders and during the performance of their activities after award of the concession.

45 That approach was, furthermore, followed when awarding concessions for the construction of other motorways in Spain and, moreover, was confirmed by Article 8 of the Law on motorways which provides for the tenderers to propose additional works, whether inside the area of impact of motorways, in accordance with the definition of that term in national legislation, or outside that area.

46 In the present case, the second tender specifications no longer expressly mention the construction projects for certain works. That amendment was intended to leave it to the initiative and creativity of the private contractors to propose to the concession-granting authorities that works be carried out which would solve the traffic problems on the A-6 motorway, in particular after construction of the new link roads with Ávila and Segovia. In point of fact, the construction of those two new motorways worsened the traffic situation on the route concerned. Proposing a solution to that problem was left to the initiative of the tenderers, as is also apparent from the wording of clause No 5(13) and (16) and clauses No 28 and 33 of the second tender specifications.

47 Secondly, the Kingdom of Spain submits that, in any event, there can be no question in the present case of a failure to fulfil advertising obligations with regard to the award of the additional works. Iberpistas did not carry out those additional works itself, but opened them to invitation to tender and awarded them to third-party undertakings, in accordance with the requirements of publicity and competition laid down in Directive 93/37 and by the Spanish legislation. Those additional works were therefore carried out by third-party undertakings independent of the concessionaire Iberpistas.

48 Thirdly, the Kingdom of Spain points out that the complaints were lodged with the Commission not by unsuccessful tenderers nor by third parties actually or potentially interested in the award of the disputed concession, but by persons and bodies having no professional connection with that concession. Those complainants did not have any interest in the correct application of the rules of competition, but had other motives. All bodies wishing to participate in the procedure had the same information and none of the tenderers or actual or potential interested parties disputed, by complaint, claim or legal action, the result of the procedure. Accordingly, there was equality of treatment.

49 Fourthly, the Kingdom of Spain observes that those complainants, before turning to the Commission, had lodged two actions against the disputed procedure before the Tribunal Supremo, the Spanish Supreme Court, which was in the best position to rule on the question of fact raised in the present case concerning the determination of the reasons for the amendment made in the second contract notice. The Tribunal Supremo dismissed those actions by two judgments of 11 February and 4 October 2003, in which it examined the award of the disputed concession also in the light of Community law and held that the principles of equal treatment and of non-discrimination had been upheld.

Findings of the Court

50 A preliminary point to note is that, although the Commission complains that the Kingdom of Spain has breached Articles 3 and 11(3), (6), (7), (11) and (12) of Directive 93/37, it does not dispute either the fact that a notice of invitation to tender was published or the timing and means of that publication, as laid down in Article 11(7), (11) and (12) of that directive. In addition, it is apparent from its application that, with regard to Article 3 of that directive, the Commission's action relates only to Article 3(1) thereof.

51 In those circumstances, the Commission's action must be examined in the light of Articles 3(1) and 11(3) and (6) only of Directive 93/37.

52 In that regard, it is established that the operation at issue in the present case constitutes a 'public works concession' within the meaning of Article 1(d) of Directive 93/37. In accordance with that provision, the 'public works concession' is a contract of the same type as those concerning 'public works contracts' except for the fact that the consideration for the works consists either solely in the right to exploit the construction or in this right together with payment.

53 In accordance with Article 3(1) of Directive 93/37, should contracting authorities conclude a public works concession contract, the advertising rules as defined inter alia in Article 11(3) and (6) of that directive are to apply to that contract when its value is not less than ECU 5 000 000.

54 Article 11(3) of that directive requires contracting authorities who wish to award a works concession contract to make known their intention by means of a notice. That notice, as is apparent from Article 11(6), must be drawn up in accordance with the models given in Annex V, and is to specify the information requested therein.

55 The information which that notice must contain includes, in accordance with Section II, entitled 'Object of the contract', of Annex V thereto, the main object and additional objects of the contract, a description of the object of the concession and of the location of the works referred to in the concession, and the quantity and overall scope thereof.

56 That advertising obligation, because it makes it possible to compare the offers which it contains, ensures a level of competition considered satisfactory by the European Union legislature in the field of public works concessions.

57 In that field, it is an expression of the principles of equal treatment and of transparency, with which the awarding authorities are required to comply in all circumstances.

58 By the clear formulation of the terms of the notice, the opportunity must be offered objectively to all potential tenderers, which are informed, experienced and reasonably aware, of forming a concrete idea of the works to be carried out and of their location, and in consequence of drafting their tenders.

59 The vital importance of the notice, as regards both public contracts and works concessions, with regard to the information, in conditions of compliance with the principle of equal treatment, for tenderers from different Member States, is emphasised in Article 11(11) of Directive 93/37, pursuant to which any publication of information at a national level must not contain information other than that published in the Official Journal of the European Communities.

60 Having regard, however, to the limited space available in the model concession notice set out in Annex V to Directive 93/37, information on a concession can be set out in detail in the tender specifications which the concession-granting authority must draw up and which constitute the natural complement to the notice.

61 In the present case, it must be held that the additional works to which the complaints of the Commission relate, the value of which very considerably exceed the threshold laid down in Article 3 (1) of Directive 93/37, were not set out in the object of the concession at issue, as defined in the second notice and the second tender specifications.

62 Nevertheless, the Kingdom of Spain submits that the second tender specifications should have been understood as meaning that they referred to the basic rules generally applicable to invitation to tender procedures, in particular the Law on motorways, and should have been interpreted in the light of those rules, the aim of which is to allow tenderers broad freedom to use their initiative. Accordingly, the tenderers should have understood, in the light of Article 8 of that law, that the concession-granting authority was in fact calling on their initiative and creativity with a view to resolving the essential problem, which was the density of the traffic on the A-6 motorway. That problem was well known and clearly apparent from the statistics of the competent national authorities. It is therefore common sense to understand that the concession-granting authority expected such proposals. That expectation is also confirmed by the fact that certain works were no longer listed in the second tender specifications, in order to give more scope to tenderers' initiative, and by the formulation of clauses No 5(13) and (16) and No 29 of the second tender specifications.

63 That argument must be rejected.

64 It must be noted that, for the purposes of clarification of the requirements of a concession, it is sometimes inevitable that the notice or tender specifications refer to the national rules concerning the technical specifications on safety, health, environmental and other requirements. The fact that such a reference is possible cannot, however, enable the concession-granting authority to escape the advertising obligations laid down in Directive 93/37, pursuant to which the object of the concession must be defined in the notice and the tender specifications, which must contain the information referred to in paragraph 55 of the present judgment. Nor can it be accepted that it was necessary to interpret the notice or the tender specifications in the light of such rules in order to discern the true object of a concession.

65 That requirement must be interpreted strictly. Thus, the Court, in the context of a public works contract, has declared unlawful a reference from tender specifications to national legislation concerning the possibility that tenderers may submit variants of their tenders, in accordance with the first and second paragraphs of Article 19 of Directive 93/37, having regard to the fact that the minimum conditions which those variants were to meet were not specified in the tender specifications (see Case C-421/01 Traunfellner [2003] ECR I-11941, paragraphs 27 to 29). With regard to an obligation of transparency designed to ensure observance of the principle of equal treatment of tenderers, which must be observed in any procurement procedure governed by Directive 93/37, that finding of the Court is also valid as regards works concessions.

66 It should also be added that it is acceptable for the concession-granting authority, having regard to possible particular features of the works which are the object of the concession, to leave some latitude to tenderers' initiative in the formulation of their tenders.

67 However, clauses No 5(13) and (16) and No 29 of the second tender specifications, which replaced the first, cannot be regarded as calling upon the tenderers' initiative with a view to proposing alternatives relating to works other than those clearly identified in the second notice. Clause No 5 (13) does not state, in particular, the location of the measures to be taken to reduce any increase in traffic density caused by carrying out the works referred to in the second notice. In addition, clause No 5(16) merely requests tenderers to propose measures for adequate traffic 'management' between cities 'in the area affected by the construction of the sections that are the object of the concession', without further defining that area. What is more, clause No 29 refers, with insufficient precision, to measures to be taken concerning the toll sections of the A-6 motorway connecting to Ávila and Segovia.

68 It must be held that the tenderers' initiative and alternative tenders, expected by the Spanish Government on the basis that the second tender specifications replaced the first 'for technical reasons' and 'in order to redefine the object of the concession', apart from the fact that they could not be understood by a tenderer reasonably informed and aware in the manner alleged by the Kingdom of Spain, do not relate to the object of the disputed concession, but rather correspond to a general transport policy concern in the Member State involved. Thus, on the basis of such an understanding, as the Commission rightly points out, the tenderers would have been free to propose unlimited works throughout the Autonomous Community of Madrid and the provinces of Ávila and Segovia.

69 In the same way, any possibly well-known problem existing at national level, of which as such potential tenderers established in other Member States cannot be assumed to be aware, cannot be taken into account by tenderers as an implied criterion of definition of the object of a concession and thus have an effect on the importance accorded by the European Union rules to the notice and the tender specifications.

70 In any event, even if it is accepted that all tenderers understood in the same way their freedom to use their initiative, it does not satisfy Directive 93/37 when, without any transparency, a public works concession contract is awarded which includes works referred to as 'additional' which of themselves constitute 'public works contracts' within the meaning of that directive and the value of which exceeds the threshold laid down therein.

71 If the opposite were true, that would mean that those works referred to as 'additional' would avoid the advertising obligation and, consequently, any call for competition. Having regard to the fact that tenderers using their initiative would be entirely free to submit proposals in which they determined the nature, scope and geographical location of the works to be carried out, independently and without any requirement to fulfil a predetermined object, it would not be possible to compare their tenders in any way.

72 In addition, it must be noted that the Kingdom of Spain cannot reasonably derive any support from Article 61 of Directive 2004/18. Putting aside the consideration that that directive is not applicable ratione temporis to the present case, clearly the disputed additional works do not constitute, within the meaning of the abovementioned provision, 'additional works not included in the concession project initially considered' for the concession but which have, through unforeseen circumstances, become necessary for the performance of the work described therein.

73 The manner of proceeding adopted by the Kingdom of Spain in the present case cannot be justified either by point 3.1.1 of the Commission interpretative communication on concessions under Community law referred to above. That text relates only to cases where, unable to define its requirements in sufficiently precise technical terms, a concession-granting authority seeks to obtain alternative tenders intended to resolve a problem expressed in general terms, which is not the case here.

74 Accordingly, the conclusion must be that the additional works were awarded to Iberpistas despite the fact that they were not included in the object of the concession at issue, as described in the second notice and the second tender specifications, which constitutes breach of Articles 3(1) and 11 (3) and (6) of Directive 93/37, read in conjunction with Annex V thereto.

75 As is clear from paragraph 57 of the present judgment, the provisions required appropriate advertising as required by Directive 93/37, constituting an expression of the principles of equal treatment and of transparency. Consequently, there is no need to consider separately the question of a possible breach of those principles.

76 The conclusion in paragraph 74 of the present judgment is not called into question by the argument drawn by the Kingdom of Spain from the fact that Iberpistas did not itself carry out the additional works, but awarded them to third-party undertakings, in accordance with the requirements of publicity laid down in Article 3(4) of Directive 93/37. As the Commission rightly points out, Article 3 of that directive clearly requires both the concession-granting authority and the concessionaire to comply with cumulative and not alternative advertising obligations which must be met by them both, at all stages of the procedure, in order for that provision to remain effective.

77 In the same way, the argument of the Kingdom of Spain that the Commission decided to institute the present proceedings for failure to fulfil obligations following complaints lodged by parties having no connection with the contested procedure, and not by other tenderers actually or potentially interested in the award of the concession at issue, cannot succeed.

78 It is clear from settled case-law that it is for the Commission to determine whether it is expedient to take action against a Member State and what provisions, in its view, the Member State has infringed, and to choose the time at which it will bring an action for failure to fulfil obligations; the considerations which determine its choice cannot affect the admissibility of the action. In that regard, while the bringing and continuation of infringement proceedings is a matter for the Commission in its entire discretion, it is for the Court to consider whether there has been a failure to fulfil obligations as alleged, without its being part of its role to take a view on the Commission's exercise of its discretion (see, to that effect, Case C–33/04 Commission v Luxembourg [2005] ECR I–10629, paragraphs 65 to 67 and the case-law cited). Furthermore, the fact that other competing tenderers did not contest the procedure to award the disputed concession cannot have any effect on the assessment of the legality of that procedure or on whether the present action is well founded.

79 It must also be held that the argument that the Tribunal Supremo, hearing actions brought against the decision of the concession-granting authority, held by two judgments that there was no breach of the provisions of Directive 93/37 or of the principle of equal treatment and proceeded to assess the facts regarding the clauses of the second tender specifications which fall within the jurisdiction of the national court, is not relevant either for the purposes of adjudicating in these proceedings.

80 It should be borne in mind that the fact that proceedings have been brought before a national court to challenge the decision of a competent authority which is the subject of an action for failure to fulfil obligations and the decision of that court cannot affect the admissibility of the action for failure to fulfil obligations brought by the Commission. The existence of the remedies available through the national courts cannot prejudice the bringing of an action under Article 226 EC, since the two procedures have different objectives and effects (see, to that effect, Case 31/69 Commission v Italy [1970] ECR 25, paragraph 9; Case 85/85 Commission v Belgium [1986] ECR 1149, paragraph 24; Case C–87/02 Commission v Italy [2004] ECR I–5975, paragraph 39; and Case C–508/03 Commission v United Kingdom [2006] ECR I–3969, paragraph 71).

81 In the light of all the above considerations, it must be concluded that, by awarding to Iberpistas, on 5 November 1999:

– the construction of a third lane in each direction on the part of the toll section of the A-6 motorway between Villalba and the Valle de los Caídos junction,

– the construction of a third reversible lane on the part of the toll section of the A-6 motorway between the Valle de los Caídos junction and the city of San Rafael, including the construction of a new tunnel, and

– the construction of a fourth lane in each direction on the toll-free section of the A-6 motorway between Madrid and Villalba, without those works having been listed in the object of the public works concession contract, as described in the notice published in the Official Journal of the European Communities or in the tender specifications, the Kingdom of Spain has failed to fulfil its obligations under Articles 3(1) and 11(3) and (6) of Directive 93/37, read in conjunction with Annex V thereto.

82 The remainder of the action is dismissed.

Costs

83 Under Article 69(2) of the Rules of Procedure, the unsuccessful party is to be ordered to pay the costs if they have been applied for in the successful party's pleadings. Since the Commission applied for costs to be awarded against the Kingdom of Spain and the latter has been unsuccessful in its main pleas, the Kingdom of Spain must be ordered to pay the costs.

On those grounds, the Court (Fourth Chamber) hereby:

1. Declares that, by awarding to Iberpistas, on 5 November 1999

– the construction of a third lane in each direction on the part of the toll section of the A-6 motorway between Villalba and the Valle de los Caídos junction,

– the construction of a third reversible lane on the part of the toll section of the A-6 motorway between the Valle de los Caídos junction and the city of San Rafael, including the construction of a new tunnel, and

– the construction of a fourth lane in each direction on the toll-free section of the A-6 motorway between Madrid and Villalba, without those works having been listed in the object of the public works concession contract, as described in the notice published in the Official Journal of the European Communities or in the tender specifications, the Kingdom of Spain has failed to fulfil its obligations under Articles 3(1) and 11(3) and (6) of Council Directive 93/37/EEC of 14 June 1993 concerning the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts, read in conjunction with Annex V thereto;

2. Dismisses the action as to the remainder.

CONCLUSIONS DE L'AVOCAT GÉNÉRAL
M. PAOLO Mengozzi
présentées le 20 octobre 2009 (1)

Affaire C–423/07

Commission des Communautés européennes
contre
Royaume d'Espagne

«Directive 93/37/CEE – Concessions de travaux publics – Violation des règles de publicité ainsi que des principes d'égalité de traitement et de non–discrimination»

1. Le thème du rôle et de la signification des concessions en droit communautaire est notoirement délicat, et leur réglementation jusqu'ici est assez pauvre. Les concessions de travaux publics, au centre de la présente affaire, ont cependant fait l'objet d'interventions explicites du législateur communautaire (2) qui, dans la récente directive 2004/18/CE (3), leur a consacré un titre (4).

2. La situation à propos de laquelle la Cour doit se prononcer en l'espèce ne devra toutefois pas être examinée sur la base du cadre légal créé par cette directive. En effet, du point de vue de l'application dans le temps, les faits en cause relèvent de la directive 93/37/CEE (5). Dans ce texte, les concessions de travaux étaient réglementées de façon beaucoup plus limitée et essentielle.

3. Dans le présent recours en manquement, en particulier, la Commission reproche au Royaume d'Espagne d'avoir enfreint la réglementation communautaire en matière de concession de travaux publics lors de l'attribution de la concession pour la construction et l'entretien, en particulier, de deux nouveaux raccordements de l'autoroute A-6 reliant Madrid à La Corogne.

I – Le cadre légal

4. Les dispositions communautaires pertinentes en l'espèce sont, comme je l'ai déjà rappelé, celles de la directive 93/37/CEE (ci-après la «directive»). En particulier, le cinquième considérant de celle-ci observe: «(…) compte tenu de l'importance croissante des concessions dans les travaux publics et de leur nature spécifique, il est opportun d'inclure dans la présente directive des règles de publicité en la matière». L'intention du législateur a donc été de fixer, en matière de concessions de travaux publics, certains points fondamentaux, laissant pour le reste aux pouvoirs publics une marge d'appréciation plus large que celle dont ils jouissent en matière de marchés.

5. L'article 1er de la directive prévoit:

«Aux fins de la présente directive:

a) les 'marchés publics de travaux' sont des contrats à titre onéreux, conclus par écrit entre, d'une part, un entrepreneur et, d'autre part, un pouvoir adjudicateur défini au point b) et ayant pour objet soit l'exécution, soit conjointement l'exécution et la conception des travaux relatifs à une des activités visées à l'annexe II ou d'un ouvrage défini au point c), soit la réalisation, par quelque moyen que ce soit, d'un ouvrage répondant aux besoins précisés par le pouvoir adjudicateur;

d) la 'concession de travaux publics' est un contrat présentant les mêmes caractères que ceux visés au point a), à l'exception du fait que la contrepartie des travaux consiste soit uniquement dans le droit d'exploiter l'ouvrage, soit dans ce droit assorti d'un prix;

6. L'article 3 de la directive s'énonce comme suit:

«Dans le cas où les pouvoirs adjudicateurs concluent un contrat de concession de travaux publics, les règles de publicité définies à l'article 11 paragraphes 3, 6, 7 et 9 à 13 et à l'article 15 sont applicables à ce contrat lorsque sa valeur égale ou dépasse 5 000 000 [EUR]

7. Les parties de l'article 11 de la directive que l'article 3 déclare applicables aux concessions de travaux sont les suivantes:

«(…)

3. Les pouvoirs adjudicateurs désireux d'avoir recours à la concession de travaux publics font connaître leur intention au moyen d'un avis.

6. Les avis prévus aux paragraphes 1 à 5 sont établis conformément aux modèles qui figurent aux annexes IV, V et VI et donnent les renseignements qui y sont demandés.

Les pouvoirs adjudicateurs ne peuvent exiger des conditions autres que celles prévues aux articles 26 et 27 lorsqu'ils demandent des renseignements concernant les conditions de caractère économique et technique qu'ils exigent des entrepreneurs pour leur sélection (annexe IV partie B point 11, annexe IV partie C point 10 et annexe IV partie D point 9).

7. Les avis prévus aux paragraphes 1 à 5 sont envoyés par les pouvoirs adjudicateurs dans les meilleurs délais et par les voies les plus appropriées à l'Office des publications officielles des Communautés européennes. Dans le cas de la procédure accélérée prévue à l'article 14, les avis sont envoyés par télex, télégramme ou télécopieur.

9. Les avis prévus aux paragraphes 2, 3 et 4 sont publiés in extenso au Journal officiel des Communautés européennes et dans la banque de données TED, dans les langues originales. Un résumé des éléments importants de chaque avis est publié dans les autres langues officielles des Communautés, seul le texte de la langue originale faisant foi.

10. L'Office des publications officielles des Communautés européennes publie les avis douze jours au plus tard après leur envoi. Dans le cas de la procédure accélérée prévue à l'article 14, ce délai est réduit à cinq jours.

11. La publication des avis dans les journaux officiels ou dans la presse du pays du pouvoir adjudicateur ne doit pas avoir lieu avant la date d'envoi à l'Office des publications officielles des Communautés européennes et doit faire mention de cette date. Elle ne doit pas contenir de renseignements autres que ceux publiés au Journal officiel des Communautés européennes.

12. Les pouvoirs adjudicateurs doivent être en mesure de faire la preuve de la date d'envoi.

13. Les frais de publication des avis de marchés au Journal officiel des Communautés européennes sont à la charge des Communautés. L'avis ne peut dépasser une page dudit journal, soit environ 650 mots. Chaque numéro dudit journal dans lequel figurent un ou plusieurs avis reproduit le ou les modèles auxquels se réfèrent le ou les avis publiés».

II – Le droit national applicable et les faits à l'origine du litige

A – Le droit national

8. La loi n° 8 du 10 mai 1972, relative à la construction, à l'entretien et à l'exploitation des autoroutes au moyen de marchés de concession (ci-après la «Ley de Autopistas»), telle qu'elle est en vigueur depuis 1996, prévoit en particulier, à l'article 8, paragraphe 2, deuxième alinéa, ce qui suit:

«(…) relèvent de l'objet social de la société concessionnaire, outre les activités indiquées au précédent alinéa, la construction de travaux d'infrastructures routières, autres que ceux inclus dans le marché mais ayant une incidence sur celui-ci et qui sont réalisés dans la zone d'influence de l'autoroute ou qui sont nécessaires à l'organisation du trafic, dont le projet et l'exécution, ou la seule exécution, s'imposent au concessionnaire comme contrepartie (…)».

9. L'arrêté royal n° 597 du 16 avril 1999 a fixé à 20 km l'étendue de la zone d'influence des autoroutes.

B – Les faits

10. Les faits à l'origine du litige se rapportent au tronçon de l'autoroute A-6 entre les localités de Villalba au sud et d'Adanero au nord. Il s'agit d'un tronçon d'autoroute à péage, extrêmement important, caractérisé par un trafic toujours très intense. Le tronçon de l'A-6 se situant immédiatement au sud de celui-ci, entre Madrid et Villalba, est gratuit et géré par l'État.

11. Depuis 1968, le tronçon de l'autoroute Villalba-Adanero est géré sous forme de concession par la société Ibérica de Autopistas, SA (ci–après «Iberpistas»). Cette concession était, à l'époque des faits en cause, destinée à prendre fin en 2018.

12. La circonstance à l'origine du litige en cause est la décision prise par le gouvernement espagnol de construire deux nouveaux tronçons de l'autoroute afin de connecter l'autoroute A-6 aux villes de Ávila et de Ségovie, qui se trouvent respectivement à l'ouest et à l'est du tronçon Villalba-Adanero.

13. Le décret ministériel du 4 juin 1999, paru au Boletín Oficial del Estado (Journal officiel espagnol, ci-après le «BOE») le 8 juin, a publié un cahier des charges (ci-après le «premier cahier des charges») pour une concession comprenant:

– la construction des deux raccordements entre les villes de Ávila et de Ségovie et l'autoroute A-6, ainsi que l'entretien de ces tronçons pendant une période de 25 à 40 ans;

– l'exploitation du tronçon Villalba-Adanero de l'A-6 à partir de 2018, c'est-à-dire à la date à laquelle la concession en cours de Iberpistas viendra à échéance, et pour une période à déterminer sur la base du nombre moyen de véhicules en transit sur ledit tronçon;

– la construction de la voie de contournement de Guadarrama, sur le tronçon Villalba-Adanero de l'A-6 (environ à mi-chemin entre les deux villes);

– l'élargissement (construction d'une quatrième voie de circulation par sens) du tronçon de l'autoroute entre Madrid et Villalba: il s'agit, comme je l'ai déjà indiqué, du tronçon gratuit, géré par l'État.

14. L'avis de marché correspondant a été publié le 16 juin 1999 au Journal officiel de l'Union européenne.

15. Un nouveau cahier des charges a cependant été approuvé ensuite (ci-après le «second cahier des charges»), le 7 juillet 1999, publié au BOE deux jours plus tard. Ce cahier des charges a remplacé le précédent.

16. En particulier, le décret ministériel d'approbation du second cahier des charges précisait que «pour des raisons d'ordre technique, il y a lieu de modifier ledit cahier, afin de redéfinir l'objet de l'appel d'offres et d'apporter quelques modifications concernant la fixation de la durée de la concession».

17. Concrètement, le second cahier des charges avait pour objet:

– la construction des tronçons de l'autoroute de raccordement de Ávila et de Ségovie à l'A-6, comme prévu par le premier cahier des charges, à cette différence près que la durée de la concession était désormais fixée entre 22 et 37 ans;

– l'exploitation du tronçon Villalba-Adanero de l'A-6 à partir de 2018, comme prévu au premier cahier des charges, avec ici également quelques modifications quant à la durée de la concession.

18. Comme on le voit, le second cahier des charges ne mentionne plus l'obligation de réaliser le contournement de Guadarrama et la quatrième voie sur le tronçon Madrid-Villalba.

19. Les points suivants figuraient dans la clause 5, tant dans le premier que dans le second cahier des charges:

13. Les soumissionnaires indiqueront expressément dans leurs offres les mesures qu'ils se proposent d'adopter en ce qui concerne les effets induits par la concession sur le réseau viaire global, sur l'intérêt touristique de la région et la valorisation des monuments d'intérêt historique ou artistique, ainsi que sur la protection et la conservation du paysage et de la nature, sans préjudice du respect de la réglementation en vigueur dans ces domaines.

16. Les soumissionnaires exposeront à l'administration les mesures qu'ils envisagent de prendre pour la gestion adéquate du trafic interurbain dans la zone affectée par la construction des tronçons faisant l'objet de la concession, et préciseront celles qu'ils s'engagent à mettre en œuvre à leur charge. La créativité et la viabilité de ces propositions seront évaluées positivement lors de l'attribution du marché, eu égard au degré de congestion élevé des zones sur le trafic desquelles les voies objet du marché auront une incidence».

20. Les critères pour l'adjudication de la concession étaient précisés à la clause 10 du second cahier des charges, qui par ailleurs était identique à la clause 10 du premier cahier des charges. En particulier, l'un de ces critères était relatif à l'évaluation des «mesures proposées pour la gestion du trafic et de l'environnement». Le poids de ce critère était fixé à un maximum de 150 points sur un total de 1250 points possibles.

21. La clause 29, identique également dans le premier et dans le second cahier des charges, s'énonçait:

«En ce qui concerne les tronçons mentionnés aux points 1 et 2 de la clause 2 du présent cahier, le concessionnaire est tenu de veiller à ce qu'en aucun endroit de l'autoroute ne soit dépassé le niveau (de trafic) D (…), il est tenu d'effectuer à ses frais, sans droit à aucune réclamation et suffisamment tôt, les extensions nécessaires à cette fin».

22. Les tronçons visés à la clause 29, c'est-à-dire ceux des points 1 et 2 de la clause 2 du cahier des charges, sont les raccordements de Ávila et de Ségovie à la A-6.

23. Trois soumissionnaires ont présenté une offre, parmi lesquels Iberpistas qui au moment des faits était déjà, comme nous l'avons vu, concessionnaire du tronçon de l'A-6 entre Villalba et Adanero. Aucun des soumissionnaires n'a présenté une solution unique: ils ont tous présenté plusieurs variantes. Iberpistas, en particulier, a présenté neuf variantes différentes.

24. Par décret royal n° 1724 du 5 novembre 1999, la concession a été attribuée à Iberpistas, selon les modalités contenues dans la variante «VT-B, TGE» de son offre.

25. En particulier, l'offre proposée par Iberpistas et qui a été retenue comprenait plusieurs ouvrages supplémentaires par rapport à ce qui était explicitement demandé dans le second cahier des charges:

– construction d'une voie supplémentaire de circulation par sens sur le tronçon de l'A-6 entre Madrid et Villalba (donc sur le tronçon gratuit de l'A-6, relevant de la compétence de l'État);

– construction d'une voie supplémentaire de circulation et d'un nouveau tunnel sur l'A-6, sur le tronçon Valle de los Caídos-San Rafael, au nord de Villalba (c'est-à-dire sur le tronçon de l'A-6 dont Iberpistas était déjà concessionnaire jusqu'en 2018);

– construction d'une voie supplémentaire de circulation par sens sur l'A-6, sur le tronçon Villalba-Valle de los Caídos (donc, ici aussi, sur le tronçon de l'A-6 dont Iberpistas était déjà concessionnaire jusqu'en 2018).

26. Le décret d'adjudication de la concession a fait l'objet, en Espagne, de deux recours juridictionnels distincts, présentés respectivement par un groupe de membres du Parlement, d'une part, et par un syndicat et une association écologiste, d'autre part. Le Tribunal Supremo a prononcé deux décisions en 2003, l'une déclarant irrecevable le premier recours, l'autre rejetant le second au fond.

III – La procédure précontentieuse

27. La phase précontentieuse de la présente procédure a été assez complexe. En effet, la première lettre de mise en demeure envoyée par la Commission aux autorités espagnoles le 30 avril 2001 considérait qu'une partie des circonstances décrites, à savoir l'élargissement du tronçon de l'A-6 entre Madrid et Villalba, gratuit et géré par l'État, n'était pas une concession mais bel et bien un marché de travaux, en raison de l'absence d'un risque dans le chef de l'adjudicataire. Par conséquent, les griefs formulés par la Commission concernaient tant la réglementation des concessions que celle des marchés de travaux: dans les deux cas, les reproches formulés par la Commission concernaient le non-respect des règles de publicité prévues par l'article 11 de la directive 93/37/CEE.

28. Le Royaume d'Espagne a répondu par lettre du 27 juin 2001, contestant toutes les affirmations de la Commission et soutenant, entre autres, la nécessité de considérer que l'ensemble des travaux, y compris ceux sur le tronçon gratuit de l'A-6, relevaient de la concession.

29. Malgré une réunion avec les autorités espagnoles et la communication par celles-ci de documents supplémentaires, la Commission a émis un avis motivé le 18 juillet 2002. Dans celui-ci, la Commission accueillait les observations du Royaume d'Espagne quant à la nécessité d'appliquer seulement la réglementation des concessions, et non celle des marchés de travaux; pour le reste, toutefois, la Commission confirmait les griefs relatifs à la violation des règles de publicité prévues par la directive.

30. Les autorités espagnoles ont répondu à l'avis motivé par lettres du 20 septembre 2002 et du 13 mars 2003.

31. Le 25 juillet 2003, la Commission a envoyé une lettre de mise en demeure complémentaire au Royaume d'Espagne, concernant le non-respect présumé des principes fondamentaux du traité, en particulier ceux relatifs à l'égalité de traitement et à la non-discrimination.

32. Les autorités espagnoles ont répondu à cette nouvelle lettre de mise en demeure le 28 octobre 2003; la Commission, non satisfaite de cette réponse, a adressé un avis motivé complémentaire le 24 décembre 2004, auquel le Royaume d'Espagne a répondu par lettre du 3 mars 2005.

IV – La procédure devant la Cour et les conclusions des parties

33. Estimant que le manquement persistait, la Commission a formé le présent recours, parvenu au greffe le 13 septembre 2007.

34. Après l'échange des observations écrites, les parties ont été entendues à l'audience du 9 septembre 2009.

35. La Commission demande à la Cour de:

– constater qu'en n'incluant pas, parmi les travaux faisant l'objet de la concession, dans l'avis et dans le cahier des charges concernant la passation d'un marché de concession administrative pour la construction, l'entretien et l'exploitation des liaisons de l'autoroute A-6 avec Ségovie et Ávila, ainsi que pour l'entretien et l'exploitation du tronçon Villalba–Adanero sur la même autoroute à partir de 2018, certains travaux qui ont été attribués ultérieurement dans le cadre de la concession, parmi lesquels ceux relatifs au tronçon gratuit de l'A-6, le Royaume d'Espagne a manqué aux obligations qui lui incombent en vertu de l'article 3 et de l'article 11, paragraphes 3, 6, 7, 11 et 12, de la directive 93/37/CEE, et a enfreint les principes du traité CE, notamment le principe d'égalité de traitement et de non–discrimination.

– condamner le Royaume d'Espagne aux dépens.

36. Le Royaume d'Espagne demande à la Cour de:

– rejeter le recours en ce qu'il est irrecevable ou, à titre subsidiaire, en ce qu'il est dénué de fondement;

– condamner la Commission aux dépens.

V – Sur la recevabilité du recours

37. Le Royaume d'Espagne invoque l'irrecevabilité du recours à deux égards. Premièrement, la Commission n'aurait pas démontré le pouvoir de représentation en justice de l'avocat qui a rédigé le recours avec l'agent de la Commission. Deuxièmement, l'objet du recours serait indéterminé, en ce que la requête n'indique pas précisément les règles qui auraient été violées par l'État membre attaqué.

38. Les deux exceptions soulevées par le Royaume d'Espagne sont dénuées de fondement. En ce qui concerne la première, il suffit d'observer que la Commission a annexé à la requête une copie de la carte d'inscription de l'avocat au Barreau. Le guide aux conseils, publié par le greffe de la Cour, indique expressément que ce document satisfait à la condition de l'article 38, paragraphe 3, du règlement de procédure. En outre, il y a lieu d'observer que la Commission est également représentée par son agent. Pour ce qui est de la seconde exception, la Commission a clairement et explicitement indiqué les règles qu'elle estime violées. Du reste, le Royaume d'Espagne les a examinées une à une dans ses moyens de défense. Il ne se pose aucun problème de recevabilité, mais seulement de vérification du fondement des reproches soulevés par la Commission.

39. Le recours est donc recevable.

VI – Sur le manquement

A – Les positions des parties

40. La Commission estime que l'Espagne n'a pas respecté, à deux égards, les obligations qui lui incombaient en vertu du droit communautaire. D'une part, il y aurait eu violation de l'article 3 et de l'article 11, paragraphes 3, 6, 7, 11 et 12, de la directive 93/37/CEE. D'autre part, l'adjudication en faveur de Iberpistas serait contraire aux principes fondamentaux du traité, et plus spécialement ceux d'égalité de traitement et de non-discrimination.

1. Les arguments de la Commission

41. Le principal argument soulevé par la Commission pour démontrer la violation de la directive 93/37/CEE se fonde sur la présence, dans l'offre du soumissionnaire retenu, de travaux non prévus dans le cahier des charges: ces travaux seraient, en particulier, d'une valeur globale légèrement inférieure à celle des travaux dont la réalisation était expressément demandée.

42. La Commission observe, en outre, que la formulation du cahier des charges, prescrivant de façon générale aux soumissionnaires d'indiquer les solutions possibles permettant de résoudre le problème du trafic, n'était pas de nature à laisser croire aux participants qu'il était possible de proposer des ouvrages supplémentaires dont l'importance et la localisation seraient comparables à ceux proposés par Iberpistas. En particulier, étant donné que les seuls ouvrages à réaliser explicitement indiqués dans le second cahier des charges étaient les deux raccordements de Ségovie et de Ávila à la A-6, même les mesures que les soumissionnaires auraient pu proposer en vue de la réduction du trafic n'auraient été que des mesures directement liées à ces deux tronçons. Il n'aurait donc pas été possible d'admettre des offres qui, comme celle qui a été retenue, proposeraient des travaux à un autre endroit, comme les élargissements du tronçon de l'A-6 Villalba–Adanero proposés par Iberpistas.

43. La Commission rejette les arguments du gouvernement espagnol selon lesquels la décision d'annuler le premier cahier des charges et de le remplacer par un second dans lequel ne figurait plus l'indication explicite de certains ouvrages à réaliser aurait rendu évident le fait que les participants devaient proposer des solutions alternatives par rapport à celles prévues dans le cahier des charges initial et ensuite abandonnées. Selon la Commission, rien dans le texte du second cahier des charges ne permettrait de l'interpréter en ces termes. Du reste, les autres soumissionnaires n'auraient proposé que des variantes limitées aux deux raccordements de l'A-6 aux villes de Ávila et de Ségovie.

44. Selon la Commission, enfin, le comportement du Royaume d'Espagne aurait également violé les principes fondamentaux du traité, en particulier ceux d'égalité de traitement et de non-discrimination.

2. La position du gouvernement espagnol

45. Le Royaume d'Espagne conteste fermement les griefs: en particulier, non seulement la Commission n'aurait pas démontré l'existence d'un manquement, mais elle aurait également donné une image déformée des faits.

46. Le gouvernement espagnol souligne, premièrement, les problèmes graves de trafic existant sur l'autoroute A-6 au moment de la publication de l'avis d'appel d'offres. La gravité de ces problèmes, outre qu'elle était notoire, ayant fait l'objet d'informations permanentes dans la presse, aurait également été clairement indiquée et décrite dans des documents officiels des administrations espagnoles, y compris la documentation à la base de l'appel d'offres en cause.

47. La thèse fondamentale du gouvernement espagnol consiste à affirmer que l'existence notoire des problèmes de trafic aurait rendu absolument évident le fait que les soumissionnaires, même si le cahier des charges n'indiquait expressément que la construction des raccordements de l'A-6 aux villes de Ávila et de Ségovie, auraient pu proposer des mesures de réduction du trafic se situant physiquement sur le tronçon Villalba-Adanero de l'A-6, qui devait être concédé au soumissionnaire retenu à partir de 2018, et sur le tronçon de l'A-6 entre Madrid et Villalba. En ce qui concerne, particulièrement, ce dernier tronçon qui, on l'a vu, est gratuit et géré par l'État, le gouvernement espagnol prétend que la possibilité d'intervention sur celui-ci aurait été garantie par la législation nationale. En particulier, la Ley de Autopistas permettrait la réalisation de mesures de réduction du trafic y compris hors de la «zone d'influence» des autoroutes. En tout état de cause, cette zone d'influence serait actuellement fixée à 20 km, de telle sorte que le tronçon de l'A-6 au sud de Villalba serait encore dans la zone d'influence du tronçon de l'A-6 Villalba–Adanero, qui fait explicitement l'objet de la concession.

48. Selon le Royaume d'Espagne, en particulier, la possibilité pour les soumissionnaires de proposer de telles mesures pour le contrôle du trafic ressort aussi des paragraphes 13 et 16 de la clause 5 du cahier des charges.

49. Le choix d'annuler le premier cahier des charges et de le remplacer par le second aurait découlé de la volonté d'accorder plus d'espace à la créativité des soumissionnaires en ce qui concerne les solutions à proposer au problème du trafic. La circonstance que le décret d'approbation du nouveau cahier des charges ait seulement indiqué que la nouvelle version de celui-ci avait été rendue nécessaire par des raisons générales d'ordre technique, sans aucune référence à la nécessité pour les soumissionnaires de remplacer les ouvrages supprimés du premier cahier des charges par leurs propres solutions, s'expliquerait par le caractère normalement bref de tous les arrêtés ministériels d'approbation de cahiers des charges.

50. Le gouvernement espagnol insiste sur le fait que les arguments qu'il propose devant la Cour ont été adoptés par les juridictions nationales et en particulier par le Tribunal Supremo. Étant donné qu'il s'agit d'une appréciation en fait et non en droit, la Cour devrait s'en remettre, en particulier pour ce qui est de l'interprétation du cahier des charges, à ce qui a été constaté sur ce point par la juridiction nationale – même si le gouvernement espagnol reconnaît, dans son mémoire en duplique, que les conclusions du Tribunal Supremo ne lient pas la Cour.

51. Le Royaume d'Espagne observe par ailleurs que Iberpistas n'a pas procédé à l'exécution directe des travaux prévus mais qu'elle a lancé un appel d'offres en vue de leur adjudication: ainsi, les exigences relatives à la publicité et au respect des principes d'égalité de traitement et de non-discrimination auraient également été respectées, à tout le moins, dans cette phase ultérieure de la réalisation des travaux. À ce propos, le gouvernement espagnol fait référence, en particulier, à l'arrêt Ordine degli Architetti (6), dans lequel la Cour aurait admis la conformité à la réglementation communautaire sur les marchés publics d'une situation où l'appel d'offres n'est pas lancé par les pouvoirs publics mais par un sujet privé à qui les pouvoirs publics confient la réalisation des travaux.

B – Appréciation

1. Observations préalables

52. Du point de vue juridique, les circonstances faisant l'objet du présent recours constituent une concession de travaux publics. Comme on l'a vu, la réglementation communautaire définit la concession de travaux publics comme un contrat possédant les mêmes caractéristiques qu'un marché de travaux, à la différence majeure que la contrepartie des travaux consiste dans le droit d'exploiter l'ouvrage réalisé. En outre, ce droit d'exploitation peut aussi être accompagné du paiement d'un prix au concessionnaire: ce prix ne peut toutefois constituer l'élément principal de la contrepartie, puisque dans ce cas il ne s'agirait plus d'une concession, mais d'un marché public (7).

53. Le droit communautaire impose, en matière de concessions, des limites et des prescriptions plus réduites que celles imposées en matière de marchés publics. En particulier, comme on l'a vu à l'occasion de l'exposé du cadre juridique, parmi toutes les règles applicables aux marchés publics, seules celles relatives à la publicité s'appliquent aux concessions.

54. Or, de même qu'il est certain, en l'espèce, que les éléments de fait doivent être qualifiés de concession de travaux, et non de marché, il est tout aussi évident que les travaux en cause devaient être précédés d'un avis d'appel d'offres spécifique, car il ne peuvent être considérés comme un simple «développement» naturel de la concession existante, à Iberpistas, du tronçon de l'autoroute A-6 entre Villalba et Adanero (8). Cette prémisse n'est d'ailleurs contestée par aucune des parties.

2. Éléments dénués de pertinence

55. Avant de procéder à l'examen des questions juridiques au centre de la présente affaire, il est nécessaire, à mon avis, d'évacuer quelques éléments qui ont été largement débattus par les parties mais qui, concrètement, sont dénués de pertinence pour la solution du litige.

a) Les arrêts du Tribunal Supremo

56. Tout d'abord, les références que fait le Royaume d'Espagne aux décisions du Tribunal Supremo, qui a rejeté deux recours introduits au niveau national contre l'attribution de la concession, sont dénuées de pertinence. En effet, comme l'a admis la défense du gouvernement espagnol dans le mémoire en duplique et à l'audience, la jurisprudence de la Cour qui reconnaît à la seule juridiction nationale la compétence d'apprécier les faits et limite l'intervention des juridictions communautaires aux questions de droit ne concerne que les procédures de type préjudiciel, dans lesquelles l'issue finale de l'affaire nationale est le résultat d'une collaboration entre les autorités juridictionnelles nationales et les juridictions communautaires. Par contre, dans une procédure relative à un manquement présumé au droit communautaire par un État membre, la Cour peut apprécier tous les éléments soumis à son attention pouvant être pertinents pour lui permettre de statuer.

57. Du reste, pour statuer sur un manquement présumé, l'État constitue le seul sujet de référence de la Cour, et il est considéré responsable de toutes les violations du droit communautaire qui peuvent lui être imputées, même si en réalité elles sont dues, par exemple, à des entités constitutionnellement indépendantes. Dans cette optique, même la jurisprudence d'une juridiction suprême d'un État membre a été jugée par la Cour constitutive d'une infraction au droit communautaire (9). Par conséquent, il est donc clair que le schéma centré sur l'idée d'une collaboration entre juridiction nationale et juridiction communautaire, qui coopéreraient en vue de la solution du litige, n'est pas applicable en matière de manquement. Il convient de préciser que cela n'implique en aucune façon un manque de respect ou de reconnaissance du rôle des juridictions nationales: tout simplement, celles-ci n'ont pas un rôle actif dans la procédure au titre de l'article 226 CE.

58. Par ailleurs, il y a lieu d'ajouter que, de toute manière, il n'est certainement pas aisé de tracer, en l'espèce, une ligne nette de démarcation entre l'appréciation des faits et les considérations en droit. En effet, rappelant la constatation par le Tribunal Supremo de la conformité au droit communautaire des avis d'appels d'offres, le Royaume d'Espagne fait référence, plus qu'à des appréciations de fait, à de véritables conclusions en droit formulées par cette juridiction.

b) L'identité des sujets à l'origine de la procédure

59. De la même façon, l'identité des personnes qui, selon le Royaume d'Espagne, seraient à l'origine, par leur dénonciation, du recours formé par la Commission, est dénuée de pertinence. En particulier, il s'agirait des mêmes personnes qui ont également introduit les recours rejetés au niveau national par le Tribunal Supremo. Même si on admet qu'il s'agit des mêmes personnes, il est clair que cela ne peut avoir aucune incidence dans le cadre de la procédure devant la Cour.

60. La circonstance qu'il ne se serait pas agi de participants à la procédure d'adjudication de la concession, mais de certains membres du Parlement, d'un syndicat et d'une association écologiste peut certes indiquer que les motifs de la décision de formuler un recours et/ou une dénonciation ont été, plutôt qu'économiques, politiques ou idéologiques. Il n'en reste pas moins que l'unique objectif de la procédure d'infraction est de déterminer si, d'un point de vue objectif, un État membre a ou n'a pas manqué aux obligations qui lui sont imposées par le droit communautaire. Il n'appartient pas à la Cour d'examiner les motifs personnels des plaignants à l'origine de la procédure, d'autant plus que la décision de formuler un recours en manquement est prise seulement par la Commission, de façon tout à fait libre et autonome. À ce propos, la jurisprudence constante de la Cour affirme non seulement que la Commission n'a pas à démontrer l'existence d'un intérêt à agir, mais également que les considérations qui déterminent le choix d'initier la procédure en manquement sont dénuées de pertinence (10).

c) L'organisation d'un appel d'offres par Iberpistas

61. De même, est également dénuée de pertinence la circonstance, à laquelle fait référence le Royaume d'Espagne dans sa défense, que Iberpistas, après avoir obtenu la concession, ait décidé de ne pas réaliser directement les ouvrages supplémentaires mais de recourir plutôt à un appel d'offres, comme l'imposait d'ailleurs, dans un tel cas, la clause 20 du cahier des charges.

62. Le raisonnement à la base de cette argumentation, que le Royaume d'Espagne a en réalité plutôt explicité dans la phase précontentieuse que dans les observations présentées à la Cour, se fonde sur la possibilité d'appliquer le principe affirmé par l'arrêt Ordine degli Architetti, précité (11).

63. Dans cet arrêt, en particulier, la Cour a affirmé que, en cas de réalisation d'un ouvrage d'équipement par un lotisseur ayant conclu une convention de lotissement avec une administration communale, l'effet utile de la directive 93/37/CEE est également observé si les procédures prévues par la directive sont appliquées, non par l'administration communale, mais par le lotisseur (12).

64. Cependant, il y a lieu d'observer que les circonstances examinées par la Cour dans l'affaire Ordine degli Architetti sont complètement différentes de celles qui font l'objet de la présente procédure. Dans l'arrêt cité, en effet, il s'agissait d'interpréter certaines dispositions du droit italien qui admettent la possibilité de réduire ou d'annuler, à certaines conditions, les contributions aux charges d'équipement lors de l'octroi du permis de construire. En particulier, cette possibilité existait pour ceux qui s'engageaient à réaliser directement les ouvrages d'équipement.

65. La Cour, estimant que la réduction du montant à payer octroyée en échange de la réalisation directe des ouvrages d'équipement constituait de plein droit une compensation pour cette réalisation, a jugé applicable la directive 93/37/CEE, en précisant cependant, comme on l'a vu, que l'effet utile de celle-ci pouvait également être observé si elle était appliquée, non par l'administration communale, mais par le lotisseur réalisant les ouvrages d'équipement.

66. L'élément déterminant à la base de l'arrêt Ordine degli Architetti, comme on le voit, était le fait que l'administration communale n'avait pas la faculté de choisir son cocontractant, étant donné que, par la force des choses, ce cocontractant était nécessairement la personne qui demandait le permis de construire. Par conséquent, admettre la possibilité que ce soit le lotisseur qui applique la directive 93/37/CEE était, concrètement, la seule manière d'assurer la réalisation des objectifs poursuivis par le législateur communautaire en matière de marchés publics.

67. Par contre, en l'espèce, Iberpistas – loin d'être un cocontractant obligé du gouvernement espagnol – a été choisie et s'est vu attribuer la concession parce qu'elle a été retenue suite à la procédure d'appel d'offres. Il est donc clair que, en l'espèce, la réglementation communautaire relative au choix du cocontractant pouvait être appliquée depuis la première phase de la procédure, à savoir celle du choix du concessionnaire. Partant, la situation n'est pas comparable à celle en cause dans l'arrêt Ordine degli Architetti et celui–ci ne peut donc pas être appliqué, même pas par analogie (13).

d) La valeur des ouvrages supplémentaires

68. Le Royaume d'Espagne et la Commission s'opposent vivement sur la valeur des ouvrages supplémentaires par rapport à la valeur totale de la concession.

69. En particulier, la Commission a calculé dans sa requête que la valeur des ouvrages supplémentaires s'élèverait à 87 % de la valeur des ouvrages principaux, à savoir ceux explicitement indiqués dans l'avis d'appel d'offres. Pour sa part, le Royaume d'Espagne conteste ce calcul et souligne, en particulier, la nécessité d'inclure également dans la valeur des ouvrages principaux la valeur de l'exploitation du tronçon Villalba-Adanero de l'A-6 à partir de 2018. Selon le Royaume d'Espagne, le montant des ouvrages supplémentaires proposés par Iberpistas dans l'offre retenue serait légèrement supérieur à 27 % de la valeur des ouvrages principaux.

70. J'estime toutefois que la quantification exacte de la valeur des ouvrages supplémentaires par rapport à l'objet principal de la concession n'est pas nécessaire ici pour trancher.

71. En effet, d'un côté, les références que font les parties à l'article 61 de la nouvelle directive communautaire en matière de marchés publics, à savoir la directive 2004/18/CE, ne sont pas pertinentes. Cette disposition prévoit que, dans la limite de 50 % du montant des travaux initiaux faisant l'objet de la concession, et dans certaines conditions spécifiques, les dispositions relatives à la publicité prévues pour les concessions de travaux publics ne s'appliquent pas «aux travaux complémentaires qui ne figurent pas dans le projet initialement envisagé de la concession ni dans le contrat initial et qui sont devenus nécessaires, à la suite d'une circonstance imprévue, à l'exécution de l'ouvrage tel qu'il y est décrit, que le pouvoir adjudicateur confie au concessionnaire (…)».

72. Tout d'abord, comme je l'ai déjà observé, la directive 2004/18/CE n'est pas applicable, ratione temporis, en l'espèce. D'autre part, même si on voulait considérer cette disposition comme une simple confirmation d'un principe juridique préexistant (opération d'interprétation qui, soi dit en passant, me semble plutôt faible), il reste que l'article 61 de cette directive fait référence à des travaux «qui sont devenus nécessaires, à la suite d'une circonstance imprévue, à l'exécution de l'ouvrage tel qu'il y est décrit». Partant, il s'agit, c'est évident, d'une situation qui n'est pas présente en l'espèce. La disposition de l'article 61 fait référence à des situations imprévues, survenues après l'adjudication, et non à des faits existant avant l'adjudication.

73. D'autre part, au-delà des divergences relatives à la quantification précise de la valeur des ouvrages supplémentaires, il me semble que l'on peut considérer que la Commission et le Royaume d'Espagne s'accordent sur une donnée factuelle incontournable: dans l'économie globale des faits soumis à l'examen de la Cour, le poids représenté par les ouvrages supplémentaires a été considérable, et certainement pas marginal ou secondaire par rapport à l'objet principal de la concession.

3. La requête de la Commission: observations préalables

74. Même si elle n'est pas irrecevable, comme je l'ai observé ci–dessus, la requête de la Commission est assez imprécise, en particulier lorsqu'elle indique les dispositions qu'elle présume violées. En particulier, dans l'acte introductif, la Commission reproche au Royaume d'Espagne, outre la violation du traité, celle de l'article 3 et, en général, des paragraphes 3, 6, 7, 11 et 12 de l'article 11 de la directive 93/37/CEE.

75. Suite aux objections présentées par le Royaume d'Espagne dans son mémoire en défense, la Commission a précisé dans son mémoire en réplique que, concrètement, il y a lieu de considérer que la requête fait référence à l'article 3, paragraphe 1 et, par conséquent, aux dispositions de l'article 11 auxquelles il fait référence.

76. En particulier, étant donné que la Commission ne conteste ni le fait que l'avis d'appel d'offres a été publié, ni le moment ni les modalités de cette publication, il y a lieu de considérer que les dispositions de la directive qui auraient été violées sont, essentiellement, l'article 11, paragraphes 3 et 6. Plus précisément, la violation résiderait dans la grande disparité entre l'objet de l'avis d'appel d'offres publié et l'objet de la concession effectivement attribuée à Iberpistas. En d'autres termes, il est reproché au Royaume d'Espagne d'avoir publié un avis incomplet ou, alternativement, de ne pas avoir publié un avis pour tous les travaux compris dans la concession attribuée à Iberpistas et non dans l'avis publié.

77. Il y a encore lieu d'observer que les dispositions de la directive doivent être considérées comme l'application pratique, dans le cadre des marchés et des concessions de travaux publics, des principes du traité, en particulier l'interdiction de discrimination et l'obligation d'égalité de traitement (14). Par conséquent, les reproches formulés par la Commission à l'égard du Royaume d'Espagne, quant à une violation de la directive et quant à une violation du traité peuvent être discutés ensemble.

78. Après ces observations préalables, nous pouvons maintenant nous concentrer sur le problème principal, à savoir le prétendu caractère incomplet du cahier des charges publié par les autorités espagnoles. À cette fin, il sera nécessaire de déterminer, premièrement, quelles sont exactement les conditions de publicité d'un avis pour une concession de travaux publics. Une fois cet aspect éclairci, il y aura lieu de voir si ces conditions sont remplies en l'espèce.

4. Les conditions pour un avis en matière de concessions

79. Le premier aspect à éclaircir concerne donc les conditions qu'un avis pour la concession de travaux publics doit remplir, en général.

80. Il n'est pas mis en doute qu'un avis pour un marché de travaux doit contenir une description complète de tous les travaux à réaliser. Cela constitue une conséquence naturelle tant du fait que les concurrents doivent pouvoir proposer un prix pour la réalisation des travaux – ce qui suppose, évidemment, une connaissance exacte de ceux-ci – que du principe plus général, auquel je viens de faire référence, selon lequel les dispositions de la directive constituent la réalisation concrète des principes du traité en matière d'égalité de traitement et d'interdiction de toute discrimination. Du reste, la Cour a affirmé que, justement pour respecter le principe d'égalité de traitement des soumissionnaires, toutes les offres doivent être conformes aux prescriptions du cahier des charges (15).

81. À mon avis, ce principe fondamental en matière de publicité doit être également appliqué aux concessions, dont les appels d'offres devront donc indiquer de façon précise tous les travaux faisant l'objet de la concession. Plusieurs considérations vont dans ce sens.

82. Premièrement, des motifs évidents sont liés à la transparence et à l'égalité de traitement. Ces deux principes, comme on l'a vu, découlent directement du traité, et la Cour les a déclarés applicables, en règle générale, à toutes les concessions, y compris celles qui ne font pas l'objet d'une réglementation spécifique (16).

83. Deuxièmement, la directive prévoit que, parmi les règles applicables aux marchés publics, seules celles relatives à la publicité – ou du moins une partie de celles-ci – sont applicables aux concessions. Admettre que même les quelques règles applicables aux concessions devraient être interprétées différemment, et d'une façon plus restrictive que celles applicables aux marchés publics aboutirait, me semble-t-il, à réduire considérablement l'effet utile du cadre juridique applicable aux concessions.

84. Le fait que le modèle d'avis d'appel d'offres prévu pour les concessions (annexe VI à la directive) soit beaucoup plus bref que celui prévu pour les marchés publics (annexe V à la directive) ne signifie pas que la description des ouvrages à réaliser puisse y figurer d'une façon significativement différente. Du reste, les deux modèles d'avis d'appel d'offres sont pratiquement identiques dans la partie concernant la description de l'objet du marché et celui de la concession (voir la section II de chacun de ces modèles).

85. On retrouve par ailleurs, dans la jurisprudence de la Cour, des affirmations qui mettent sur le même pied, sans mentionner aucune différence, les règles de publicité applicables aux marchés et celles applicables aux concessions (17).

86. Le fait d'imposer qu'un avis d'appel d'offres décrive de façon précise les ouvrages à réaliser ne signifie naturellement pas que soit exclue toute forme de créativité ou de liberté dans les offres présentées. Toutefois, le respect du principe de l'égalité de traitement impose que, dans ce cas, la possibilité soit offerte aux soumissionnaires potentiels de connaître tant l'existence d'une telle marge de liberté, que les limites de celle-ci. À ce propos, il convient de citer un passage de la communication interprétative de la Commission sur les concessions en droit communautaire (18) (ci–après la «communication interprétative»), qui me semble tout à fait correct et fondé:

«En outre, lorsque, dans certains cas, le concédant n'a pas la possibilité de définir ses besoins en termes techniques suffisamment précis, il va alors rechercher des offres alternatives susceptibles d'apporter des solutions différentes à un problème exprimé en termes généraux. Cependant, dans ces hypothèses, le cahier des charges doit toujours, pour assurer une concurrence saine et efficace, présenter de manière non discriminatoire et objective ce qui est demandé aux candidats et surtout les modalités de l'approche qu'ils doivent suivre en préparant leurs offres. De cette manière, chacun des candidats sait à l'avance qu'il a la possibilité de prévoir des solutions techniques différentes. Plus généralement, le cahier des charges ne doit pas comporter d'éléments contraires aux règles et aux principes du traité précités. Les besoins du concédant peuvent aussi être déterminés en collaboration avec des entreprises du secteur dans la mesure où ceci n'a pas pour effet d'empêcher la concurrence» (point 3.1.1, paragraphe 9).

87. Du reste, en matière de marchés, l'article 19 de la directive prévoit explicitement, par le mécanisme des variantes, la possibilité de laisser aux soumissionnaires une certaine marge de liberté dans la présentation de leurs offres. Cependant, dans l'arrêt Traunfellner, la Cour a interprété cet article de façon assez stricte, afin de respecter le principe de l'égalité de traitement entre les soumissionnaires, en excluant par exemple que, pour satisfaire à l'obligation prévue à l'article 19, paragraphe 2, de la directive – qui impose aux pouvoirs adjudicateurs de mentionner dans le cahier des charges les conditions minimales que les variantes doivent respecter – le renvoi opéré par le cahier des charges à une disposition de la législation nationale puisse suffire (19).

88. L'argument du Royaume d'Espagne, selon lequel l'arrêt Traunfellner, précité, ne serait pas applicable en l'espèce, en ce qu'il fait référence à des variantes et non à des ouvrages supplémentaires, ne me paraît pas convaincant. En effet, premièrement, même si on admet que la distinction entre variantes et ouvrages supplémentaires soit fondée, reste le fait que l'arrêt Traunfellner se base sur l'objectif essentiel de garantir l'égalité de traitement des soumissionnaires, et que cet objectif ne peut pas être considéré comme moins pertinent quand il s'agit d'ouvrages supplémentaires que quand il s'agit de variantes. En tout état de cause, cet arrêt, en ce qu'il fait référence à l'article 19 de la directive, c'est-à-dire à une disposition qui n'est pas applicable aux concessions de travaux, n'est pas directement applicable en l'espèce, et doit plutôt être considéré comme une indication et une ligne directrice, du reste extrêmement convaincante.

89. Une autre indication utile, applicable essentiellement par analogie, peut également être déduite de la jurisprudence de la Cour qui, toujours par application du principe de l'égalité de traitement des soumissionnaires, a souligné que, une fois indiqués, les critères d'adjudication d'un marché doivent rester les mêmes tout au long de la procédure (20).

90. En conclusion, un appel d'offres pour l'adjudication d'une concession de travaux publics doit indiquer précisément les ouvrages faisant l'objet de la concession. D'éventuelles variantes et des ouvrages supplémentaires peuvent être admis si cette faculté est indiquée, avec les limites dans lesquelles elle peut être exercée, dans l'avis d'appel d'offres lui-même.

5. Sur l'interprétation du second cahier des charges

91. Une fois éclaircis les critères qu'un appel d'offres pour une concession de travaux doit remplir pour satisfaire aux obligations de publicité imposées par le droit communautaire, il est nécessaire de vérifier si, en l'espèce, le cahier des charges de la concession en cause est conforme à ces critères.

92. J'estime qu'il y a lieu de conclure par la négative, et que la correspondance n'était pas suffisante entre ce qui est indiqué dans le second cahier des charges et les travaux attribués dans la concession à Iberpistas.

93. Premièrement, comme on l'a vu, le gouvernement espagnol estime que le choix de remplacer le premier cahier des charges par le second aurait été motivé par la volonté de laisser plus de marge à la libre initiative des soumissionnaires, afin de définir des solutions adéquates au problème du trafic. Ce gouvernement soutient en outre que les participants à l'appel d'offres auraient pu aisément comprendre cela. Toutefois, ces arguments ne peuvent pas être acceptés.

94. En effet, il y a lieu d'observer que le préambule du second cahier des charges indique simplement que «pour des raisons d'ordre technique, il y a lieu de modifier ledit cahier, afin de redéfinir l'objet de l'appel d'offres et d'apporter quelques modifications concernant la fixation de la durée de la concession». Il s'agit d'une formulation assez vague, qui est très loin d'indiquer exactement la raison précise qui a entraîné la reformulation du cahier des charges (à l'exception de la modification de la durée de la concession). Au minimum, si la décision d'annuler le cahier des charges précédent se fondait sur la volonté de laisser plus de marge à la libre initiative des soumissionnaires pour la solution des problèmes du trafic, cela aurait pu et dû être indiqué expressément. Cependant, cela n'a pas été le cas.

95. De la même façon, les arguments du gouvernement espagnol selon lesquels la possibilité d'offrir des ouvrages supplémentaires tels que ceux proposés par Iberpistas découlerait de certaines dispositions du cahier des charges ne peuvent pas être accueillis non plus. En particulier, il s'agit des points 13 et 16 de la clause 5 ainsi que de la clause 29 de l'avis d'appel d'offres.

96. Or, en ce qui concerne la clause 29, il suffit d'observer que celle–ci ne vise de façon expresse que les deux raccordements de l'A-6 avec Ávila et Ségovie (21).

97. Une observation analogue peut être émise en ce qui concerne le point 16 de la clause 5 du cahier des charges, qui indique expressément que les mesures pour la gestion du trafic qui auraient pu être proposées à l'administration concernaient «la région affectée par la construction des tronçons faisant l'objet de la concession». La référence à la «construction» de ces tronçons limite donc clairement aux raccordements de l'A-6 à Ávila et Ségovie la région à laquelle se réfère cette disposition.

98. En ce qui concerne le point 13 de la même clause du cahier des charges, il y a lieu de relever qu'il fait référence, de façon générale, aux mesures que les soumissionnaires auraient pu se proposer d'adopter par rapport à une série d'éléments qui doivent typiquement être pris en considération dans le cadre de la réalisation de travaux routiers: non seulement le trafic, mais aussi l'impact possible sur le paysage, l'environnement, le tourisme, etc. Il est clair qu'une telle disposition générale, qui ne fait référence qu'à des réalisations accessoires par rapport aux travaux mentionnés expressément dans le cahier des charges, ne peut pas être considérée comme une publicité qui indiquerait à suffisance comme objet du cahier des charges des travaux de construction de grande importance, y compris du point de vue économique, se situant en outre hors des zones de construction expressément indiquées dans l'avis.

99. En outre, ledit point 13 fait référence aux «effets» de la concession sur le problème global du trafic, mais ne fait pas référence à la localisation des mesures à prendre pour réduire ce problème. Partant, l'argument de la Commission selon lequel, conformément à la rédaction du cahier des charges, les soumissionnaires pouvaient comprendre que ces mesures se rapportaient seulement à la zone des ouvrages dont la construction était expressément prévue, n'est pas à négliger.

100. Enfin, il y a lieu de ne pas perdre de vue que les dispositions qui viennent d'être rappelées sont restées identiques dans le premier et dans le second cahier des charges. Par conséquent, il n'est pas possible de prétendre que, compte tenu de celles-ci, un participant potentiel à l'appel d'offres aurait pu estimer que les choix qu'ont fait les autorités espagnoles d'annuler le premier appel d'offres en éliminant de celui-ci certains travaux était déterminé par une volonté d'obtenir des propositions alternatives par rapport à ces travaux «annulés».

101. Ensuite, en ce qui concerne les arguments supplémentaires invoqués par le Royaume d'Espagne quant à la possibilité d'interpréter le second cahier des charges à la lumière des autres dispositions pertinentes du droit espagnol, qui auraient reconnu une large marge de liberté et de créativité aux soumissionnaires, j'observe ce qui suit.

102. D'une part, en principe, pour les raisons déjà indiquées, j'estime que les principes que la jurisprudence de la Cour a développés quant à la publicité des marchés publics s'appliquent également en matière de concessions. Comme on l'a vu, la Cour a exclu également la légalité d'un avis d'appel d'offres qui, en ce qui concerne l'admissibilité des variantes, contenait un renvoi explicite à la législation nationale (22).

103. D'autre part, même si on voulait admettre, par l'absurde, la possibilité – qui serait tout à fait contraire à la jurisprudence de la Cour – d'un complément implicite à l'appel d'offres sur la base du droit national, il reste que, à mon avis, l'article 8 de la Ley de Autopistas ne va pas dans le sens de la position du Royaume d'Espagne. En effet, cette disposition, loin de reconnaître aux soumissionnaires potentiels une grande liberté créative pour la présentation des offres, fait référence à des travaux qui, bien que non prévus dans l'objet initial de la concession, «s'imposent au concessionnaire comme contrepartie». En d'autres termes, il semble qu'il s'agisse de travaux qui sont, en tout cas, expressément demandés aux concessionnaires, et non pas librement proposés et réalisés par celui-ci. Par conséquent, il semble inutile de vérifier si, aux termes de la législation nationale, tous les ouvrages supplémentaires proposés par Iberpistas relèvent de la zone d'influence des ouvrages expressément indiqués comme faisant l'objet de la concession.

104. La communication interprétative ne peut pas non plus fournir des arguments dans le sens de la position du gouvernement espagnol. En particulier, comme on l'a vu, bien que dans ce document la Commission admette la possibilité que les soumissionnaires se voient reconnaître une large marge de liberté et de créativité dans leurs offres, elle rappelle également et de manière expresse la nécessité de «présenter de manière non discriminatoire et objective ce qui est demandé aux candidats» (23).

105. En outre, la Commission a montré de façon plutôt convaincante, malgré les arguments opposés du Royaume d'Espagne, que les autres soumissionnaires n'ont pas interprété les clauses relatives à la nécessité de proposer des mesures pour la réduction du trafic de la même façon que Iberpistas. En particulier, toutes les solutions proposées par les autres soumissionnaires se concentraient sur la réalisation d'ouvrages supplémentaires strictement liés aux ouvrages dont la construction était expressément demandée dans le cahier des charges. Il s'agit évidemment d'un fait qui, en soi, n'est pas déterminant, dans la mesure où l'appréciation du cahier des charges par les autres soumissionnaires ne lie certainement pas la Cour. En outre, il ne peut pas être exclu que les autres soumissionnaires aient interprété erronément le cahier des charges. Il s'agit cependant d'un élément qui, en tout état de cause, peut être pris en compte pour décrire de façon complète les circonstances de l'espèce.

VII – Conclusions

107. Eu égard aux considérations qui précèdent, je propose à la Cour de statuer dans les termes suivants:

En n'incluant pas, parmi les travaux faisant l'objet de la concession, dans le cahier des charges concernant la passation d'un marché de concession administrative pour la construction, l'entretien et l'exploitation des liaisons de l'autoroute A-6 avec Ségovie et Ávila, ainsi que pour l'entretien et l'exploitation du tronçon Villalba-Adanero de la même autoroute à partir de 2018, certains travaux qui ont été attribués ultérieurement, le Royaume d'Espagne a manqué aux obligations qui lui incombent en vertu de la directive 93/37/CEE portant coordination des procédures de passation des marchés publics de travaux, et sur la base des principes du traité en matière d'égalité de traitement et de non–discrimination.

Le Royaume d'Espagne est condamné aux dépens.

2 – À l'opposé, les concessions de services ne font pas encore l'objet d'une réglementation spécifique, à l'exception de quelques principes importants affirmés par la jurisprudence de la Cour. En particulier, la jurisprudence a affirmé constamment que, bien que n'étant pas expressément soumises à une législation spécifique, les concessions de services doivent respecter les principes fondamentaux du traité et en particulier le principe de non-discrimination en raison de la nationalité. Action brought on 13 September 2007 - Commission of the European Communities v Kingdom of Spain

(Case C-423/07)

Language of the case: Spanish

Parties

Applicant: Commission of the European Communities (represented by: D. Kukovec, agent and M. Canal Fontcuberta, abogada)

Defendant: Kingdom of Spain

Form of order sought

declare that, by not including, in the works to be awarded by concession in the concession notice and in the tendering specifications relating to the award of a public concession for the construction, maintenance and operation of the motorway links to Segovia and Ávila, and for the maintenance and operation of the Villalba-Adanero section of the same motorway, works which were subsequently awarded, the Kingdom of Spain has failed to fulfil its obligations under Article 3 and Article 11(3) (6) (7) (11) and (12) of Directive 93/37/EEC[1], and under the principles of the EC Treaty, in particular the principle of equality of treatment and non-discrimination;

order Kingdom of Spain to pay the costs.

Pleas in law and main arguments

Under Royal Decree 1724/99 of 5 November the Ministry for Infrastructure and Transport awarded a public works concession for the construction, maintenance and operation of the following sections of toll motorway: the A-6 toll motorway link to Segovia, and the A-6 toll motorway link to Ávila, and for the maintenance and operation from 2018 of the Villalba-Adanero section of the A-6 toll motorway. In the context of awarding that concession, there were awarded many other works of which notice had not been given, to a value greater than the total value of the published works, and which were in part outside the geographical area of the concession.

First, the Commission claims that the Kingdom of Spain has infringed Article 3 of Directive 93/37 and consequently Article 11(3) (6) (7) (11) and (12) of the same directive by awarding works without prior public notice. The Commission states that all the works awarded should have been published in the Official Journal in accordance with the provisions of Directive 93/37.

Secondly, the Commission considers that there is no information either in the notice or in the tendering specifications which would enable tenderers to bid for works on sections other than the A-6 toll motorway links to Ávila and Segovia such as those which were subsequently awarded. The Commission considers therefore that the Spanish authorities have infringed the principle of equality of treatment by accepting a tender which manifestly did not comply with the essential conditions set out in the published notice and tendering specifications.

Judgment

1 This reference for a preliminary ruling concerns the interpretation of Articles 43 EC and 49 EC and of the principles of equal treatment and non-discrimination on grounds of nationality, as well as of the concomitant obligation of transparency.

2 The reference was made in the course of proceedings brought by Coditel Brabant SA ('Coditel') against the Commune d'Uccle (Municipality of Uccle; 'the Municipality of Uccle'), the Région de Bruxelles-Capitale and the Société Intercommunale pour la Diffusion de la Télévision (Brutélé) ('Brutélé'), concerning the award by the Municipality of Uccle to an inter-municipal cooperative society of a concession for the management of the municipal cable television network.

Legal context

National law

3 Article 1 of the Law of 22 December 1986 on inter-municipal cooperatives (loi relative aux intercommunales) (Moniteur belge of 26 June 1987, p. 9909; 'the Law on inter-municipal cooperatives') provides:

'Two or more municipalities may, in accordance with the provisions of this Law, form associations with specific objects in the municipal interest. Those associations shall hereinafter be referred to as inter-municipal cooperatives.'

4 Article 3 of the Law provides:

'Inter-municipal cooperatives shall be legal persons governed by public law and shall not have a commercial character, irrespective of their form or object.'

5 Article 10 of the Law states:

'Each inter-municipal cooperative shall comprise a general assembly, a governing council and a board of auditors.'

6 Under Article 11 of the Law:

'Irrespective of the proportion of the contributions made by the various parties to the authorised capital, the municipalities shall always hold both the majority of votes and the chairmanship of the various inter-municipal management and control bodies.'

7 Article 12 of the Law on inter-communal municipal cooperatives provides:

'The representatives of the associated municipalities at the general assembly shall be appointed by the municipal council of each municipality from among the municipal councillors, the mayor and the aldermen.

For each municipality, the voting rights at the general assembly shall correspond to the number of shares held.'

The dispute in the main proceedings and the questions referred for a preliminary ruling

8 From 1969 to 1999, the Municipality of Uccle authorised Coditel to install and operate a cable television network in its territory. On 28 October 1999, the municipality decided to purchase the network with effect from 1 January 2000.

9 To that end, the Municipality of Uccle launched a call for tenders – also by decision of 28 October 1999 – with a view to granting the right to operate the network to a concessionaire. Four companies, including Coditel, submitted tenders.

10 On 25 May 2000, the Municipality of Uccle decided against awarding a concession for the operation of its cable television network, opting instead to sell it.

11 A notice of a call for purchase tenders was published in the Bulletin des adjudications on 15 September 2000. Five companies, including Coditel, submitted purchase bids. In addition, Brutélé, an inter-municipal cooperative society, submitted to the Municipality of Uccle an offer of affiliation as an associated member instead of a purchase bid.

12 Since it considered that four of the five bids were inadmissible and that the only admissible bid – Coditel's – was too low, the Municipality of Uccle decided, on 23 November 2000, not to sell the municipal cable television network.

13 Also by decision of 23 November 2000, the Municipality of Uccle decided to become a member of Brutélé, entrusting the latter with the management of its cable television network.

14 The reasons for that decision include, in particular, the following considerations:

'Whereas Brutélé proposes to the Municipality of Uccle that, upon taking up membership, it should constitute an independent operational sub-section with autonomous power of decision;

Whereas that autonomy relates in particular to:

– the choice of programmes transmitted;

– the subscription and connection charges;

– the investment and works policy;

– the rebates or benefits to be granted to certain categories of person;

– the nature of and terms relating to other services to be provided via the network, and the possibility of entrusting the inter-communal cooperative with projects of interest to the municipality that accord with the objects defined in its statutes, such as the creation of a municipal intranet, a website and the training of staff for that purpose.

Whereas within that framework:

– Brutélé would draw up an income statement and balance sheet for activities on Uccle's network;

– [the Municipality of] Uccle would have a director on the governing council of Brutélé and three directors on the board of the Brussels operating sector, one appointee on the board of auditors and one as a municipal expert.

Whereas Brutélé undertakes to cover the entire Uccle network and to increase the capacity of the network so that it can offer, within one year at most, if the municipality so wishes, all the following services:

– expansion of the TV range: additional programmes and "the bouquet";

– pay-per-view programmes;

– internet access;

– voice telephony;

– video surveillance;

– high-speed data transmission;

Whereas the proposed annual fee consists of the following:

(a) fixed fee equal to 10% of the income from basic subscriptions for cable television (on the basis of 31 000 subscribers and an annual subscription fee of BEF 3 400 (before VAT and royalties): BEF 10 540 000 per year);

(b) payment of 5% of the turnover of Canal+ and of the bouquet;

(c) payment of the entire profit on all the services provided.'

15 It is clear from the order for reference that the Municipality of Uccle had to subscribe for 76 shares in Brutélé, in the amount of BEF 200 000 per share. Moreover, the municipality requested, and obtained, from Brutélé the option of withdrawing unilaterally from that inter-municipal cooperative at any time.

16 It is also apparent from the order for reference that Brutélé is an inter-municipal cooperative society whose members are municipalities and an inter-municipal association whose members in turn are solely municipalities. Brutélé is not open to private members. Its governing council consists of representatives of the municipalities (a maximum of three per municipality), who are appointed by the general assembly, which is itself composed of representatives of the municipalities. The governing council enjoys the widest powers.

17 The order for reference further makes clear that the municipalities are divided into two sections, one of which groups together the municipalities in the Brussels region, which may be divided into sub-sectors. Within each sector, there is a sector board consisting of directors appointed by the general assembly, sitting in separate groups representing the holders of shares for each of the sectors, from among candidates proposed by the municipalities. The governing council may delegate to the sector boards its powers with regard to matters affecting the sub-sectors, such as the conditions for the application of charges, the programme of works and investment, the financing thereof, advertising campaigns and problems common to the various sub-sectors within the operational sector. The constitutional bodies under Brutélé's statutes ('the statutory bodies') additionally comprise the general assembly, whose decisions are binding on all members; the Director General; the board of experts, who are municipal officials and equal in number to the directors whom they are tasked with assisting; and the board of auditors. The Director General, the experts and the auditors are appointed by the governing council or the general assembly, as the case may be.

18 Furthermore, according to the order for reference, Brutélé carries out the essential part of its activities with its members.

19 By application lodged on 22 January 2001, Coditel brought an appeal before the Conseil d'État (Council of State) (Belgium), inter alia, for annulment of the decision of 23 November 2000 whereby the Municipality of Uccle became a member of Brutélé. In that appeal, Coditel took issue with the municipality for joining Brutélé and entrusting it with the management of its cable television network, without comparing the advantages of that arrangement with the advantages of granting another operator a concession for running the network. Coditel claimed that, by proceeding in that manner, the Municipality of Uccle had infringed, inter alia, the principle of non-discrimination and the obligation of transparency enshrined in Community law.

20 Brutélé contested that claim, maintaining that it is 'purely' an inter-municipal cooperative whose activities are intended and reserved for the member municipalities and that its statutes allow the Municipality of Uccle, as an operational sub-sector, to exercise immediate and precise control over Brutélé's activities in that sub-sector, identical to the control that that municipality would exercise over its own internal departments.

21 The Conseil d'État takes the view that the affiliation of the Municipality of Uccle to Brutélé does not constitute a public service contract but a public service concession for the purposes of Community law. Although the Community public procurement directives do not apply to public service concessions, the principle of non-discrimination on grounds of nationality implies an obligation of transparency in the award of concessions, in accordance with the case-law of the Court of Justice deriving from the judgment in Case C–324/98 Telaustria and Telefonadress [2000] ECR I–10745. In order to satisfy the requirements of Community law, the Municipality of Uccle ought, in principle, to have issued a call for competition in order to examine whether the award of the concession for its cable television service to economic operators other than Brutélé constituted a more attractive course of action than that chosen. The Conseil d'État asks whether those requirements of Community law are to be set aside in the light of the judgment in Case C-107/98 Teckal [1999] ECR I-8121, according to which those requirements do not apply where the concession-granting public authority exercises control over the concessionaire and where the concessionaire carries out the essential part of its activities with that authority.

22 In those circumstances, the Conseil d'État decided to stay the proceedings and to refer the following questions to the Court of Justice for a preliminary ruling:

'1. May a municipality, without calling for competition, join a cooperative society grouping together exclusively other municipalities and associations of municipalities (a so-called "pure" inter-municipal cooperative) in order to transfer to that cooperative society the management of its cable television network, in the knowledge that the cooperative society carries out the essential part of its activities for and with its own members and that decisions regarding those activities are taken by the governing council and the sector boards within the limits of the delegated powers granted to them by the governing council, those statutory bodies being composed of representatives of the public authorities and the decisions of those bodies being taken in accordance with the vote expressed by the majority of those representatives?

2. Can the control thus exercised over the decisions of the cooperative society, via the statutory bodies, by all the members of the cooperative society – or, in the case of operational sectors or sub-sectors, by some of those members – be regarded as enabling them to exercise over the cooperative society control similar to that exercised over their own departments?

3. For that control to be regarded as similar, must it be exercised individually by each member, or is it sufficient that it be exercised by the majority of the members?'

The questions referred

Questions 1 and 2

23 In the light of the connection between them, Questions 1 and 2 should be examined together.

24 It is apparent from the referral decision that, by becoming a member of Brutélé, the Municipality of Uccle entrusted it with the management of its cable television network. It is also apparent that Brutélé's remuneration comes not from the municipality but from payments made by the users of that network. That method of remuneration is characteristic of a public service concession (Case C-458/03 Parking Brixen [2005] ECR I-8585, paragraph 40).

25 Public service concession contracts do not fall within the scope of Council Directive 92/50/EEC of 18 June 1992 relating to the coordination of procedures for the award of public service contracts (OJ 1992 L 209, p. 1), which was applicable at the material time. Notwithstanding the fact that such contracts fall outside the scope of that directive, the authorities concluding them are bound to comply with the fundamental rules of the EC Treaty, the principles of equal treatment and non-discrimination on grounds of nationality, and the concomitant obligation of transparency (see, to that effect, Telaustria and Telefonadress, paragraphs 60 to 62, and Case C-231/03 Coname [2005] ECR I-7287, paragraphs 16 to 19). Without necessarily implying an obligation to launch an invitation to tender, that obligation of transparency requires the concession-granting authority to ensure, for the benefit of any potential concessionaire, a degree of advertising sufficient to enable the service concession to be opened up to competition and the impartiality of the procurement procedures to be reviewed (see, to that effect, Telaustria and Telefonadress, paragraph 62, and Coname, paragraph 21).

26 The application of the rules set out in Articles 12 EC, 43 EC and 49 EC, as well as of the general principles of which they are the specific expression, is precluded if the control exercised over the concessionaire by the concession-granting public authority is similar to that which the authority exercises over its own departments and if, at the same time, that entity carries out the essential part of its activities with the controlling authority or authorities (see, to that effect, Teckal, paragraph 50, and Parking Brixen, paragraph 62).

27 As regards the second of those conditions, the national court stated in the order for reference that Brutélé carries out the essential part of its activities with its members. Accordingly, the scope of the first condition – that the control exercised over the concessionaire by the concession-granting public authority or authorities must be similar to that which the authority exercises over its own departments – remains to be examined.

28 In order to determine whether a concession-granting public authority exercises a control similar to that which it exercises over its own departments, it is necessary to take account of all the legislative provisions and relevant circumstances. It must follow from that examination that the concessionaire in question is subject to a control which enables the concession-granting public authority to influence that entity's decisions. It must be a case of a power of decisive influence over both strategic objectives and significant decisions of that entity (see, to that effect, Parking Brixen, paragraph 65, and Case C-340/04 Carbotermo and Consorzio Alisei [2006] ECR I-4137, paragraph 36).

29 Of the relevant facts which can be identified from the order for reference, it is appropriate to consider, first, the holding of capital by the concessionaire, secondly, the composition of its decision-making bodies, and thirdly, the extent of the powers conferred on its governing council.

30 As regards the first of those facts, it should be borne in mind that, where a private undertaking holds a share of the capital of a concessionaire, this precludes the possibility for a concession-granting public authority to exercise over that concessionaire a control similar to that which it exercises over its own departments (see, to that effect, Case C–26/03 Stadt Halle and RPL Lochau [2005] ECR I-1, paragraph 49).

31 On the other hand, the fact that the concession-granting public authority holds, alone or together with other public authorities, all of the share capital in a concessionaire, tends to indicate – generally, but not conclusively – that that contracting authority exercises over that company a control similar to that which it exercises over its own departments (Carbotermo and Consorzio Alisei, paragraph 37, and Case C-295/05 Asemfo [2007] ECR I-2999, paragraph 57).

32 It is clear from the order for reference that, in the case before the referring court, the concessionaire is an inter-municipal cooperative society whose members are municipalities and an inter-municipal association whose members in turn are solely municipalities, and is not open to private members.

33 Secondly, it is clear from the file that Brutélé's governing council consists of representatives of the affiliated municipalities, appointed by the general assembly, which is itself composed of representatives of the affiliated municipalities. In accordance with Article 12 of the Law on inter-municipal cooperatives, the representatives at the general assembly are appointed by the municipal council of each municipality from among the municipal councillors, the mayor and the aldermen.

34 The fact that Brutélé's decision-making bodies are composed of representatives of the public authorities which are affiliated to Brutélé shows that those bodies are under the control of the public authorities, which are thus able to exert decisive influence over both Brutélé's strategic objectives and significant decisions.

35 Thirdly, it is evident from the file that Brutélé's governing council enjoys the widest powers. In particular, it fixes the charges. It also has the power – but is under no obligation – to delegate to the sector or sub-sector boards the resolution of certain matters particular to those sectors or sub-sectors.

36 The question arises as to whether Brutélé has thus become market-oriented and gained a degree of independence which would render tenuous the control exercised by the public authorities affiliated to it.

37 In this regard, it should be pointed out that Brutélé does not take the form of a société par actions, or a société anonyme, either of which is capable of pursuing objectives independently of its shareholders, but of an inter-municipal cooperative society governed by the Law on inter-municipal cooperatives. Moreover, in accordance with Article 3 of that Law, inter-municipal cooperatives are not to have a commercial character.

38 It seems to be apparent from that Law, which is supplemented by Brutélé's statutes, that Brutélé's object under its statutes is the pursuit of the municipal interest – that being the raison d'être for its creation – and that it does not pursue any interest which is distinct from that of the public authorities affiliated to it.

39 Subject to verification of the facts by the referring court, it follows that, despite the extent of the powers conferred on its governing council, Brutélé does not enjoy a degree of independence sufficient to preclude the municipalities which are affiliated to it from exercising over it control similar to that exercised over their own departments.

40 Those considerations are all the more applicable where decisions relating to the activities of the inter-municipal cooperative society are taken by the sector or sub-sector boards, within the limits of the delegated powers granted to them by the governing council. Where one or more affiliated municipalities are recognised as constituting a sector or sub-sector of that society's activities, the control which those municipalities may exercise over the matters delegated to the sector or sub-sector boards is even stricter than that which they exercise in conjunction with all the members within the plenary bodies of that society.

41 It follows from the foregoing that, subject to verification of the facts by the referring court as regards the degree of independence enjoyed by the inter-municipal cooperative society in question, in circumstances such as those of the case before the referring court, the control exercised, via the statutory bodies, by the public authorities belonging to such an inter-municipal cooperative society over that society's decisions may be regarded as enabling those authorities to exercise over that cooperative society control similar to that exercised over their own departments.

42 Accordingly, the answer to Questions 1 and 2 must be that:

– Articles 43 EC and 49 EC, the principles of equal treatment and of non-discrimination on grounds of nationality, and the concomitant obligation of transparency, do not preclude a public authority from awarding, without calling for competition, a public service concession to an inter-municipal cooperative society of which all the members are public authorities, where those public authorities exercise over that cooperative society control similar to that exercised over their own departments and where that society carries out the essential part of its activities with those public authorities;

– Subject to verification of the facts by the referring court as regards the degree of independence enjoyed by the inter-municipal cooperative society in question, in circumstances such as those of the case before the referring court, where decisions regarding the activities of an inter-municipal cooperative society owned exclusively by public authorities are taken by bodies, created under the statutes of that society, which are composed of representatives of the affiliated public authorities, the control exercised over those decisions by the public authorities may be regarded as enabling those authorities to exercise over the cooperative society control similar to that exercised over their own departments.

43 By Question 3, the national court is essentially asking whether, where a public authority joins an inter-communal cooperative of which all the members are public authorities in order to transfer to that cooperative society the management of a public service, it is necessary, in order for the control which those member authorities exercise over the cooperative to be regarded as similar to that which they exercise over their own departments, for that control to be exercised individually by each of those public authorities or whether it can be exercised jointly by them, decisions being taken by a majority, as the case may be.

44 First, it should be pointed out that, according to the case-law of the Court, where several public authorities control a concessionaire, the condition relating to the essential part of that entity's activities may be met if account is taken of the activities which that entity carries out with all those authorities (see, to that effect, Carbotermo and Consorzio Alisei, paragraphs 70 and 71, and Asemfo, paragraph 62).

45 It would be consistent with the reasoning underlying that case-law to consider that the condition as to the control exercised by the public authorities may also be satisfied if account is taken of the control exercised jointly over the concessionaire by the controlling public authorities.

46 According to the case-law, the control exercised over the concessionaire by a concession-granting public authority must be similar to that which the authority exercises over its own departments, but not identical in every respect (see, to that effect, Parking Brixen, paragraph 62). The control exercised over the concessionaire must be effective, but it is not essential that it be exercised individually.

47 Secondly, where a number of public authorities elect to carry out their public service tasks by having recourse to a municipal concessionaire, it is usually not possible for one of those authorities, unless it has a majority interest in that entity, to exercise decisive control over the decisions of the latter. To require the control exercised by a public authority in such a case to be individual would have the effect of requiring a call for competition in the majority of cases where a public authority seeks to join a grouping composed of other public authorities, such as an inter-municipal cooperative society.

48 Such a result, however, would not be consistent with Community rules on public procurement and concession contracts. Indeed, a public authority has the possibility of performing the public interest tasks conferred on it by using its own administrative, technical and other resources, without being obliged to call on outside entities not forming part of its own departments (Stadt Halle and RPL Lochau, paragraph 48).

49 That possibility for public authorities to use their own resources to perform the public interest tasks conferred on them may be exercised in cooperation with other public authorities (see, to that effect, Asemfo, paragraph 65).

50 It must therefore be recognised that, where a number of public authorities own a concessionaire to which they entrust the performance of one of their public service tasks, the control which those public authorities exercise over that entity may be exercised jointly.

51 As regards collective decision-making bodies, the procedure which is used for adopting decisions – such as, inter alia, adoption by majority – is of no importance.

52 That conclusion is not undermined by Coname. Admittedly, the Court considered in that judgment that a 0.97% interest is so small as to preclude a municipality from exercising control over the concessionaire managing a public service (see Coname, paragraph 24). However, in that passage of the judgment, the Court was not concerned with the question whether such control could be exercised jointly.

53 Furthermore, in a later judgment – namely, Asemfo, paragraphs 56 to 61 – the Court recognised that in certain circumstances the condition relating to the control exercised by the public authority could be satisfied where such an authority held only 0.25% of the capital in a public undertaking.

54 Consequently, the answer to Question 3 must be that, where a public authority joins an inter-communal cooperative of which all the members are public authorities in order to transfer to that cooperative society the management of a public service, it is possible, in order for the control which those member authorities exercise over the cooperative to be regarded as similar to that which they exercise over their own departments, for it to be exercised jointly by those authorities, decisions being taken by a majority, as the case may be.

Costs

55 Since these proceedings are, for the parties to the main proceedings, a step in the action pending before the national court, the decision on costs is a matter for that court. Costs incurred in submitting observations to the Court, other than the costs of those parties, are not recoverable.

On those grounds, the Court (Third Chamber) hereby rules:

1. Articles 43 EC and 49 EC, the principles of equal treatment and of non-discrimination on grounds of nationality and the concomitant obligation of transparency do not preclude a public authority from awarding, without calling for competition, a public service concession to an inter-municipal cooperative society of which all the members are public authorities, where those public authorities exercise over that cooperative society control similar to that exercised over their own departments and where that society carries out the essential part of its activities with those public authorities.

2. Subject to verification of the facts by the referring court as regards the degree of independence enjoyed by the inter-municipal cooperative society in question, in circumstances such as those of the case before the referring court, where decisions regarding the activities of an inter-municipal cooperative society owned exclusively by public authorities are taken by bodies, created under the statutes of that society, which are composed of representatives of the affiliated public authorities, the control exercised over those decisions by the public authorities may be regarded as enabling those authorities to exercise over the cooperative society control similar to that exercised over their own departments.

3. Where a public authority joins an inter-communal cooperative of which all the members are public authorities in order to transfer to that cooperative society the management of a public service, it is possible, in order for the control which those member authorities exercise over the cooperative to be regarded as similar to that which they exercise over their own departments, for it to be exercised jointly by those authorities, decisions being taken by a majority, as the case may be.

OPINION OF ADVOCATE GENERAL
TRSTENJAK delivered on 4 June 2008 (1)

Case C–324/07

Coditel Brabant SPRL
v Commune d'Uccle
and
Région de Bruxelles – Capital

(Reference for a preliminary ruling from the Conseil d'État (Belgium))

(Articles 12 EC, 43 EC und 49 EC – Transparency requirements – Scope of Community procurement law – Public service concession for the management of the cable television network of a regional authority – Inter-municipal cooperation – Quasi in-house performance of tasks – Control similar to that exercised over own departments)

1. The reference by the Conseil d'État (Council of State), Belgium, concerns the scope of Community procurement law. It concerns the question as to whether procurement law is applicable where a regional authority, in this case a municipality, delegates the management of its cable television network to a body that is purely an inter-municipal cooperative entity (2) with the involvement of that municipality, yet without drawing on any private capital. The present case involves inter-municipal cooperation in the form of a cooperative and the questions submitted by the referring court concern the first of the well-known Teckal criteria: control similar to that exercised over an entity's own department.

2. In the dispute in the main proceedings the Belgian cable television company Coditel Brabant SPRL ('Coditel') is proceeding against three defendants: the Municipality of Uccle (also 'the municipality'), the cooperative Société Intercommunale pour la Diffusion de la Télévision (inter-municipal company for television broadcasting) ('Brutélé') and the region of Brussels capital, represented by its government.

I – Legal framework

A – Community law

3. Article 12(1) EC provides as follows:

'Within the scope of application of this Treaty, and without prejudice to any special provisions contained therein, any discrimination on grounds of nationality shall be prohibited.'

4. Article 43 EC provides as follows:

'Within the framework of the provisions set out below, restrictions on the freedom of establishment of nationals of a Member State in the territory of another Member State shall be prohibited. …

Freedom of establishment shall include the right to take up and pursue activities as self-employed persons and to set up and manage undertakings, in particular companies or firms within the meaning of the second paragraph of Article 48, under the conditions laid down for its own nationals by the law of the country where such establishment is effected, subject to the provisions of the chapter relating to capital.'

5. Article 49(1) EC provides as follows:

'Within the framework of the provisions set out below, restrictions on freedom to provide services within the Community shall be prohibited in respect of nationals of Member States who are established in a State of the Community other than that of the person for whom the services are intended.'

B – National law

6. Under Article 162 of the Belgian Constitution, municipalities have the right to form associations.

7. The details of inter-municipal cooperation are governed by the Law on inter-municipal cooperatives (Law of 22 December 1986 on inter municipal cooperatives). Under Article 1 of this Law, in accordance with the provisions of this Law, two or more municipalities may form associations with specific objects in the municipal interest. Article 3 of this Law provides that inter-municipal cooperatives are to be legal persons governed by public law that, irrespective of their form or object, are not to have a commercial character. Article 10 of this Law provides that the component bodies ('statutory bodies') of any inter-municipal cooperative are a general assembly, a governing board and a board of auditors. Under Article 12 of the Law, the general assembly representatives are to be appointed by the municipal council of each municipality from among the municipal councillors, the mayor and the aldermen. It is further laid down therein that for each municipality the voting rights at the general assembly are to correspond to the number of shares held.

II – Facts of the main proceedings and questions referred for a preliminary ruling

8. The cable television network of the Municipality of Uccle was administered by the cable television company Coditel on the basis of contracts dating from 1969 to 1999. As at the end of the contracts on 31 December 1999, the municipality made use of its contractual right to buy the cable television network situated on its territory from Coditel.

9. In October 1999, the Uccle municipal council decided, first, to put out the operation and improvement of the municipal cable television network to tender by a concessionaire for the period from 1 July 2000 to 30 June 2009. Second, the draft was approved for a further additional contract with Coditel to secure the public cable television service pending appointment of the future concessionaire. Finally, provision was made by way of the additional contract for Coditel to administer the network until 31 December 2001.

10. Coditel applied at the end of 1999 for the concession to operate the cable television network of the Municipality of Uccle. At the request of the municipality in April 2000 Coditel also lodged an offer to buy the cable television network, (3) as moreover did the other companies that had participated in the tender.

11. In May 2000, the Uccle municipal council resolved to sell the network rather than grant a concession. Under the terms of the relevant tender Coditel in October 2000 submitted a purchase bid. The prices offered in response to the tender ranged from BEF 750 million to 1 billion; the only offer which was in conformity with the tender and permissible, namely the Coditel bid, was the lowest.

12. Brutélé also responded to the call for tenders but not with a purchase bid but with an offer of affiliation.

13. Since the prices offered to the Municipality of Uccle were clearly lower than the prices previously mentioned as possible, (4) it resolved by resolution of its municipal council dated 23 November 2000 not to sell the municipal cable television network (first decision challenged in the main proceedings).

14. Also on 23 November 2000, the Uccle municipal council resolved that the municipality should become a member of Brutélé (second decision challenged in the main proceedings). This resolution states inter alia that Brutélé has made an offer of affiliation to the Municipality of Uccle involving the municipal network as capital contribution and the subscription of company shares, the payment of an annual fee (5) together with the offer to create, if it were to join, an independent operational sub-sector of its own with decision-making powers. (6) The municipal council further stated in that resolution that affiliation to Brutélé would produce a number of advantages for the Uccle municipality: autonomy in decision-making, considerable revenues, retention of ownership of the network and agreement of the option of a rapid and uncomplicated withdrawal in the event of a future interesting purchase bid.

15. On 30 November 2000 Coditel lodged with the First Minister of the Government of the Bruxelles-Capitale region substantiated a complaint seeking the setting aside of the resolution of the Uccle municipal council of 23 November 2000 concerning the affiliation of that municipality to Brutélé.

16. On 7 December 2000, the extraordinary general assembly of Brutélé voted in favour of the affiliation of the Municipality of Uccle (third decision challenged in the main proceedings).

17. On 19 December 2000, the First Minister of the Brussels city region informed the Municipality of Uccle that its conditional affiliation (7) with Brutélé gave rise to no objection (fourth decision challenged in the main proceedings). On 2 January 2001 the First Minister of the Bruxelles-Capitale region informed the applicant that he had raised no objection to the affiliation of the Municipality of Uccle with Brutélé.

18. Coditel brought an action on 22 January 2001 for a declaration that the four abovementioned decisions were null and void.

19. In the main proceedings the referring Conseil d'État has already dismissed the proceedings against two of these decisions (the third and fourth contested decisions) as inadmissible. To the extent to which the action is in its view admissible, it is in particular important to assess the decision by which the Uccle municipal council resolved to become a member of Brutélé.

20. By order of 3 July 2007, the Conseil d'État referred the following questions to the Court of Justice:

– May a municipality, without calling for competition, join a cooperative society grouping together exclusively other municipalities and associations of municipalities (a so-called pure inter-municipal cooperative) in order to transfer to that cooperative society the operation of its cable television network, in the knowledge that the cooperative society carries out the essential part of its activities for and with its own members and that decisions regarding those activities are taken by the board of directors and the sector boards within the limits of the delegated powers granted to them by the board of directors, those statutory bodies being composed of representatives of the public authorities and the decisions of those corporate bodies being taken in accordance with the vote expressed by the majority of those representatives?

– Can the control thus exercised over the decisions of the cooperative society, via the statutory bodies, by all the members of the cooperative society – or, in the case of operational sectors or sub-sectors, by some of those members – be regarded as enabling them to exercise over the cooperative society control similar to that exercised over their own departments?

– For that control to be regarded as similar, must it be exercised individually by each member, or is it sufficient that it be exercised by the majority of the members?

21. The referring court explains that the affiliation of the Municipality of Uccle to Brutélé falls not within the sector of public contracts for services but within that of public service concessions. In that connection, even though the Community directives on public contracts are not applicable, the fundamental rules of primary Community law in general and the prohibition on discrimination on grounds of nationality in particular, which entails inter alia a transparency obligation, do apply.

22. From the referring court's perspective there is much to be said for the fact that the Municipality of Uccle as awarding authority was not entitled directly and immediately to have recourse to affiliation to Brutélé without conducting a tendering procedure or a comparative examination of bids submitted. Specifically, the municipality, in order to satisfy the requirements of Community law, ought to have conducted a fresh tendering procedure in order to examine whether the grant of a concession over its cable television network service to Coditel or another economic operator would not have been a more favourable possibility than that finally chosen.

23. However, in order to enable it to conduct a definitive analysis, it is essential to obtain further clarification as to criteria arising out of the Teckal (8) judgment, in particular in regard to the nature of the control exercised by the concession-granting authority over the concessionaire. For under that case law, the transparency requirements under Community law could only be suspended if two conditions that were to be narrowly interpreted were separately met, first that the control exercised by the concession-granting authority over the concessionaire is similar to that exercised over its own departments and, second, that the latter body essentially performs its activity for the authority controlling it.

24. In that connection Brutélé claimed that it was a purely inter-municipal entity whose activities were intended for the affiliated municipalities and reserved to them, and that its statutes permitted the Municipality of Uccle to create an independent operational sub-section of its own with decision-making powers, which enabled the latter to exercise precisely the same direct control over the activities of the cooperative society in this sub-section as over its own departments. The Municipality of Uccle has a member on the governing council of Brutélé and three members on the board of the Brussels operating section, an auditor and a municipal expert. Moreover, the Municipality of Uccle could at any time withdraw from the cooperative entity which was further evidence indicating that it was completely in control of the operation of its cable television network.

25. According to the referring court, the statutes of Brutélé provide that the cooperative members are municipalities together with an inter-municipal body, which in its turn is made up solely of municipalities. The cooperative society is not open to private individuals. The governing council comprises representatives of the municipalities – a maximum of three per municipality – who are appointed by the general assembly which in itself comprises representatives of the municipalities. The governing council has the widest powers. The municipalities are divided into two sections of which one comprises the Brussels region municipalities that may be divided into sub-sectors. Within each sector a sector board is set up consisting of board members appointed on a proposal by the municipalities by the general assembly and sitting in various compositions that reflect proportions of shares held in respect of each sector. The governing council may delegate to the sector boards powers in respect of specific questions concerning the sub-sectors – such as the conditions for the application of tariffs, the extension and investment plan, the financing of investments and advertising campaigns – and problems common to the various sub-sectors within the operational sector. The other statutory bodies are the general assembly whose decisions are binding on all members, the Director General, the board of experts consisting of municipal experts, and the auditors. The Director General, the experts and the auditors are appointed on a case-by-case basis by the governing council or the general assembly, as the case may be.

26. The referring court draws from this the inference that the decision-making autonomy of the Municipality of Uccle is not as comprehensive as Brutélé alleges. For example, the governing council exercises the widest powers whilst this municipality is represented by only one representative. It is true that all decisions are taken by bodies of the cooperative society that consist solely of representatives of affiliated municipalities and inter-municipal bodies, yet that does not result in a situation in which each of those members individually has the same decisive influence in regard to the cooperative society as in the case of an autonomous internal organisation of activity.

27. In light of the second condition arising out of the Teckal judgment (9) – 'in the case where … at the same time, that person carries out the essential part of its activities with the controlling local authority or authorities' – the referring court explains that it is not disputed that the cooperative society conducts its activity essentially for its members. On this precondition the referring court has raised no question for a preliminary ruling.

III – Parties' submissions

28. Coditel, the Municipality of Uccle, Brutélé, the Belgian, German and Netherlands

Governments and the Commission of the European Communities submitted written statements pursuant to Article 23 of the Statute of the Court of Justice. They presented oral argument at the sitting on 9 April 2008, with the exception of the Municipality of Uccle, which was not represented.

29. Essentially, all parties agree that this is a case involving the sector of the award of public concessions that is not subject to the directives on procurement but to the general requirement of transparency. (10)

30. Except for Coditel all are agreed that the second Teckal criterion would appear to be satisfied on the basis of the particulars provided in the request for a preliminary ruling.

31. On the first Teckal criterion there are opposing viewpoints.

32. Coditel and the C*ommission* consider that this criterion is not satisfied; the direct affiliation of the Municipality of Uccle to the Brutélé cooperative society conflicts with the transparency requirement.

33. Coditel points out that before affiliation to Brutélé the Municipality of Uccle had no relationship with the cooperative, with the result that the Teckal case-law is in no way relevant. Moreover, the Municipality of Uccle holds only 8.26% of Brutélé's shares (76 out of a total of 920). In addition, Brutélé provides its services such as cable television, telephone and internet on a commercial basis and in competition with other private service providers. The internal structure of Brutélé is essentially similar to the internal structure of a private undertaking. The Municipality of Uccle does not have the capacity to control Brutélé; rather it is questionable whether there can be actual collective control by the cooperative members owing to the large number of members and possible divergences of interests. In light of the judgment in Carbotermo, (11) it is not a determinant factor that 100% of the capital in Brutélé is owned by municipalities and regional authorities. In that connection it is in particular not sufficient that the Municipality of Uccle was granted an operating sub-sector.

34. The C*ommission* also deals in its submissions with the internal decision-making structures of Brutélé and considers in that connection that it is unable to discern a power of decisive influence (12) on the part of an individual municipality such as Uccle. Brutélé's board of directors possesses wide-ranging powers and in particular also determined tariffs. The Municipality of Uccle has in each respect only a shared influence and is not freely in a position to enforce its will, which is however a precondition for satisfying the first Teckal criterion.

35. The Municipality of Uccle and Brutélé, who conversely are of the view that the first Teckal criterion is satisfied, underscore the aspect of the absolute inter-municipal nature of the cooperative society, both under its statutes and under Belgian law.

36. The Municipality of Uccle points out that by its affiliation it retained 'similar control' over the municipal cable television network as laid down in Teckal. It should be emphasised that the Court does not allude to 'identical' but to 'similar' control. To require complete and individual control by a municipality over an inter-municipal form of cooperation would render such cooperation impossible, which by definition is dependent on the collaboration of a multiplicity of persons.

37. Brutélé makes reference only in the alternative to satisfaction of the first Teckal criterion, and points in particular to the judgment in Asemfo, paragraphs 57 et seq. Primarily, Brutélé argues that Articles 43 EC and 49 EC and the principles of equal treatment, non-discrimination and transparency are to be interpreted in such a way as not in themselves to preclude a municipality from joining, without calling for competition, a purely inter-municipal cooperative, without any involvement of private capital and as constituted in particular to attain deliberate aims in the municipal and the general interest. It may be inferred from the judgment in Stadt Halle und RPL Lochau, paragraph 48, that municipalities are entitled themselves to perform their tasks that are in the general interest. However, to apply the rules of Community procurement law to inter-municipal cooperation would force the municipalities to outsource their functions using the market. Belgian law expressly grants municipalities the option of engaging in inter-municipal cooperation. (13) The relationship between the Municipality of Uccle and the Brutélé cooperative society was not founded in contract but by affiliation which is governed by law and by Brutélé's statutes. Brutélé is purely built on inter-municipal cooperation, according to its statutes is not open to private capital and performs its functions in the interest of the municipalities. The aim of the cooperation is to make available to users as wide as possible a selection of television programmes under the most favourable conditions and in appropriate cases to extend the services offered to radio and various communications media. Finally and thirdly, Brutélé contends that the Municipality of Uccle within the context of the cooperative society, in particular also through the internal decision-making structure and with the separate sub-sector, exercises the control at issue here that is similar to that exercised over its own departments.

38. The Belgian Government is of the opinion that the first question referred is to be replied to affirmatively. Without a tendering procedure a municipality may affiliate itself to a cooperative society such as Brutélé which consists solely of other municipalities and regional authorities, in order to transfer to it the management of its cable television network, if the cooperative conducts its activity essentially only for and with its members, and the decisions in connection with that activity are taken by the governing council and the sector boards, within the limits of the delegated powers granted to them by the governing council, and those statutory bodies being consist of representatives of the public authorities and decisions are passed by a majority of the latter.

39. Brutélé, which is not open to private capital, cannot be regarded as a third party in relation to the Municipality of Uccle. The concession for the cable television network was not awarded externally but retained its internal nature.

40. The other questions referred for a preliminary ruling arise solely out of the fact that inter-municipal cooperation is a form of cooperation, which in the nature of things associates different municipalities that cooperate together. In this connection it should be emphasised that decentralised administrations have the right to opt for cooperation in order to secure efficient management. This involves inter alia cooperation between small and larger regional authorities. In regard to smaller regional authorities there is often an inherent necessity to tackle overlapping tasks jointly in an overarching larger structure. To determine how such cooperation between regional authorities are organised and controlled internally, is a matter for the applicable law and the relevant administrations of the Member States. In this respect there is wide variety of internal models of organisation and control. It cannot be inferred from a form of cooperation that takes account of the different size of the cooperating regional authorities in relation to control that the control is not similar to that exercised over its own departments. In addition it follows from the nature of inter-municipal cooperation that within this context a municipality does not decide on its own but that decisions are taken by majority, indeed with a view to the common purpose. Control by majority decisions may be deemed to constitute 'similar control' within the meaning of the case-law. In regard to the Municipality of Uccle, that is represented in the decision making bodies of Brutélé by its representatives, it may in the final analysis be stated that it exercises over Brutélé a similar control to that exercised over its own departments.

41. The German Government is of the view that the principles and rules of procurement law do not apply to a case such as the present one ab initio since both Teckal criteria are satisfied. In the case of several 'controlling authorities' those criteria are to be construed as meaning that if the public awarding body jointly owns the contractor together with other legal persons, no dilution of control can be inferred from the jointly exercised control by the various authorities. For example, departments that are organisationally uniform could be established by several regional authorities in common and jointly 'operated'; in such cases it would be aberrant to take the view that the control exercised by individual regional authorities is deficient or incomplete. In German law governing administrative organisation there are many examples of that, thus the financial authorities ('Oberfinzanzdirektionen') are both departments of the Federation and of the Land. In some Länder states district administrative authorities are both departments of the district and at the same time lower state authority of the Land. Many Länder, for example Brandenburg and Berlin operate a joint supreme administrative court ('Oberverwaltungsgericht'). It would be regarded as completely aberrant to assume deficient or incomplete degree of control by the regional authority over authorities that are operated jointly by several regional authorities. Exactly in the same way control exercised over a contractor in the ownership of several public legal persons is jointly exercised but no less effective for that. That is so in the case of Brutélé because only municipalities are involved which jointly exercised their powers of control as over a (joint) department.

42. If, because the public awarding body has to exercise control over the contractor jointly with other principals, one were to conclude that there was inadequate control and the rules of procurement law were therefore applicable, that would have serious consequences for the requisite margin of discretion in the configuration of inter-municipal cooperation. The option in favour of such a form of inter-municipal cooperation would then always be subject to a tendering procedure. That would be to set back inter-municipal cooperation as a form of arrangement for organising the tasks of the State as opposed to the performance of tasks independently, which would render procurement law never applicable. Procurement law would then be exerting an entirely nonsensical pressure on the municipalities to desist in applicable cases from cooperating with other municipalities. Yet that was never the objective of procurement law. Rather procurement law applies only when the municipality calls on the market for the purposes of fulfilling its tasks.

43. Finally, the German Government points out that the right to municipal self-administration is protected at European level by the European Charter of municipal self-administration. (14) It enshrines the right of municipalities to perform tasks on their own and also to engage in inter-municipal cooperation without first conducting a competitive tendering procedure.

44. The Netherlands Government proposes that the reply to the first question referred should be affirmative. On the second question it must be pointed out against the background of the first of the two criteria in the Teckal judgment, the subsequent case-law and the particulars contained in the order for reference that in regard to Brutélé the municipalities involved and the municipal associations are in the position to exercise decisive influence. That is borne out by the fact that they jointly hold the whole of the share capital and private capital is excluded. The finding of decisive influence is confirmed by the fact that the municipalities and municipal associations are entirely in control of the decision-making bodies of Brutélé, for the latter comprise their representatives. In that way the municipalities and municipal associations are in a position to exercise decisive influence both on the strategic aims and on important decisions such as for example the fixing of tariffs. Brutélé has no autonomy and therefore cannot be regarded as a third party in relation to the municipalities and municipal associations. As to the third question it should be said that it is sufficient in regard to 'control similar to that exercised over its own departments' for the municipalities and municipal associations concerned to exercise control jointly.

IV – Legal assessment

45. Since the questions referred relate to different aspects of the same question I shall examine them together.

46. The question is whether the affiliation of a municipality such as Uccle to a purely inter-municipal cooperative society such as Brutélé and the attendant transfer or administration of the municipal cable television network to that cooperative is to be regarded as the award of a concession governed by the Community principles of procurement law, or whether it is a situation that can be equated with in-house performance of tasks and is therefore exempt from the requirement to call for tenders. The aspects exercising the referring court concern in particular the internal decision-making structures, that is to say decisions by statutory bodies such as the governing council and sector boards on the one hand and decisions essentially of an individual nature but adopted by way of majority decision-making on the other hand. Can such decision-making structures comply with the criterion in the case-law of 'control similar to that exercised over its own departments'?

47. The referring court considers that dominant control over the cooperative society and its decisions is exercised by the regional authorities jointly by way of the cooperative statutory organs which thereby enjoy a certain autonomy vis-à-vis their members. That does not constitute 'control similar to that exercised over its own departments' and the referring court is therefore inclined to regard the first grounds of action as substantiated.

48. In order to classify the questions it should be stated in advance that, as the referring court has already rightly stated, under settled case-law, none of the Community directives in the sector of public procurement (15) applies (16) to the award of public service concessions. (17) The fact that the situation in the main proceedings occurred in the sector of service concessions and not in the sector of contracts for services, may be inferred from the fact that it is not the regional authority that pays the remuneration for the service provided but that the consideration consists of the right to exploit its own service, (18) which is associated with the assumption of operating risk. (19)

49. Since at the material time in regard to the events in the main proceedings concerning the award of service concessions by public agencies no directive coordinating the proceedings was in existence, (20) the consequences under Community law of the award of such concessions fall to be examined as before solely in light of primary law and in particular of the fundamental freedoms laid down in the EC Treaty. (21)

50. Accordingly requirements are imposed concerning equal treatment and transparency, (22) for the award of public service concessions in particular in regard to the prohibition on indirect discrimination on grounds of nationality under Articles 12 EC, 43 EC and 49 EC, (23) which as a rule render a call for tenders essential.

51. Case law permits an exception for quasi in-house performance of tasks, (24) beginning with Teckal (25) and further elaborated (26) and applied to all Community provisions in the sector of public contracts or public service concessions, (27) in the case of a procedure that is configured in such a way as to constitute an internal administrative measure. (28) Under settled case-law a call for tenders is not mandatory – even if the contractual partner is an establishment legally distinct from the public awarding body – if two preconditions are met. First, the public body that is an awarding authority must exercise over the establishment in question a degree of control similar to that which it exercises over its own departments, and, secondly, that establishment must perform its activity essentially for the public body or bodies which own its shares. (29)

A – First Teckal criterion

52. It is however necessary to analyse the first requirement, namely the exercise of 'control similar to that over its own departments'.

1. Exclusion of semi-public undertakings

53. It is unmistakeably to be inferred from settled case-law since the judgment in Stadt Halle und RPL Lochau (30) that semi-public undertakings are in no way deemed to be entities over which similar control is exercised as over own departments, irrespective of the degree to which the private capital involvement is a minority holding. (31) In that connection it is enough for there to be a possibility of private capital involvement even if there is (as yet) none. (32) An assignment to private persons of shares occurring shortly after the award must also be taken into consideration. (33)

54. In circumstances such as those of the present case the private capital aspect of the question must plainly be answered in the negative. There is no private capital involvement; nor, further, is Brutélé open to private capital.

2. Other relevant circumstances

55. However, it is plain from the case-law that the mere finding that private capital is not involved or permitted does not adequately satisfy in each case the Teckal criterion 'similar control to that exercised over its own departments'. (34) It is plainly against this background that the questions of the referring court are to be interpreted.

56. It appears from some of the judgments that deal with the first of the two Teckal criteria that the assessment must 'take account of all the legislative provisions and relevant circumstances'. (35) 'It must follow from that examination that the concessionaire in question is subject to a control enabling the concession-granting public authority to influence the concessionaire's decisions. It must be a case of a power of decisive influence over both strategic objectives and significant decisions.' (36)

57. The range of criteria that may be relevant in this regard is apparent in particular from the judgment in Parking Brixen: conversion into a company limited by shares, broadening of the objects of the company, obligatory opening up of the company in the short term to other capital, significant expansion of the geographical area of the company's activities and considerable powers conferred on the administrative board in this judgment taken as a whole meant that the relevant company had in the view of the Court of Justice become market orientated and achieved a degree of autonomy with the result that the concession-granting public authority was not exercising control over the concessionaire similar to that exercised over its own departments. (37)

58. Two basic criteria were therefore plainly decisive in determining the relevant questions in the Parking Brixen case: the degree to which the concessionaire was market orientated and the degree of its autonomy. (38) These categories equate to those in the Teckal judgment, which, in paragraph 51, also stated as a criterion the degree of independent decision-making capacity present or absent in the relevant body as compared to the public authority or authorities. (39)

59. In its case-law on the Teckal criteria thus far the Court of Justice has however only drawn attention in a small number of cases to such further circumstances. In both the cited cases, Parking Brixen and Carbotermo, several of these factors coincided, only one of which in each case was the transfer of full authority or significant powers to the administrative board.

60. In Parking Brixen the Court of Justice took the view that Stadtwerke Brixen AG had become so market oriented as to render it difficult for the municipality to control it and listed a total of five reasons why that was so, (40) including the obligatory opening of the company, in the short term, to other capital and the expansion of the geographical area of the company's activities, to the whole of Italy and abroad. (41)

61. In the judgment in Carbotermo the possible influence that might be exercised by the Italian municipality in that case, Busto Arsizio, over the decisions of the undertaking AGESP SpA, which was providing a very varied range of services of public utility through the intermediary of a holding company, was an essential factor. (42) The Court stated in this connection that the intervention of such an intermediary may, depending on the circumstances of the case, weaken any control possibly exercised by the contracting authority over a joint stock company merely because it holds shares in that company. (43)

62. It must therefore be observed that in these cases various special circumstances came together which led to an overall view being formed. (44)

3. Mere internal cooperation is generally, though not automatically, exempt from the tendering requirement

63. However, the situations that gave rise to the judgments in Parking Brixen and Carbotermo may be said to have been one-off cases in which the Court of Justice regarded a boundary as having been crossed and that the outsourcing of general-interest tasks to an entity constituting a pure cooperative association of public bodies, without any participation of private capital, though not automatically, (45) should in principle be regarded as exempt from the tendering requirement. This is supported by the implications of developments in the case-law of the Court of Justice set out below.

64. The exact wording of the Carbotermo judgment mentioned above in which there were further circumstances that precluded the situation in that case from being deemed exempt from the tendering requirement, is as follows: '[t]he fact that the contracting authority holds, alone or together with other public authorities, all of the share capital in a successful tenderer tends to indicate, without being decisive, that that contracting authority exercises over that company a control similar to that which it exercises over its own departments, as contemplated in paragraph 50 of Teckal.' (46)

65. In the subsequent paragraphs of the Carbotermo judgment it becomes apparent that this qualification of the words 'without being decisive' constitutes a reference to the further circumstances mentioned namely: dilution of control owing to the intermediary of a holding company even if the capital of the latter is held as to 99.98% by the local or regional authority in question, as well as too far-reaching powers on the part of the boards in both the holding company and in the public limited company established by the holding company, in a situation where the latter were to be entrusted with the performance of tasks. (47) In the view of the Court of Justice, the applicable articles of association did not reserve to the regional authority concerned any control or specific voting powers in order to circumscribe the freedom of action conferred on those boards of directors. The control exercised by the regional authority over those two companies consisted essentially in the latitude conferred by company law on the majority of shareholders, which appreciably limited its power to influence the decisions of those companies. (48)

66. In contrast the more recent judgment in Asemfo shows that mere cooperation between municipalities is in general to be regarded as fulfilling the first Teckal criterion – 'similar control to that exercised over its own departments' – without further analysis of the internal decision-making structures and majority shareholding relationships being called for. For while the wording reproduced above (49) from the judgment in Carbotermo was repeated in the later judgment in Asemfo in paragraph 57, it was however slightly changed. The phrase in Carbotermo 'without being decisive', was replaced in Asemfo by 'generally'. Thus '…tends to indicate, without being decisive …' became '… tends to indicate, generally …'.

67. There are therefore many reasons for taking the view that where the awarding authority or concession-awarding authority, either alone or in conjunction with other public authorities, (50) owns the entire share capital in a body that is awarded a contract or concession this as a rule shows that it or they exercise control over that body as over their own departments within the meaning of paragraph 50 of the judgment in Teckal. This rule can be displaced, (51) but, as demonstrated above, (52) only by the concurrence of special circumstances.

4. Criteria for a detailed analysis of the power of control

68. In so far as the question of the power of control enjoyed by individual public authorities within pure cooperative groupings of public authorities plays a role in the case-law of the Court of Justice, the following matters may be deduced.

69. The Teckal case already related to a situation of inter-municipal cooperation, (53) in which the question of control against the background of the size of shareholdings was alluded to: it concerned a consortium of 45 municipalities in Reggio Emilia, in which the municipality of Viano, to which the case related, held a 0.9% shareholding. Advocate General Cosmas observed in this regard that it was 'unlikely that it could be maintained that the Municipality of Viano exercises over that consortium the kind of control which an entity exercises over an internal body'. (54) The judgment itself is silent on this point and in particular the criterion for control in paragraph 50 (55) does not go into this aspect. However, it must be noted that the Court of Justice did not in this judgment answer in the negative the question of the power of control enjoyed by a municipality with a relatively small shareholding and voting rights, and thereby allowed the referring court to find that the control criterion was in fact satisfied in the main proceedings.

70. In the meantime, however, this issue was answered to the opposite effect in the Coname judgment in 2005 inasmuch as a 0.97% holding in the share capital was adjudged to be insufficient. (56)

71. However, the judgment in Asemfo clarified that the size of the shareholding of an individual public body in a cooperative of public bodies no (longer) acts as the relevant yardstick as regards the possibility of control. The Court of Justice expressly stated that even a share in a cooperative of as little as 0.25% of the capital of such a cooperative (1% of the capital was held by four autonomous regions which each held one share) does not prevent the tasks from being regarded as performed on a 'quasi-in house basis' as regards all the bodies which hold shares. (57)

72. Moreover, it is noteworthy in regard to the main proceedings giving rise to the abovementioned judgment that the power of control over the entity entrusted with the relevant tasks clearly lies with the central state administration, which is the main shareholder and not with the four autonomous communities whose shareholdings together amount to 1% of the capital. (58) This fact did not prevent the Court of Justice from regarding the first criterion in Teckal as being satisfied not only in the case of the Spanish state but also expressly in the case of the autonomous communities which hold part of the capital. (59) However, on the power of control by the autonomous communities it is not possible to discern from the judgment whether it constitutes a new departure in the case-law or whether rather the particular circumstances of the case were decisive, as seems likely. (60) In any event it is plain that in the case of pure cooperatives of public bodies, excessive importance should not be attached to the question of the internal power of control and determination.

73. From the clarifications in regard to the size of shareholdings it may be inferred, by way of systematic interpretation, (61) and from use of the plural in the wording of the second Teckal criterion – 'where … at the same time, the person carries out the essential part of its activities together with the controlling local authority or authorities' – by way of grammatical interpretation, (62) that complete individual power of control on the part of the relevant public authority is not required but that a collective majority power of control is sufficient. (63)

74. The deciding factor ought to be whether the participating public authorities have collectively control over the person in question in this case the Brutélé cooperative, or whether this cooperative acts separately from that collective control.

5. Interim conclusion

75. It is clear from the legal analysis that pure inter-municipal cooperation as a rule ought to be possible without being subject to the tendering requirement, if there are no other specific circumstances which show that the degree of market orientation and the degree of autonomy of the inter-municipal body has exceeded the bounds of inter-municipal cooperation that are neutral in procurement law terms in order to complete tasks that are in the general interest.

76. Even if no legal certainty has been achieved hitherto (64) in relation to the exact boundary affecting criteria such as 'degree of market orientation' and 'degree of autonomy', in other words it is not clear where exactly the boundary of inter-municipal cooperation that is neutral in procurement law terms is to be drawn in performing tasks in the general interest, there is no indication that cooperation within Brutélé would go beyond those boundaries.

77. It is a matter for the national courts, in this instance the referring court, to weigh up these matters in the specific case. Such an examination ought not in this case to produce a finding that any of the boundaries indicated above had been exceeded. For the internal decision-making structures of Brutélé are characterised by the collective influence of the regional authorities participating by way of majority decision. They exercise their influence not only in the general assembly but also in the governing council, which is made up of representatives of the municipalities. Thus the question of the power of control is already answered adequately and affirmatively. In addition, in relation to the sub-sectors, a preponderance of individual-municipal decisions may in fact discerned. Brutélé's market orientation relates to tasks which are in the general interest such as cable television, telephone and internet and does not suggest that any level that is neutral in procurement law terms was exceeded, notwithstanding the imprecision of the relevant criteria in this connection.

78. Everything therefore points in a case such as this to cooperation between public bodies without any requirement for a tendering procedure.

79. Contrary to the view of Coditel in this context, it is of no significance that Brutélé offers its services to users commercially and is therefore automatically in competition (65) with other private bidders.

6. Value of inter-municipal cooperation

80. Although the questions referred have in my view already been answered, I should like briefly to underscore the conclusion and at the same time to deal with counter arguments advanced by Coditel and the Commission.

81. Public procurement law is and remains one of the most influential policy instruments of the Member States and institutions of the EU in the process of European integration. (66) This potential cannot however be used indiscriminately; rather its purpose must be brought into harmony with the values of other policy areas.

82. If, as the referring court, Coditel and the Commission propose, one were to require the municipalities concerned to have 'comprehensive decision-making autonomy', in the sense that the relevant municipality exercises 'dominance' over the relevant inter-municipal cooperative ('dominance over the cooperative society'), then inter-municipal cooperation would in future be rendered virtually impossible. For it is an important feature of genuine cooperation that decisions are made as equals and that one of the partners in the cooperative does not dominate. It is therefore plain from the observations of Coditel and the Commission in the procedure and at the hearing that the yardsticks proposed by these two parties mean that it is a requirement that an individual regional authority must as it were be able to control a cooperative alone. It is obvious that such a case cannot in fact be regarded as cooperation or collaboration.

83. As stated, that would render virtual impossible even pure inter-municipal cooperation. Inter-municipal cooperating regional authorities would then always have to reckon with the likelihood of having to award their tasks to private third parties making more favourable bids; that would be tantamount to the compulsory privatisation by means of procurement law of public-interest tasks. (67)

84. To construe the first Teckal criterion so narrowly would be to attach disproportionate weight to competition-law objectives at the same time as interfering too much with the municipalities' right to self-government and with it in the competences of the Member States. (68)

85. This is rightly emphasised by the governments participating in the proceedings before the Court of Justice. The right to municipal self-government is not reflected only in the legal provisions of the Member States but, as the German Government correctly pointed out, also in the European Charter on Local Self-Government drawn up within the framework of the Council of Europe signed by all EU Member States and also ratified by most of them. (69) Article 263 of the EC Treaty makes provision for the Committee of the Regions comprising representatives of regional and local authorities. Inherent in this provision is a certain recognition of self-government alongside the possibility of providing institutionalised machinery for bringing to bear regional and municipal perspectives. Finally the Treaty of Lisbon (70) stresses the role of regional and local self-government for the relevant national identity to which heed is to be paid.

86. Municipalities have themselves to decide whether they wish to carry out their general-interest tasks with their own administrative, technical and other means, without being compelled to have recourse to external establishments that do not form part of their own departments, (71) or whether they wish to carry them out with the assistance of an establishment legally distinct from them in their capacity as public entity awarding the contract or concession. If they opt for the second alternative, it is open to them to carry out these tasks of theirs on their own or in 'pure' cooperation with other public authorities (72) 'controlled similarly to their own departments' and with the law on aid and procurement being largely suspended (73) or to tackle them by calling on private capital (74) and/or by increasing market orientation and participating in competition, the latter case entailing a loss of prerogatives. (75) Finally, they have the further alternatives of the classic award to an independent third party or privatisation which in any event do not confer any privilege in regard to competition law.

87. To tackle the many traditional (76) and new (77) tasks of municipalities – and local authorities in general – is, particularly in times of restricted budgets, not always easy, especially for smaller authorities. (78) In addition, many tasks, in particular in the areas of environment and transport are not confined to the municipality. (79) Conversely, inter-municipal cooperation without calling on private capital is owing to its synergistic effects a method used in many Member States for performing public functions in an efficient and cost-effective manner. (80)

B – Second Teckal criterion

88. This does not need to be gone into further here: the referring court says no question rises in this regard. (81)

V – Conclusion

89. For those reasons I propose that the Court should reply in the terms set out below to the three questions submitted by the Conseil d'État:

Neither Articles 12 EC, 43 EC and 49 EC nor the principles of equal treatment non-discrimination and transparency preclude a municipality from affiliating to a cooperative society and transferring to it the management of the municipal cable television network without a prior tendering procedure, provided that that municipality exercises over that cooperative similar control to that exercised by it over its own departments and the cooperative society carries on its activity essentially for its members. Where such a cooperative comprises solely municipalities and associations of municipalities (public authorities) – without any private-capital involvement – that indicates in principle that the criterion as to exercise of similar control as that exercised over its own departments is satisfied. In circumstances such as those in the present case, control exercised by way of majority decision over the governing bodies of the cooperative comprising representatives of the municipalities and associations of municipalities is to be deemed to be control similar to that exercised over the municipality's own departments.

1 – Original language: German.

2 – The terms 'inter-municipal cooperative' or 'inter-municipal cooperative entity' encompass very different forms of administrative cooperation, of both an informal and formal legal nature (see, Schmidt: Kommunale Kooperation, Der Zweckverband als Nukleus des öffentlichen Gesellschaftsrechts [The ad hoc association as the nucleus of the law on public partnerships], Tübingen 2005, p. 2 et seq.). It ranges from ordinary municipal project collaboration to large scale legally institutionalised forms such as for example associations of municipalities or cooperatives. See, the concept of 'situation involving a number of public entities' and 'public-public entities' inter alia in the Opinion of Advocate General Stix-Hackl of 12 January 2006, C–340/04 Carbotermo andConsorcio Alisei [2006] ECR I–4137), points 29 et seq.; see also Egger, Europäisches Vergaberecht [European Procurement law], 2007, p. 167 et seq.

3 – Following the request by the Municipality of Uccle Coditel enquired of it whether the offer to buy the network was a criterion in the evaluation of the bids submitted in the context of the tendering procedure for the award of the network operating concession, whether such offer replaced the current tendering procedure and whether it had been addressed to the other participants involved in the tendering procedure. On 28 April 2000, the Municipality of Uccle replied that it had made the same enquiry of four companies that had submitted bids in the context of the tendering procedure, that the offer to buy the network did not replace the tendering procedure and was also not a criterion for evaluating the bids submitted and finally that 'as the College has received a purchase proposal (conditional at present), it considers that this option cannot be excluded a priori and may be one of the factors in the current considerations about the future of the network; hence, before submitting a proposal to the Council for a decision to award (or not to award) an operating concession, it has been decided, in the interests of full information and equality between the candidates, to consult each of them'.

4 – See on that point resolution of the municipal council of 23 November 2000. This difference may doubtless be accounted for by reference to the prevailing economic situation: the share prices of some of the foremost high-technology companies had fallen to a historical low in the previous months, thus rendering conditions for a time extremely unfavourable.

5 – According to the relevant resolution of the municipal council of 23 November 2000, the annual fee payable is made up as follows: (a) fixed fee equal to 10% of the income from basic subscriptions for cable television (on the basis of 31 000 subscribers and an annual subscription fee of BEF 3 400 (before VAT and royalties): BEF 10 540 000 per year); (b) payment of 5% of the turnover of Canal+ and of the bouquet; (c) payment of the entire profit on all the services provided.

6 – In that connection the resolution of the municipal council of 23 November 2000 states as follows:

This autonomy relates, inter alia, to:

– choice of programmes transmitted;

– the subscription and joining rates;

– investment and works policy;

– the rebates or benefits to be granted to specific groups of persons;

– the nature and terms relating to other services to be provided via the network and the possibility of entrusting the inter-municipal cooperative with projects of interest to the municipality that accord with the objectives defined in its statutes, such as the creation of a municipal intranet and a website as well as the training and further training of staff for this purpose.

In this context:

– Brutélé would draw up an accounting and operating balance sheet for activities on Uccle's network;

– [The Municipality of] Uccle would have a director on the governing council of Brutélé as well as three directors on the board of the Brussels operating sector, one auditor and one municipal expert.

7 – According to the resolution dated 23 November 2000, the affiliation was expressed to be subject to the condition that a resolution be passed by the general assembly of Brutélé, in which all members agreed not to oppose any subsequent withdrawal of the Municipality of Uccle.

8 – Case C–107/98 [1999] ECR I–8121, paragraph 50.

9 – Set out above in footnote 8, paragraph 50.

10 – The Netherlands Government explains that the particulars in the order for reference are not comprehensive enough to be able in fact to evaluate this aspect.

11 – Case C–340/04 Carbotermo and Consorzio Alisei [2006] ECR I–4137, paragraph 37.

12 – In this connection the Commission refers to judgments in Case C–458/03 Parking Brixen [2005] I–8585, paragraph 65, and Carbotermo and Consorcio Alisei (cited in footnote 11 above).

13 – Brutélé refers to the Belgian constitution and to the Belgian law on inter-municipal cooperatives (cited in points 6 and 7 of this Opinion above).

14 – The European Charter on Local Self-Government, opened for signature by the Member States of the Council of Europe on 15 October 1985 in Strasbourg, has been in force since 1 September 1988 (for more particulars see: http://conventions.coe.int).

15 – Inter alia Council Directive 92/50/EEC of 18 June 1992 relating to the coordination of procedures for the award of public service contracts (OJ 1992 L 209, p. 1). The principal aim of the Community provisions on public contracts is to promote free movement of services and the opening up of undistorted competition in all Member States, see Case C–26/03 Stadt Halle and RPL Lochau [2005] ECR I–1, paragraph 44).

16 – Neergaard, 'The Concept of Concession in EU Public Procurement Law versus EU Competition Law and National Law', in: Nielsen/Treumer (ed.), The New EU Public Procurement Directives, 2005, points to the fact that there are very different concepts of concessions according to the legal context and that the concept of the concession in Community procurement law differs significantly from the concept in competition law and to some extent also in national law.

17 – See judgments in Cases C–324/98 Telaustria and Telefonadress [2000] ECR I–10745 paragraphs 56 and 57; C–231/03 Coname [2005] ECR I–7287, paragraphs 9 and 16; Parking Brixen (cited in footnote 12 above, paragraph 42), and C–382/05 Commission v Italy [2007] ECR I-6657, paragraph 29).

18 – See, on the difference between criteria used the judgment in Telaustria and Telefonadress (cited in footnote 17 above, paragraph 58). See also legal definition in Article 1(4) of Directive 2004/18/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 31 March 2004 on the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts, public supply contracts and public service contracts (OJ 2004 L 134, p. 114) which was not applicable at the time of the events in the main proceedings: ' "Service concession" is a contract of the same type as a public service contract except for the fact that the consideration for the provision of services consists either solely in the right to exploit the service or in this right together with payment'. This relates to the operation and maintenance of existing bodies, see, Trepte, Public Procurement in the EU, A Practitioner's Guide, 2007, 4.42. In principle it must be observed that classification as the award of a service concession is an issue that is to be determined in accordance with Community law, see Commission v Italy (cited in footnote 17 above, paragraph 31).

19 – Parking Brixen (cited in footnote 12 above, paragraph 40). See also in more detail Arrowsmith, The Law of Public and Utilities Procurement, 2005, 6.62 and 6.63.

20 – The situation was hardly altered by the subsequent Directive 2004/18 (cited in footnote 18 above) since although it defines the concept of a service concession; this none the less does not apply to such concessions under Article 17 of this Directive. See, in more detail, Flamme/Flamme/Dardenne, Les marchés publics européens et belges, 2005, p. 19 f.

21 – Coname (cited in footnote 17 above, paragraph 16); Parking Brixen (cited in footnote 12 above, paragraph 46), and Case C–410/04 ANAV [2006] ECR I–3303, paragraph 18 et seq.). Broussy/Donnat/Lambert, Délégations de services publics, L'actualité juridique – droit administratif (AJDA) 2005 p. 2340 et seq., p. 2341 suggest that drawing on the principle of non-discrimination creates the risk that procurement law may in the future be expanded well beyond the relevant directives and will even apply to facts where the values do not reach the threshold for the directives to apply.

22 – Trepte, 'Transparency Requirements', in: Nielsen/Treumer (ed.), The New EU Public Procurement Directives, 2005, indicates that the concept of transparency in Community procurement law is limited in so far as it relates to the equal treatment of tenderers from the Member States and not to transparency beyond that.

23 – See inter alia Telaustria and Telefonadress (cited in footnote 17 above, paragraphs 60 f.); Coname (cited in footnote 17 above, paragraphs 18 et seq.), and Parking Brixen (cited in footnote 12 above, paragraphs 47 et seq.).

24 – The term is not used uniformly, often the terms (quasi) 'in-house award' or 'in-house business' (in the wider sense) are used.

25 – Cited in footnote 8 above.

26 – See in particular judgments in Stadt Halle and RPL Lochau (cited in footnote 15 above, paragraph 49); Coname (cited in footnote 17 above, paragraphs 23 to 26);

27 – In Parking Brixen (cited in footnote 12 above, paragraph 61) the Court of Justice made plain that both the Teckal criteria apply not only in the area of Community procurement directives but generally in the area of Community procurement law.

---

28 – Flamme/Flamme/Dardenne, cited in footnote 20 above, p. 32, paragraph 20 emphasise referring to paragraphs 49 and 50 of the judgment in Teckal (cited in footnote 8 above), that the basis of the exception for 'quasi in-house performance of tasks' is the fact that an entity cannot 'contract with itself'.

---

29 – See judgments in Teckal (cited in footnote 8 above, paragraph 50); Stadt Halle and RPL Lochau (cited in footnote 15 above, paragraph 49); Case C–84/03 Commission v Spain [2005] ECR I–139, paragraph 38; Case C–29/04 Commission v Austria [2005] ECR I–9705, paragraph 34; Carbotermo and Consorcio Alisei (cited in footnote 11 above, paragraph 33), and Asemfo (cited in footnote 26 above, paragraph 55).

---

30 – The much quoted judgment in Stadt Halle and RPL Lochau (cited in footnote 15 above) provides at paragraph 49: 'In accordance with the Court's case-law, it is not excluded that there may be other circumstances in which a call for tenders is not mandatory, even though the other contracting party is an entity legally distinct from the contracting authority. That is the case where the public authority which is a contracting authority exercises over the separate entity concerned a control which is similar to that which it exercises over its own departments and that entity carries out the essential part of its activities with the controlling public authority or authorities (see, to that effect, Teckal, [cited in footnote 8 above] paragraph 50). It should be noted that, in the case cited, the distinct entity was wholly owned by public authorities. By contrast, the participation, even as a minority, of a private undertaking in the capital of a company in which the contracting authority in question is also a participant excludes in any event the possibility of that contracting authority exercising over that company a control similar to that which it exercises over its own departments'. Belorgey/Gervasoni/Lambert, 'Qualification de marché public', AJDA 2005, p. 1113 et seq., p. 1114, referring to Case C–18/01 Korhonen and Others [2003] ECR I–5321, take the view that the judgment in Stadt Halle confirmed expressly what the case-law had until then implied.

---

31 – See also Coname judgments (cited in footnote 17 above, paragraph 26); Commission v Austria (cited in footnote 29 above, paragraph 46); ANAV (cited in footnote 21 above, paragraph 31), and Case C–220/05 Auroux and Others [2007] ECR I–389, paragraph 64. It remains unclear how the involvement of private persons or non-profit organisations, for example in the social or cultural fields, is to be regarded (See on this Egger, cited in footnote 2 above, p. 170, paragraph 637).

32 – In this connection see Coname judgments (cited in footnote 17 above, paragraph 26), and ANAV (cited in footnote 21 above, paragraphs 30 to 32).

33 – Commission v Austria (cited in footnote 29) paragraphs 38 to 42: in a case such as this the award of a contract is to be examined in light of all the steps taken (award and capital restructuring), and of their purpose.

34 – See, inter alia, also Probst/Wurzel, 'Zulässigkeit von In-house-Vergaben und Rechtsfolgen des Abschlusses von vergaberechtswidrigen Verträgen' [Permissibility of In-house awards and legal consequences of the conclusion of contracts contrary to procurement law], in: European Law Reporter 2007, p. 257 et seq., p. 261.

35 – Parking Brixen (cited in footnote 12 above, paragraph 65) and Carbotermo and Consorcio Alisei (cited in footnote 11 above, paragraph 36).

36 – Parking Brixen (cited in footnote 12 above, paragraph 65) and Carbotermo and Consorcio Alisei (cited in footnote 11 above, paragraph 36).

37 – Parking Brixen (cited in footnote 12 above, paragraphs 67 to 70). For a critical view of the merits of the criteria which have the effect that bodies which are operated by public authorities to perform their tasks are tied down to particular legal forms, see Kotschy, 'Arrêts "Stadt Halle", "Coname" et "Parking Brixen"' [The judgments in Stadt Halle, Coname and Parking Brixen], Revue du droit de l'Union européenne 2005, No 4, p. 845 et seq., p. 853.

38 – Probst and Wurzel (cited in footnote 34 above, p. 261) make the point that the clearer the close connection with the awarding or concession-granting authority, and the more limited the contractor or concessionaire's possibilities to work for third parties commercially in the market, the easier it is to justify the assumption of an in-house business.

39 – Teckal (cited in footnote 8 above, paragraph 51).

40 – Ferrari talks in this connection abut indications of independence which is incompatible with the concept of control similar to that exercised over its own departments (Ferrari, '"Parking Brixen": Teckal da totem a tabù?"', in: Diritto pubblico comparato ed europeo 2006, p. 271 et seq., in particular p. 273).

41 – Parking Brixen (cited in footnote 12 above, paragraph 67). Jennert, in 'Das Urteil "Parking Brixen"' [The judgment in Parking Brixen], Neue Zeitschrift für Baurecht und Vergaberecht (NZBau) 2005, p. 623 et seq., p. 626, notes that there is no question in such a case of securing the home market by an in-house award that is not subject to the procurement procedure while at the same time participating in competition by supralocal expansion.

42 – Advocate General Stix-Hackl says in her Opinion in Carbotermo and Consorcio Alisei (cited in footnote 11 above), at points 22 and 23, that one characteristic of the procedure at issue in this case has to do with the fact that as in the Stadt Halle case, the contract was not awarded directly to the entity in which the local authority has a direct shareholding but there is a situation involving an indirect shareholding.

43 – Carbotermo and Consorcio Alisei (cited in footnote 11 above, paragraph 39).

44 – Jennert refers pertinently to the 'overall view' (cited in footnote 41 above, p. 625).

45 – Commission v Spain (cited in footnote 29 above, paragraph 40).

46 – CarbotermoandConsorcio Alisei (cited in footnote 11 above, paragraph 37).

47 – Carbotermo and Consorcio Alisei (cited in footnote 11 above, paragraphs 38 to 40).

48 – Carbotermo and Consorcio Alisei (cited in footnote 11 above, paragraph 38).

49 – Carbotermo and Consorcio Alisei (cited in footnote 11 above) paragraph 37: 'The fact that the contracting authority holds, alone or together with other public authorities, all of the share capital in a successful tenderer tends to indicate, without being decisive, that that contracting authority exercises over that company a control similar to that which it exercises over its own departments, as contemplated in paragraph 50 of Teckal [cited in footnote 8 above].'

50 – For majority control is not precluded from the outset, see also Fenoyl, Contrats 'in house' – état des lieux après l'arrêt Asemfo [In-house contracts – situation following Asemfo], AJDA 2007, p. 1759 et seq., p. 1761.

51 – Egger (cited in footnote 2 above, p. 169, paragraph 626) rightly speaks of a rebuttable presumption.

52 – See point 55 et seq. of this Opinion.

53 – This is also pointed out by Pape/Holz, 'In-house-transactions exempt from the tendering requirement', NJW 2005, p. 2264 et seq. p. 2265. Their perspective is that on a purely formal view a cooperative comprising several public authorities cannot be deemed to be an in-house transaction because owing to the rights of co–determination enjoyed by the other shareholders it could not be determined beyond peradventure that every shareholder could exercise control similar to that exercised over its own departments; yet, on a functional view it was reasonable to regard it as an in-house transaction.

54 – Opinion of Advocate General Cosmas of 1 July 1999 in Teckal (cited in footnote 8 above, point 61).

55 – Teckal (cited in footnote 8 above).

56 – Judgment in Coname (cited in footnote 17 above), paragraphs 23 and 24. In addition, in the main proceedings the company at issue was open – at any rate in part – to private capital, see paragraph 26 of the judgment in Coname.

57 – Asemfo (cited in footnote 26 above), paragraphs 58 to 60. Paragraph 59 states: 'In that regard, the argument cannot be accepted that that condition is met only for contracts performed at the demand of the Spanish State, excluding those which are the subject of a demand from the Autonomous Communities as regards which Tragsa must be regarded as a third party.' It is clear from paragraph 61 that this finding does not refer to all Spanish autonomous regions, although Tragsa acts for all of them (see the Opinion of Advocate General Geelhoed of 28 September 2006, Asemfo, cited in footnote 26 above, points 13 and 14), but to those which hold a share in the capital of Tragsa.

58 – In Asemfo (cited in footnote 26 above, paragraph 13, paragraph 5 therein) it is stated in regard to national law that: 'The functions of organisation, supervision and control concerning Tragsa and its subsidiaries shall be exercised by the Ministerio de Agricultura, Pesca y Alimentación (Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food) as well as by the Ministerio de Medio Ambiente (Ministry of the Environment)'. Thus competence for control lies with central government and not with the autonomous regions. Thus, Advocate General Geelhoed observes in his Opinion of 28 September 2006 in Asemfo (cited in footnote 26 above, point 51), that the autonomous regions themselves exercised no powers of control and that such powers could not be inferred from their capacities as shareholders. Powers of control all resided with the principal shareholder, the Spanish State, that is to say the central government. Thus the judgment itself states in paragraph 51: 'Finally, under Article 3(6) of Royal Decree 371/1999, Tragsa's relations with those public bodies, inasmuch as that company is an instrument and a technical service of those bodies, are not contractual, but in every respect internal, dependent and subordinate.' Furthermore, in paragraphs 59 to 61 arguments quite different from the internal decision-making structures are deployed in regard to the question of the power of control enjoyed by the autonomous regions, such as namely the legal requirement to perform contracts, the fact that tariffs are fixed by the State and that the relationship is not contractual.

59 – The Opinion of Advocate General Geelhoed of 28 September 2006 in Asemfo (cited in footnote 26 above) specifically highlights this problematical aspect in detail and finds that there is a complete lack of influence on the part of the regions (point 98 to 101). On the same problem see also Broussy/Donnat/Lambert, 'Actualité du droit communautaire', Marché in house [In-house transactions] AJDA 2007 p. 1125 et seq. p. 1126.

60 – As Müller, 'Interkommunale Zusammenarbeit im Weg der In-House-Vergabe?' [Inter–municipal cooperation by way of the in-house transaction?], Zeitschrift für Vergaberecht und Beschaffungspraxis (ZVB) 2007, p. 197, p. 202 rightly emphasises, specific circumstances applied, in particular the legal obligation to accept and perform the contracts and the fixing of tariffs by the State. See also Piazzoni, Précisions jurisprudentielles sur les contrats 'in house' [Findings of the courts on in-house contracts], Revue Lamy de la Concurrence: droit, économie, régulation 2007, No 12, p. 56 et seq., p. 58, and Mok, 'Hof van Justitie van de Europese Gemeenschappen Case C–295/05', Nederlanse jurisprudentie; Uitspraken in burgerlijke en strafzaken 2007, No 417, p. 4413 et seq., p. 4423.

62 – On the grammatical interpretation see, in particular, Riesenhuber, Europäische Methodenlehre [European Legal methodology], 2006, p. 250 et seq.

63 – See, amongst others, Dreher, 'Das in-house-Geschäft' [The in-house contract], NzBau 2004, p. 14 et seq., p. 17, who puts the emphasis on the lack of any decision-making power on the part of the party awarded the contract. See also Dischendorfer, 'The Compatibility of Contracts Awarded Directly to "Joint Executive Services" with the Community Rules on Public Procurement and Fair Competition: A Note on Case C–295/05, Asemfo v Tragsa', Public Procurement Law Review 2007, p. NA123 et seq., p. NA129.

64 – On the generally lacking legal certainty in regard to a series of unspecified legal concepts and demarcation problems in light of the Teckal criteria see, amongst others, also Jennert (cited in footnote 41 above, pp. 625 and 626), who welcomes the increase in legal certainty as a result of the concrete and practical criteria in that judgment. At the same time he points up open questions in particular in regard to the subsequent disposal of shares to private persons by a municipal cooperative mandated long before under the terms of the in-house case-law and suggests that the disposal of shares is subject to the principle of equal treatment and the transparency requirement; Opinion of Advocate General Stix-Hackl of 12 January 2006, Carbotermo and ConsorcioAlisei (cited in footnote 11 above), point 17; Söbbeke, 'Zur Konzeption des Kontrollerfordernisses bei vergabefreien Eigenschaften' [On the control requirements in the case of tender-exempt in-house transactions], Die Öffentliche Verwaltung [Public Administration] 2006, p. 996 et seq. p. 997, states that the ill-defined areas that have complicated the application of the in-house principle since the Teckal judgment as an exception from the tendering requirement, have been successively reduced by the Stadt Halle and Carbotermo judgments.

65 – Nor, likewise, is it material to the assessment that such quasi in-house performance of contracts would preclude other undertakings that would also be prepared to take on the relevant work from competing for the contract because this effect is inherent in quasi in-house performance of contracts (Egger, cited in footnote 2 above, p. 163, paragraph 600).

66 – Bovis, Public Procurement in the European Union, 2005, p. 240.

67 – See also the Opinion of Advocate General Kokott in Parking Brixen (cited in footnote 12 above), point 68. In this connection Calsolaro also notes in his discussion of the Parking Brixen judgment that the Court's case-law is probably not to be construed as a duty to engage in outsourcing (Calsolaro, 'S.p.a. in mano pubblica e in house providing La Corte di giustizia CE torna sul controllo analogo: un'occasione perduta?' in: Foro Amministrativo (Consiglio di Stato) 2006, p. 1670 et seq., in particular p. 1674).

68 – See also the Opinion of Advocate General Kokott in Parking Brixen (cited in footnote 12 above), point 71. It is not the general application of procurement law to public-public entities that interferes with rights to self-administration (see on this, Egger, cited in footnote 2 above, p. 168, paragraph 621), but the excessive application thereof. See also 'Rekommunalisierung und Europarecht nach dem Vertrag von Lissabon', Wettbewerb in Recht und Praxis (WRP) 2008, p. 73 et seq., p. 85: municipal self government must be preserved in its basic structures even if it does not have carte blanche to disregard fundamental European freedoms.

69 – Cited in footnote 14 above. Article 6(1) provides that, without prejudice to more general statutory provisions, local authorities must be able to determine their own internal administrative structures in order to adapt them to local needs and ensure effective management.

70 – Treaty of Lisbon amending the Treaty on European Union and the Treaty establishing the European Community, signed at Lisbon, 13 December 2007 (OJ 2007, C 306, p. 1), Article 3a of the future EU Treaty, not yet in force. In the consolidated versions of the Treaty on European Union and the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union (OJ 2008 C115, p. 1) henceforth Article 4 of the EU Treaty, not yet in force.

71 – Stadt Halle and RPL Lochau (cited in footnote 15 above), paragraph 48.

72 – Second Teckal criterion (carrying on of the activity essentially for the public authority or authorities that hold the shares) in this respect presumably permits to a certain extent third parties to take on tasks. An example of this is (temporary) take–up of capacity but for example also as the judgment in Asemfo (cited in footnote 26 above) shows, systematic (regulated by law) taking on of tasks for other public authorities (in that case for all Autonomous Regions of Spain although only four of them have a small shareholding themselves).

73 – Jennert (cited in footnote 41 above), p. 626.

74 – And where appropriate with the assistance of the requisite outside know-how.

75 – Jennert (cited in footnote 41 above), p. 626.

76 – The more or less traditional tasks of municipalities and authorities must include inter alia basic services for example provision of energy and water supplies, public transport and waste disposal, education and cultural establishments and hospitals (for examples, see inter alia, Frenz, cited in footnote 68 above, and Papier, 'Kommunale Daseinsvorsorge im Spannungsfeld zwischen nationalem Recht und Gemeinschaftsrecht', [Communal basic services in the area of tension between national law and Community law] Deutsche Verwaltungsblätter (DVBl) 2003, p. 686 et seq.

77 – To define public tasks which are in the general interest as 'state' tasks would be erroneously to fail to take account of the fact that the claims citizens make of their municipalities are undergoing changes particularly over the course of time. In addition the concept of tasks in the general interest in Community procurement law cannot merely be equated with tasks securing existential requirements. Thus for example in the judgement in joined in Joined Cases C–223/99 and C–260/99*Agorà and Excelsior* [2001] ECR I–3605, paragraph 33 et seq.) it was held that the holding of fairs and exhibitions was an activity in the general interest because it was not only the interests of exhibitors and dealers that were involved but also the boost to trade which flows from the information provided to consumers (in the context of the interpretation of Article 1(b) of Directive 92/50 cited in footnote 15 above. At issue was classification as a public law entity, which was not the case in Agorà and Excelsior, because the task was held not to be a task of a non-commercial kind).

78 – See also on this Kotschy, cited in footnote 37 above, p. 853.

79 – For many regional authorities overarching tasks with a trans-regional aspect arise for example in the sectors of local public transport, agricultural development and environmental protection; in tackling these tasks cooperation represents a natural and obvious solution. An example of such cooperation is to be found in the case of Asemfo (cited in footnote 26 above).

80 – In addition to the submissions of the participating governments see on that also, Söbbeke, cited in footnote 64 above, p. 999; Flömer/Tomerius, Interkommunale Zusammenarbeit unter Vergaberechtsvorbehalt? [Inter–municipal cooperation subject to reservation in respect of procurement law?], NZBau 2004, p. 660 et seq.,

81 – The national court responsible for assessing the case can plainly infer all that is necessary from the judgment in Carbotermo (cited in footnote 11 above paragraph 70): 'Where several authorities control an undertaking, the condition relating to the essential part of its activities may be met if that undertaking carries out the essential part of its activities, not necessarily with one of those authorities, but with all of those authorities together.'

Parties to the main proceedings

Applicant: Coditel Brabant

Defendants: 1. Commune d'Uccle, 2. Société Intercommunale pour la Diffusion de la Télévision (BRUTELE), 3. Région de Bruxelles-Capitale

Questions referred

1) May a municipality, without calling for competition, join a cooperative society grouping together exclusively other municipalities and associations of municipalities (a so-called pure inter-municipal cooperative) in order to transfer to that cooperative society the operation of its cable television network, in the knowledge that the cooperative society carries out the essential part of its activities for and with its own members and that decisions regarding those activities are taken by the board of directors and the sector boards within the limits of the delegated powers granted to them by the board of directors, those corporate bodies being composed of representatives of the public authorities and the decisions of those corporate bodies being taken in accordance with the vote expressed by the majority of those representatives?

2) Can the control thus exercised over the decisions of the cooperative society, via the corporate bodies, by all the members of the cooperative society - or, in the case of operational sectors or sub-sectors, by some of those members - be regarded as enabling them to exercise over the cooperative society control similar to that exercised over their own departments?

3) For that control to be regarded as similar, must it be exercised individually by each member, or is it sufficient that it be exercised by the majority of the members?

LA COUR (septième chambre), composée de M. U. Lõhmus, président de chambre, MM. J. N. Cunha Rodrigues (rapporteur) et J. Klučka, juges, avocat général: M. J. Mazák,

greffier: M. R. Grass, la Cour se proposant de statuer par voie d'ordonnance motivée conformément à l'article 104, paragraphe 3, premier alinéa, de son règlement de procédure, l'avocat général entendu,

rend la présente

Ordonnance

1 La demande de décision préjudicielle porte sur l'interprétation de l'article 6 de la directive 92/50/CEE du Conseil, du 18 juin 1992, portant coordination des procédures de passation des marchés publics de services (JO L 209, p. 1).

2 Cette demande a été présentée dans le cadre d'un litige opposant Termoraggi SpA (ci-après «Termoraggi») au Comune di Monza et à Acqua Gas Azienda Municipale (ci-après «AGAM») au sujet de l'attribution à AGAM du service de gestion de la chaleur pour les bâtiments relevant du Comune di Monza, y compris les interventions de maintenance des installations de chauffage.

Le cadre juridique

La réglementation communautaire

3 L'article 1er, sous a) et b), de la directive 92/50 dispose:

«Aux fins de la présente directive:

a) les 'marchés publics de services' sont des contrats à titre onéreux, conclus par écrit entre un prestataire de services et un pouvoir adjudicateur, […]

[…]

b) sont considérés comme 'pouvoirs adjudicateurs', l'État, les collectivités territoriales, les organismes de droit public, les associations formées par une ou plusieurs de ces collectivités ou de ces organismes de droit public.

[…]»

4 L'article 2 de ladite directive prévoit:

«Si un marché public a pour objet à la fois des produits au sens de la directive 77/62/CEE et des services au sens des annexes I A et I B de la présente directive, il relève de la présente directive si la valeur des services en question dépasse celle des produits incorporés dans le marché.»

5 Selon l'article 6 de la même directive:

6 L'article 1er, sous a), de la directive 93/36/CEE du Conseil, du 14 juin 1993, portant coordination des procédures de passation des marchés publics de fournitures (JO L 199, p. 1) prévoit:

«Aux fins de la présente directive, on entend par:

a) 'marchés publics de fournitures': des contrats conclus par écrit à titre onéreux ayant pour objet l'achat, le crédit-bail, la location ou la location-vente, avec ou sans option d'achat, de produits entre un fournisseur (personne physique ou morale), d'une part, et, d'autre part, un des pouvoirs adjudicateurs définis au point b). La livraison des produits peut comporter, à titre accessoire, des travaux de pose et d'installation.»

La réglementation nationale

7 Aux termes de l'article 23 de la loi n° 142, portant organisation des autonomies locales (legge n. 142, ordinamento delle autonomie locali), du 8 juin 1990 (supplément ordinaire à la GURI n° 135, du 12 juin 1990, ci-après la «loi n° 142/90»):

«1. L'entreprise spéciale est un établissement ['ente strumentale'] de l'entité locale, doté de la personnalité juridique, d'une autonomie d'entreprise et de ses propres statuts, approuvés par le conseil municipal ou provincial.

[…]»

Le litige au principal et la question préjudicielle

8 Il ressort de la décision de renvoi que Termoraggi est une entreprise spécialisée dans la prestation de services de gestion de la chaleur et dans les travaux de transformation y afférents. Avant 1997, elle a assuré la gestion des installations de chauffage des bâtiments appartenant au Comune di Monza ou abritant ses bureaux, pour une valeur d'environ 2 milliards de ITL par an.

9 Il ressort du dossier qu'AGAM est une entreprise spéciale du Comune di Monza, au sens de l'article 23 de la loi n° 142/90.

10 Par décision n° 42, du 21 avril 1997, le conseil communal de Monza a décidé de confier à AGAM le service de gestion de la chaleur pour les bâtiments relevant du Comune di Monza, y compris les interventions de maintenance des installations de chauffage. Il a également, par une seconde décision, complété l'objet statutaire d'AGAM en l'habilitant à fournir des services de gestion de la chaleur.

11 Termoraggi a attaqué ces deux décisions devant le Tribunale amministrativo regionale per la Lombardia par un recours, notifié les 21 et 23 juillet 1997, en faisant valoir, notamment, que le service de gestion de la chaleur confié à AGAM doit être qualifié de marché public de services et que, par conséquent, les dispositions de la directive 92/50 trouvent à s'appliquer. Elle soutient, également, que l'exception découlant de l'article 6 de cette directive ne peut être utilement invoquée sous peine de contrariété avec l'article 90 du traité CE (devenu article 86 CE).

12 Le Comune di Monza estime au contraire qu'AGAM exerce une activité de service public dans la mesure où elle contribue à l'entretien d'immeubles eux-mêmes affectés à des missions de service public. Il en déduit qu'AGAM est titulaire de droits spéciaux et exclusifs et, par conséquent, il considère comme inapplicable la législation communautaire relative aux marchés publics. À tout le moins, il fait valoir que l'article 6 de la directive 92/50 le dispensait de l'obligation de mise en concurrence.

13 C'est dans ces conditions que le Tribunale amministrativo regionale per la Lombardia a décidé de surseoir à statuer et de poser à la Cour la question préjudicielle suivante:

Sur la question préjudicielle

14 En vertu de l'article 104, paragraphe 3, premier alinéa, du règlement de procédure, lorsque la réponse à une question posée à titre préjudiciel peut être clairement déduite de la jurisprudence, la Cour peut, après avoir entendu l'avocat général, statuer par voie d'ordonnance motivée.

15 Si un marché public a pour objet à la fois des produits au sens de la directive 93/36 et des services au sens de la directive 92/50, il résulte de l'article 2 de cette dernière directive que ce marché relève de la directive 92/50 si la valeur des services en question dépasse celle des produits incorporés dans le marché, et de la directive 93/36 dans le cas inverse (voir arrêts du 18 novembre 1999, Teckal, C-107/98, Rec. p. I–8121, point 38, ainsi que du 11 mai 2006, Carbotermo et Consorzio Alisei, C-340/04, Rec. p. I–4137, point 31).

16 Il ressort de la décision de renvoi que le marché en cause au principal a pour objet à la fois la fourniture de combustibles, soit des produits au sens de la directive 93/36, et des services d'entretien des installations de chauffage, soit des services au sens de la directive 92/50.

17 Il appartient à la juridiction de renvoi de décider, en fonction de la valeur respective des produits et des services faisant l'objet du marché en cause au principal, si celui-ci relève de la directive 93/36 ou de la directive 92/50.

18 La directive 93/36 s'applique, en principe, aux marchés conclus entre, d'une part, une collectivité territoriale et, d'autre part, une personne juridiquement distincte de cette dernière. Cependant, elle ne s'applique pas dans l'hypothèse où, à la fois, la collectivité territoriale exerce sur la personne en cause un contrôle analogue à celui qu'elle exerce sur ses propres services et où cette personne réalise l'essentiel de son activité avec la ou les collectivités qui la détiennent (voir arrêt Teckal, précité, point 50).

19 Des considérations analogues s'appliquent en ce qui concerne la directive 92/50 (voir arrêt du 11 janvier 2005, Stadt Halle et RPL Lochau, C-26/03, Rec. p. I-1, points 48, 49 et 52).

20 Le dossier soumis à la Cour contient certaines indications desquelles il pourrait être déduit qu'AGAM est sous le contrôle du Comune di Monza et réalise l'essentiel de son activité avec celui-ci.

21 Il appartient à la juridiction de renvoi de vérifier si tel est effectivement le cas dans l'affaire au principal.

22 Dans l'affirmative, il conviendrait de conclure que ni la directive 92/50 ni la directive 93/36 ne sont applicables au marché en cause au principal.

23 Dans la négative, il conviendrait d'examiner si les autres conditions d'applicabilité de ces directives sont réunies. S'agissant de la directive 92/50, il conviendrait d'examiner si les conditions posées à son article 6 sont satisfaites. Une question analogue ne se poserait pas à l'égard de la directive 93/36, celle-ci ne contenant pas de disposition comparable à l'article 6 de la directive 92/50 (voir arrêt Teckal, précité, point 44).

24 Ledit article 6 exclut du champ d'application de la directive 92/50 les marchés publics de services attribués à une entité qui est elle-même un pouvoir adjudicateur sur la base d'un droit exclusif dont elle bénéficie en vertu de dispositions législatives, réglementaires ou administratives publiées, à condition que ces dispositions soient compatibles avec le traité.

25 Il s'ensuit que cette disposition ne trouve à s'appliquer que s'il existe des dispositions législatives, réglementaires ou administratives publiées qui confèrent à l'attributaire un droit exclusif portant sur l'objet du marché attribué.

26 Par conséquent, il convient de répondre à la question préjudicielle en ce sens que:

– les directives 92/50 et 93/36 ne sont pas applicables à un marché conclu entre une collectivité territoriale et une personne juridiquement distincte de cette dernière dans l'hypothèse où, à la fois, la collectivité territoriale exerce sur la personne en cause un contrôle analogue à celui qu'elle exerce sur ses propres services et où cette personne réalise l'essentiel de son activité avec la ou les collectivités qui la détiennent, et

– l'article 6 de la directive 92/50 n'est applicable que s'il existe des dispositions législatives, réglementaires ou administratives publiées qui confèrent à l'attributaire un droit exclusif portant sur l'objet du marché attribué.

Sur les dépens

27 La procédure revêtant, à l'égard des parties au principal, le caractère d'un incident soulevé devant la juridiction de renvoi, il appartient à celle-ci de statuer sur les dépens. Les frais exposés pour soumettre des observations à la Cour, autres que ceux desdites parties, ne peuvent faire l'objet d'un remboursement.

Par ces motifs, la Cour (septième chambre) dit pour droit:

Les directives 92/50/CEE du Conseil, du 18 juin 1992, portant coordination des procédures de passation des marchés publics de services, et 93/36/CEE du Conseil, du 14 juin 1993, portant coordination des procédures de passation des marchés publics de fournitures, ne sont pas applicables à un marché conclu entre une collectivité territoriale et une personne juridiquement distincte de cette dernière dans l'hypothèse où, à la fois, la collectivité territoriale exerce sur la personne en cause un contrôle analogue à celui qu'elle exerce sur ses propres services et où cette personne réalise l'essentiel de son activité avec la ou les collectivités qui la détiennent.

L'article 6 de la directive 92/50 n'est applicable que s'il existe des dispositions législatives, réglementaires ou administratives publiées qui confèrent à l'attributaire un droit exclusif portant sur l'objet du marché attribué.

Arrêt

1 Par sa requête, la Commission des Communautés européennes demande à la Cour de constater que, en ne prenant pas – et, subsidiairement, en ne communicant pas à la Commission – toutes les dispositions législatives, réglementaires et administratives nécessaires pour se conformer à la directive 2004/18/CE du Parlement européen et du Conseil, du 31 mars 2004, relative à la coordination des procédures de passation des marchés publics de travaux, de fournitures et de services (JO L 134, p. 114, et – rectificatif –, JO 2004, L 351, p. 44), tel que modifiée par le règlement (CE) n° 2083/2005 de la Commission, du 19 décembre 2005 (JO L 333, p. 28, ci-après la «directive 2004/18»), le Royaume de Belgique a manqué aux obligations qui lui incombent en vertu de l'article 80 de cette directive.

Le cadre juridique

La directive 2004/18

2 Le premier considérant de la directive 2004/18 est rédigé comme suit:

«À l'occasion de nouvelles modifications, apportées aux directives 92/50/CEE du Conseil du 18 juin 1992 portant coordination des procédures de passation des marchés publics de services [(JO L 209, p. 1)], 93/36/CEE du Conseil du 14 juin 1993 portant coordination des procédures de passation des marchés publics de fournitures [(JO L 199, p. 1)] et 93/37/CEE du Conseil du 14 juin 1993 portant coordination des procédures de passation des marchés publics de travaux [(JO L 199, p. 54)], modifications nécessaires pour répondre aux exigences de simplification et de modernisation formulées aussi bien par les pouvoirs adjudicateurs que par les opérateurs économiques dans le cadre des réponses au Livre vert adopté par la Commission le 27 novembre 1996, il convient, dans un souci de clarté, de procéder à leur refonte dans un seul texte. La présente directive est fondée sur la jurisprudence de la Cour de justice, en particulier la jurisprudence relative aux critères d'attribution, qui précise les possibilités pour les pouvoirs adjudicateurs de répondre aux besoins de la collectivité publique concernée, y compris dans les domaines environnemental et/ou social, pour autant que ces critères soient liés à l'objet du marché, ne confèrent pas une liberté de choix illimitée au pouvoir adjudicateur, soient expressément mentionnés et respectent les principes fondamentaux visés au considérant 2.»

3 Le deuxième considérant de cette même directive énonce:

4 Le dixième considérant de la directive 2004/18 est libellé dans les termes suivants:

«Un contrat ne peut être considéré comme un marché public de travaux que si son objet vise spécifiquement à réaliser des activités visées à l'annexe I, même si le contrat peut comprendre d'autres services nécessaires à la réalisation de ces activités. Les marchés publics de services, notamment dans le domaine des services de gestion de propriétés, peuvent, dans certains cas, inclure des travaux. Toutefois, ces travaux, pour autant qu'ils sont accessoires et ne constituent, donc, qu'une conséquence éventuelle ou un complément à l'objet principal du contrat, ne peuvent justifier la classification du contrat comme marché public de travaux.»

5 Aux termes du quarante-sixième considérant de la directive 2004/18:

«L'attribution du marché devrait être effectuée sur la base de critères objectifs qui assurent le respect des principes de transparence, de non-discrimination et d'égalité de traitement et qui garantissent l'appréciation des offres dans des conditions de concurrence effective. […]

Afin de garantir le respect du principe d'égalité de traitement lors de l'attribution des marchés, il convient de prévoir l'obligation – consacrée par la jurisprudence – d'assurer la transparence nécessaire pour permettre à tout soumissionnaire d'être raisonnablement informé des critères et des modalités qui seront appliqués pour identifier l'offre économiquement la plus avantageuse. […]»

6 L'article 1er de cette directive est intitulé «Définitions». Il dispose en son paragraphe 2, sous b):

«Les 'marchés publics de travaux' sont des marchés publics ayant pour objet soit l'exécution, soit conjointement la conception et l'exécution de travaux relatifs à une des activités mentionnées à l'annexe I ou d'un ouvrage, soit la réalisation, par quelque moyen que ce soit, d'un ouvrage répondant aux besoins précisés par le pouvoir adjudicateur. Un 'ouvrage' est le résultat d'un ensemble de travaux de bâtiment ou de génie civil destiné à remplir par lui-même une fonction économique ou technique.»

7 L'article 5 de ladite directive prévoit:

8 Aux termes de l'article 9 de cette même directive:

«1. Le calcul de la valeur estimée d'un marché public est fondé sur le montant total payable, hors TVA, estimé par le pouvoir adjudicateur. Ce calcul tient compte du montant total estimé, y compris toute forme d'option éventuelle et les reconductions du contrat éventuelles.

Si le pouvoir adjudicateur prévoit des primes ou des paiements au profit des candidats ou soumissionnaires, il en tient compte pour calculer la valeur estimée du marché.

8. Pour les marchés publics de services, la valeur à prendre comme base pour le calcul de la valeur estimée du marché est, le cas échéant, la suivante:

a) pour les types de services suivants:

i) services d'assurance: la prime payable et les autres modes de rémunération;

[…]

iii) marchés impliquant la conception: honoraires, commissions payables et autres modes de rémunération.

[…]»

9 L'article 23 de la directive 2004/18 énonce en son paragraphe 2:

«Les spécifications techniques doivent permettre l'accès égal des soumissionnaires et ne pas avoir pour effet de créer des obstacles injustifiés à l'ouverture des marchés publics à la concurrence.»

10 L'article 30 de cette directive, intitulé «Cas justifiant le recours à la procédure négociée avec publication d'un avis de marché», est rédigé dans les termes suivants:

2. Dans les cas visés au paragraphe 1, les pouvoirs adjudicateurs négocient avec les soumissionnaires les offres soumises par ceux-ci afin de les adapter aux exigences qu'ils ont indiquées dans l'avis de marché, dans le cahier des charges et dans les documents complémentaires éventuels et afin de rechercher la meilleure offre conformément à l'article 53, paragraphe 1.

3. Au cours de la négociation, les pouvoirs adjudicateurs assurent l'égalité de traitement de tous les soumissionnaires. En particulier, ils ne donnent pas, de manière discriminatoire, d'information susceptible d'avantager certains soumissionnaires par rapport à d'autres.

4. Les pouvoirs adjudicateurs peuvent prévoir que la procédure négociée se déroule en phases successives de manière à réduire le nombre d'offres à négocier en appliquant les critères d'attribution indiqués dans l'avis de marché ou dans le cahier des charges. Le recours à cette faculté est indiqué dans l'avis de marché ou dans le cahier des charges.»

11 L'article 31, point 1), sous c), de la directive 2004/18 prévoit que les pouvoirs adjudicateurs peuvent passer les marchés publics de travaux, de fournitures et de services en recourant à la procédure négociée sans publication préalable d'un avis de marché:

«dans la mesure strictement nécessaire, lorsque l'urgence impérieuse, résultant d'événements imprévisibles pour les pouvoirs adjudicateurs en question, n'est pas compatible avec les délais exigés par les procédures ouvertes, restreintes ou négociées avec publication d'un avis de marché visées à l'article 30. Les circonstances invoquées pour justifier l'urgence impérieuse ne doivent en aucun cas être imputables aux pouvoirs adjudicateurs».

12 L'article 38, paragraphe 1, de cette directive énonce:

«En fixant les délais de réception des offres et des demandes de participation, les pouvoirs adjudicateurs tiennent compte en particulier de la complexité du marché et du temps nécessaire pour préparer les offres, sans préjudice des délais minimaux fixés par le présent article.»

13 L'article 43 de ladite directive dispose:

«Pour tout marché, tout accord-cadre et toute mise en place d'un système d'acquisition dynamique, les pouvoirs adjudicateurs établissent un procès-verbal comportant au moins:

[…]

d) les motifs du rejet des offres jugées anormalement basses;

14 L'article 44 de cette même directive prévoit:

«1. L'attribution des marchés se fait sur la base des critères prévus aux articles 53 et 55, compte tenu de l'article 24, après vérification de l'aptitude des opérateurs économiques non exclus en vertu des articles 45 et 46, effectuée par les pouvoirs adjudicateurs conformément aux critères relatifs à la capacité économique et financière, aux connaissances ou capacités professionnelles et techniques visés aux articles 47 à 52 et, le cas échéant, aux règles et critères non discriminatoires visés au paragraphe 3.

2. Les pouvoirs adjudicateurs peuvent exiger des niveaux minimaux de capacités, conformément aux articles 47 et 48, auxquels les candidats et les soumissionnaires doivent satisfaire.

L'étendue des informations visées aux articles 47 et 48 ainsi que les niveaux minimaux de capacités exigés pour un marché déterminé doivent être liés et proportionnés à l'objet du marché.

Ces niveaux minimaux sont indiqués dans l'avis de marché.

3. Dans les procédures restreintes, les procédures négociées avec publication d'un avis de marché et dans le dialogue compétitif, les pouvoirs adjudicateurs peuvent restreindre le nombre de candidats appropriés qu'ils inviteront à soumissionner, à négocier ou à dialoguer, à condition qu'un nombre suffisant de candidats appropriés soit disponible. Les pouvoirs adjudicateurs indiquent dans l'avis de marché les critères ou règles objectifs et non discriminatoires qu'ils prévoient d'utiliser, le nombre minimal de candidats qu'ils prévoient d'inviter et, le cas échéant, le nombre maximal.

Dans la procédure restreinte, le nombre minimum est de cinq. Dans la procédure négociée avec publication d'un avis de marché et le dialogue compétitif, le nombre minimum est de trois. En tout état de cause, le nombre de candidats invités doit être suffisant pour assurer une concurrence réelle.

Les pouvoirs adjudicateurs invitent un nombre de candidats au moins égal au nombre minimum prédéfini. Lorsque le nombre de candidats satisfaisant aux critères de sélection et aux niveaux minimaux est inférieur au nombre minimal, le pouvoir adjudicateur peut continuer la procédure en invitant le ou les candidats ayant les capacités requises. Dans le cadre de cette même procédure, le pouvoir adjudicateur ne peut pas inclure d'autres opérateurs économiques n'ayant pas demandé de participer ou des candidats n'ayant pas les capacités requises.

4. Lorsque les pouvoirs adjudicateurs recourent à la faculté de réduire le nombre de solutions à discuter ou d'offres à négocier, prévue à l'article 29, paragraphe 4, et à l'article 30, paragraphe 4, ils effectuent cette réduction en appliquant les critères d'attribution qu'ils ont indiqués dans l'avis de marché, dans le cahier des charges ou dans le document descriptif. Dans la phase finale, ce nombre doit permettre d'assurer une concurrence réelle, pour autant qu'il y ait un nombre suffisant de solutions ou de candidats appropriés.»

15 Aux termes de l'article 46, premier alinéa, de la directive 2004/18:

«Tout opérateur économique désireux de participer à un marché public peut être invité à justifier de son inscription au registre de la profession ou au registre du commerce ou à fournir une déclaration sous serment ou un certificat, tels que précisés à l'annexe IX A pour les marchés publics de travaux, à l'annexe IX B pour les marchés publics de fournitures et à l'annexe IX C pour les marchés publics de services, et conformément aux conditions prévues dans l'État membre où il est établi.»

16 L'article 48, paragraphe 2, de cette directive dispose:

«Les capacités techniques des opérateurs économiques peuvent être justifiées d'une ou de plusieurs des façons suivantes, selon la nature, la quantité ou l'importance, et l'utilisation des travaux, des fournitures ou des services:

[…]

f) pour les marchés publics de travaux et de services et uniquement dans les cas appropriés, l'indication des mesures de gestion environnementale que l'opérateur économique pourra appliquer lors de la réalisation du marché;

[…]»

17 Aux termes de l'article 55 de la directive 2004/18:

«1. Si, pour un marché donné, des offres apparaissent anormalement basses par rapport à la prestation, le pouvoir adjudicateur, avant de pouvoir rejeter ces offres, demande, par écrit, les précisions sur la composition de l'offre qu'il juge opportunes.

Ces précisions peuvent concerner notamment:

d) le respect des dispositions concernant la protection et les conditions de travail en vigueur au lieu où la prestation est à réaliser;

e) l'obtention éventuelle d'une aide d'État par le soumissionnaire.

3. Le pouvoir adjudicateur qui constate qu'une offre est anormalement basse du fait de l'obtention d'une aide d'État par le soumissionnaire ne peut rejeter cette offre pour ce seul motif que s'il consulte le soumissionnaire et si celui-ci n'est pas en mesure de démontrer, dans un délai suffisant fixé par le pouvoir adjudicateur, que l'aide en question a été octroyée légalement. Le pouvoir adjudicateur qui rejette une offre dans ces conditions en informe la Commission.»

18 L'article 67, paragraphe 2, de la directive 2004/18, figurant dans le titre IV de celle-ci, intitulé «Règles applicables aux concours dans le domaine des services», est libellé comme suit:

«Le présent titre s'applique:

a) aux concours organisés dans le cadre d'une procédure de passation d'un marché public de services;

b) aux concours avec primes de participation et/ou paiements aux participants.

Dans les cas visés au point a), on entend par 'seuil', la valeur estimée hors TVA du marché public de services, y compris les éventuelles primes de participation et/ou paiements aux participants.

Dans les cas visés au point b), on entend par seuil le montant total des primes et paiements, y compris la valeur estimée hors TVA du marché public de services qui pourrait être passé ultérieurement aux termes de l'article 31, paragraphe 3, si le pouvoir adjudicateur n'exclut pas une telle passation dans l'avis de concours.»

19 L'article 68 de cette directive énonce:

«Le présent titre ne s'applique pas:

a) aux concours de services au sens de la directive 2004/17/CE [du Parlement européen et du Conseil, du 31 mars 2004, portant coordination des procédures de passation des marchés dans les secteurs de l'eau, de l'énergie, des transports et des services postaux (JO L 134, p. 1),] qui sont organisés par des pouvoirs adjudicateurs exerçant une ou plusieurs des activités visées aux articles 3 à 7 de ladite directive et qui sont organisés pour la poursuite de ces activités, ni aux concours exclus du champ d'application de ladite directive.

Toutefois, la présente directive continue à s'appliquer aux concours de services qui sont passés par des pouvoirs adjudicateurs exerçant une ou plusieurs des activités visées à l'article 6 de la directive 2004/17/CE et passés pour ces activités, aussi longtemps que l'État membre concerné se prévaut de la faculté visée à l'article 71 de ladite directive pour en différer l'application;

20 L'article 72 de ladite directive dispose:

21 Aux termes de l'article 74, paragraphe 1, de cette même directive, relatif aux décisions du jury:

«Le jury dispose d'une autonomie de décision ou d'avis.»

22 L'annexe I de la directive 2004/18 énumère les activités visées à l'article 1er, paragraphe 2, sous b), de celle-ci, en faisant référence notamment aux codes du vocabulaire commun pour les marchés publics (Common Procurement Vocabulary, CPV), établi par le règlement (CE) n° 2195/2002 du Parlement européen et du Conseil, du 5 novembre 2002 (JO L 340, p. 1), et à leur description en fonction de la nomenclature statistique des activités économiques dans la Communauté européenne, établie par le règlement (CEE) n° 3037/90 du Conseil, du 9 octobre 1990 (JO L 293, p. 1), telle que révisée par le règlement (CE) n° 29/2002 de la Commission, du 19 décembre 2001 (JO L 6, p. 3, ci-après la «NACE» et les «codes NACE»).

23 L'annexe IX de cette directive reproduit la liste des registres professionnels ainsi que les déclarations et certificats correspondant dans quinze États membres.

La réglementation nationale

La loi du 24 décembre 1993

24 L'article 1er, § 1er, premier alinéa, de la loi du 24 décembre 1993 relative aux marchés publics et à certains marchés de travaux, de fournitures et de services (Moniteur belge du 22 janvier 1994, p. 1308), telle que modifiée par la loi portant des dispositions diverses du 23 décembre 2005 (Moniteur belge du 30 décembre 2005, p. 57301, ci-après la «loi du 24 décembre 1993»), dispose:

«Les marchés publics de travaux, de fournitures et de services au nom des pouvoirs adjudicateurs visés à l'article 4 sont passés avec concurrence et à forfait, suivant les modes prévus au titre II du présent livre, mais sous réserve de ce qui est prévu au § 2 du présent article et à l'article 2.»

25 L'article 5 de cette loi prévoit:

«Au sens du […] titre [II, relatif aux marchés publics de travaux, de fournitures et de services], on entend par:

comporter à titre accessoire des travaux de pose et d'installation;

26 L'article 20 de ladite loi énonce:

«Le concours de projets est une procédure permettant à un pouvoir adjudicateur d'acquérir un plan ou un projet, sur la base d'un choix effectué par un jury. Ce concours donne lieu soit à l'attribution d'un marché public de services, soit, après un appel à la concurrence, au choix d'un ou de plusieurs projets, avec ou sans octroi de primes aux lauréats.»

27 L'annexe 1 de la loi du 24 décembre 1993 décrit les activités professionnelles concernées par les marchés publics de travaux en se référant aux codes NACE en vigueur au moment de l'adoption de cette loi.

L'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996

28 L'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996 relatif aux marchés publics de travaux, de fournitures et de services et aux concessions de travaux publics (Moniteur belge du 26 janvier 1996, p. 1523), tel que modifié par l'arrêté royal du 12 janvier 2006 (Moniteur belge du 27 janvier 2006, p. 4528, ci-après l'«arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996») comporte notamment des dispositions relatives, respectivement, aux marchés publics de travaux (titre I, articles 1 à 26), aux marchés publics de fournitures (titre II, articles 27 à 52) et aux marchés publics de services (titre III, articles 53 à 81).

29 L'article 2 de cet arrêté royal traite du calcul du montant des marchés publics de travaux.

30 S'agissant de ce type de marchés publics, l'article 6, § 4, dispose:

«Pour l'adjudication restreinte, l'appel d'offres restreint et la procédure négociée avec publicité lors du lancement de la procédure au sens de l'article 17, § 3, de la loi [du 24 décembre 1993], les candidats sélectionnés doivent être invités simultanément, par écrit, à présenter leur offre.

Cette invitation comporte au moins:

1° a) le cahier spécial des charges et les documents complémentaires ou, le cas échéant, l'adresse du service auquel le cahier spécial des charges et les documents complémentaires peuvent être demandés et la date limite d'introduction de cette demande;

b) le cas échéant, le montant dû pour l'obtention de ces documents et les modalités de paiement de cette somme;

2° a) la date limite de réception des offres;

b) l'adresse à laquelle elles doivent être transmises;

c) la ou les langues dans lesquelles elles doivent être rédigées;

3° la référence à l'avis de marché;

4° l'indication des documents à joindre éventuellement, soit à l'appui des déclarations vérifiables fournies par le candidat conformément au modèle d'avis figurant à l'annexe 2, B, III, 2 et 3, soit en complément aux renseignements prévus à ces annexes;

5° le ou les critères d'attribution s'ils ne figurent pas dans l'avis.»

31 Les articles 32, § 4, et 58, § 4, de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996 contiennent des dispositions identiques en ce qui concerne, respectivement, les marchés publics de fournitures et les marchés publics de services.

32 S'agissant des marchés publics de travaux, l'article 7, premier alinéa, de cet arrêté royal prévoit:

«Lorsque les offres ne peuvent être établies qu'après examen d'une documentation volumineuse, ou à la suite d'une visite des lieux, ou après consultation sur place de documents annexés au cahier spécial des charges, les délais prévus aux articles 5 et 6, § 2, doivent être prolongés de façon adéquate.»

33 Le premier alinéa des articles 33 et 59 dudit arrêté royal contient une disposition identique en ce qui concerne, respectivement, les marchés publics de fournitures et les marchés publics de services.

34 S'agissant des marchés publics de travaux, l'article 9 de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996 est rédigé dans les termes suivants:

«Pour tout marché passé, le pouvoir adjudicateur dresse un procès-verbal mentionnant au moins:

1° le nom et l'adresse du pouvoir adjudicateur, l'objet et le prix du marché;

2° les noms des soumissionnaires ou des candidats retenus et la justification de ce choix;

3° les noms des candidats ou soumissionnaires exclus et les motifs de leur rejet;

4° le nom de l'adjudicataire et la motivation du choix de son offre ainsi que, si elle est connue, la part du marché qu'il a l'intention de sous-traiter;

5° en cas de recours à la procédure négociée avec ou sans publicité lors du lancement de la procédure, la justification des circonstances visées à l'article 17, § 2 ou § 3, de la loi, propres à motiver le recours à cette procédure.

Ce procès-verbal, ou les principaux points de celui-ci, sont transmis à la Commission européenne à sa demande.»

35 Les articles 35 et 61 de cet arrêté royal contiennent des dispositions identiques en ce qui concerne, respectivement, les marchés publics de fournitures et les marchés publics de services.

36 Les articles 16, 18 et 19 dudit arrêté royal définissent les critères de sélection des soumissionnaires en cas d'adjudication publique ou d'appel d'offres général en ce qui concerne les marchés publics de travaux.

37 Ledit article 16 dispose en son dernier alinéa:

38 Le dernier alinéa des articles 42 et 68 de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996 contiennent des dispositions similaires à l'égard des fournisseurs et des prestataires de services d'autres États membres et de pays tiers en ce qui concerne, respectivement, les marchés publics de fournitures et les marchés publics de services.

39 Les articles 18 et 19 de cet arrêté royal énumèrent les éléments que peuvent invoquer les entrepreneurs pour justifier de leur capacité financière et économique.

40 S'agissant des marchés publics de travaux, l'article 20, § 2, de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996 énonce:

«Le pouvoir adjudicateur peut exiger des candidats ou des soumissionnaires la remise de la preuve de leur inscription au registre professionnel ou du commerce conformément aux conditions prévues par la législation du pays où ils sont établis.»

41 Les articles 46, § 2, et 72, § 2, dudit arrêté royal contiennent une disposition identique en ce qui concerne, respectivement, les marchés publics de fournitures et les marchés publics de services.

42 L'article 24 de ce même arrêté royal prévoit:

«Pour les marchés publics de travaux dont le montant estimé hors taxe sur la valeur ajoutée est égal ou supérieur à 5.278.000 EUR, les pays suivants, selon les dispositions et conditions de l'acte international les concernant, bénéficient de l'application des titres II et III du livre premier de la loi [du 24 décembre 1993] et du présent arrêté:

1° l'Islande, le Liechtenstein et la Norvège, en application de l'Accord sur l'Espace économique européen;

2° le Canada, la Corée, les États-unis d'Amérique, Israël, le Japon et la Suisse, en application de l'Accord relatif aux marchés publics conclu dans le cadre de l'Accord général sur les Tarifs douaniers et le Commerce.»

43 Les articles 50 et 79 de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996 contiennent des dispositions identiques en ce qui concerne, respectivement, les marchés publics de fournitures et les marchés publics de services dont le montant estimé, hors taxe sur la valeur ajoutée, est égal ou supérieur, selon le cas, à 211 000 euros ou à 137 000 euros.

44 Aux termes de l'article 28 de cet arrêté royal, s'agissant des marchés publics de fournitures:

Lorsque des marchés présentent un caractère de régularité ou sont destinés à être renouvelés au cours d'une période donnée, le montant estimé se réfère:

1° soit au montant réel total des contrats successifs analogues passés au cours des douze mois ou de l'exercice précédent, corrigé, si possible, pour tenir compte des modifications en quantité ou en valeur qui surviendraient au cours des douze mois suivant le marché initial;

2° soit au montant estimé total des marchés successifs au cours des douze mois suivant la première livraison ou au cours de l'exercice si celui-ci est supérieur à douze mois.

Lorsque des lots sont prévus pour l'acquisition de fournitures homogènes, le montant estimé total des lots doit être pris en compte.

Lorsque des options sont prévues, le montant total maximum de l'achat, de la location, de la location-vente, du crédit-bail, y compris les options, doit être pris en compte comme base de calcul.

[…]»

45 Les articles 42, 44 et 45 dudit arrêté royal définissent les critères de sélection des soumissionnaires en cas d'adjudication publique ou d'appel d'offres général en ce qui concerne les marchés publics de fournitures.

46 L'article 54 du même arrêté royal concerne la fixation du montant estimé des marchés publics de services. Il prévoit:

«Le montant estimé des marchés publics de services inclut la rémunération totale estimée du prestataire de services.

Aux fins de calcul de ce montant, sont pris en compte:

1° pour les services d'assurances, la prime payable;

2° pour les services bancaires et autres services financiers, les honoraires, commissions, intérêts et tous autres modes de rémunération;

3° pour les services impliquant la conception, les honoraires ou la commission.

En cas de services nouveaux consistant dans la répétition de services similaires au sens de l'article 17, § 2, 2°, b, de la loi [du 24 décembre 1993], sont pris en compte le montant total estimé du marché initial ainsi que le montant total estimé pour la suite des services.

[…]

Le montant estimé des marchés de services à passer sans indication d'un prix total se détermine comme suit:

[…]

Lorsque des marchés présentent un caractère de régularité ou sont destinés à être renouvelés au cours d'une période donnée, le montant estimé se réfère :

1° soit au montant réel total des marchés analogues passés pour la même catégorie de services au cours des douze mois ou de l'exercice précédent, corrigé pour tenir compte des modifications en quantité ou en valeur qui surviendraient au cours des douze mois suivant le premier marché;

2° soit au montant estimé total des marchés au cours des douze mois suivant la première prestation, ou pendant la durée du marché si celle-ci est supérieure à douze mois.

Lorsque des options sont prévues, le montant total maximum, y compris les options, doit être pris comme base de calcul.

Lorsqu'un marché a pour objet des services visés à l'annexe 2, A, et à l'annexe 2, B, de la loi [du 24 décembre 1993], il est passé conformément à la présente section lorsque la valeur des services visés à l'annexe 2, A, dépasse celle des services visés à l'annexe 2, B.

Lorsqu'un marché a pour objet des fournitures et des services, il est passé conformément au présent titre lorsque la valeur des services dépasse celle des fournitures.

47 Les articles 68, 70 et 71 de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996 définissent les critères de sélection des soumissionnaires en cas d'adjudication publique ou d'appel d'offres général en ce qui concerne les marchés publics de services.

48 Aux termes de l'article 76, § 2, de cet arrêté royal:

«Lorsque le concours de projets est organisé dans le cadre d'une procédure de passation de marché public de services dont le montant estimé est égal ou supérieur au montant prévu à l'article 53 du présent arrêté et dans tous les cas de concours où le montant total des primes et paiements à verser aux participants est égal ou supérieur aux montants prévus à l'article 53, un avis de concours de projets est publié au Journal officiel des Communautés européennes. Le pouvoir adjudicateur doit être à même de faire la preuve de la date de l'envoi.

Cet avis de concours est également publié au Bulletin des Adjudications suivant le même modèle d'avis.

La publication dans le Bulletin des Adjudications ne peut avoir lieu avant la date de l'envoi de l'avis à l'Office des publications officielles des Communautés européennes, et doit faire mention de cette date. Elle ne peut pas contenir de renseignements autres que ceux publiés au Journal officiel des Communautés européennes.»

49 Selon l'article 110, § 3, troisième alinéa, de cet arrêté royal:

«Lors de la vérification de prix apparemment anormalement bas, le pouvoir adjudicateur peut prendre en considération des justifications fondées sur des critères objectifs tenant à l'économie du procédé de construction ou de fabrication ou de la prestation de services, ou aux solutions techniques choisies, ou aux conditions exceptionnellement favorables dont dispose le soumissionnaire pour exécuter le marché, ou à l'originalité du produit, du projet ou de l'ouvrage proposé par le soumissionnaire.»

50 L'article 122 bis de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996 prévoit:

«En cas de procédure négociée avec publicité, lorsque le montant du marché atteint le montant pour la publicité européenne et que l'attribution se fait au soumissionnaire qui a remis l'offre

économiquement la plus avantageuse du point de vue du pouvoir adjudicateur, ce dernier précise la pondération relative de chacun des critères d'attribution. Cette pondération peut éventuellement être exprimée dans une fourchette dont l'écart maximal doit être approprié. Si une telle pondération n'est pas possible pour des raisons démontrables, les critères sont mentionnés dans un ordre décroissant d'importance.»

51 L'annexe 2, B, de cet arrêté royal présente le modèle type d'un avis de marché. Dans les rubriques III.2.2 et III.2.3 d'un tel avis, le pouvoir adjudicateur doit préciser le niveau minimal éventuellement requis en ce qui concerne les capacités économiques, financières et techniques.

52 Dans la rubrique IV.1.3 de cet avis, le pouvoir adjudicateur doit indiquer s'il est susceptible de recourir à une procédure de négociation en phases successives afin de réduire le nombre des solutions ou des offres à négocier.

53 L'annexe 3, A, de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996 contient le modèle type d'un avis de concours. Conformément à ce modèle, le pouvoir adjudicateur doit préciser, à la rubrique IV.1 d'un tel avis, le type de procédure ainsi que le nombre envisagé de participants au concours. Conformément à la rubrique IV.5.3 de cet avis, ce pouvoir doit indiquer si un contrat de services fera suite au concours. Ledit pouvoir doit de même mentionner à la rubrique IV.5.4 de cet avis si la décision du jury est contraignante.

La procédure précontentieuse

54 N'ayant pas reçu d'information concernant la transposition de la directive 2004/18 en droit belge à l'issue du délai prescrit à l'article 80 de cette dernière, la Commission a, conformément à l'article 226 CE, mis le Royaume de Belgique en demeure de présenter ses observations par une lettre adressée le 27 mars 2006.

55 Dans sa réponse communiquée le 1er juin 2006, cet État membre a informé la Commission de ce que des mesures de transposition étaient en préparation.

56 Estimant que le Royaume de Belgique n'avait pas pris les mesures nécessaires à la transposition de la directive 2004/18 et constatant que, en tout cas, de telles mesures ne lui avaient pas été communiquées, la Commission a émis le 18 octobre 2006 un avis motivé invitant cet État membre à se conformer à cet avis dans un délai de deux mois à compter de la réception de celui-ci.

57 Par diverses lettres parvenues à la Commission les 15 décembre 2006 ainsi que 16 et 27 février 2007, le Royaume de Belgique a notamment communiqué à la Commission le texte de la loi du 15 juin 2006 relative aux marchés publics et à certains marchés de travaux, de fournitures et de services (Moniteur belge du 15 février 2007, p. 7355, ci-après la «loi du 15 juin 2006») ainsi que celui de la loi du 16 juin 2006 relative à l'attribution, à l'information aux candidats et soumissionnaires et au délai d'attente concernant les marchés publics et certains marchés de travaux, de fournitures et de services (Moniteur belge du 15 février 2007, p. 7388), qui visent à transposer la directive 2004/18.

58 Cependant, considérant que la situation demeurait insatisfaisante, eu égard notamment au fait que l'arrêté royal devant fixer la date d'entrée en vigueur des dispositions de fond de ces lois n'avait pas été adopté, la Commission a décidé, conformément à l'article 226 CE, d'introduire le présent recours.

59 Par lettre du 17 juin 2008, la Cour a, en application de l'article 54 bis du règlement de procédure, demandé, d'une part, à la Commission d'indiquer de manière exhaustive les dispositions de la directive 2004/18 qu'elle considérait comme non transposées en droit belge et, d'autre part, au Royaume de Belgique de vérifier la correspondance entre les dispositions de droit belge dont il alléguait qu'elles ont opéré la transposition de cette directive et les dispositions de celle-ci qui auraient été ainsi transposées. Les parties ont communiqué leur réponse au greffe de la Cour, respectivement, les 4 et 3 septembre 2008.

Sur le recours

Sur l'étendue du recours

60 Dans sa requête, la Commission demandait à la Cour de constater que le Royaume de Belgique avait manqué aux obligations qui lui incombent en vertu de la directive 2004/18 du fait d'une absence totale de transposition de celle-ci en droit interne.

61 Dans son mémoire en défense, le Royaume de Belgique, renvoyant à certaines dispositions nationales adoptées, pour les unes, préalablement à la date d'expiration du délai fixé dans l'avis motivé et, pour les autres, postérieurement à cette date, a allégué qu'il avait assuré une transposition partielle des dispositions de la directive 2004/18 et que, à ladite date, seuls les articles 23, 30, 45, paragraphe 1, 48, paragraphe 5, 49, 50, 53, 57 et 59 de celle-ci n'étaient pas transposés en droit interne.

62 Sur le fondement de ces indications, la Commission a considéré, dans son mémoire en réplique, que le Royaume de Belgique restait toujours en défaut d'avoir transposé entièrement ou correctement l'article 1er de la directive 2004/18 lu en combinaison avec l'annexe I de celle-ci ainsi que les articles 5, 9, 12, 13, 16, 20, 21, 23 à 25, 30, 31, 38, 40, 43 à 46, 48 à 50, 55, 59, 63, 65, 67 à 69, 72 et 74 de cette directive.

63 Dans son mémoire en duplique, s'appuyant sur l'arrêté royal du 23 novembre 2007 modifiant la loi du 24 décembre 1993 relative aux marchés publics et à certains marchés de travaux, de fournitures et de services et certains arrêtés royaux pris en exécution de cette loi (Moniteur belge du 7 décembre 2007, p. 60372, ci-après l'«arrêté royal du 23 novembre 2007»), le Royaume de Belgique a estimé que l'ensemble des dispositions de ladite directive nécessitant encore d'être transposées en droit interne l'étaient désormais.

64 Dans sa réponse aux questions écrites adressées aux parties par la Cour et au cours de l'audience, la Commission s'est désistée d'une partie des griefs précédemment formulés et a limité son recours au défaut de transposition ou à la transposition défaillante des dispositions suivantes de la directive 2004/18: article 1er paragraphe 2, sous b), lu en combinaison avec l'annexe I, article 5, article 9, paragraphes 1, seconde phrase, et 8, sous a), i) et iii), article 23, paragraphe 2, article 30, paragraphes 2 à 4, article 31, paragraphe 1, sous c), article 38, paragraphe 1, article 43, premier alinéa, sous d), article 44, paragraphes 2, deuxième alinéa, 3 et 4, article 46, premier alinéa, article 48, paragraphe 2, sous f), article 55, paragraphes 1, second alinéa, sous d) et e), et 3, article 67, paragraphe 2, deuxième et troisième alinéas, article 68, sous a), premier alinéa, article 72 et article 74, paragraphe 1.

65 À titre liminaire, il y a lieu de constater que, comme l'a fait observer à juste titre la Commission lors de l'audience, la loi du 24 décembre 1993 et l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996, dont se prévaut principalement le Royaume de Belgique, ont été adoptés afin de transposer non pas la directive 2004/18, mais les directives régissant précédemment les procédures de passation de marchés publics, à savoir les directives 92/50, 93/36 et 93/37.

66 Or, la directive 2004/18, qui, ainsi qu'il ressort de son premier considérant, modifie ces procédures afin de répondre aux exigences de simplification et de modernisation formulées par les pouvoirs adjudicateurs et par les opérateurs économiques, présente d'importantes différences par rapport aux directives qu'elle a remplacées, de sorte que la législation nationale ayant transposé ces dernières ne saurait, a priori, refléter les nouvelles dispositions et précisions insérées par le législateur communautaire dans la directive 2004/18.

67 Néanmoins, afin d'examiner le bien-fondé des griefs formulés par la Commission, il convient de procéder à une comparaison des dispositions de la directive 2004/18 avec les mesures législatives, réglementaires et administratives nationales par lesquelles le Royaume de Belgique estime avoir transposé celle-ci.

68 À cet égard, il y a lieu de rappeler, en premier lieu, que, selon une jurisprudence constante, chacun des États membres destinataires d'une directive a l'obligation de prendre, dans son ordre juridique national, toutes les mesures nécessaires en vue d'assurer le plein effet de cette directive, conformément à l'objectif qu'elle poursuit (voir, notamment, arrêts du 26 juin 2003, Commission/France, C–233/00, Rec. p. I–6625, point 75, et du 30 novembre 2006, Commission/Luxembourg, C–32/05, Rec. p. I–11323, point 32).

69 En second lieu, la transposition en droit interne d'une directive n'exige pas nécessairement une reprise formelle et textuelle des dispositions de celle-ci dans une disposition légale expresse et spécifique, et peut, en fonction de son contenu, se satisfaire d'un contexte juridique général, dès lors que celui-ci assure effectivement la pleine application de cette directive d'une manière suffisamment claire et précise (voir en ce sens, notamment, arrêt du 20 octobre 2005, Commission/Royaume-Uni, C-6/04, Rec. p. I-9017, points 21 et 24, ainsi que du 24 juin 2008, Commission/Luxembourg, C-272/07, point 10).

70 Toutefois, la Cour a itérativement jugé que les dispositions d'une directive doivent être mises en œuvre avec la précision et la clarté requises afin de satisfaire pleinement à l'exigence de sécurité juridique (voir, en ce sens, arrêts précités Commission/Royaume-Uni, point 27, et du 24 juin 2008, Commission/Luxembourg, point 11).

71 C'est à la lumière de ces considérations qu'il convient d'examiner les différents griefs soulevés par la Commission.

Sur le grief tiré d'une transposition défaillante de l'article 1er, paragraphe 2, sous b), de la directive 2004/18 lu en combinaison avec l'annexe I de celle-ci 72 Selon la Commission, la législation belge n'est pas conforme à l'article 1er, paragraphe 2, sous b), de la directive 2004/18, dans la mesure où l'annexe I de celle-ci, à laquelle renvoie cette disposition, n'est pas transposée en droit belge. En particulier, les références aux codes NACE figurant à l'annexe 1 de la loi du 24 décembre 1993 n'auraient pas été adaptées à celles figurant à l'annexe I de ladite directive.

– Arguments des parties

73 Le Royaume de Belgique, tout en reconnaissant que les codes NACE tels que mentionnés à l'annexe I de la directive 2004/18 n'ont pas été repris dans la législation belge, considère que la notion de marché public de travaux recouvre en droit belge celle consacrée par ladite directive.

74 L'article 1er, paragraphe 2, sous b), de la directive 2004/18 définit la notion de «marchés publics de travaux» comme visant des marchés publics ayant pour objet soit l'exécution, soit conjointement la conception et l'exécution de travaux relatifs à une des activités mentionnées à l'annexe I de cette directive ou d'un ouvrage, soit la réalisation par quelque moyen que ce soit d'un ouvrage répondant aux besoins précisés par le pouvoir adjudicateur.

75 Il résulte de cette définition, lue en combinaison avec le dixième considérant de la directive 2004/18, qu'un contrat ne saurait être considéré comme un marché de travaux que si son objet concerne spécifiquement des activités visées à l'annexe I de cette directive (voir par analogie, s'agissant de la directive 93/37, arrêt du 21 février 2008, Commission/Italie, C-412/04, Rec. p. I-619, point 46).

76 Ladite annexe I a ainsi une fonction importante en ce qu'elle constitue la base sur laquelle il est possible de constater qu'un marché donné relève de la notion de «travaux» visée à l'article 1er, paragraphe 2, sous b), de la directive 2004/18.

77 Il s'ensuit qu'un État membre ne peut assurer une transposition correcte de cette disposition en se référant, dans sa législation, à une ancienne version de la NACE qui se distingue sensiblement de la version à laquelle se réfère la directive 2004/18.

78 En outre, il convient de préciser que le fait, souligné par l'État membre défendeur, que la version de la NACE à laquelle se réfère l'annexe I de cette directive a été modifiée après l'expiration du délai fixé à l'article 80 de cette dernière n'implique aucunement que les États membres sont libres de déterminer unilatéralement la définition de la notion communautaire de marchés de travaux.

79 Enfin, il y a lieu de relever que la loi du 15 juin 2006, communiquée par le Royaume de Belgique à la Commission en tant que transposition de la directive 2004/18, mais dont les dispositions substantielles ne sont pas entrées en vigueur, reprend, à son annexe 1, les codes NACE tels qu'ils figurent à l'annexe I de cette directive.

80 Dans ces conditions, ce grief de la Commission est fondé.

Sur le grief tiré d'une transposition défaillante de l'article 5 de la directive 2004/18

– Arguments des parties

81 Selon la Commission, les accords conclus au sein de l'Organisation mondiale du commerce (OMC) sont susceptibles, dans certaines circonstances, de conférer plus de droits aux opérateurs issus de pays tiers parties à ces accords que ne le fait la directive 2004/18 en ce qui concerne ceux des États membres. Partant, il serait indispensable de transposer l'article 5 de ladite directive en droit interne, ce que ne feraient pas les dispositions nationales invoquées par le Royaume de Belgique.

82 Cet État membre considère toutefois que les articles 16, dernier alinéa, 24, 42, dernier alinéa, 50, 68, dernier alinéa, et 79 de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996 procèdent à la transposition de l'article 5 de la directive 2004/18.

– Appréciation de la Cour

83 Conformément au dernier alinéa des articles 16, 42 et 68 de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996, les entreprises issues des États membres de la Communauté et, «selon les dispositions et conditions de l'acte international les concernant», celles issues des pays tiers parties aux accords conclus au sein de l'OMC doivent être traitées dans les mêmes conditions que les entreprises belges.

84 Partant, en prévoyant une égalité de traitement entre ces différents opérateurs économiques, la législation belge prescrit nécessairement que les entreprises issues des pays tiers parties aux accords conclus au sein de l'OMC ne peuvent disposer de conditions plus avantageuses que les entreprises issues des États membres.

85 Dans ces conditions, ce grief de la Commission n'est pas fondé.

Sur le grief tiré d'une transposition défaillante de l'article 9, paragraphe 1, seconde phrase, de la directive 2004/18

– Arguments des parties

86 Selon la Commission, en l'état actuel de la législation nationale invoquée par le Royaume de Belgique, s'agissant d'un marché public de fournitures, les reconductions éventuelles ne doivent pas être prises en compte pour le calcul de la valeur estimée d'un tel marché contrairement à ce que prévoit l'article 9, paragraphe 1, seconde phrase, de la directive 2004/18.

87 Le Royaume de Belgique considère que la notion de «reconduction» est recouverte par celle de «contrats successifs» telle qu'elle résulte de l'article 28, deuxième alinéa, de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996. Cet État membre invoque en outre les articles 2 et 54 de cet arrêté royal.

88 D'une part, s'agissant des dispositions invoquées par le Royaume de Belgique, il convient de constater que seul l'article 28 se rapporte aux marchés publics de fournitures. Toutefois, aucun alinéa de cet article ne vise expressément, s'agissant des méthodes de calcul de la valeur estimée de ces marchés publics, les reconductions de contrat.

89 D'autre part, contrairement à ce qu'affirme le Royaume de Belgique, il ne saurait être admis que les notions de contrats successifs et de reconduction de contrats se confondent, ni même que la première recouvre la seconde. Il convient d'ailleurs de relever que l' article 37, paragraphe 2, de la loi du 15 juin 2006 est consacré à la notion de reconduction de contrat.

90 Or, les éléments, énoncés notamment à l'article 9 de la directive 2004/18, qui entrent dans l'évaluation du montant d'un marché public sont d'autant plus importants que ce montant conditionne l'application des règles contraignantes de passation des marchés publics édictées par cette directive. Dès lors, le renvoi en droit national à la notion de contrats successifs, qui, a priori, ne correspond pas forcément à celle de reconduction de contrat, n'instaure pas une situation juridique suffisamment précise et claire, et ne constitue par conséquent pas une transposition appropriée de la disposition de cette directive visée dans le présent grief.

91 Dans ces conditions, ce grief de la Commission est fondé.

Sur les griefs tirés d'une transposition défaillante de l'article 9, paragraphe 8, sous a), i) et iii), de la directive 2004/18

– Arguments des parties

92 La Commission considère que les dispositions de droit national invoquées par le Royaume de Belgique ne couvrent pas l'ensemble des éventualités prévues au point a) de l'article 9, paragraphe 8, de la directive 2004/18.

93 Pour le Royaume de Belgique, l'article 54, premier alinéa, de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996 établit le principe de la prise en compte de la rémunération totale pour estimer le montant d'un marché, tandis que le deuxième alinéa de cet article, qui est incriminé par la Commission, n'a qu'une valeur illustrative.

94 Il convient de préciser que l'article 54, deuxième alinéa, de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996 a été adopté afin de transposer l'article 7, paragraphe 4, de la directive 92/50, qui limitait la prise en compte des «autres modes de rémunérations» au type de services couvert par le deuxième tiret de cette dernière disposition, à savoir les services bancaires, désormais repris à l'article 9, paragraphe 8, sous a), ii), de la directive 2004/18.

95 Le législateur communautaire ayant jugé utile de préciser dans la directive 2004/18 non seulement pour les services bancaires, mais également pour les types de services visés aux points i) et iii) de son article 9, paragraphe 8, sous a), que le montant estimé du marché public doit prendre en compte les «autres modes de rémunérations», le législateur national doit assurer une transposition précise desdites dispositions de cette directive, notamment pour prévenir le risque d'une interprétation a contrario de l'article 54, deuxième alinéa, 2°, de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996.

96 Or, la présence d'un rappel général à l'article 54, premier alinéa, de cet arrêté royal, selon lequel le montant estimé des marchés de services inclut la rémunération totale du prestataire de services, ne permet pas d'écarter un tel risque et n'offre dès lors pas la sécurité juridique requise en ce qui concerne les règles spécifiques d'estimation de la valeur d'un marché public prévues à l'article 9, paragraphe 8, sous a), i) et iii), de la directive 2004/18.

97 Dans ces conditions, ces griefs de la Commission sont fondés.

Sur le grief tiré du défaut de transposition de l'article 23, paragraphe 2, de la directive 2004/18

– Arguments des parties

98 Le Royaume de Belgique renvoie, pour la transposition de l'article 23, paragraphe 2, de la directive 2004/18, aux articles 23 et 25 de l'arrêté royal du 23 novembre 2007.

99 La Commission considère que ces dispositions nationales ont été adoptées tardivement.

– Appréciation de la Cour

100 Il convient de rappeler que l'existence d'un manquement doit être appréciée en fonction de la situation de l'État membre telle qu'elle se présentait au terme du délai fixé dans l'avis motivé (voir, notamment, arrêts du 6 décembre 2007, Commission/Allemagne, C–258/05, Rec. p. I–10517, point 15, et du 24 juin 2008, Commission/Luxembourg, précité, point 15).

101 Or, en l'espèce, il est constant que l'arrêté royal du 23 novembre 2007 auquel se réfère le Royaume de Belgique a été adopté après l'expiration du délai fixé dans l'avis motivé.

102 Dans ces conditions, ce grief de la Commission est fondé.

Sur les griefs tirés d'une transposition défaillante de l'article 30, paragraphes 2 et 3, de la directive 2004/18

– Arguments des parties

103 Dans le cadre de ces griefs, la Commission fait valoir que la transposition en droit national de l'article 30, paragraphes 2 et 3, de la directive 2004/18, qui n'aurait pas été réalisée en droit belge, revêt une importance toute particulière, du fait que ces dispositions se rapportent à la procédure négociée de passation de marché public.

104 Pour le Royaume de Belgique, lesdites dispositions ne constituent toutefois que le rappel général de la notion de procédure négociée et du principe d'égalité de traitement, et ne nécessitent par conséquent pas de mesures de transposition spécifiques.

105 Il convient de rappeler que la directive 2004/18 prévoit quatre procédures principales pour la passation de marchés publics. L'une d'entre elles est la procédure négociée, dont les modalités sont précisées aux articles 30 et 31 de cette directive.

106 Cette procédure, à laquelle il ne peut être recouru que dans des circonstances limitativement mentionnées par ladite directive, revêt, par rapport aux procédures ouverte et restreinte, un caractère exceptionnel (voir par analogie, s'agissant des directives 93/36 et 93/37, arrêt du 13 janvier 2005, Commission/Espagne, C–84/03, Rec. p. I–139, point 47). En effet, elle reconnaît aux pouvoirs adjudicateurs une marge d'appréciation plus grande que dans le cadre de ces deux dernières procédures.

107 Dans ce contexte, ainsi que l'a souligné la Commission, l'article 30, paragraphe 2, de la directive 2004/18 a pour effet de restreindre cette marge de manœuvre en énonçant que la négociation, qui est l'élément déterminant de la procédure de passation de marché public concernée, vise exclusivement à adapter les offres soumises aux exigences prévues dans l'avis de marché, dans le cahier des charges et dans les documents complémentaires éventuels, dans le but de rechercher la meilleure offre. Dès lors, cette disposition identifie l'objet ainsi que le but de la négociation dans le cadre de la procédure négociée.

108 En outre, l'article 30, paragraphe 3, de la directive 2004/18 impose aux pouvoirs adjudicateurs d'assurer l'égalité de traitement de tous les soumissionnaires durant la phase de négociation.

109 À ce titre, il est de jurisprudence constante que le respect du principe d'égalité de traitement s'impose aux pouvoirs adjudicateurs dans toute procédure de passation de marché public. Un tel devoir correspond à l'essence même de la directive 2004/18 (voir par analogie, s'agissant de la directive 93/37, arrêt du 16 décembre 2008, Michaniki, C–213/07, non encore publié au Recueil, points 44 et 45).

110 Dès lors, eu égard aux spécificités de la procédure négociée et à l'importance du principe d'égalité de traitement dans le domaine des procédures de passation de marché public, le Royaume de Belgique ne saurait alléguer utilement que les dispositions de l'article 30, paragraphes 2 et 3, de la directive 2004/18 sont superfétatoires, de sorte qu'elles ne nécessiteraient pas de mesure de transposition spécifique. En effet, la définition des limites et de l'objectif de la négociation ainsi que l'obligation faite aux pouvoirs adjudicateurs d'assurer le respect du principe d'égalité de traitement des soumissionnaires revêtent une importance toute particulière dans le cadre de la procédure négociée qui justifie une transposition spécifique de ces éléments en droit national.

111 Tel est, au demeurant, l'objet de l'article 26, § 3, de la loi du 15 juin 2006, qui n'est cependant pas entré en vigueur, qui reprend littéralement le texte de l'article 30, paragraphe 3, de la directive 2004/18.

112 Dans ces conditions, ces griefs de la Commission sont fondés.

Sur le grief tiré d'une transposition défaillante de l'article 30, paragraphe 4, de la directive 2004/18

– Arguments des parties

113 La Commission reproche au Royaume de Belgique de ne pas avoir transposé les conditions visées à l'article 30, paragraphe 4, de la directive 2004/18, à savoir, d'une part, l'obligation de mentionner dans l'avis de marché ou le cahier des charges la faculté de procéder en phases successives et, d'autre part, la réduction du nombre d'offres au cours de ces phases par application des critères d'attribution indiqués dans l'un ou l'autre de ces documents.

114 Le Royaume de Belgique considère que le modèle type d'avis de marché contenu à l'annexe 2, B, de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996, et plus particulièrement la rubrique IV.1.3 de ce modèle, répond au premier des reproches de la Commission. Pour le surplus, cet État membre soutient que les conditions rappelées à l'article 30, paragraphe 4, de la directive 2004/18 sont inhérentes à la notion de marché négocié en droit belge, ainsi qu'en attesterait l'article 122 bis du même arrêté royal.

115 Il convient de constater, premièrement, que le modèle type d'avis de marché figurant à l'annexe 2, B, de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996 contient, dans la rubrique IV.1.3, un espace dans lequel le pouvoir adjudicateur doit mentionner si la procédure négociée se déroulera en phases successives durant lesquelles le nombre des offres à négocier sera progressivement réduit. Partant, il y a lieu de rejeter le présent grief en tant qu'il se rapporte à cet aspect de l'article 30, paragraphe 4, de la directive 2004/18.

116 Deuxièmement, s'agissant de l'obligation prévue par cette disposition à l'égard du pouvoir adjudicateur quant à l'application des critères d'attribution indiqués dans l'avis de marché ou le cahier des charges en cas de réduction du nombre d'offres au cours des phases successives, force est de constater qu'aucune des dispositions invoquées par le Royaume de Belgique n'impose une telle obligation. Pourtant, eu égard aux spécificités de la procédure négociée en phases successives, qui amène un pouvoir adjudicateur à procéder en plusieurs étapes à la sélection des offres, il est fondamental de rappeler à chaque étape les critères d'attribution qui lient ledit pouvoir.

117 Dans cette mesure, ce grief de la Commission est fondé.

Sur le grief tiré d'une transposition défaillante de l'article 31, paragraphe 1, sous c), de la directive 2004/18

– Arguments des parties

118 La Commission considère que l'article 31, paragraphe 1, sous c), de la directive 2004/18 n'a fait l'objet d'aucune transposition en droit belge.

119 Le Royaume de Belgique invoque pour sa part six arrêts du Conseil d'État (Belgique) qui consacreraient, en ce qui concerne le recours à la procédure négociée, la condition visée par cette disposition et ôteraient dès lors toute nécessité de transposition au travers d'un texte national spécifique.

– Appréciation de la Cour

120 Selon une jurisprudence constante, s'il est vrai que la transposition d'une directive n'exige pas nécessairement une action législative de chaque État membre, il est toutefois indispensable que le droit national en cause garantisse effectivement la pleine application de la directive concernée, que la situation juridique découlant de ce droit soit suffisamment précise et claire, et que les bénéficiaires soient mis en mesure de connaître la plénitude de leurs droits et obligations, et, le cas échéant, de s'en prévaloir devant les juridictions nationales (arrêt du 9 septembre 2004, Commission/Espagne, C–70/03, Rec. p. I–7999, point 15 et jurisprudence citée).

121 En l'espèce, il y a lieu de préciser, à titre liminaire, que, des six arrêts du Conseil d'État invoqués par l'État membre défendeur, un seul reprend expressément la condition visée à l'article 31, paragraphe 1, sous c), de la directive 2004/18.

122 En outre, ainsi que la Cour l'a déjà jugé, une jurisprudence, à la supposer établie, interprétant des dispositions de droit interne dans un sens estimé conforme aux exigences d'une directive ne saurait présenter la clarté et la précision requises pour satisfaire à l'exigence de sécurité juridique (voir arrêt du 10 mai 2001, Commission/Pays-Bas, C–144/99, Rec. p. I–3541, point 21).

123 Il convient d'ailleurs de relever que le législateur belge a estimé nécessaire de transposer littéralement l'article 31, paragraphe 1, sous c), de la directive 2004/18 à l'article 26, § 1, sous c), de la loi du 15 juin 2006, qui n'est cependant pas entré en vigueur.

124 Dans ces conditions, ce grief de la Commission est fondé.

Sur le grief tiré du défaut de transposition de l'article 38, paragraphe 1, de la directive 2004/18

– Arguments des parties

125 Selon la Commission, la législation belge ne contient pas de disposition conforme à l'article 38, paragraphe 1, de la directive 2004/18, permettant une prolongation des délais de réception des demandes de participation et des offres en raison de la complexité du marché envisagé.

126 Le Royaume de Belgique invoque les articles 7, premier alinéa, 33, premier alinéa, et 59, premier alinéa, de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996 pour affirmer la transposition dudit article 38, paragraphe 1.

– Appréciation de la Cour

127 L'article 38, paragraphe 1, de la directive 2004/18 prévoit l'obligation pour les pouvoirs adjudicateurs de tenir compte, d'une manière générale, pour la fixation des délais concernés, de la complexité du marché et du temps nécessaire pour préparer les offres. À cet égard, cette disposition a remplacé l'article 18, paragraphe 5, de la directive 92/50, qui instaurait une prolongation des délais eu égard à l'importance de la documentation liée à un marché, à la nécessité d'une visite des lieux ou à la consultation sur place de documents annexés au cahier des charges.

128 Or, les dispositions nationales invoquées par le Royaume de Belgique reprennent la disposition de la directive 92/50, sans intégrer la portée générale qu'a introduite le législateur communautaire à l'article 38, paragraphe 1, de la directive 2004/18. En effet, lesdites dispositions nationales prévoient seulement trois cas spécifiques de prolongation des délais de réception, dont ne fait pas partie l'hypothèse de la complexité du marché.

129 Dans ces conditions, ce grief de la Commission est fondé.

Sur le grief tiré du défaut de transposition de l'article 43, premier alinéa, sous d), de la directive 2004/18

– Arguments des parties

130 La Commission soutient que la législation belge ne comporte pas un élément fondamental parmi ceux devant apparaître dans les procès-verbaux visés à l'article 43 de la directive 2004/18, à savoir les motifs du rejet des offres jugées anormalement basses, mentionnés au premier alinéa, sous d), de cet article.

131 S'appuyant sur les articles 9, 35 et 61 de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996, le Royaume de Belgique considère que cette disposition a été transposée en droit national.

– Appréciation de la Cour

132 Force est de constater qu'aucune des dispositions invoquées par le Royaume de Belgique ne permet de considérer qu'un pouvoir adjudicateur rejetant une offre anormalement basse est contraint de mentionner dans le procès-verbal le motif pour lequel cette offre a été jugée telle.

133 En effet, lesdites dispositions indiquent que le caractère anormalement bas d'une offre est susceptible de constituer en lui-même une motivation suffisante pour rejeter celle-ci.

134 Or, l'article 43, premier alinéa, sous d), de la directive 2004/18 requiert une motivation plus détaillée d'une telle décision de rejet. Ce faisant, le législateur communautaire a entendu limiter le pouvoir d'appréciation des pouvoirs adjudicateurs en ce qui concerne de telles décisions eu égard à l'objectif de transparence que cette directive vise à atteindre, ainsi qu'il ressort de son deuxième considérant.

135 Dans ces conditions, ce grief de la Commission est fondé.

Sur le grief tiré du défaut de transposition de l'article 44, paragraphe 2, deuxième alinéa, de la directive 2004/18

– Arguments des parties

136 La Commission considère qu'aucune disposition de droit belge ne prévoit que l'étendue des informations demandées en ce qui concerne les capacités économiques, financières, techniques et professionnelles ainsi que les niveaux de capacité exigés pour un marché déterminé soient liés et proportionnés à l'objet de celui-ci, conformément à l'article 44, paragraphe 2, deuxième alinéa, de la directive 2004/18.

137 Le Royaume de Belgique fait valoir que cette disposition est transposée par les articles 18, 19, 44, 45, 70 et 71 de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996 ainsi que par l'annexe 2, B, de cet arrêté royal, eu égard en particulier aux rubriques III.2.2 et III.2.3 du modèle type d'avis de marché constituant cette annexe.

– Appréciation de la Cour

138 Il convient de noter que les dispositions de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996 invoquées par le Royaume de Belgique concernent les modalités de justification des capacités financière et économique des soumissionnaires. Les rubriques du modèle type d'avis de marché constituant l'annexe 2, B, de cet arrêté royal, mentionnées par cet État membre, renvoient, quant à elle, aux modes d'appréciation des capacités économique, financière et technique.

139 Dès lors, force est de constater que, en droit belge, rien n'oblige un pouvoir adjudicateur à mettre l'étendue et la pertinence des informations demandées en rapport avec l'objet du marché.

140 Or, cette exigence, telle que prévue à l'article 44, paragraphe 2, de la directive 2004/18, revêt une importance toute particulière, puisque, au travers des informations à fournir, c'est la faculté même de participer à une procédure de passation qui est appréciée.

141 Dans ces conditions, ce grief de la Commission est fondé.

Sur les griefs tirés d'une transposition défaillante de l'article 44, paragraphes 3 et 4, de la directive 2004/18

– Arguments des parties

142 La Commission fait valoir que l'article 44, paragraphes 3 et 4, de la directive 2004/18 n'a pas été transposé de façon satisfaisante par le Royaume de Belgique. D'une part, la législation belge n'imposerait aux pouvoirs adjudicateurs ni d'indiquer dans les avis de marché les critères objectifs et non discriminatoires qu'ils envisagent d'utiliser pour réduire le nombre de candidats ni de ne réduire le nombre d'offres que sur le fondement de ces critères. D'autre part, aucune disposition de cette législation ne prévoirait que le nombre réduit d'offres retenues doit permettre d'assurer une concurrence réelle.

143 Le Royaume de Belgique invoque les articles 16, 18, 19, 42, 44, 45, 68, 70 et 71 de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996 ainsi que certaines rubriques du modèle type d'avis de marché constituant l'annexe 2, B, de cet arrêté royal.

– Appréciation de la Cour

144 Parmi les dispositions invoquées par le Royaume de Belgique au titre de la transposition de l'article 44, paragraphes 3 et 4, de la directive 2004/18, l'annexe 2, B, de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996, et plus particulièrement la rubrique IV.1.2 du modèle type d'avis de marché constituant cette annexe, conduit le pouvoir adjudicateur à indiquer les critères objectifs de sélection des candidats qu'il doit appliquer.

145 Toutefois, lesdites dispositions ne contiennent aucune restriction de la marge de manœuvre des pouvoirs adjudicateurs liée à l'impératif que le nombre de candidats finalement retenu permette d'assurer une concurrence réelle. Or, ainsi qu'il ressort des deuxième et quarante-sixième considérants de la directive 2004/18, la garantie de conditions de concurrence effective en matière de marchés publics est un objectif fondamental de cette directive. Le rappel de cette exigence est d'autant plus nécessaire que la phase préalable de sélection des offres ne saurait conduire à ce que le nombre de candidats finalement retenus soit si réduit qu'aucune concurrence effective ne soit possible.

146 Dans cette mesure, ces griefs de la Commission sont fondés.

Sur le grief tiré d'un défaut de transposition de l'article 46, premier alinéa, de la directive 2004/18

– Arguments des parties

147 Selon la Commission, la législation belge ne prévoit pas, contrairement à l'article 46, premier alinéa, de la directive 2004/18, qu'un entrepreneur puisse justifier de son habilitation à exercer l'activité professionnelle concernée par la présentation d'une déclaration sous serment ou d'un certificat conformes aux précisions contenues dans les annexes IX A à IX C de cette directive, lesquelles ne seraient, en outre, pas transposées dans cette législation.

148 Le Royaume de Belgique considère que ledit article 46, premier alinéa, est transposé par les articles 20, § 2, 46, § 2, et 72, § 2, de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996. S'agissant desdites annexes IX A à IX C, celles-ci ne nécessiteraient pas d'être transposées, dans la mesure où elles ne seraient ni complètes ni actualisées.

149 Il convient de relever que, d'une part, s'agissant des moyens permettant à un opérateur économique de justifier de son habilitation à exercer l'activité professionnelle concernée, les dispositions nationales invoquées par le Royaume de Belgique sont plus restrictives que l'article 46, premier alinéa, de la directive 2004/18, puisqu'elles ne permettent pas qu'une telle justification soit fournie au moyen d'une déclaration sous serment ou d'un certificat.

150 Or, les dispositions communautaires en matière de procédures de passation de marchés publics visent à ouvrir les marchés auxquels elles s'appliquent à la concurrence communautaire, en favorisant la manifestation d'intérêt la plus large possible parmi les opérateurs économiques (voir, en ce sens, s'agissant de la directive 93/38, arrêt du 5 octobre 2000, Commission/France, C–16/98, Rec. p. I–8315, point 108), de sorte qu'un opérateur économique ne saurait être dissuadé de participer à une telle procédure en raison du caractère limité des moyens à sa disposition pour justifier de son habilitation.

151 D'autre part, s'agissant des annexes IX A à IX C de la directive 2004/18, auxquelles se réfère son article 46, le Royaume de Belgique ne saurait exciper de ce que, à la date d'expiration du délai fixé dans l'avis motivé, celles-ci ne concernaient que quinze États membres pour justifier une absence de transposition de ces annexes en droit belge. En effet, le caractère contraignant des dispositions desdites annexes est indépendant du fait que le législateur communautaire n'a pas donné d'indications en ce qui concerne les autres États membres.

152 Dans ces conditions, ce grief de la Commission est fondé.

Sur le grief tiré d'un défaut de transposition de l'article 48, paragraphe 2, sous f), de la directive 2004/18

– Arguments des parties

153 Le Royaume de Belgique renvoie, pour la transposition de l'article 48, paragraphe 2, sous f), de la directive 2004/18, aux articles 12 et 16 de l'arrêté royal du 23 novembre 2007.

154 La Commission considère que ces dispositions nationales ont été adoptées tardivement.

– Appréciation de la Cour

155 Il y a lieu de rappeler que, selon la jurisprudence exposée au point 100du présent arrêt, l'existence d'un manquement doit être appréciée en fonction de la situation de l'État membre telle qu'elle se présentait au terme du délai fixé dans l'avis motivé.

156 Dès lors qu'il est constant que l'arrêté royal du 23 novembre 2007 a été adopté après l'expiration de ce délai, ce grief de la Commission est fondé.

Sur le grief tiré d'un défaut de transposition de l'article 55, paragraphe 1, second alinéa, sous d), de la directive 2004/18

– Arguments des parties

157 Selon la Commission, la législation belge ne mentionne pas une des catégories de précisions sur la composition de l'offre que l'article 55, paragraphe 1, second alinéa, prévoit que le pouvoir adjudicateur peut demander au soumissionnaire ayant présenté une offre apparaissant anormalement basse, à savoir celle relative au respect des dispositions concernant la protection du travail et les conditions de travail en vigueur au lieu où la prestation est à réaliser, figurant au point d) de cette disposition.

158 Le Royaume de Belgique considère que l'article 55, paragraphe 1, second alinéa, de la directive 2004/18 consiste dans une liste exemplative qui ne nécessite pas de mesure de transposition.

– Appréciation de la Cour

159 Il convient d'observer que, premièrement, si la liste contenue à l'article 55, paragraphe 1, second alinéa, de la directive 2004/18 n'est pas exhaustive, elle n'est toutefois pas purement indicative, et ne laisse donc pas les pouvoirs adjudicateurs libres de déterminer quels sont les éléments pertinents à prendre en considération avant d'écarter une offre apparaissant anormalement basse.

160 Deuxièmement, l'article 110, § 3, troisième alinéa, de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996 transpose seulement les cas de figures visés aux points a) à c) de l'article 55, paragraphe 1, second alinéa, de la directive 2004/18. Ce faisant, il a été adopté afin d'assurer la transposition de l'article 37, deuxième alinéa, de la directive 92/50, dont le contenu a précisément été complété par l'article 55, paragraphe 1, second alinéa, sous d), de la directive 2004/18.

161 Le législateur communautaire ayant estimé utile de mentionner dans cette dernière disposition une précision supplémentaire et, ainsi, de limiter davantage la marge de manœuvre des pouvoirs adjudicateurs en ce qui concerne le rejet d'une offre anormalement basse, le législateur national a l'obligation d'assurer une transposition de ce point.

162 Or, la législation nationale invoquée par le Royaume de Belgique n'assure pas cette transposition.

163 Dans ces conditions, ce grief de la Commission est fondé.

Sur les griefs tirés du défaut de transposition de l'article 55, paragraphes 1, second alinéa, sous e), et 3, de la directive 2004/18

– Arguments des parties

164 Par ces griefs, qu'il convient d'examiner conjointement, la Commission fait valoir que la législation belge ne contenait, à l'expiration du délai prescrit dans l'avis motivé, aucune disposition opérant la transposition de l'article 55, paragraphes 1, second alinéa, sous e), et 3, de la directive 2004/18.

165 Le Royaume de Belgique invoque à cet égard l'article 26 de l'arrêté royal du 23 novembre 2007.

– Appréciation de la Cour

166 Ainsi qu'il a été rappelé aux points 100 et 155 du présent arrêt, l'existence d'un manquement doit être appréciée en fonction de la situation de l'État membre telle qu'elle se présentait au terme du délai fixé dans l'avis motivé.

167 Or, il est constant que l'arrêté royal du 23 novembre 2007 a été adopté après l'expiration dudit délai.

168 Dans ces conditions, ces griefs de la Commission sont fondés.

Sur les griefs tirés d'un défaut de transposition de l'article 67, paragraphe 2, deuxième et troisième alinéas, de la directive 2004/18

– Arguments des parties

169 Par ces griefs, la Commission soutient que l'article 67, paragraphe 2, deuxième et troisième alinéas, de la directive 2004/18 n'est pas transposé en droit belge. En effet, d'une part, la législation belge ne prévoirait pas que, pour fixer le seuil à prendre en considération en cas de concours organisé dans le cadre d'une procédure de passation d'un marché public de services, la valeur estimée de ce marché doit inclure les éventuelles primes de participation et/ou paiements aux participants. D'autre part, cette législation n'envisagerait pas non plus que, pour fixer le seuil à prendre en considération en cas de concours avec primes de participation et/ou paiements aux participants, il y a lieu d'ajouter au montant total de ces primes et paiements la valeur du marché public de services qui pourrait être passé ultérieurement.

170 Le Royaume de Belgique considère que les dispositions de la directive 2004/18 visées par le présent grief ont été transposées en droit national par l'article 76, § 2, de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996 ainsi que par l'annexe 3, A, du même arrêté royal.

171 Il convient de constater, d'une part, que, alors que l'article 67, paragraphe 2, de la directive 2004/18 vise à définir le champ d'application des règles relatives aux concours dans le domaine des services, l'article 76, § 2, de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996 détermine les cas dans lesquels un avis de concours doit être publié au Journal officiel des Communautés européennes. Partant, cette disposition nationale, n'ayant pas le même objet que ledit article 67, paragraphe 2, ne saurait valoir transposition adéquate de ce dernier.

172 D'autre part, le modèle type d'avis constituant l'annexe 3, A, de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996 comporte certes une rubrique IV.5.3 qui permet au pouvoir adjudicateur d'indiquer si le soumissionnaire retenu se verra attribuer un contrat de services à la suite du concours principal. Il ne résulte toutefois pas de cette annexe que la valeur estimée de ce contrat doit être prise en compte pour déterminer le seuil du marché public concerné.

173 Dans ces conditions, ces griefs de la Commission sont fondés.

Sur le grief tiré d'un défaut de transposition de l'article 68, sous a), premier alinéa, de la directive 2004/18

– Arguments des parties

174 La Commission souligne la nécessité de prévoir, conformément à l'article 68, sous a), premier alinéa, de la directive 2004/18, que sont exclus du champ d'application de cette directive les concours de services au sens de la directive 2004/17. En effet, en l'absence d'une telle règle, un même marché public serait susceptible d'être soumis cumulativement aux règles de ces deux directives. Or, la législation belge ne comporterait aucune disposition ayant cette portée.

175 Le Royaume de Belgique considère que la transposition dudit article 68, sous a), premier alinéa, n'est pas nécessaire, tout risque d'application cumulative des directives susmentionnées étant écarté par la structure de la législation belge, telle qu'articulée par la loi du 24 décembre 1993, organisée en deux livres.

176 Le Royaume de Belgique se contente de renvoyer à la structure de la législation nationale pour alléguer l'absence de nécessité de transposer spécifiquement l'article 68 de la directive 2004/18.

177 Force est toutefois de constater qu'il n'a pas démontré concrètement en quoi la structure de la législation belge permettrait d'éviter tout risque de confusion dans l'application des règles issues des directives 2004/17 et 2004/18. Or, ces dernières comportant des régimes juridiques sensiblement différents, il est indispensable d'assurer une transposition spécifique de la disposition écartant tout risque d'application cumulative desdites directives.

178 Dans ces conditions, ce grief de la Commission est fondé.

Sur les griefs tirés d'un défaut de transposition de l'article 72 de la directive 2004/18

– Arguments des parties

179 Selon la Commission, aucune des dispositions de l'article 72 de la directive 2004/18 n'a été transposée par le Royaume de Belgique. En effet, la législation belge ne comporterait pas de règle en ce qui concerne les critères de sélection des participants à un concours. À tout le moins, cette législation n'édicterait pas que ces critères doivent être clairs et non discriminatoires. En outre, dans les conditions spécifiques relatives à la sélection des concurrents dans le cadre d'un concours dans le domaine des marchés publics de services, ladite législation n'obligerait pas les pouvoirs adjudicateurs à assurer que, au travers du nombre de candidats invités à participer à un tel concours, une concurrence réelle soit garantie.

180 Pour le Royaume de Belgique, les dispositions visées par ces griefs n'évoquent qu'un principe fondamental rappelé aux articles 1er et 20 de la loi du 24 décembre 1993 et ne nécessitent pas de mesure de transposition spécifique. Au demeurant, la rubrique IV.5.4 du modèle type constituant l'annexe 3, A, de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996 exige du pouvoir adjudicateur qu'il indique le nombre envisagé de participants retenus ou leurs nombres minimal et maximal.

181 Au travers de l'article 72, première phrase, de la directive 2004/18, le législateur communautaire a entendu, dans le cadre spécifique des concours dans le domaine des marchés publics de services et lorsque le nombre des participants est limité, rappeler l'obligation, pour les pouvoirs adjudicateurs, d'établir, pour la sélection des participants, des critères clairs et non discriminatoires.

182 Partant, s'il est vrai que, dans le cadre des concours, cette obligation s'impose généralement, ledit article 72, première phrase, concerne une situation bien définie pour laquelle il est important de rappeler les conditions auxquelles doivent satisfaire les critères de sélection.

183 Dans ce contexte, l'article 72, seconde phrase, de la directive 2004/18 souligne le caractère déterminant du nombre de candidats invités à participer au concours. En effet, une telle disposition vise à éviter que la phase préalable de sélection des candidats ne se confonde in fine avec la phase finale d'attribution du marché et que toute concurrence réelle lors de cette dernière phase disparaisse.

184 À cet égard, l'obligation faite aux pouvoirs adjudicateurs d'indiquer, le cas échéant, le nombre envisagé de participants retenus ou leurs nombres minimal et maximal, telle qu'elle découle de la rubrique IV.5.4 du modèle type constituant l'annexe 3, A, de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996, ne saurait valoir transposition adéquate de la restriction de la marge de manœuvre desdits pouvoirs à laquelle procède l'article 72, seconde phrase, de la directive 2004/18. Une telle indication n'assure en effet nullement que le nombre de candidats invités soit suffisamment élevé pour assurer une concurrence réelle.

185 Dans ces conditions, ces griefs de la Commission sont fondés.

Sur le grief tiré d'un défaut de transposition de l'article 74, paragraphe 1, de la directive 2004/18

– Arguments des parties

186 Selon la Commission, la législation belge ne prévoit pas que le jury dispose, conformément à l'article 74, paragraphe 1, de la directive 2004/18, d'une autonomie de décision ou d'avis.

187 Le Royaume de Belgique considère que la rubrique IV.5.4 du modèle type d'avis constituant l'annexe 3, A, de l'arrêté royal du 8 janvier 1996 constitue la transposition dudit article 74, paragraphe 1.

– Appréciation de la Cour

188 Force est de constater que la législation invoquée par le Royaume de Belgique en tant que transposition de l'article 74, paragraphe 1, de la directive 2004/18 se rapporte à la qualité des membres du jury et se limite à prévoir que le pouvoir adjudicateur doit mentionner si la décision du jury est contraignante ou non.

189 Dès lors, ladite législation ne garantit pas l'autonomie de décision ou d'avis du jury. Or, en l'absence d'une telle garantie, c'est la raison même de l'intervention du jury qui est susceptible d'être remise en cause.

190 Dans ces conditions, ce grief de la Commission est fondé.

191 Au vu de l'ensemble des considérations qui précèdent, il convient de constater que, en n'ayant pas pris les dispositions législatives, réglementaires et administratives nécessaires pour transposer, ou pour transposer de façon complète et/ou correcte, l'article 1er, paragraphe 2, sous b), lu en combinaison avec l'annexe I, ainsi que l'article 9, paragraphes 1, seconde phrase, et 8, sous a), i) et iii), l'article 23, paragraphe 2, l'article 30, paragraphes 2 à 4, l'article 31, paragraphe 1, sous c), l'article 38, paragraphe 1, l'article 43, premier alinéa, sous d), l'article 44, paragraphes 2, deuxième alinéa, 3 et 4, l'article 46, premier alinéa, l'article 48, paragraphe 2, sous f), l'article 55, paragraphe 1, second alinéa, sous d) et e), et 3, l'article 67, paragraphe 2, deuxième et troisième alinéas, l'article 68, sous a), premier alinéa, l'article 72 et l'article 74, paragraphe 1, de la directive 2004/18, le Royaume de Belgique a manqué aux obligations qui lui incombent en vertu de celle-ci.

192 Il y a lieu de rejeter le recours pour le surplus.

Sur les dépens

193 Aux termes de l'article 69, paragraphe 2, du règlement de procédure, toute partie qui succombe est condamnée aux dépens, s'il est conclu en ce sens. La Commission ayant conclu à la condamnation du Royaume de Belgique et celui-ci ayant succombé en l'essentiel de ses moyens, il y a lieu de le condamner aux dépens.

Par ces motifs, la Cour (première chambre) déclare et arrête:

1) En n'ayant pas pris les dispositions législatives, réglementaires et administratives nécessaires pour transposer, ou pour transposer de façon complète et/ou correcte, l'article 1er, paragraphe 2, sous b), lu en combinaison avec l'annexe I, ainsi que l'article 9, paragraphes 1, seconde phrase, et 8, sous a), i) et iii), l'article 23, paragraphe 2, l'article 30, paragraphes 2 à 4, l'article 31, paragraphe 1, sous c), l'article 38, paragraphe 1, l'article 43, premier alinéa, sous d), l'article 44, paragraphes 2, deuxième alinéa, 3 et 4, l'article 46, premier alinéa, l'article 48, paragraphe 2, sous f), l'article 55, paragraphes 1, second alinéa, sous d) et e), et 3, l'article 67, paragraphe 2, deuxième et troisième alinéas, l'article 68, sous a), premier alinéa, l'article 72 et l'article 74, paragraphe 1, de la directive 2004/18/CE du Parlement européen et du Conseil, du 31 mars 2004, relative à la coordination des procédures de passation des marchés publics de travaux, de fournitures et de services, telle que modifiée par le règlement (CE) n° 2083/2005 de la Commission, du 19 décembre 2005, le Royaume de Belgique a manqué aux obligations qui lui incombent en vertu de celle-ci.

2) Le recours est rejeté pour le surplus.

3) Le Royaume de Belgique est condamné aux dépens.

having regard to the written procedure and further to the hearing on 14 October 2008, after hearing the Opinion of the Advocate General at the sitting on 17 December 2008

gives the following

Judgment

1 By its application, the Commission of the European Communities claims that the Court should declare that, by not publishing a prior call for competition and by being unjustifiably late in replying to a tenderer's request for information concerning the reasons for the rejection of its tender, the Hellenic Republic has failed to fulfil (i) its obligation under Article 20(2) of Council Directive 93/38/EEC of 14 June 1993 coordinating the procurement procedures of entities operating in the water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors (OJ 1993 L 199, p. 84), as amended by Commission Directive 2001/78/EC of 13 September 2001 (OJ 2001 L 285, p. 1; 'Directive 93/38') to issue a call for competition before launching the procedure for the submission of tenders and (ii) its obligation under Article 41(4) of that directive.

Legal context

2 Article 2 of Directive 93/38 provides:

> ‘1. This Directive shall apply to contracting entities which:
>
> (a) are public authorities or public undertakings and exercise one of the activities referred to in paragraph 2;
>
> (b) when they are not public authorities or public undertakings, have as one of their activities any of those referred to in paragraph 2 or any combination thereof and operate on the basis of special or exclusive rights granted by a competent authority of a Member State.
>
> 2. Relevant activities for the purposes of this Directive shall be:
>
> (a) the provision or operation of fixed networks intended to provide a service to the public in connection with the production, transport or distribution of:
>
> ...
>
> (ii) electricity;
>
> ...’

3 Under Article 20 of Directive 93/38:

> ‘1. Contracting entities may choose any of the procedures described in Article 1(7), provided that, subject to paragraph 2, a call for competition has been made in accordance with Article 21.
>
> 2. Contracting entities may use a procedure without prior call for competition in the following cases:
>
> (a) in the absence of tenders or suitable tenders in response to a procedure with a prior call for competition, provided that the original contract conditions have not been substantially changed;
>
> ...
>
> (d) in so far as is strictly necessary when, for reasons of extreme urgency brought about by events unforeseeable by the contracting entities, the time-limits laid down for open and restricted procedures cannot be adhered to;
>

4 Article 41(4) of Directive 93/38 provides:

> ‘The contracting entities ... shall, promptly after the date on which a written request is received, inform any eliminated candidate or tenderer of the reasons for rejection of his application or his tender and any tenderer who has made an admissible tender of the characteristics and relative advantages of the tender selected as well as the name of the successful tenderer.

Background to the dispute and the pre-litigation procedure

5 On 2 July 2003, Dimosia Epikhirisi Ilektrismou AE (DEI) (the public power corporation) published a call for tenders for the study, supply, transport, installation and bringing into operation of two similar thermoelectrical units and their auxiliary equipment for the thermoelectric station at Atherinolakkos on the island of Crete (Greece).

6 That first call for tenders was withdrawn after the DEI board of directors found that the tenders received did not satisfy certain criteria, whereupon DEI published a new call for tenders on 26 May 2004, which differed from the first in certain respects. The tenders of the five companies and groups of undertakings which participated in that second tendering procedure were all rejected by the assessment committee as ‘unsuitable’, because they did not comply with various minimum or maximum values corresponding to certain technical parameters required under the contract.

7 By letter of 14 December 2004 ('the letter of 14 December'), the five tenderers who had participated in the second tendering procedure were informed of the withdrawal of that procedure and were called on to submit a 'final financial offer' within 15 days of the receipt of that letter.

8 In the letter of 14 December, DEI explained its decision to use a new procedure by reference to the 'overall history of the case and to:

– the time when the units would be installed, – the requirement to cover in a timely manner the growing and urgent, since 2007, needs of the island of Crete in electricity,

– the time necessary to install the two new units, namely 29 and 31 months respectively, – the unforeseen delay in awarding the contract, which was due to the unsatisfactory outcome of the earlier calls for competition'.

9 For that new procedure, the five tenderers concerned were requested to correct the technical discrepancies which had led to the rejection of the tenders in the second procedure. In the case of the other discrepancies pointed out by DEI, the tenderers were to indicate the cost of the corrections needed. It is apparent from the observations of the parties that all those tenderers participated in the new procedure.

10 By letter of 7 February 2005, DEI informed one of the tenderers that its tender had been rejected. That letter did not, however, give any indication of the reasons for that rejection.

11 It emerges from the parties' observations that, after making a number of requests to that end, the tenderer in question received a document on 4 April 2005 informing it in detail of the reasons for that rejection. The action brought by the tenderer against that document was dismissed by judgment of 7 July 2005, whereupon DEI concluded the contract with another on 15 September 2005.

12 On 12 October 2005, the Commission – having formed the view, following a complaint from that tenderer, that the Community public procurement rules had been infringed – sent a letter of formal notice to the Hellenic Republic, which replied by letter of 22 December 2005.

13 Not satisfied with that reply, the Commission sent a reasoned opinion to the Hellenic Republic on 4 July 2006 requesting it to comply with the opinion within two months of its notification.

14 On the view that the Hellenic Republic's reply to that reasoned opinion was unsatisfactory, the Commission decided to bring the present action.

The action

15 In support of its action, the Commission puts forward two pleas in law alleging, respectively, infringement of Article 20(2)(a) and (d) of Directive 93/38 and infringement of Article 41(4) of that directive.

The first plea in law

Arguments of the parties

16 By its first plea, the Commission alleges that the Hellenic Republic has failed to fulfil its obligations under Article 20(2)(a) and (d) of Directive 93/38.

17 According to the Commission, the provisions laid down in Article 20(2) of Directive 93/38 constitute, as is clear from Joined Cases C–462/03 and C–463/03 Strabag and Kostmann [2005] ECR I–5397, derogations which must, in accordance with settled case-law, be interpreted strictly. Furthermore, it follows from the case-law that the burden of proof as to the existence of exceptional circumstances warranting recourse to such a derogation lies with the party seeking to rely on it (see, inter alia, Case C–394/02 Commission v Greece [2005] ECR I–4713, paragraph 33).

18 As regards, first, Article 20(2)(a) of Directive 93/38, the Commission observes that two of the conditions for the application of that provision – namely, that no tender must have been submitted or that the tenders submitted must have been unsuitable, and that the original contract conditions must not have been substantially changed – are not satisfied in the present case.

19 First, the contracting entity incorrectly categorised the tenders as 'unsuitable' whereas they were merely 'irregular'. The Commission submits that the interpretation of the term 'unsuitable' argued for by the Hellenic Republic is much too broad and frustrates the full effectiveness of Article 20(2)(a) of Directive 93/38. If the wording of that provision is compared with that of similar provisions in other directives on public procurement, such as Council Directive 93/37/EEC of 14 June 1993 concerning the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts (OJ 1993 L 199, p. 54), it becomes clear that the term 'unsuitable' has the same meaning in all those directives. Only a tender which is entirely different in substantive terms from that described in the call for tenders should be categorised as 'unsuitable'. According to the Commission, there is a link between the situation where no tender is submitted and the situation where an unsuitable tender is submitted inasmuch as each of those situations could replace the other as a ground for direct refusal. The two situations are equivalent not only as regards their effects, but also as regards the difficulties which they create for the contracting entity, since in both cases the needs of the project in question are not met.

20 Moreover, according to the Commission, the importance of the principle of flexibility in the interpretation of Directive 93/38 should not be overestimated. Although that principle has admittedly influenced the content of the provisions laid down in Directive 93/38, it should not be relied upon in support of an interpretation of those provisions which is contrary to the EC Treaty and to the general principles of equal treatment and transparency.

21 Secondly, during the third tendering procedure, the Commission argues, the contracting entity substantially changed the contract conditions, thereby making some tenders 'irregular'. It follows from the wording of the second call for tenders that, although commercial and financial discrepancies with the call for tenders were not allowed, technical discrepancies owing to particular features of the construction or technical characteristics of the equipment provided might, in certain circumstances, have been acceptable without their correction entailing any financial loss for the tenderer. By contrast, the letter of 14 December shows that, under the third tendering procedure, the participants were required to correct all discrepancies and to bear the cost of doing so. Furthermore, in order to ensure that that requirement was met, the participants had to sign a binding declaration relating to the correction of technical discrepancies in their tenders. That change in the contract conditions meant that the tenders submitted by some tenderers were irregular under the third procedure whereas they would have been valid under the second procedure.

22 In that connection, the Commission states that it is in no way challenging the grounds which led to the complainant's exclusion from the various tendering procedures, but is merely calling into question the lawfulness of the decision by which the contracting entity held that the tenders submitted were 'unsuitable'.

23 As regards, secondly, Article 20(2)(d) of Directive 93/38 – the provision on which, according to the Commission, the contracting entity relied in order to justify its use of a procedure for the award of a contract without a prior call for competition – the Commission states that the application of that provision is conditional upon the existence of 'reasons of extreme urgency brought about by events unforeseeable by the contracting entities'. However, in the present case, it has not been demonstrated by the contracting entity either that there were reasons of extreme urgency or that such reasons had been brought about by unforeseeable events. In that regard, the Commission states, inter alia, that the time of the integration and installation of the units was known prior to the publication of the first call for tenders; that the increase in the electricity needs of the island of Crete was not unexpected; and that the fact that two procedures were withdrawn cannot be regarded as constituting an event unforeseeable by the contracting entity.

24 The Commission adds that the explanations provided by the Hellenic Republic in the course of the infringement proceedings cannot change the statement of reasons put forward by the contracting entity in the letter of 14 December as justification for the rejection of the tenders.

25 As a preliminary point, the Hellenic Republic contends, first, that the special nature of the provisions of Directive 93/38, as compared with the general directives on public procurement contracts, stems from the sensitive nature of the 'excluded sectors' and is demonstrated through the principle of flexibility as set out in recital 45 in the preamble to Directive 93/38, which states that the rules to be applied by the entities concerned should establish a framework for sound commercial practice and should leave a maximum of flexibility. The contracting entities thus enjoy under Directive 93/38 a discretion broader than that conferred on them under the general directives. The question whether the procedure for the award of a public procurement contract was conducted in accordance with Directive 93/38 must be made in the light of that principle of flexibility.

26 Under Directive 93/38, the three procedures referred to in Article 1(7) thereof are placed, in accordance with the principle of flexibility and the broad discretion conferred on the contracting entity, at exactly the same level. Thus, Article 20(1) of Directive 93/38 leaves the contracting entities free to choose any one of those three procedures, provided that a call for competition has taken place. Since Directive 93/38 differs in this respect also from the other directives referred to by the Commission, the case-law of the Court concerning those other directives cannot be applied by analogy to Directive 93/38.

27 First, the Hellenic Republic contends that the conditions for the application of Article 20(2)(a) of Directive 93/38 are satisfied in the present case.

28 In the first place, during the second call for tenders with a call for competition, tenders were admittedly lodged, but none of those tenders was considered to be 'suitable'. Contrary to the Commission's argument, there is a significant difference between an 'unsuitable' tender and an 'inadmissible or irregular' tender: 'unsuitable' indicates whether the tender complies with the technical specifications fixed by the contracting entity and 'inadmissible or irregular' indicates failure to meet a formal condition for participation in the call for tenders. Furthermore, the interpretation by analogy suggested by the Commission cannot be accepted in view of the substantial differences between the wording of the various provisions relied upon, the Court having held, in paragraphs 90 and 91 of its judgment in Case C–513/99 Concordia Bus Finland [2002] ECR I–7213, that only provisions which fall within the same field of Community law and which have substantially the same wording may be interpreted in an identical fashion.

29 The arguments put forward by the Commission against taking the principle of flexibility into account in the interpretation of Directive 93/38 are moreover vague, irrelevant and unsubstantiated. In addition, the Court acknowledged that the contracting entities have a very broad discretion in the context of the procedures referred to in Directive 93/38, when it held in paragraph 34 of its judgment in Strabag and Kostmann that the rules set out in Directive 93/38 authorise 'more extensive use of the negotiated procedure'.

30 In the second place, the original contract conditions have not been changed or, in any event, no 'substantial' change has been made. It is apparent from a comparison of the second and third calls for tender that, contrary to the Commission's assertions, they are identical as regards the letter of guarantee relating to the participation, the assessment of the financial offers and the method of payment. Furthermore, a detailed examination of the requirements relating to the technical discrepancies, the costs of correcting those discrepancies and the binding declaration requested from the tenderers shows that those elements also were not changed between the second and third tendering procedures.

31 As regards, secondly, Article 20(2)(d) of Directive 93/38, the Hellenic Republic contends that the Commission misinterpreted the letter of 14 December. That letter unequivocally shows that the contracting entity had decided to choose a procedure without a prior call for competition because of the 'overall history of the case', that is to say, because of the fact that the tenders submitted under the first two procedures were unsuitable. The other explanatory factors referred to in that letter were only mentioned by way of secondary considerations.

32 Moreover, although the withdrawal of a call for tenders does not constitute an event which was unforeseeable by the contracting entity, the fact that, in two consecutive calls for tenders, all the tenders submitted were unsuitable should be regarded as covered by the notion of an 'unforeseeable event'.

33 In any event, the Commission has not proved to the requisite legal standard that the contracting entity relied on the fact that the failure of the preceding two calls for tender was unforeseeable in order to justify having recourse to a procedure without a prior call for competition. Proceedings for failure to fulfil obligations must not be confused with an action for annulment, since the former procedure allows Member States to provide explanations, further information and, where necessary, the reasons for their decisions. In the present case, it is not the validity of the reasons given by the contracting entity which falls to be determined, but whether the Member State concerned can be said to have infringed Directive 93/38.

Findings of the Court

34 At the outset, it should be noted that, as derogations from the rules relating to procedures for the award of public procurement contracts, the provisions of Article 20(2)(c) and (d) of Directive 93/38 must be interpreted strictly and that the burden of proof lies on the party seeking to rely on them (Commission v Greece, paragraph 33).

35 Since it is clear from Article 20(1) of Directive 93/38, read in conjunction with Article 20(2) of that directive, that Article 20(2) constitutes a derogation from Article 20(1), in that it sets out the situations in which a contracting entity may use a procedure for the award of a contract without a prior call for competition, it must be concluded that not only points (c) and (d) of Article 20(2) of Directive 93/38 must be interpreted strictly, but so must all the other provisions of Article 20(2).

36 That finding is not affected by the arguments of the Hellenic Republic that Directive 93/38, in accordance with recital 45 in the preamble thereto, must leave 'a maximum of flexibility' and authorises more extensive use of the negotiated procedure than permitted, for example, under Directive 93/37.

37 First, as the Advocate General pointed out in point 15 of his Opinion, recital 45 provides guidance as to the aim pursued by the Community legislature through the adoption of Directive 93/38, namely to grant greater flexibility in the context of the public procurement contracts with which that directive is concerned, and consequently it may explain why Directive 93/38, unlike other directives on public procurement, authorises contracting entities to make greater use of the negotiated procedure.

38 Secondly, by stating in recital 46 in the preamble to Directive 93/38 that, as a counterpart for such flexibility and in the interests of mutual confidence, it is necessary to ensure the transparency of public procurement procedures and by providing – as is made quite clear in Article 20(1) of that directive – that use of one of the three award procedures set out in Article 1(7) of the directive must be preceded by a call for competition, the Community legislature has left no room for doubt as to its intention that the option of awarding a public contract without a prior call for competition, in the circumstances specified in Article 20(2) of Directive 93/38, is to be regarded as a derogation from the principle that the award of such a contract must be preceded by a call for competition.

39 It follows that the argument of the Hellenic Republic, according to which the term 'unsuitable' in Article 20(2)(a) of Directive 93/38 must be interpreted broadly, cannot be accepted.

40 It is in the light of those considerations that it is necessary to determine whether, in the present case, the Hellenic Republic has properly demonstrated that the tenders submitted under the second tendering procedure were correctly categorised as 'unsuitable' for the purposes of Article 20(2)(a).

41 The Hellenic Republic contended in this connection that, since the tenders submitted did not, as regards the guaranteed volumes, comply with the technical specifications fixed by the contracting entity in the light of the legislative requirements on the protection of the environment, so that it would not have been possible to bring the thermoelectric station at issue legally into operation, those tenders had to be regarded as 'unsuitable' for the purposes of Article 20(2)(a) of Directive 93/38.

42 It must be held that technical specifications such as those at issue in the present case, which stem from the national and Community legislative requirements on protection of the environment, must be regarded as essential if the installations – the supply and bringing into operation of which is the aim of the contract – are to enable the contracting entity to meet the objectives imposed upon it by legislation.

43 Since the proper completion of the project for which the call for tenders was issued is not possible for the contracting entity if the tenders are not in conformity with those specifications, that non-conformity does not constitute a mere inaccuracy or a mere detail: on the contrary, it must be regarded as precluding those tenders from meeting the needs of the contracting entity.

44 Such tenders must, as the Commission itself conceded before the Court, be categorised as 'unsuitable' for the purposes of Article 20(2)(a) of Directive 93/38.

45 It should be added that, in the present case, there are no grounds for the Commission's fear that contracting entities will circumvent the obligation under Directive 93/38 to issue a call for competition by setting conditions which are overly strict or impossible to comply with, in order to be able to categorise all the tenders submitted as 'unsuitable' before awarding the contract to another tenderer without a prior call for competition.

46 First, after holding that the tenders submitted during the first procedure with a call for competition did not meet the fixed technical specifications, the contracting entity issued a second call for tenders and thus did not immediately proceed on the basis of Article 20(2)(a) of Directive 93/38.

47 Secondly, in the negotiated procedure which it initiated on the basis of Article 20(2)(a) of Directive 93/38, the contracting entity requested all the candidates which had participated in the second procedure with a call for competition to submit 'financial offers', even though the provisions of Directive 93/38 which relate to the negotiated procedure, and specifically Article 1(7)(c) of that directive, did not require this.

48 Lastly, it has been neither proved nor even claimed that the technical specifications which had been fixed by the contracting entity and which had led that entity to regard the tenders received as unsuitable were overly strict or impossible to comply with.

49 On the contrary, as the Hellenic Republic stated without being contradicted on that point by the Commission, the requirements relating to guaranteed volumes, with which the tenderers were obliged to comply, were finally met by some of the candidates for the award of the contract.

50 In the light of those considerations, it must be held that the contracting entity was entitled to categorise the tenders at issue as 'unsuitable' for the purposes of Article 20(2)(a) of Directive 93/38.

51 In those circumstances, it must also be ascertained whether, as the Commission maintains, the contracting entity – contrary to the terms of Article 20(2)(a) of Directive 93/38 – substantially changed the original contract conditions during the negotiated procedure without a prior call for competition.

52 In that connection, it should be noted that, by analogy with the Court's dicta regarding the renegotiation of contracts already awarded (see Case C-454/06 pressetext Nachrichtenagentur [2008] ECR I-4401, paragraph 35), the amendment of an initial contract condition can be regarded as substantial for the purposes of Article 20(2)(a) of Directive 93/38, inter alia, where the amended condition, had it been part of the initial award procedure, would have allowed tenders submitted in the procedure with a prior call for competition to be considered suitable or would have allowed tenderers other than those who participated in the initial procedure to submit a tender.

53 In so far as the Commission – as emerges from its observations – regards the facts in question as falling clearly within the former of those two situations, it is necessary to examine whether the original contract conditions, the non-conformity with which led the contracting entity to categorise the tenders submitted as unsuitable, were substantially changed in the negotiated procedure.

54 In respect of those conditions, the Hellenic Republic contends, without being contradicted on that point by the Commission, that the tenders submitted under the second procedure with a call for competition were all declared unsuitable because they did not comply with the requirements relating to the guaranteed volumes of waste emissions.

55 It must be stated that, in the third procedure, those requirements were not changed and the contracting entity was obliged, as it was in the first two procedures, to meet those requirements. Furthermore, it is precisely because no discrepancy with those specifications was permissible that the candidates had to submit a binding declaration by which they undertook to bring their tenders into conformity with the requirements set out in the contract notice concerning those guaranteed volumes.

56 As regards the other technical specifications, it should be pointed out that, although some discrepancies with those specifications were acceptable under the second procedure with a call for competition, the costs entailed in correcting those discrepancies could, as the Hellenic Republic contended without being contradicted by the Commission, be left to the tenderers to bear. The fact that, under the third procedure, the tenderers had to bear the costs of correcting the technical discrepancies themselves cannot thus be regarded as a new obligation.

57 During that third procedure, moreover, the tenderers were not required to make the corrections in question, but only to provide an estimate of the total cost of those corrections and to submit a final financial offer. The third procedure thus offered all the tenderers who had participated in the second procedure the possibility of reviewing some of their proposals in the context of a final financial offer and of assessing once again the discrepancies with the technical specifications set out in the call for tenders.

58 It follows that, during the negotiated procedure without a prior call for competition, the contracting entity did not substantially change the original contract conditions for the purposes of Article 20(2)(a) of Directive 93/38.

59 In those circumstances, it must be held that the Commission has failed to prove that the Hellenic Republic infringed Article 20(2)(a) of Directive 93/38. Consequently, the first part of its first plea in law must be rejected.

60 So far as the alleged infringement of Article 20(2)(d) of Directive 93/38 is concerned, it should be recalled that, as is apparent from paragraph 34 of this judgment, Article 20(2)(d) is in the nature of a derogation and the burden of proving that the conditions for its application are fulfilled lies on the party seeking to rely on it.

61 It is sufficient to observe, in this connection, as the Advocate General did in point 25 of his Opinion, that the Hellenic Republic did not invoke Article 20(2)(d) of Directive 93/38 in support of the decision by which DEI awarded the contract at issue without a prior call for competition, but merely stated that that decision had been adopted on the basis of Article 20(2)(a) of Directive 93/38.

62 The Commission cannot legitimately allege that the Hellenic Republic infringed a provision upon which that Member State did not actually rely and, in consequence, the second part of the first plea in law must also be rejected.

63 In those circumstances, the first plea in law relied upon by the Commission must be rejected in its entirety as unfounded.

The second plea in law

Arguments of the parties

64 By its second plea in law, the Commission alleges that the Hellenic Republic has failed to fulfil its obligation under Article 41(4) of Directive 93/38 to, 'promptly after the date on which a written request is received, inform any eliminated candidate or tenderer of the reasons for rejection of his application or his tender'.

65 In the present case, a period of two months elapsed between the request from the eliminated tenderer and the reply from the contracting entity. The Commission submits that such a period cannot under any circumstances be regarded as a reply provided 'promptly'. With regard to the interpretation of those terms, the Commission refers to the similar provisions laid down in Council Directive 92/50/EEC of 18 June 1992 relating to the coordination of procedures for the award of public service contracts (OJ 1992 L 209, p. 1), Council Directive 93/36/EEC of 14 June 1993 coordinating procedures for the award of public supply contracts (OJ 1993 L 199, p. 1), Directive 93/37 and Directive 2004/17/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 31 March 2004 coordinating the procurement procedures of entities operating in the water, energy, transport and postal services sectors (OJ 2004 L 134, p. 1), each of which prescribes a period of 15 days.

66 The Hellenic Republic acknowledges that there was some delay in communicating the reasons for rejecting one of the tenders. However, that delay did not frustrate the full effectiveness of Directive 93/38 and did not prevent the tenderer concerned from being able to assert its rights effectively before a court. Moreover, the contract was not signed until the legal action brought by the eliminated tenderer had been dismissed. The Hellenic Republic adds that the periods prescribed by the various directives referred to by the Commission cannot be transposed to the present case since Directive 93/38 does not lay down any specific time-limit and Directive 2004/17 was not yet applicable at the material time.

Findings of the Court

67 As regards this plea in law, it should be pointed out that, in so far as Directive 93/38, unlike the other directives relied on by the Commission in this connection, does not prescribe a specific period within which the candidate or tenderer whose application or tender has been rejected must be informed of the grounds for the rejection, but merely provides, in Article 41(4) thereof, that that communication must be made 'promptly', it is not possible, as the Advocate General pointed out in point 27 of his Opinion, to adopt an interpretation of that provision to the effect that the contracting entity must communicate that information within 15 days of receiving the tenderer's written request.

68 However, it should be stated that, by requiring the contracting entity to communicate the required information 'promptly', the Community legislature placed that entity under a duty of diligence, which falls to be categorised more as an obligation as to means than an obligation as to results. Thus, it is necessary to consider on a case-by-case basis and in the light of the specific characteristics of the procurement contract at issue, in particular its complexity, whether or not the contracting entity concerned communicated that information with the requisite diligence. The fact that a communication may have been sent before the expiry of the period within which the decision to eliminate the application or the tender may be challenged, with the result that the tenderer was in a position to make use of the legal remedies available in order to have a court review the legality of the decision, is only one of a bundle of factors which must be taken into account in order to determine whether a contracting entity has complied with its obligation of diligence under Article 41 (4) of Directive 93/38 and does not, in itself, constitute sufficient evidence in that regard.

69 Since, in the present case, the Hellenic Republic accepts that there was a delay in communicating to the tenderer whose tender was rejected the reasons for that rejection, while asserting that that communication was made in a manner consistent with Article 41(4) of Directive 93/38, it is for that Member State to adduce evidence of objective factors capable of justifying the delay in communicating the information and making it plausible that such a period should have elapsed between the receipt of the tenderer's request and the reply from the contracting entity.

70 The fact remains that, apart from the argument that the period which elapsed did not prevent the tenderer concerned from being able to assert its rights effectively before a court, the Hellenic Republic neither advances any specific information capable of justifying the delay in the communication nor states reasons why, in the present case, a period of two months should be regarded as signifying 'promptly' for the purposes of Article 41(4) of Directive 93/38.

71 In consequence, the second plea in law relied upon by the Commission must be held to be well founded.

72 It must therefore be held that, by being unjustifiably late in replying to a tenderer's request for information concerning the reasons for the rejection of its tender, the Hellenic Republic has failed to fulfil its obligation under Article 41(4) of Directive 93/38.

Costs

73 Under Article 69(2) of the Rules of Procedure, the unsuccessful party is to be ordered to pay the costs if they have been applied for in the successful party's pleadings. However, under the first subparagraph of Article 69(3) of those rules, the Court may order that the costs be shared or that the parties bear their own costs if the parties are each unsuccessful on one or more heads of claim. Since the Hellenic Republic and the Commission have been partly unsuccessful in their pleas, each party must be ordered to bear its own costs.

On those grounds, the Court (First Chamber) hereby:

1. Declares that, by being unjustifiably late in replying to a tenderer's request for information concerning the reasons for the rejection of its tender, the Hellenic Republic has failed to fulfil its obligation under Article 41(4) of Council Directive 93/38/EEC of 14 June 1993 coordinating the procurement procedures of entities operating in the water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors, as amended by Commission Directive 2001/78/EC of 13 September 2001;

2. Dismisses the action as to the remainder;

3. Orders the Hellenic Republic and the Commission of the European Communities each to bear their own costs.

Case C-250/07

Commission of the European Communities

v

Hellenic Republic

(Failure of a Member State to fulfil obligations – Directive 93/38/EEC – Public contracts in the water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors – Award of a contract without a prior call for competition – Conditions – Communication of the reasons for the rejection of a tender – Time-limit)

Summary of the Judgment

1. Approximation of laws – Procedure for awarding public contracts in the water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors – Directive 93/38 – Derogations from common rules

   (Council Directive 93/38, Art. 20(2)(a), (c) and (d))

2. Approximation of laws – Procedure for awarding public contracts in the water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors – Directive 93/38 – Derogations from common rules

   (Council Directive 93/38, Art. 20(2)(a))

3. Approximation of laws – Procedure for awarding public contracts in the water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors – Directive 93/38 – Derogations from common rules

   (Council Directive 93/38, Art. 20(2)(a))

4. Approximation of laws – Procedure for awarding public contracts in the water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors – Directive 93/38 – Period for communicating the reasons for the rejection of a tender

   (Council Directive 93/38, Art. 41(4))

1. As derogations from the rules relating to procedures for the award of public procurement contracts, the provisions of Article 20(2)(c) and (d) of Directive 93/38 coordinating the procurement procedures of entities operating in the water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors, as amended by Directive 2001/78 must be interpreted strictly and the burden of proof lies on the party seeking to rely on them.

   Since it is clear from Article 20(1) of Directive 93/38, read in conjunction with Article 20(2) of that directive, that Article 20(2) constitutes a derogation from Article 20(1), in that it sets out the situations in which a contracting entity may use a procedure for the award of a contract without a prior call for competition, it must be concluded that not only points (c) and (d) of Article 20(2) of Directive 93/38 must be interpreted strictly, but so must all the other provisions of Article 20(2).

   (see paras 34-35)

2. Tenders that do not comply with the technical specifications fixed by the contracting entity which stem from the national and Community legislative requirements on protection of the environment must be classified as ‘unsuitable’ for the purposes of Article 20(2)(a) of Directive 93/38 coordinating the procurement procedures of entities operating in the water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors, as amended by Directive 2001/78. Such specifications must be regarded as essential if the installations – the supply and bringing into operation of which is the aim of the contract – are to enable the contracting entity to meet the objectives imposed upon it by legislation. Since the proper completion of the project for which the call for tenders was issued is not possible for the contracting entity if the tenders are not in conformity with those specifications, that non-conformity does not constitute a mere inaccuracy or a mere detail: on the contrary, it must be regarded as precluding those tenders from meeting the needs of the contracting entity.

3. The amendment of an initial contract condition can be regarded as substantial for the purposes of Article 20(2)(a) of Directive 93/38 coordinating the procurement procedures of entities operating in the water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors, as amended by Directive 2001/78 inter alia, where the amended condition, had it been part of the initial award procedure, would have allowed tenders submitted in the procedure with a prior call for competition to be considered suitable or would have allowed tenderers other than those who participated in the initial procedure to submit a tender.

In that regard, a new obligation cannot arise by reason of the fact that, under a new procedure for the award of a contract without a prior call for competition, the tenderers have themselves to bear the costs of correcting the technical discrepancies in relation to the technical specifications set by the contracting entity when, under the previous award procedure with a prior call for competition, some discrepancies with the technical specifications imposed by the contracting entity were acceptable and that the costs entailed in correcting those discrepancies could be left to the tenderers to bear.

4. In so far as Directive 93/38 coordinating the procurement procedures of entities operating in the water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors as amended by Directive 2001/78, does not prescribe a specific period within which the candidate or tenderer whose application or tender has been rejected must be informed of the grounds for the rejection, but merely provides, in Article 41(4) thereof, that that communication must be made promptly, it is not possible to adopt an interpretation of that provision to the effect that the contracting entity must communicate that information within 15 days of receiving the tenderer's written request.

However, by requiring the contracting entity to communicate the required information promptly, the Community legislature placed that entity under a duty of diligence, which falls to be categorised more as an obligation as to means than an obligation as to results. Thus, it is necessary to consider on a case-by-case basis and in the light of the specific characteristics of the procurement contract at issue, in particular its complexity, whether or not the contracting entity concerned communicated that information with the requisite diligence. The fact that a communication may have been sent before the expiry of the period within which the decision to eliminate the application or the tender may be challenged is only one of a bundle of factors which must be taken into account in order to determine whether a contracting entity has complied with its obligation of diligence.

It is for the Member State to adduce evidence of objective factors capable of justifying the delay in the communication of the grounds for rejecting the tender and making it plausible that such a period should have elapsed between the receipt of the tenderer's request and the reply from the contracting entity.

Consequently, a Member State which is unjustifiably late in replying to a tenderer's request for information concerning the reasons for the rejection of its tender fails to fulfil its obligations under Article 41(4) of Directive 93/38.

OPINION OF ADVOCATE GENERAL
POIARES MADURO
delivered on 17 December 2008 (1)

Case C-250/07

Commission of the European Communities
v
Hellenic Republic

1. The present action brought by the European Commission against Greece concerns a public procurement contract in relation to a power station on the island of Crete. The Commission argues that the contracting authority, by failing, firstly, to publish a call for tenders and, secondly, to give reasons for the rejection of one of the tenders in a timely manner, has failed to fulfil its obligations under Council Directive 93/38/EEC of 14 June 1993 coordinating the procurement procedures of entities operating in the water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors. (2)

Factual background

2. In July 2003 the Dimosia Epicheirisi Ilektrismou (Public Energy Corporation of Greece, 'DEI') published a call for tenders for the purchase and installation of two thermo-electrical units for the power station of Atherinolakos on the island of Crete. DEI found that the tenders submitted did not comply fully with the terms of the call for tenders, so the project was aborted. In May 2004 a new call for competition for the same project was published, which was slightly different from the first one. All five tenders which were submitted in response to the second call were rejected as 'unsuitable' because they did not fully comply with certain technical specifications, and the procedure was again aborted.

3. On 14 December 2004, without publishing a fresh call for tenders, DEI wrote to the five tenderers who had participated in the second round and asked them to submit within 15 days their 'final financial offers' correcting any discrepancies, especially technical ones, between their earlier tenders and the project specifications. In that letter, DEI explained that it had decided to dispense with a call for competition because of, among other things, 'the overall history of the case'; 'the time necessary to install the two new units, namely 29 and 31 months respectively'; 'the requirement to cover in a timely manner the urgent, since 2007, needs of the island of Crete in electricity'; and 'the unforeseen delay in awarding the contract, which was due to the unsatisfactory outcome of the earlier calls for competition'. All five tenderers that had participated in the second round submitted new tenders.

4. On 7 February 2005 DEI wrote to one of the tenderers rejecting its tender without giving any reasons. That tenderer sent three letters to DEI on 10 and 11 February and 10 March 2005 and two letters to the Ministry of Development on 17 and 31 March 2005 asking to be informed of the reasons for the tender being rejected. DEI finally replied on 4 April 2005. The tenderer then applied to the Monomeles Protodikio Athinon (Court of First Instance, Athens) for an injunction, but its application was dismissed on 7 July 2005. DEI concluded the contract with another tenderer on 15 September 2005.

5. The unsuccessful tenderer lodged a complaint with the European Commission which, considering that the conduct of the procedure by DEI was incompatible with Community law and taking into account the very high value of the contract, initiated infringement proceedings against Greece. Not being satisfied by the reply of the Greek authorities to its formal letter of notice and reasoned opinion, the Commission brought an action requesting the Court to declare that Greece has failed to fulfil its obligations under Article 20(2)(a), on procurement procedures without a prior call for competition, and Article 41(4), on the obligation to give reasons to unsuccessful tenderers, of Directive 93/38.

I – The absence of a call for competition

6. The applicable provision is Article 20(2)(a) of Directive 93/38 which states: '[c]ontracting entities may use a procedure without prior call for competition in the following cases … in the absence of tenders or suitable tenders in response to a procedure with a prior call for competition, provided that the original contract conditions have not been substantially changed'. As the Greek Government correctly points out, that provision empowers contracting authorities to dispense with the requirement for a call for competition where all three of the following conditions are met: (i) there has already been such a call, (ii) no tenders, or no suitable tenders have been submitted and (iii) the original contract conditions have remained substantially the same.

7. It is clear that, in the present case, the first condition is met. The Government and the Commission disagree as to whether the second and third conditions are also satisfied.

The concept of unsuitable tenders

8. DEI rejected the tenders submitted in response to the second call for competition as 'unsuitable' because they did not comply fully with certain technical specifications. Was it right in its characterisation of the tenders? In other words, how should the term 'unsuitable' be interpreted? This is an important question because the answer to it determines whether the contracting entity may award the contract without publishing a call for tenders. If the submitted tenders can be correctly described as 'unsuitable', then no further call for competition is required; if, on the other hand, the rejected tenders cannot be deemed to be 'unsuitable', the contracting entity is under an obligation to repeat the entire procedure.

9. The Commission takes the view that only a tender which clearly cannot satisfy the needs of the contracting authority falls within the 'unsuitable' category; other discrepancies, of a less serious nature, may justify the rejection of a tender, but cannot render it 'unsuitable' and thus open the way for a contracting authority to award the contract without following the usual competitive procedure. By contrast, the Greek Government argues for a more liberal definition of 'unsuitable'. Placing considerable emphasis on recital 45 in the preamble to the directive, which states that 'the rules to be applied by the entities concerned should establish a framework for sound commercial practice and should leave a maximum of flexibility', it submits that contracting authorities should be allowed a wide margin of discretion in rejecting as 'unsuitable' all tenders which do not satisfy fully the criteria set out in the call for tenders, and then should be able to proceed without a fresh call for competition.

10. I think that the interpretation suggested by the Greek Government is too broad. When assessing how wide a discretion the contracting entities enjoy one should start with the requirements of the Treaty. In Teleaustria the Court found that public services concessions were outside the scope of the procurement directives, but held that the contracting entities concluding them were bound by the fundamental rules of the Treaty, in general, and the principle of non-discrimination on the ground of nationality, in particular, which implies an obligation of transparency. (3) It then went on to explain what the content of this transparency obligation is: '[t]hat obligation of transparency which is imposed on the contracting authority consists in ensuring, for the benefit of any potential tenderer, a degree of advertising sufficient to enable the services market to be opened up to competition and the impartiality of procurement procedures to be reviewed'. (4) Accordingly, transparency in public procurement is a requirement of primary Community law and, at the very least, entails some advertising. The importance of advertising is twofold: first, potential tenderers are made aware of the fact that a business opportunity exists, which in turn can lead to an increase in the degree of competition for the contract, as more tenders are likely to be submitted; second, advertising guards against partiality and corruption as it facilitates the review of procurement procedures. (5) In the Court's case-law, transparency is linked to non-discrimination and is seen as a mechanism ensuring compliance with this fundamental principle of Community law. (6)

11. A further point which is relevant for the interpretation of the term 'unsuitable' is that one of the purposes of public procurement rules is the development of effective competition in the market. In its recent judgment in Commission v Italy, where the Commission claimed that Italy had failed to fulfil its obligations under a number of directives including Directive 93/38, the Court stated that '[t]he directives sought to eliminate practices that restrict competition in general and participation in public contracts by other Member States' nationals, in order to implement inter alia the freedom of establishment and freedom to provide services enshrined in Articles 43 EC and 49 EC respectively'. (7) As the Court explained in an earlier case concerning Directive 93/37/EEC, (8) 'the basic aim of the Directive … is to open up public works contracts to competition. Exposure to Community competition in accordance with the procedures provided for by the Directive ensures that the public authorities cannot indulge in favouritism'. (9) Effective competition, then, removes barriers that prevent new players from entering the market; benefits contracting entities which can choose from among more tenderers and, thus, are more likely to obtain value for money; and helps maintain the integrity of procurement procedures as such.

12. As the above cases make clear, the requirement for a call for competition is rooted in primary Community law and should be complied with as a matter of course. Awarding contracts without a prior call for tenders may harm not only potential tenderers but also the public, which pays for procurement projects through taxation, and may distort the competitive nature of the public procurement market, undermining the effectiveness of the Treaty rules on fundamental Community freedoms. For this reason, a provision which allows a contracting authority to dispense with a call for tenders should be narrowly construed. Article 20(2) of Directive 93/38 is such a provision. It starts by stating that a contracting entity may award a contract without a prior call for competition and then proceeds to set out exhaustively the cases in which this is possible. The Court has already ruled on the correct interpretative approach to this provision in Commission v Greece, a case which concerned subsections (c) and (d) thereof, on contracts that for technical or artistic reasons can be executed only by a particular contractor, and cases of extreme urgency respectively: '[i]t should as a preliminary point be noted that, as derogations from the rules relating to procedures for the award of public procurement contracts, the provisions of Article 20(2)(c) and (d) of Directive 93/38 must be interpreted strictly'. (10) The present case falls to be decided under subsection (a) (on the absence of tenders and 'unsuitable' tenders), which should be interpreted in the same strict manner as subsections (c) and (d), given that there is nothing in either the spirit or the letter of Article 20(2) or in the judgment of the Court in Commission v Greece which could justify a different interpretative approach.

13. In the light of the preceding analysis, the broad construction of the term 'unsuitable' advocated by the Greek Government cannot be accepted. Allowing contracting entities to rely even on minor discrepancies in the submitted tenders in order to reject them as 'unsuitable' means, in practice, giving them sweeping discretion to decide whether a call for competition will be published or not. A contracting entity which wishes to 'indulge in favouritism', to use the language of the Court in Ordine degli Architetti, can easily identify a point in relation to which a submitted tender does not comply fully with the contract specifications, reject it as 'unsuitable' and then proceed to award the contract without a prior call for the submission of new tenders. This is especially true of large projects requiring advanced technical expertise where contract specifications are understandably very complex. But that is exactly the danger against which Community procurement rules, whether enshrined in the Treaty or in secondary legislation, are supposed to guard. By contrast, the interpretation offered by the Commission, namely that a tender can be rejected as 'unsuitable' and the contracting entity thus allowed to proceed without a call for competition only where the tender cannot cover the needs of that entity, leaves to the contracting authority enough discretion to assess the submitted tenders while ensuring that Community rules on public procurement are not by-passed.

14. In support of the broad interpretation of Article 20(2)(c) of Directive 93/38 the Greek Government relied heavily on recital 45 in the preamble to the directive which refers to the need for a 'maximum of flexibility' in relation to the procurement rules for utilities. From this, the Government concludes that contracting authorities in this sector are given wide discretion in the application of the provisions of the directive, including the one on 'unsuitable' tenders, and awards of contracts without a prior call for competition. There are two objections to this argument.

15. Firstly, recital 45 is not a free-standing provision of law which can grant rights or impose obligations. Rather it performs, like all preambles to directives, an explanatory function, that is, it is there to assist those interpreting the directive to understand its aims and the spirit in which it was adopted. In the present case, recital 45 explains why the Community legislature adopted, for the utilities sector, a set of procurement rules which are less strict than the ones adopted for other sectors such as services and supplies. More importantly, Article 20(2) itself is an expression of the more flexible approach applied in the utilities sector, as it allows contracting authorities to proceed without a call for competition in more cases than under the directives regulating other sectors. (11) In other words, it was the Community legislature itself which decided in what way the rules on utilities should be more flexible by enacting the specific provisions of Directive 93/38, and it would be wrong to assume that recital 45 grants to contracting authorities some autonomous flexibility which is additional to the already flexible provisions of the directive.

16. Secondly, as I have already pointed out, the Court has held that advertising is a positive obligation imposed on contracting entities by the Treaty. Departures from that obligation must be expressly prescribed by law and narrowly construed. Even if there were such a general principle of flexibility for the interpretation of Directive 93/38 it could not supersede obligations rooted in primary Community law.

17. Something must be said, finally, about the relationship between the various procurement directives. The Greek Government has forcefully argued against the Commission's suggestion that a parallel reading of the Public Sector Directives may help in the interpretation of Directive 93/38. It claims that the latter directive introduces a system of rules specific to the utilities sector and it would be wrong to compare them with rules governing works or supply contracts. I do not agree with this contention. Only very rarely does one come across isolated legal provisions. Rules need to be placed in context; they become meaningful when read within the wider legal environment in which they operate. In the field of public procurement the Court has often referred to the procurement directives as a body of rules pursuing common aims and resting on common principles. I have already mentioned Commission v Italy where the Court stated that Directives 92/50, (12) 93/36, (13) 93/37 and 93/38 have the common aim of eliminating anti-competitive practices in public procurement, (14) and there are other recent examples in which the Court has used language indicating that the procurement directives must be approached in a systematic and coherent way. (15) Was the Court then oblivious of the fact that each directive regulates a different area of public procurement and that there are differences in the rules they establish? Clearly not. What the Court meant was that the directives, their differences notwithstanding, constitute a network of rules with the common aim of ensuring that public procurement procedures are fair, open and efficient.

18. To conclude, I think that by characterising the rejected tender as 'unsuitable' and not publishing a call for competition DEI has failed to comply with Article 20(2) of Directive 93/38.

The contract conditions

19. Since the second of the three requirements of Article 20(2)(a) was not satisfied, DEI could not have availed itself of this provision, irrespective of whether the original contract conditions remained the same. However, for the sake of completeness, I will briefly explain why I think that the Commission is right in claiming that there was a substantial amendment to the original terms.

20. The second call for competition stated that discrepancies between the technical specifications required by the contracting authority and those offered by tenderers were not allowed. However, tenders which did not fully comply with those specifications could be accepted provided that any discrepancies were related to the technical characteristics of the machinery the tenderer proposed to use, were listed separately in the tender documents and did not affect the overall performance of the power station. In such a case, the tenderer was under no obligation to correct the discrepancies and bear the additional financial burden. In the third phase of the procedure, though, tenderers were asked to correct any discrepancies their previous tenders contained, themselves bearing the costs, and were required to submit a binding declaration to this effect.

21. The Greek Government argues that Article 20(2) does not prohibit all amendments to the original contract conditions but only those that are 'substantial'. When, at the hearing, the Judge-Rapporteur asked how the Government can reconcile its claim that all five tenders submitted in the second round were unsuitable and that no substantial changes were permitted in the third round with the fact that the contract was finally awarded to one of the five tenderers whose tender was initially rejected, counsel for the Government submitted that the only modifications DEI asked for in the third round concerned the discrepancies in the technical specifications that had been identified in the second round and had led to the rejection of the tender, while the other contract conditions remained the same.

22. I agree with the Government that the relevant criterion is the substantial nature of the amendment to the contract conditions, but I am not convinced that the amendment in question was insubstantial or not substantial enough for the purposes of Article 20(2)(a). An important new condition was introduced in the third phase: tenderers had to correct all discrepancies, themselves covering the costs, while under the terms of the contract notice in the second phase such discrepancies could have been accepted. Clearly, the contracting authority itself considered this new obligation to be of importance, otherwise it would not have asked the participating tenderers to submit binding declarations to this effect. Similarly, from the point of view of tenderers, such an amendment to the conditions of the contract is indeed substantial, as it excludes from the outset those who may not be able or willing to correct the discrepancies in their original tenders and incur the relevant costs. Such amendments to the original conditions of the contract should always be considered 'substantial'. Moreover, as I have already pointed out, a provision which allows a contracting entity to award a contract without a call for competition, such as Article 20(2)(a), must be interpreted strictly, because it introduces an exemption from the Treaty-based rule of transparency. Therefore, contracting entities can dispense with a call for tenders only if the amendments in question clearly cannot affect, actually or potentially, the procurement process. In the present case, the amendment to the contract conditions cannot be said to be insubstantial or not substantial enough for the purposes of Article 20(2)(a).

23. Given that DEI had rejected the five tenders submitted in the second round because they did not comply fully with the required technical specifications, it was in practice impossible to award the contract in the third round to one of those five tenderers without its tender first being modified. Thus, DEI amended the contract conditions in the third round to make certain that tenderers would undertake the obligation to correct any discrepancies and asked them to prepare a new financial offer that would include the relevant costs. Had DEI published a fresh call for competition, this would have been an entirely appropriate procedure. Instead, it invited only specific tenderers to submit tenders, despite the fact that the original contract conditions had been substantially changed. In doing so, it fell foul of Article 20(2)(a) of Directive 93/38.

Urgency

24. Article 20(2)(d) of Directive 93/38 provides that a procedure without a prior call for competition may be used 'in so far as is strictly necessary when, for reasons of extreme urgency brought about by events unforeseeable by the contracting entities, the time-limits laid down for open and restricted procedures cannot be adhered to'. The Commission argues that the way in which DEI's letter to the five tenderers of the second round justified its decision to proceed without a prior call for competition (for example, the references to the 'urgent needs' of Crete for electricity, the 'necessary time to install the two new units', the 'unforeseen delays') implies that it was relying not only on Article 20(2)(a) but Article 20(2)(d) too. The Greek Government disagrees. It submits that from the beginning DEI relied only on Article 20(2)(a) and made clear that the reason it followed the procedure without a call for tenders was because the two previous rounds had failed to produce a satisfactory outcome. This is what was meant by the phrase 'the overall history of the case'. The reference to the urgency of the situation was ancillary, indicating that one of the facts DEI had taken into account was that it had to act quickly.

25. It is true that the way the letter of 14 December 2004 was phrased gives the impression that DEI is invoking urgency as one of the reasons justifying the use of a procedure without a prior call for tenders. However, it is not clear whether this is used as a free-standing justification based on Article 20(2)(d). In any case, given that the Greek Government does not rely on this subsection, the Court does not need to examine the issue any further.

II – The delay in giving reasons

26. Article 41(4) of Directive 93/38 reads as follows: '[t]he contracting entities carrying out one of the activities mentioned in Annexes I, II, VII, VIII and IX shall, promptly after the date on which a written request is received, inform any eliminated candidate or tenderer of the reasons for rejection of his application or his tender and any tenderer who has made an admissible tender of the characteristics and relative advantages of the tender selected as well as the name of the successful tenderer'. The Commission argues that the two-month delay in providing the unsuccessful tenderer with reasons for the rejection of its tender cannot be considered 'prompt' for the purposes of this provision. The Greek Government concedes that there was some delay but claims that the criterion for assessing whether it falls foul of Article 41(4) is whether the tenderer has suffered prejudice in the exercise of its Community rights. Further, counsel for the Government submitted at the hearing that the legislative history of Article 41(4) – the Commission had initially proposed a 15-day period for giving reasons, as in the Public Sector Directives, and when the suggestion was rejected by the European Parliament the term 'promptly' was adopted – indicates that a certain latitude should be granted to contracting authorities when dealing with requests to give reasons for rejecting a tender.

According to the Greek Government, since, in the present case, the unsuccessful tenderer was able to avail itself of a remedy to have the legality of the contracting entity's decision reviewed, it cannot be said that DEI failed to comply with the directive by taking two months to respond to its request.

27. I agree with the Government that the use of the term 'promptly' without a reference to a specific time-limit means that the approach to Article 41(4) should not be too rigid. The fact that the Public Sector Directives explicitly provide for a 15-day period, (16) while Directive 93/38 on utilities does not, implies that the Community legislature deliberately left the question of how quickly a contracting entity should respond to be decided on a case-by-case basis.

28. In assessing what is a 'prompt' reply in any given case, one of the factors to be taken into consideration is whether the tenderer was able to use the remedies made available to him by Community and national law in order to have the legality of the decision reviewed by a court. Indeed, unless the contracting entity explains why a particular tender was rejected, the unsuccessful tenderer cannot know whether it makes sense to challenge the decision and on what grounds this should be done.

29. However, safeguarding the interests of tenderers that participate in a public procurement procedure is only one of the aims pursued by Article 41(4). This provision also serves to safeguard the integrity and efficiency of the procurement process as such; here, the beneficiaries are the contracting entities themselves and, ultimately, the tax-paying public. Therefore, in interpreting the term 'promptly', one should bear in mind that the obligation of contracting entities to provide reasons in a timely manner discourages favouritism and promotes compliance with the requirements of Community law. Article 41(4) constitutes a procedural guarantee which helps to ensure that the reasons given for the rejection of a tender are not a pretext for awarding contracts in an arbitrary manner. In other words, this rule performs a deterrence function: a contracting authority which knows that, immediately after choosing a tender, it will be called upon to justify its choice and explain why the others were rejected is less likely to depart from Community procurement rules.

30. Further, excessive delays in responding to a request for reasons may have significant efficiency costs. For example, in the present case DEI itself had emphasised that the island of Crete was in urgent need of additional electricity supplies. However, it delayed the project for two months by not explaining why it had chosen one particular tender and rejected the others. The Greek Government has not offered any reasons for DEI's tardiness, which can hardly be reconciled with the urgent nature of the contract in question. Given that many large projects in various Member States are funded, to some extent, by the Community budget it is reasonable to expect contracting authorities to apply Community procurement rules in a way that takes into account the need for efficiency.

31. It should be noted also that the new Utilities Directive, which replaced Directive 93/38, provides in Article 49(2) that contracting entities are to inform unsuccessful tenderers of the reasons for the rejection of their tenders 'as soon as possible' and that '[t]he time taken to do so may under no circumstances exceed 15 days from receipt of the written enquiry'. The drafters of the directive have themselves assessed what is an acceptable period for giving reasons and have thus removed all discretion from contracting authorities. Admittedly, the present case falls to be decided, rationae temporis, under Directive 93/38 and not Directive 2004/17. However, we cannot ignore the fact that the Community legislature has decided that, whatever considerations justified in the past a more flexible approach in relation to this issue in the utilities sector, they no longer exist. Accordingly, utilities are now subject to the same, stricter rule that applies to contracts for goods, supplies and services and provides that under no circumstances may the 15-day period be exceeded. Although the provision is not applicable in this case, it would be clearly artificial to suggest that the Court should ignore it. Ultimately, under Directive 93/38, what constitutes a reasonable delay will have to be decided on a case-by-case basis, bearing in mind the general need for expediency in public procurement which is not limited to the protection of the rights of tenderers. I think, therefore, that the concept of 'prompt' reply should be narrowly construed, taking into account the usual time-limits in other areas of public procurement. I am of the opinion that DEI's failure for two months to provide the unsuccessful tenderer with reasons constitutes – in the absence of any specific justifications for such a delay that clearly exceeds the usual time-limits applicable in public procurement – a breach of Article 41(4) of Directive 93/38.

III – Conclusion

32. I suggest that the Court should declare that, in failing, through DEI, to publish a call for competition and give promptly to the unsuccessful tenderer reasons for the rejection of its tender, Greece has failed to fulfil its obligations under Articles 20(2) and 41(4) of Directive 93/38/EEC of 14 June 1993 coordinating the procurement procedures of entities operating in the water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors.

11 – As the Commission points out, this approach to 'flexibility' as an explanation of the nature of the procurement rules of Directive 93/38 is supported, by analogy, by recital 28 of the new Utilities Directive which replaced Directive 93/38. It states in relation to postal services: 'contracts awarded by contracting entities providing postal services should be subject to the rules of this Directive, including those in Article 30, which, safeguarding the application of the principles referred to in recital 9, create a framework for sound commercial practice and allow greater flexibility than is offered by Directive 2004/18/EC …'. Here, the new Utilities Directive is compared with the new Public Sector Directive in order to explain in what sense the provisions of the former are more flexible than those of the latter.

Also, in Case C-513/99 Concordia Bus Finland [2002] ECR I-7213, paragraph 91, the Court held that 'there is no reason to give a different interpretation to two provisions which fall within the same field of Community law and have substantially the same wording'. The criterion, the Court tells us here, is the substance of the provisions to be interpreted; if the substance is the same, the interpretation should be the same.

Action brought on 24 May 2007 - Commission of the European Communities v Hellenic Republic

(Case C-250/07)

Language of the case: Greek

Parties

Applicant: Commission of the European Communities (represented by: M. Patakia and D. Kukovec)

Defendant: Hellenic Republic

Form of order sought

declare that, by not first publishing a call for competition and by being unjustifiably tardy in replying to the complainant's request that the reasons for the rejection of its tender be explained, the Hellenic Republic has failed to fulfil its obligation, regarding a call for competition before a procedure for the submission of tenders is embarked upon, under Article 20(2) of Directive 93/38/EEC [1] of 14 June 1993 coordinating the procurement procedures of entities operating in the water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors and its obligation under Article 41(4) of Directive 93/38/EEC, as both interpreted by the case-law of the Court of Justice of the European Communities;

order the Hellenic Republic to pay the costs.

Pleas in law and main arguments

The Commission received a complaint relating to irregularities in the carrying out of a tender procedure announced by the Dimosia Epikhirisi Ilektrismou (Public Power Corporation; 'the DEI') for the study, supply, transport, installation and bringing into operation of two steam-electric units for the steam electric station at Atherinolakkos, Crete.

The Commission submits that the DEI failed to publish a call for competition, in breach of Article 20(2)(a) of Directive 93/38/EEC, which provides for exceptions provided that conditions that must be interpreted restrictively are met. Specifically, the Commission considers that the DEI interpreted improperly the term 'suitable tenders' and 'substantial change in the conditions of the original contract' in order to justify application of the exception under the foregoing provision.

The Commission also considers that in the case in point it is not possible to rely on reasons of overriding and extreme urgency, or unforeseeable events, within the meaning of Article 20(2)(d), since they are not substantiated by the DEI.

Finally, in the light of the Court's case-law, the Commission considers that there was significant delay regarding a statement of the reasons for rejecting the complainant's tender, in breach of Article 41(4) of Directive 93/38/EEC.

Consequently, the Commission submits that the Hellenic Republic has failed to fulfil its obligations under Articles 20(2) and 41(4) of Directive 93/38/EEC.

JUDGMENT OF THE COURT (Grand Chamber)

16 December 2008 (*)

Judgment

1 This reference for a preliminary ruling relates to the interpretation of Council Directive 93/37/EEC of 14 June 1993 concerning the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts (OJ 1993 L 199, p. 54), as amended by European Parliament and Council Directive 97/52/EC of 13 October 1997 (OJ 1997 L 328, p. 1) ('Directive 93/37').

2 The reference was made in proceedings brought by Michaniki AE ('Michaniki'), a company governed by Greek law, against the Ethniko Simvoulio Radiotileorasis (National Radio and Television Council; 'the ESR') and the Ipourgos Epikratias (Minister of State) concerning the decision by which the ESR issued to Pantechniki AE ('Pantechniki'), also a company governed by Greek law, a certificate of conformity, in the context of a procedure for the award of a public works contract.

Legal context

Community provisions

3 Article 6(6) of Directive 93/37, which appears in Title I ('General provisions'), states:

'Contracting authorities shall ensure that there is no discrimination between the various contractors.'

4 In Chapter 2 ('Criteria for qualitative selection') of Title IV ('Common rules on participation') of that directive, the first paragraph of Article 24 provides:

'Any contractor may be excluded from participation in the contract who:

(a) is bankrupt or is being wound up, whose affairs are being administered by the court, who has entered into an arrangement with creditors, who has suspended business activities or who is in any analogous situation arising from a similar procedure under national laws and regulations;

(b) is the subject of proceedings for a declaration of bankruptcy, for an order for compulsory winding up or administration by the court or for an arrangement with creditors or of any other similar proceedings under national laws or regulations;

(c) has been convicted of an offence concerning his professional conduct by a judgment which has the force of res judicata;

(d) has been guilty of grave professional misconduct proved by any means which the contracting authorities can justify;

(e) has not fulfilled obligations relating to the payment of social security contributions in accordance with the legal provisions of the country in which he is established or with those of the country of the contracting authority;

(f) has not fulfilled obligations relating to the payment of taxes in accordance with the legal provisions of the country in which he is established or those of the country of the contracting authority;

(g) is guilty of serious misrepresentation in supplying the information required under this Chapter.'

National provisions

5 Article 14(9) of the Greek Constitution, which was added by the vote on 6 April 2001 of the seventh revising assembly of the Greek Parliament, provides:

'The ownership, financial standing and means of financing of the media must be disclosed, as stipulated by law.

The measures and restrictions necessary to ensure full media transparency and pluralism shall be specified by law.

It is prohibited to concentrate control of several media of the same or different form.

In particular, it is prohibited to concentrate control of more than one electronic medium of the same form, as specified by law.

The status of owner, partner, main shareholder or management executive of a media undertaking shall be incompatible with the status of owner, partner, main shareholder or management executive of an undertaking which undertakes with the State or a legal person in the public sector in the broad sense to perform works or provide supplies or services.

The prohibition in the previous subparagraph shall also extend to any form of intermediary, such as spouses, relatives or financially dependent persons or companies.

A law shall set out the specific regulations, the sanctions (which may go as far as revocation of a radio or television station's licence and an order prohibiting the signature of, or cancelling, the contract in question), the system of supervision and the guarantees to prevent circumvention of the foregoing subparagraphs.'

6 Law 3021/2002 relating to the restrictions applicable to the conclusion of public contracts with persons who are active in or have interests in media undertakings (FEK A' 143) governs the aspects referred to in the last subparagraph of Article 14(9) of the Constitution.

7 Undertakings 'whose operation is subject to the jurisdiction of the Greek State' fall within the concept of 'media undertaking' within the meaning of Article 1 of that law. Article 1 also sets out the definitions of 'public sector in the broad sense', 'public contracts', 'main shareholder', 'management executives', 'financially dependent persons' and 'intermediaries'.

8 In particular, 'main shareholder' and 'intermediaries' are defined as follows, in Article 1(4) and (7) of Law 3021/2002:

'4. "Main shareholder": a shareholder who, on the basis of the number of shares that he owns, calculated independently or by comparison with the number of shares owned by the other shareholders of the company, on the basis of the voting rights that he holds or other special rights conferred by law or by the statutes of the company or on the basis of general or specific agreements that he has concluded with the company, other shareholders or third parties who are financially dependent on him or act on his behalf, is able to exert a material influence on the decisions taken by the competent bodies or executives of the company as regards the method of management and of general operation of the undertaking concerned.

More specifically, the following shall be deemed to be a main shareholder:

A. A natural or legal person who, regardless of the percentage of the total share capital that he or it owns:

(a) owns a larger number of shares than any other shareholder or a number of shares equal to that held by another shareholder in that case, or

(b) holds, either pursuant to the company statutes or following the transfer of a right of other shareholders in that regard, the majority of voting rights at the general meeting of shareholders, or

(c) has the right, by virtue of law or the statutes of the company or following the transfer of a right of other shareholders in that regard, to appoint or dismiss at least two members of the board of directors or one member where the latter performs the functions of chairman or vice-chairman, of managing, executive or joint director or of general director with executive duties, or

(d) holds a percentage of the total share capital or voting rights equal to at least half the share capital which was represented and voted when the decision of the general meeting of shareholders relating to the election or dismissal of the last board of directors of the company or of the majority of the board members was adopted, or

(e) enters, directly or indirectly, into contracts and into agreements generally with the company which generate revenue or other financial benefits for the company equal to at least one fifth of its gross revenue during the previous year.

B. A natural or legal person who:

(a) owns shares representing at least 5% of the total share capital or

(b) holds voting rights corresponding to at least 5% of the voting rights at the company's general meeting of shareholders.

For the calculation of the percentage of the share capital or voting rights referred to in points A and B of this paragraph, the number of shares or voting rights which belong to or are held by the following shall also be taken into account:

– intermediaries,

– undertakings controlled by the same shareholder,

– another shareholder with whom he has entered into an agreement for the purpose of achieving, by the coordinated exercise of his voting rights, a lasting common company management policy.

Voting rights which are held under a pledge agreement, under an agreement conferring beneficial enjoyment or as a result of a protective measure against the holder of the corresponding shares and the number of shares which he does not own but in respect of which he has a right to receive dividends shall also be taken into account. The number of shares or voting rights which are acquired by inheritance shall be taken into account on expiry of a period of three months from their acquisition.

7. "Intermediaries": natural or legal persons who are financially dependent on or who act, under the terms of a general or specific agreement, on behalf or on the recommendation or instruction of another natural or legal person.'

9 Article 2 of Law 3021/2002, entitled 'Prohibition on the award of public contracts to media undertakings', provides:

'1. It is prohibited to award public contracts to media undertakings or to the partners, main shareholders, members of the administrative organs or management executives of such undertakings. It is also prohibited to award public contracts to undertakings whose partners, main shareholders, members of the administrative organs or management executives are media undertakings or partners, main shareholders, members of the administrative organs or management executives of media undertakings.

2. The prohibition on the award of public contracts shall also encompass:

(a) the spouses and relatives in a direct line to an unlimited degree and collaterally up to and including the fourth degree of the natural persons falling within paragraph 1, unless they can prove that they are financially independent of such persons;

(b) any other intermediary;

(c) the partners and main shareholders owning the partners and the main shareholders who fall within paragraph 1;

(d) any natural or legal person who, whilst not a shareholder, controls, directly or indirectly, one or more media undertakings or exerts, directly or indirectly, a material influence on the adoption of the decisions taken by the administrative organs or management executives in relation to the management or general operation of those undertakings.

10 Article 3 of Law 3021/2002, relating to '[i]ncompatibilities', provides:

'1. The status of owner, partner, main shareholder, member of an administrative organ or management executive of a media undertaking shall be incompatible with the status of owner, partner, main shareholder, member of an administrative organ or management executive of an undertaking which enters into public contracts the award of which is prohibited under Article 2, and with the status of partner or main shareholder owning the partners or the main shareholders of that undertaking.

2. The incompatibility provided for in this article shall also apply where the owner, main shareholder, partner, member of an administrative organ or management executive of an undertaking which enters into public contracts is a spouse or relative, in a direct line to an unlimited degree and collaterally up to and including the fourth degree, who is unable to show that he is financially independent of the owner, partner, main shareholder, member of an administrative organ or management executive of a media undertaking; the same shall also apply in any other case in which the abovementioned incompatibilities relate to an intermediary.

11 Article 4 of Law 3021/2002 provides, in essence, that, before issuing acceptance of a tender for or awarding a public contract and, in any event, before the public contract is signed, the contracting authority must apply to the ESR for a certificate attesting that the conditions of incompatibility laid down in Article 3 of that law are not fulfilled, failing which the public contract is void.

The dispute in the main proceedings and the questions referred for a preliminary ruling

12 By Decision No 844 of 13 December 2001, the board of directors of Erga OSE AE ('Erga OSE'), a company governed by Greek law, announced an invitation to tender by open procedure for the construction of embankments and technical infrastructure works for the new high-speed, two-track railway line between Corinth and Kiato (Greece), with a budget of EUR 51 700 000.

13 Michaniki and KI Sarantopoulos AE ('Sarantopoulos'), which is also a company governed by Greek law, were among the participants in that procedure.

14 By Decision No 959 of 22 May 2002, the board of directors of Erga OSE awarded the contract relating to those embankment and technical infrastructure works to Sarantopoulos. The latter was subsequently taken over by Pantechniki.

15 Before entering into the contract, Erga OSE, which at the time fell within the 'public sector in the broad sense' within the meaning of Article 1(2) of Law 3021/2002, disclosed to the ESR by letter of 9 October 2002 the information on the identity of the main shareholders, the members of the board of directors and the members of the executive board of Pantechniki, in order to obtain a certificate stating that those persons were not concerned by the incompatibilities laid down in Article 3 of that law.

16 On the basis of Article 4 of Law 3021/2002, the ESR drew up certificate No 8117 of 30 October 2002 attesting that there was no incompatibility in respect of the persons identified in Erga OSE's letter of 9 October 2002 ('the certificate').

17 According to the information in the order for reference, the ESR was of the view that Mr K. Sarantopoulos, a main shareholder and vice-chairman of the board of directors of Pantechniki, was not, despite his status as parent of Mr G. Sarantopoulos, a member of the board of directors of two Greek companies active in the media field, affected by the system of incompatibility established by Articles 2 and 3 of Law 3021/2002, finding that Mr K. Sarantopoulos was financially independent of Mr G. Sarantopoulos.

18 Michaniki applied to the Simvoulio tis Epikratias (Council of State) to have the certificate annulled on the basis of an infringement of Article 14(9) of the Constitution. It submits in particular that Articles 2(2) and 3(2) of Law 3021/2002, on the basis of which the certificate was issued, have the effect of reducing the scope of Article 14(9) of the Constitution and that they are not therefore consistent with that constitutional provision.

19 Pantechniki, whose successor in law is Elliniki Technodomiki Techniki Ependitiki Viomichaniki AE, and the Sindesmos Epikhiriseon Periodikou Tipou (Association of Magazine Undertakings) were granted leave to intervene in the main proceedings in support of the ESR.

20 The referring court takes the view that in so far as Articles 2(2) and 3(2) of Law 3021/2002 allow a public works contractor to escape the system of incompatibility by demonstrating his financial independence from a relative who is an owner, major shareholder, partner or director of a media undertaking, they infringe Article 14(9) of the Constitution, pursuant to which that contractor, even if financially independent of that relative, is nevertheless required to prove that he has acted independently, on his own account and in his own interest.

21 However, the referring court takes the view that, although that analysis may at this stage be sufficient to decide the case in the main proceedings, reasons of procedural economy justify that, with a view to the possible annulment of the certificate based on the infringement of Article 14(9) of the Constitution by Articles 2 and 3 of Law 3021/2002, it reviews now the compatibility with Community law of that constitutional provision, which allows a public works undertaking to be excluded from a public contract on the ground that its main shareholder has been unable to rebut the presumption applicable to him, as a relative of the owner, partner, main shareholder or director of a media company, that he acted on behalf of that company and not on his own account.

22 In this respect, the referring court states, first, that a majority of its members takes the view that the list of grounds for exclusion set out in Article 24 of Directive 93/37 is exhaustive and, therefore, does not allow the addition of grounds for exclusion such as those flowing from Article 14(9) of the Constitution. It adds that some of its members take the view, by contrast, that, in view of the partial nature of the harmonisation effected by that directive, Article 24 thereof does not prohibit Member States from providing for additional grounds for exclusion concerned in particular, as in the present case, with objectives of public interest connected with the operation of democracy and ensuring pluralism of the press.

23 Second, if Article 24 of Directive 93/37 is not exhaustive, the referring court takes the view that the Member States' discretion to provide for additional grounds for exclusion is subject, in accordance with Community case-law, to conditions relating, first, to there being an objective which is compatible with the general principles of Community law and, second, to observance of the principle of proportionality. It states in this respect that one of its members considers that Article 14(9) of the Constitution does not infringe that principle in view of the fact that the presumption relating to intermediaries is rebuttable and that there is no alternative solution enabling the objectives pursued to be achieved.

24 Third, if Article 24 of Directive 93/37 is exhaustive, or if Article 14(9) of the Constitution cannot be considered to pursue an aim which is compatible with Community law or to be consistent with the principle of proportionality, the referring court doubts that the prohibition imposed on the Member States by that directive on enacting provisions, such as those at issue in the main proceedings, which, for reasons of public interest, establish a system of incompatibility between the field of the media and that of public contracts is consistent with the principles linked to the protection of the normal operation of democracy in the Member States and to ensuring transparency in public procurement procedures, the principle of free and fair competition and the principle of subsidiarity.

25 It states however that a minority of its members has a contrary view, considering that Directive 93/37 contains sufficient safeguards to ensure the transparency of public procurement procedures and to protect those procedures from unlawful influences or corruption.

26 In these circumstances the Simvoulio tis Epikratias decided to stay the proceedings and to refer the following questions to the Court for a preliminary ruling:

'(1) Is the list of grounds for excluding public works contractors contained in Article 24 of … Directive 93/37 … exhaustive?

(2) If that list is not exhaustive, does a provision which lays down (in order to protect transparency in the economic functioning of the State) that the status of owner, partner, main shareholder or management executive of a media undertaking is incompatible with the status of owner, partner, main shareholder or management executive of an undertaking contracting to perform a works, supply or services contract for the State, or for a legal person in the public sector in the broad sense, serve purposes which are compatible with the general principles of Community law and is that total prohibition on the award of public contracts to such undertakings compatible with the Community principle of proportionality?

(3) If, within the meaning of Article 24 of Directive 93/37 …, the list of grounds for excluding contractors contained therein is an exhaustive list or if the national provision at issue cannot be construed as serving purposes which are compatible with the general principles of Community law or if, finally, the prohibition introduced in it is not compatible with the Community principle of proportionality, does the above directive, in preventing the inclusion, as grounds for excluding contractors from public works procurement procedures, of cases where the contractor, its executives (such as the owner of the undertaking or its main shareholder, partner or management executive), or intermediaries acting for the said executives, work in media undertakings which are able to exercise an undue influence on the public works procurement procedure, because of the influence which they are able to exert in general, infringe the general principles of the protection of competition and transparency and the second paragraph of Article 5 [EC] which enacts the principle of subsidiarity?'

The Court's jurisdiction and the admissibility of the questions referred for a preliminary ruling

27 The Greek Government disputes the relevance of the questions submitted by the referring court.

28 First, it asserts that the dispute in the main proceedings relates to a purely domestic situation, which concerns Greek operators exclusively. It is therefore doubtful that that case falls within the scope of Directive 93/37 and, consequently, is covered by the Court's jurisdiction to interpret Community law.

29 In this respect, it must however be observed that there is nothing in Directive 93/37 to permit the inference that the applicability of its provisions, in particular the common rules on participation laid down, inter alia, in Article 24 thereof, depends on the existence of an actual link with free movement between Member States. As the Advocate General stated at point 16 of his Opinion, that directive does not make the applicability of its provisions to procedures for the award of public works contracts contingent on any condition relating to the nationality or the place of establishment of the tenderers (see, by analogy, Case C–87/94 Commission v Belgium [1996] ECR I-2043, paragraph 33).

30 Consequently, and in the light of the fact that the amount of the contract at issue in the main proceedings exceeds the threshold for the application of Directive 93/37, the Court does have jurisdiction in this case to interpret that directive.

31 Second, the Greek Government submits that the dispute pending before the referring court relates solely to the issue of whether provisions of Law 3021/2002 are compatible with Article 14(9) of the Constitution. The interpretation of Community law sought by that court does not therefore satisfy an objective need for the resolution of the dispute.

32 In this respect, it must be recalled that, according to settled case-law, it is solely for the national court before which the dispute has been brought, and which must assume responsibility for the subsequent judicial decision, to determine in the light of the particular circumstances of the case both the need for a preliminary ruling in order to enable it to deliver judgment and the relevance of the questions which it submits to the Court (Case C–415/93 Bosman [1995] ECR I–4921, paragraph 59; Case C–466/04 Acereda Herrera [2006] ECR I–5341, paragraph 47; and Case C–380/05 Centro Europa 7 [2008] ECR I-349, paragraph 52).

33 Consequently, where the questions submitted concern the interpretation of Community law, the Court is in principle bound to give a ruling (see, inter alia, Case C–326/00 IKA [2003] ECR I-1703, paragraph 27; Case C–145/03 Keller [2005] ECR I–2529, paragraph 33; and Case C–13/05 Chacón Navas [2006] ECR I–6467, paragraph 32).

34 The Court may refuse to rule on a question referred for a preliminary ruling by a national court only where it is quite obvious that the interpretation of Community law that is sought bears no relation to the actual facts of the main action or its purpose, where the problem is hypothetical, or where the Court does not have before it the factual or legal material necessary to give a useful answer to the questions submitted to it (see, inter alia, Case C–379/98 PreussenElektra [2001] ECR I–2099, paragraph 39; Case C-35/99 Arduino [2002] ECR I-1529, paragraph 25; and Chacón Navas, paragraph 33).

35 That is not so here. In this case, an answer from the Court in response to the reference for a preliminary ruling will provide the referring court with the interpretation necessary for it to resolve the question, which affects the final outcome of the main proceedings, of whether the system of incompatibility between the public works contracts sector and the media sector, established by Article 14(9) of the Constitution and implemented by Law 3021/2002, complies with Community law.

36 Consequently, the reference for a preliminary ruling must be held admissible.

The questions referred

The first question

37 By its first question, the referring court is essentially asking whether the grounds laid down in the first paragraph of Article 24 of Directive 93/37 for excluding participation in a public works contract are exhaustive.

38 The Community directives on public contracts aim to coordinate national procedures in that field (Joined Cases C-226/04 and C-228/04 La Cascina and Others [2006] ECR I-1347, paragraph 20). In the case of public works contracts, the second recital in the preamble to Directive 93/37 explicitly emphasises that objective.

39 It is apparent from the second and tenth recitals in the preamble to Directive 93/37 that that coordination seeks the simultaneous attainment of freedom of establishment and freedom to provide services in respect of public works contracts and the development, at the Community level, of effective competition in that field, by promoting the widest possible expression of interest among contractors in the Member States (see, to that effect, Case C-225/98 Commission v France [2000] ECR I-7445, paragraph 34; Case C-399/98 Ordine degli Architetti and Others [2001] ECR I-5409, paragraph 52; Joined Cases C-285/99 and C-286/99 Lombardini and Mantovani [2001] ECR I-9233, paragraph 34; and Case C-470/99 Universale-Bau and Others [2002] ECR I-11617, paragraph 89).

40 In that context, Article 24 of Directive 93/37, which falls in the title of the directive dealing with the 'common' rules on participation, forms part of a detailed set of criteria for the selection of contractors permitted to submit a tender and for the award of the contract (see, by analogy, Case C-94/99 ARGE [2000] ECR I-11037, paragraph 27).

41 In a chapter which deals with the criteria for 'qualitative' selection, Article 24 identifies, in its first paragraph, seven grounds for excluding contractors from participation, relating to the professional qualities of the person concerned, more specifically his professional honesty, his solvency and his economic and financial capacity (see, by analogy, Case 76/81 Transporoute et travaux [1982] ECR 417, paragraph 9, and La Cascina and Others, paragraph 21).

42 It should be pointed out in this respect, as the Council of the European Union has done, that the approach of the Community legislature was to adopt only grounds for exclusion based on the objective finding of facts or conduct specific to the contractor concerned, such as to cast discredit on his professional reputation or call into question his economic or financial ability to complete the works covered by the public contract for which he is tendering.

43 Accordingly, the first paragraph of Article 24 of Directive 93/37 must be read as listing exhaustively the grounds capable of justifying the exclusion of a contractor from participation in a contract for reasons, based on objective factors, that relate to his professional qualities. That provision therefore precludes Member States or contracting authorities from adding to the list contained in that provision other grounds for exclusion based on criteria relating to professional qualities (see, by analogy, La Cascina and Others, paragraph 22).

44 The exhaustive list set out in the first paragraph of Article 24 of Directive 93/37 does not however preclude the option for Member States to maintain or adopt substantive rules designed, in particular, to ensure, in the field of public procurement, observance of the principle of equal treatment and of the principle of transparency entailed by the latter, principles which are binding on contracting authorities in any procedure for the award of a public contract (see, to that effect, ARGE, paragraph 24, and Case C-421/01 Traunfellner [2003] ECR I-11941, paragraph 29).

45 Those principles, which mean, in particular, that tenderers must be in a position of equality both when they formulate their tenders and when those tenders are being assessed by the contracting authority (see, to that effect, Case C–19/00 SIAC Construction [2001] ECR I-7725, paragraph 34, and Case C-448/01 EVN and Wienstrom [2003] ECR I–14527, paragraph 47), constitute the basis of the directives on procedures for the award of public contracts (see, inter alia, Universale-Bau and Others, paragraph 91, and Case C–315/01 GAT [2003] ECR I–6351, paragraph 73), and the duty of contracting authorities to ensure that they are observed lies at the very heart of those directives (see, to that effect, Case C–513/99 Concordia Bus Finland [2002] ECR I–7213, paragraph 81, and Joined Cases C–21/03 and C-34/03 Fabricom [2005] ECR I–1559, paragraph 26).

46 Article 6(6) of Directive 93/37 states moreover that contracting authorities are to ensure that there is no discrimination between the various contractors.

47 It follows that, in addition to the grounds for exclusion based on objective considerations of professional quality, which are listed exhaustively in the first paragraph of Article 24 of Directive 93/37, a Member State is entitled to provide for exclusionary measures designed to ensure observance, in procedures for the award of public contracts, of the principles of equal treatment of all tenderers and of transparency.

48 However, in accordance with the principle of proportionality, which constitutes a general principle of Community law (see, inter alia, Case C-210/03 Swedish Match [2004] ECR I-11893, paragraph 47), such measures must not go beyond what is necessary to achieve that objective (see, to that effect, Fabricom, paragraph 34).

49 In view of the foregoing, the answer to the first question must be that the first paragraph of Article 24 of Directive 93/37 must be interpreted as listing exhaustively the grounds based on objective considerations of professional quality which are capable of justifying the exclusion of a contractor from participation in a public works contract. However, that directive does not preclude a Member State from providing for further exclusionary measures designed to ensure observance of the principles of equal treatment of tenderers and of transparency, provided that such measures do not go beyond what is necessary to achieve that objective.

The second question

50 By its second question, the referring court is essentially asking whether a national provision which establishes an incompatibility between the media sector and the public procurement sector is compatible with the principles of Community law.

51 As a preliminary point, it must be recalled that it is not the task of the Court, in preliminary ruling proceedings, to rule upon the compatibility of national law with Community law or to interpret national law. The Court is, however, competent to give the national court full guidance on the interpretation of Community law in order to enable it to determine the issue of compatibility for the purposes of the case before it (see, inter alia, Case C–292/92 Hünermund and Others [1993] ECR I–6787, paragraph 8; Case C-237/04 Enirisorse [2006] ECR I–2843, paragraph 24; and Centro Europa 7, paragraphs 49 and 50).

52 It is therefore appropriate for the Court, in the present case, to restrict its analysis by providing an interpretation of Community law which will be of use to the referring court, which will have the task of determining the compatibility of the provisions of national law concerned with Community law, for the purposes of deciding the dispute before it.

53 As was noted in paragraph 39 of this judgment, the primary aim of Directive 93/37 is to open up public works contracts to Community competition. The purpose of that directive is to avoid the risk of the public authorities indulging in favouritism (see, to that effect, Ordine degli Architetti and Others, paragraph 75, and Lombardini and Mantovani, paragraph 35).

54 The Community coordination of procedures for the award of public contracts is designed in particular to avoid both the risk of preference being given to national tenderers whenever a contract is awarded and the possibility that a contracting authority may choose to be guided by considerations which are unrelated to the contract in question (see, to that effect, Case C–380/98 University of Cambridge [2000] ECR I-8035, paragraph 17; Case C–237/99 Commission v France [2001] ECR I-939, paragraph 42; and Lombardini and Mantovani, paragraph 36).

55 Against that background, as the Advocate General observed at point 30 of his Opinion, it is appropriate to grant the Member States a certain discretion for the purpose of adopting measures intended to safeguard the principles of equal treatment of tenderers and of transparency, which, as was noted at paragraph 45 of this judgment, constitute the basis of the Community directives on the award of public contracts.

56 Each Member State is best placed to identify, in the light of historical, legal, economic or social considerations specific to it (see, to that effect, La Cascina and Others, paragraph 23), situations propitious to conduct liable to bring about breaches of those principles.

57 Consequently, Community law does not seek to call into question the assessment of a Member State, in the light of the specific context of that Member State, as to the particular risk that such conduct will arise if, amongst the tenderers for a public works contract, there is an undertaking active in the media sector or connected with persons involved in that sector, and as to the need to take measures to reduce that risk.

58 In this case, the Member State concerned took the view that it could not be ruled out that, in the context of their participation in a procedure for the award of a public contract, media undertakings or public works contractors connected with such an undertaking or with persons owning or running it might seek to use in relation to the contracting authority the influence afforded by their position or their connections in the media sector in order to seek to unlawfully influence the decision awarding that contract, by holding out the prospect of a supportive mass information campaign or, on the contrary, a mass information campaign of a critical nature, depending on whether the decision was favourable or unfavourable to the undertaking.

59 A Member State's desire to prevent the risks of interference of the power of the media in procedures for the award of public contracts is consistent with the public interest objective of maintaining the pluralism and the independence of the media (see, in this respect, Case C-368/95 Familiapress [1997] ECR I-3689, paragraph 18, and Case C-250/06 United Pan-Europe Communications Belgiumand Others [2007] ECR I-11135, paragraphs 41 and 42). Moreover, it serves specifically another such objective, namely that of fighting against fraud and corruption (see, in this respect, Case C-275/92 Schindler [1994] ECR I–1039, paragraphs 57 to 60, and Joined Cases C-338/04, C–359/04 and C-360/04 Placanica and Others [2007] ECR I-1891, paragraph 46).

60 It follows that Community law does not preclude the adoption of national measures designed to avoid, in procedures for the award of public works contracts, the risk of occurrence of practices capable of jeopardising transparency and distorting competition, a risk which could arise from the presence, amongst the tenderers, of a contractor active in the media sector or connected with a person involved in that sector, and thus to prevent or punish fraud and corruption.

61 As was made clear in paragraph 48 of this judgment, it is also necessary for such measures to be compatible with the principle of proportionality.

62 A national provision, such as that at issue in the main proceedings, which establishes a system of general incompatibility between the sector of public works and that of the media, has the consequence of excluding from the award of public contracts public works contractors who are also involved in the media sector on account of a connection as owner, main shareholder, partner or management executive, without affording them any possibility of showing, with regard to any evidence advanced, for instance, by a competitor, that, in their case, there is no real risk of the type referred to in paragraph 60 of this judgment (see, by analogy, Fabricom, paragraphs 33 and 35).

63 As the Commission of the European Communities and the Council have asserted, as did Elliniki Technodomiki Techniki Ependitiki Viomichaniki AE at the hearing, such a provision goes beyond what is necessary to achieve the claimed objectives of transparency and equal treatment, by excluding an entire category of public works contractors on the basis of an irrebuttable presumption that the presence amongst the tenderers of a contractor who is also involved in the media sector is necessarily such as to impair competition to the detriment of the other tenderers.

64 The Greek Government drew attention to the possibility stemming from the constitutional provision at issue in the main proceedings of not applying the exclusionary measure to an intermediary – in the form of a spouse, a relative or a financially dependent person or company – of a media undertaking or of a person responsible for such an undertaking if it is demonstrated that the participation of that intermediary in a procedure for the award of a public contract is the result of an autonomous decision which is dictated by the intermediary's own interest alone.

65 However, that possibility is not capable of reconciling the national provision at issue in the main proceedings with the principle of proportionality.

66 Such a possibility does not alter the automatic and absolute nature of the prohibition affecting any public works contractor who is also active in the media sector or connected with natural or legal persons involved in that sector; such a contractor is not concerned by that qualification to the general exclusionary measure provided for in favour of intermediaries.

67 Moreover, a public works contractor who acts as an intermediary of a media undertaking or of a person owning or running such an undertaking will be excluded from the award of a contract without being afforded the possibility of showing, in the event that it is established that he is acting on behalf of that undertaking or that person, that that action is not liable to influence competition between the tenderers.

68 Lastly, the very broad meaning, in the context of the national provision at issue in the main proceedings, of the concepts of main shareholder and intermediaries, as is clear from paragraph 8 of this judgment, serves to reinforce the disproportionate nature of such a provision.

69 In the light of the above, the answer to the second question must be that Community law must be interpreted as precluding a national provision which, whilst pursuing the legitimate objectives of equal treatment of tenderers and of transparency in procedures for the award of public contracts, establishes an irrebuttable presumption that the status of owner, partner, main shareholder or management executive of an undertaking active in the media sector is incompatible with that of owner, partner, main shareholder or management executive of an undertaking which contracts with the State or a legal person in the public sector in the broad sense to perform a works, supply or services contract.

The third question

70 In the light of the answers to the first two questions, there is no need to reply to the third question.

Costs

71 Since these proceedings are, for the parties to the main proceedings, a step in the action pending before the national court, the decision on costs is a matter for that court. Costs incurred in submitting observations to the Court, other than the costs of those parties, are not recoverable.

On those grounds, the Court (Grand Chamber) hereby rules:

1. The first paragraph of Article 24 of Council Directive 93/37/EEC of 14 June 1993 concerning the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts, as amended by European Parliament and Council Directive 97/52/EC of 13 October 1997, must be interpreted as listing exhaustively the grounds based on objective considerations of professional quality which are capable of justifying the exclusion of a contractor from participation in a public works contract. However, that directive does not preclude a Member State from providing for further exclusionary measures designed to ensure observance of the principles of equal treatment of tenderers and of transparency, provided that such measures do not go beyond what is necessary to achieve that objective.

2. Community law must be interpreted as precluding a national provision which, whilst pursuing the legitimate objectives of equal treatment of tenderers and of transparency in procedures for the award of public contracts, establishes an irrebuttable presumption that the status of owner, partner, main shareholder or management executive of an undertaking active in the media sector is incompatible with that of owner, partner, main shareholder or management executive of an undertaking which contracts with the State or a legal person in the public sector in the broad sense to perform a works, supply or services contract.

Operative part of the judgment

(1) The first paragraph of Article 24 of Council Directive 93/37/EEC of 14 June 1993 concerning the coordination of procedures for the award of public works contracts, as amended by European Parliament and Council Directive 97/52/EC of 13 October 1997, must be interpreted as listing exhaustively the grounds based on objective considerations of professional quality which are capable of justifying the exclusion of a contractor from participation in a public works contract. «Marchés publics – Procédure de passation des marchés publics de travaux – Conditions d'exclusion d'un entrepreneur de la participation au marché»

1. Un État membre peut–il ajouter une cause d'exclusion de la participation aux procédures de passation des marchés publics de travaux à la liste figurant à l'article 24 de la directive 93/37/CEE (2)? À quelles conditions et dans quelles limites? Ces questions qui font, en substance, l'objet du présent renvoi préjudiciel soulèvent la problématique de l'existence et, le cas échéant, de l'étendue du pouvoir normatif dont disposent les États membres lorsqu'existe une harmonisation communautaire. Cette problématique n'est pas inédite. Elle a déjà donné lieu à une jurisprudence fournie. Ce qui fait cependant la singularité de la présente affaire, c'est que la mesure normative nationale en cause est une disposition constitutionnelle. Est–ce de nature à influer sur la teneur de la réponse à apporter? Tels sont les points qui sont au cœur du présent litige.

I – Cadre juridique

A – La réglementation communautaire

2. L'article 24 de la directive 93/37 énonce les causes d'exclusion de la participation à un marché de travaux publics. Il est libellé comme suit:

«Peut être exclu de la participation au marché tout entrepreneur:

a) qui est en état de faillite, de liquidation, de cessation d'activités, de règlement judiciaire ou de concordat préventif ou dans toute situation analogue résultant d'une procédure de même nature existant dans les législations et réglementations nationales;

b) qui fait l'objet d'une procédure de déclaration de faillite, de règlement judiciaire, de liquidation, de concordat préventif ou de toute autre procédure de même nature existant dans les législations et réglementations nationales;

c) qui a fait l'objet d'une condamnation prononcée par un jugement ayant autorité de chose jugée pour tout délit affectant la moralité professionnelle de l'entrepreneur;

d) qui, en matière professionnelle, a commis une faute grave constatée par tout moyen dont les pouvoirs adjudicateurs pourront justifier;

e) qui n'est pas en règle avec ses obligations relatives au paiement des cotisations de sécurité sociale selon les dispositions légales du pays où il est établi ou celles du pays du pouvoir adjudicateur;

f) qui n'est pas en règle avec ses obligations relatives au paiement de ses impôts et taxes selon les dispositions légales du pays où il est établi ou celles du pays du pouvoir adjudicateur;

g) qui s'est rendu gravement coupable de fausses déclarations en fournissant les renseignements exigibles en application du présent chapitre.

[…]»

B – Le droit national

3. L'article 14, paragraphe 9 de la Constitution grecque de 1975, alinéas 5 et 6 et 7, tel qu'issu de la révision constitutionnelle du 6 avril 2001 dispose:

«La qualité de propriétaire, d'associé, d'actionnaire majeur ou de cadre dirigeant d'une entreprise de médias d'information est incompatible avec la qualité de propriétaire, d'associé, d'actionnaire majeur ou de cadre dirigeant d'une entreprise qui, vis–à–vis de l'État ou d'une personne morale du secteur public au sens large, est chargée de l'exécution de travaux, de fournitures ou de prestations de services.

L'interdiction édictée par l'alinéa précédent vise aussi toutes les personnes faisant office d'intermédiaires, telles que conjoints, parents, personnes ou sociétés économiquement dépendantes.

Une loi détermine les modalités, les sanctions qui peuvent être prises, allant jusqu'au retrait de l'autorisation d'une station de radio ou de télévision et jusqu'à l'interdiction de conclure une convention ou l'annulation de la convention concernée, ainsi que les modalités de contrôle et les garanties visant à éviter que les dispositions des alinéas précédents ne soient pas tournées».

4. En application du septième alinéa de l'article 14, paragraphe 9 de la Constitution grecque, la loi n° 3021/2002, relative aux restrictions à la conclusion de marchés publics avec des personnes actives dans des entreprises du secteur des médias d'information énonce, en substance, une interdiction de passation d'un marché public de travaux avec:

– une entreprise de médias d'information ou un entrepreneur de médias d'information (propriétaire, associé, actionnaire majeur ou dirigeant d'une entreprise de médias d'information);

– une entreprise dont les associés, actionnaires majeurs, membres des organes de gestion ou cadres dirigeants sont des entreprises de médias d'information ou des associés, des actionnaires majeurs, membres d'organes de gestion ou cadres dirigeants d'entreprises de médias d'information;

– un entrepreneur (propriétaire, associé, actionnaire majeur ou dirigeant d'une entreprise de travaux) qui serait le conjoint ou le parent du propriétaire, d'un associé, de l'actionnaire majeur ou d'un cadre dirigeant d'une entreprise de médias d'information, à moins que cette personne–là ne démontre qu'elle jouit d'une autonomie économique vis–à–vis de cette personne–ci.

5. La loi n° 3021/2002 ajoute, en substance, qu'avant de procéder à l'attribution d'un marché public, le pouvoir adjudicateur concerné doit, sous peine de nullité du contrat ou du marché public, demander au Conseil national de la radiotélévision (Ethniko Symvoulio Radiotileorasis; ci–après, l'«ESR») l'établissement d'un certificat attestant l'absence de toute incompatibilité prévue par ladite loi.

II – Le litige au principal et le renvoi préjudiciel

6. Par décision du 13 décembre 2001, la société Erga, entreprise publique, a lancé un appel d'offres pour la construction des ouvrages de terrassement et des ouvrages techniques d'infrastructure de la nouvelle ligne ferroviaire à deux voies à grande vitesse entre Corinthe et Kiatos, dont le budget s'élève à 51 700 000 euros. Ont pris part à cette procédure de marché, entre autres, la société Michaniki et la société Sarantopoulos.

7. Le 22 mai 2002, l'entité adjudicatrice a attribué le marché à la société Sarantopoulos qui, par la suite, a été absorbée par la société Pantechniki. Au préalable, ladite entité adjudicatrice avait demandé et obtenu de l'ESR un certificat d'absence d'incompatibilité dans le chef de la société Pantechniki, exigé par la loi grecque n° 3021/2002. L'ESR a, en effet, estimé que, bien que M. K. Sarantopoulos, actionnaire majeur et vice–président du conseil d'administration de Pantechniki, soit un parent (plus exactement le père) de M. G. Sarantopoulos, membre de plusieurs conseils d'administration de sociétés grecques de médias d'information, il ne tombait pas sous le coup des incompatibilités prévues par la législation grecque, étant donné qu'il est économiquement autonome par rapport à M. G. Sarantopoulos.

8. L'entreprise Michaniki, concurrente malheureuse de l'adjudicataire a demandé au Conseil d'État grec l'annulation du certificat d'incompatibilité émis par l'ESR, au motif que les dispositions de la loi n° 3021/2002 sur la base desquelles ledit certificat a été délivré seraient contraires à l'article 14, paragraphe 9 de la Constitution grecque.

9. D'accord avec la requérante au principal, la juridiction de renvoi estime les dispositions législatives contestées, en ce qu'elles permettent à un entrepreneur de travaux publics d'échapper aux incompatibilités qu'elles édictent en démontrant son autonomie économique par rapport à son parent propriétaire, associé, actionnaire ou dirigeant d'une entreprise de médias d'information, contraires à l'article 14, paragraphe 9, de la Constitution, en vertu duquel ledit entrepreneur, quand bien même il serait économiquement autonome par rapport à ce parent, est néanmoins tenu de prouver qu'il n'a pas fait office d'intermédiaire mais a agi de façon autonome, pour son propre compte et dans son propre intérêt.

10. La juridiction de renvoi s'interroge néanmoins sur la compatibilité avec le droit communautaire de ladite disposition constitutionnelle, qui permet d'écarter d'un marché une entreprise de travaux publics au motif que son actionnaire majeur ne serait pas parvenu à infirmer la présomption, pesant sur lui en tant que parent du propriétaire, d'un associé, de l'actionnaire majeur ou d'un dirigeant d'une entreprise de médias d'information, selon laquelle il est intervenu comme intermédiaire de cette entreprise et non pour son propre compte. Il semblerait, en effet, que l'énumération des causes d'exclusion figurant à l'article 24 de la directive 93/37 soit limitative et exclue, par conséquent, l'ajout de motifs d'exclusion tel que celui énoncé par l'article 14, paragraphe 9 de la Constitution grecque. À supposer même que la directive 93/37 n'ait réalisé sur ce point qu'une harmonisation partielle, la légalité au regard du droit communautaire de cas supplémentaires d'exclusion prévus par un État membre serait subordonnée à la poursuite d'un objectif d'intérêt général compatible avec le droit communautaire et au respect du principe de proportionnalité. Enfin, dans le cas où la Cour devrait considérer la liste des causes d'exclusion figurant à l'article 24 de ladite directive comme exhaustive, le juge a quo se demande si la prohibition, qu'il faudrait en déduire, de l'instauration d'un régime d'incompatibilité entre le domaine d'activité des médias d'information et celui des marchés publics ne serait pas attentatoire aux principes liés à la protection du fonctionnement normal du système démocratique, au respect de la transparence dans la passation des marchés publics, au principe d'une concurrence libre et loyale ainsi qu'à celui de subsidiarité.

11. Le juge national du principal a, en conséquence, posé trois questions préjudicielles à la Cour. La première porte sur le caractère limitatif de la liste des causes d'exclusion contenue dans l'article 24 de la directive 93/37. La deuxième a trait à la compatibilité, d'une part avec les principes généraux du droit communautaire du but poursuivi par l'instauration d'une incompatibilité entre la qualité de propriétaire, d'associé, d'actionnaire majeur ou de cadre dirigeant d'une entreprise de médias et celle de propriétaire, d'associé, d'actionnaire majeur ou de cadre dirigeant d'une entreprise qui se voit attribuer un marché public de travaux, de fournitures ou de services, d'autre part avec le principe communautaire de proportionnalité de l'interdiction complète de passation de marchés publics qui en résulte pour les entrepreneurs concernés. La troisième question est relative à la validité de la directive 93/37 au regard des principes généraux de protection de la concurrence, de transparence et du principe de subsidiarité, au cas où ladite directive devrait être entendue comme interdisant de prévoir comme cause d'exclusion d'une entreprise de la procédure de passation d'un marché public de travaux le cas dans lequel celle-ci, sa direction (soit le propriétaire de cette entreprise, son actionnaire majeur, son associé ou son cadre dirigeant) ou des personnes faisant office d'intermédiaires des dirigeants précités exercent des activités d'entreprises de médias d'information susceptibles de produire une influence illicite sur la procédure de passation de marchés publics de travaux, en jouant de l'influence plus générale dont elles bénéficient.

12. Avant de tenter d'apporter une réponse à ces questions préjudicielles, il convient de se prononcer sur les objections qui ont été soulevées à l'encontre de leur recevabilité.

III – La recevabilité des questions préjudicielles

13. Le gouvernement grec a contesté la compétence de la Cour pour se prononcer sur le présent renvoi, au motif que le litige au principal ne met aux prises que deux entreprises grecques à propos de l'attribution d'un marché par un pouvoir adjudicateur grec. L'affaire en cause au principal ne concernant qu'une situation purement interne à l'État grec, le droit communautaire ne lui serait pas applicable et, partant, les questions préjudicielles tendant à obtenir l'interprétation de ses dispositions ne seraient pas pertinentes. Le gouvernement grec a également mis en doute la pertinence des questions posées, au motif qu'elles n'auraient pas trait à une interprétation du droit communautaire qui réponde à un besoin objectif pour la solution du litige au principal, celui-ci ne portant que sur la compatibilité de la loi grecque avec la Constitution.

14. Pour écarter ces deux objections à la recevabilité du présent renvoi, il pourrait d'emblée être rétorqué au gouvernement grec qu'en vertu d'une jurisprudence constante, «dans le cadre de la coopération entre la Cour et les juridictions nationales instituée par l'article 177 du traité, il appartient au seul juge national, qui est saisi du litige et qui doit assumer la responsabilité de la décision juridictionnelle à intervenir, d'apprécier, au regard des particularités de l'affaire, tant la nécessité d'une décision préjudicielle pour être en mesure de rendre son jugement que la pertinence des questions qu'il pose à la Cour» et qu'«en conséquence, dès lors que les questions posées portent sur l'interprétation du droit communautaire, la Cour est, en principe, tenue de statuer» (3). Cependant, il ressort également de la jurisprudence que, dans des hypothèses exceptionnelles, il appartient à la Cour d'examiner les conditions dans lesquelles elle est saisie par le juge national en vue de vérifier sa propre compétence et qu'elle peut juger une question préjudicielle irrecevable, notamment lorsqu'il apparaît de manière manifeste que l'interprétation du droit communautaire sollicitée n'a aucun rapport avec la réalité ou l'objet du litige au principal ou qu'elle ne répond pas à un besoin objectif pour la décision que le juge national doit prendre dans la procédure pendante devant lui ou encore que le problème est de nature hypothétique (4).

15. S'agissant de la première objection tirée de l'absence de dimension communautaire du litige au principal, il est vrai que la Cour n'est pas compétente pour statuer sur des demandes préjudicielles portant sur des dispositions communautaires dans des situations dans lesquelles les faits au principal se situent en dehors du champ d'application du droit communautaire (5). Or, la Cour a, à plusieurs reprises, rappelé l'inapplicabilité du droit communautaire (6), et en particulier des dispositions du traité relatives à la libre prestation de services et de la réglementation adoptée pour leur exécution (7), aux situations dont tous les éléments se cantonnent à l'intérieur d'un seul État membre et qui, de ce fait, ne présentent aucun facteur de rattachement à l'une quelconque des situations envisagées par le droit communautaire. Dans de telles hypothèses, l'interprétation sollicitée du droit communautaire ne présente aucun rapport avec la réalité ou l'objet du litige au principal et la réponse apportée ne saurait être utile au juge national, à moins que le droit national n'impose de faire bénéficier un de ses ressortissants des mêmes droits que ceux qu'un ressortissant d'un autre État membre tirerait du droit communautaire dans la même situation (8) ou ne renvoie au contenu d'une disposition communautaire pour déterminer les règles applicables à une situation purement interne (9).

16. Cependant, la Cour a toujours répondu à des demandes préjudicielles ayant pour origine des affaires relatives à des marchés publics ou, plus largement, des contrats publics, quand bien même les faits de la cause auraient incliné à conclure à l'existence d'une situation purement interne. C'est vrai, hormis un seul cas (10), lorsque l'interprétation sollicitée portait sur les dispositions de droit primaire, notamment celles relatives à la liberté de prestation de services (11). C'est vrai sans exception lorsqu'elle était relative aux dispositions des directives marchés publics (12). De manière générale, la raison tient aux objectifs mêmes du droit communautaire des contrats publics, qui est de garantir l'accès le plus large possible, sans discrimination en raison de la nationalité, auxdits contrats et de promouvoir une concurrence effective et égale en la matière. Il importe donc peu que toutes les parties à une procédure d'attribution d'un marché donné proviennent du même État membre que le pouvoir adjudicateur, dans la mesure où des entreprises établies dans d'autres Etats membres auraient également pu être intéressées (13). D'ailleurs, dans cette optique, les directives marchés publics soumettent à leurs dispositions tous les marchés qui dépassent le montant qu'elles fixent, sans condition tenant à la nationalité ou au lieu d'établissement des soumissionnaires (14). Comme pour les autres directives fondées sur l'article 95 CE (anciennement article 100 A CE), leur applicabilité ne saurait dépendre de la question de savoir si les situations concrètes en cause dans les affaires au principal comportent un lien suffisant avec l'exercice des libertés fondamentales de circulation (15). Aussi la première objection du gouvernement grec à la recevabilité du présent renvoi préjudiciel tenant à l'existence d'une situation purement interne ne peut–elle qu'être rejetée.

17. S'agissant du second motif de contestation de la pertinence des questions posées, tiré de ce que l'interprétation sollicitée du droit communautaire ne répondrait pas à un besoin objectif pour la solution du litige au principal, celui–ci ne portant que sur la compatibilité de la loi grecque avec la Constitution, il ne saurait davantage prospérer. Certes, il faut convenir qu'en l'espèce, la mise en évidence de l'incompatibilité des dispositions de la loi n° 3021/2002 avec l'article 14, paragraphe 9 de la Constitution priverait de base légale le certificat d'incompatibilité émis par l'ESR et suffirait donc pour accueillir le recours introduit par la requérante au principal.

18. Néanmoins, comme le juge a quo l'a souligné, un souci d'économie de procédure plaide pour la pertinence, dès ce stade, de la question de la compatibilité de la disposition constitutionnelle en cause avec le droit communautaire. En effet, si la Cour devait estimer ne pas pouvoir répondre à la demande préjudicielle en interprétation et laisser d'abord la juridiction de renvoi trancher la question de la conformité des dispositions de la loi n° 3021/2002 avec l'article 14, paragraphe 9, de la Constitution, il y aurait tout lieu de penser que, si ladite juridiction venait à annuler le certificat en raison d'une violation de la Constitution par cette loi, la question de la compatibilité de la disposition constitutionnelle contestée avec le droit communautaire risquerait fort de revenir tôt ou tard devant la Cour, dans la mesure où l'ESR serait, selon toute probabilité, amené à refuser la délivrance du certificat nécessaire à l'attribution du marché public en cause au motif que l'entrepreneur de travaux publics concerné (M. K. Sarantopoulos) ne sera pas parvenu à établir qu'il ne tombe pas sous le coup de l'incompatibilité énoncée par la Constitution. L'issue finale du litige au principal dépend donc de la conformité au droit communautaire du régime spécifique d'incompatibilité entre le secteur des travaux publics et celui des médias d'information. Il est donc dans l'intérêt d'une économie de procédure de donner dès à présent au juge de renvoi les éléments d'interprétation du droit communautaire lui permettant d'en décider car, s'il devait conclure à la non–conformité au droit communautaire dudit régime, tel qu'édicté par la Constitution et mis en œuvre par la loi n° 3021/2002, il n'aurait d'autre choix, comme le juge a quo en convient, de le laisser inappliqué et, partant, de rejeter la requête de Michaniki et de confirmer l'attribution du marché à Pantechniki.

IV – Les réponses aux questions préjudicielles

A – Le caractère exhaustif des causes d'exclusion prévues par l'article 24 de la directive 93/37

19. Par la première question préjudicielle, il est en substance demandé à la Cour si les États membres sont autorisés à prévoir d'autres causes d'exclusion de la participation à un appel d'offres en vue de la conclusion d'un marché public de travaux que celles figurant à l'article 24 de la directive 93/37.

20. Pour contester le caractère limitatif de l'énumération par l'article 24 de la directive 93/37 des motifs d'exclusion, le gouvernement grec objecte que ladite directive s'est bornée à une coordination des procédures nationales d'attribution des marchés publics de travaux et n'a pas procédé à une harmonisation totale dans le domaine des marchés publics de travaux. Il dit certes vrai. La Cour a reconnu qu'il «ressort de l'intitulé et du deuxième considérant de la directive que celle–ci a simplement pour objet la coordination des procédures nationales de passation des marchés publics de travaux, si bien qu'elle ne prévoit pas un régime complet de règles communautaires en la matière» (16). De même, s'agissant de la directive 71/305, elle avait dit pour droit que celle–ci n'établissait pas une réglementation communautaire uniforme et exhaustive (17). Dès lors, «dans le cadre des règles communes qu'elle contient, les États membres restent libres de maintenir ou d'édicter des règles matérielles et procédurales en matière de marchés publics, à condition de respecter toutes les dispositions pertinentes du droit communautaire, et notamment les interdictions qui découlent des principes consacrés par le traité en matière de droit d'établissement et des libres prestations de services» (18). Les exemples de mesures ou de réglementations nationales ajoutant à la réglementation communautaire des marchés publics qui ont été, ainsi, jugées licites sont légion. Qu'il suffise de mentionner la reconnaissance des critères écologique (19) ou de lutte contre le chômage (20) comme critères d'attribution des marchés publics ou l'admission d'une réglementation nationale interdisant la modification, après la soumission d'une offre, de la composition d'un groupement d'entrepreneurs qui participe à une procédure de passation d'un marché public de travaux (21).

21. Toutefois, le fait que la directive 93/37 n'ait pas procédé à une harmonisation intégrale des règles de passation des marchés publics de travaux ne signifie pas que certaines de ses dispositions ne puissent être analysées comme ayant réglé exhaustivement certains points. Et, de fait, plusieurs éléments militent fortement en faveur du caractère limitatif des cas d'exclusion d'un entrepreneur de la procédure d'attribution d'un marché public de travaux figurant à l'article 24 de ladite directive. Plaident déjà en ce sens les objectifs mêmes de ce texte. La directive 93/37 visant à développer la concurrence dans le domaine des marchés publics de travaux en favorisant la participation la plus large possible aux procédures de passation (22), l'ajout de nouvelles causes d'exclusion des soumissionnaires réduit nécessairement l'accès des candidats auxdites procédures de passation et, partant, restreint la concurrence. Bien plus, telle me semble également être l'orientation jurisprudentielle. Allait déjà en ce sens l'interdiction qui avait été faite aux États membres d'exiger d'un soumissionnaire qu'il fît la preuve de ses capacités techniques, économique et financière et de son honorabilité par d'autres moyens que ceux énumérés par les articles 23 à 26 de l'ancienne directive marché publics de travaux n° 71/305; autrement dit, en particulier, le contrôle de l'existence d'une des incompatibilités mentionnées dans l'article 24 de ladite directive touchant un candidat à un marché public de travaux ne pouvait se faire que sur la base des moyens de preuve exhaustivement prévus (23). Plus topique encore, il a déjà été jugé que les articles 17 à 25 de l'ancienne directive marchés publics de fournitures n° 77/62 énuméraient «exhaustivement et impérativement» les critères de sélection qualitative, –parmi lesquels, à son article 20, ceux liés à l'honorabilité professionnelle du candidat–, et d'adjudication du marché et excluaient, par conséquent, la possibilité de réserver la participation à un marché de fournitures aux seules entreprises dont le capital social était à participation publique majoritaire (24). Enfin et surtout, interprétant l'article 29 de la directive marchés publics de fournitures n° 92/50 qui, en substance, est identique à l'article 24 de la directive 93/37, la Cour a dit pour droit que cette disposition, qui prévoit sept causes d'exclusion de la participation des candidats à un marché, qui se rapportent à l'honnêteté professionnelle, à la solvabilité ou à la fiabilité de ces derniers, «fixe elle–même les seules limites de la faculté des États membres, en ce sens que ceux–ci ne peuvent pas prévoir d'autres causes d'exclusion que celles y indiquées» (25).

22. À cette jurisprudence, le gouvernement grec oppose néanmoins la solution rendue par la Cour dans l'affaire Fabricom (26). Le point en litige portait sur la conformité avec les directives marchés publics d'une réglementation nationale qui interdisait à toute personne qui avait été chargée de la recherche, de l'expérimentation, de l'étude ou du développement de travaux, fournitures ou services relatifs à un marché public de présenter une offre dans le cadre de la procédure d'attribution de ce marché. Loin d'examiner l'incompatibilité instaurée entre la participation à la phase préparatoire d'un marché public et la soumission à ce même marché à la lumière des dispositions desdites directives énumérant les cas d'exclusion de la participation aux procédures d'appels d'offres, en particulier au regard de l'article 24 de la directive 93/37, la Cour s'est bornée à vérifier si la mesure litigieuse tendait à assurer l'égalité de traitement entre tous les soumissionnaires et si la différence de traitement instituée n'était pas disproportionnée au regard de cet objectif.

23. Pareille solution cadre a priori mal avec celles affirmant le caractère limitatif des cas d'exclusion énoncés dans les dispositions pertinentes des directives portant coordination des procédures de passation des marchés publics. La contradiction n'est cependant qu'apparente. Il est vrai que les directives communautaires entendent régler en principe exhaustivement les causes d'exclusion de la participation aux procédures d'attribution des marchés publics. Tel est notamment l'objet de l'article 24 de la directive 93/37. Toutefois, le respect d'autres règles et principes inscrits dans, –ou découlant de–, ladite directive peuvent également exiger l'instauration de cas d'exclusion. Il en est ainsi en particulier du principe d'égalité de traitement entre les candidats à un marché public. En effet, ledit principe, – dont l'obligation de transparence constitue une implication nécessaire (27)–, qui découle des libertés fondamentales d'établissement et de prestation de services (28) et sous–tend l'ensemble de la réglementation communautaire des marchés publics (29) peut justifier l'exclusion de concurrents de la participation à un marché dans la mesure où la concurrence entre prestataires, que tendent à promouvoir les directives en matière de marchés publics et qui suppose la participation la plus large possible aux procédures de passation, n'est effective que si elle intervient dans le respect du principe d'égalité de traitement entre candidats (30). Ainsi et à titre illustratif, il me semble difficile d'envisager que le droit communautaire s'oppose au principe même de l'instauration par un État membre d'une incompatibilité entre l'exercice de certaines fonctions publiques et la candidature à un marché public. Il faut donc admettre que les États membres puissent prévoir des cas d'exclusion autres que ceux figurant dans la liste de l'article 24 de la directive 93/37, si cela s'avère nécessaire pour prévenir d'éventuels conflits d'intérêt et, donc, pour garantir la transparence et l'égalité de traitement. C'est, d'ailleurs, le sens de l'invitation de l'article 6, paragraphe 6 de la directive 93/37, selon lequel «les pouvoirs adjudicateurs veillent à ce qu'il n'y ait pas de discrimination entre les différents entrepreneurs». Et tel est l'enseignement de l'affaire Fabricom (31). L'incompatibilité entre la participation à la phase préparatoire d'un marché public et la candidature à ce marché prévue par la législation nationale tendait à éviter qu'une personne participant à certains travaux préparatoires puisse influencer les conditions d'un marché dans un sens qui serait ensuite favorable à la présentation de son offre ou puisse être favorisée pour formuler son offre en raison des informations qu'elle aurait, en effectuant lesdits travaux préparatoires, pu obtenir au sujet du marché public en cause (32).

24. Il convient donc de répondre à la première question préjudicielle que la liste des causes d'exclusion d'entrepreneurs de travaux figurant à l'article 24 de la directive 93/37 n'est pas exhaustive.

B – Les conditions posées aux cas additionnels d'exclusion

25. La directive 93/37 n'interdit donc pas aux États membres d'ajouter des causes d'exclusion de la participation à un marché public de travaux par rapport à la liste figurant à son article 24, dès lors qu'ils visent à garantir la transparence et l'égalité de traitement.

26. Telle est précisément la justification avancée par le gouvernement grec au soutien de l'incompatibilité entre le secteur des médias et le secteur des travaux publics énoncée par l'article 14, paragraphe 9 de la Constitution grecque. Il soutient que ladite incompatibilité tend à garantir la transparence et l'égalité de traitement dans l'attribution des marchés publics en prévenant toute possibilité pour une entreprise soumissionnaire à un appel d'offres d'user de son pouvoir médiatique pour influencer en sa faveur la décision finale d'adjudication. L'exclusion des entrepreneurs de médias et des entrepreneurs liés à une entreprise de médias prend donc acte du fait qu'ils ont, compte tenu de la pression qu'ils sont à même d'exercer sur l'entité adjudicatrice grâce à leur pouvoir médiatique, plus de chances d'obtenir le marché que leurs concurrents et, partant, ne se trouvent donc pas nécessairement, s'agissant de la procédure d'attribution de ce marché et au regard de l'objectif d'ouverture à la concurrence visé par le droit communautaire en la matière, dans la même situation que ces derniers.

27. Il est vrai que le gouvernement grec fait également valoir que l'incompatibilité prévue par la constitution nationale a aussi pour but la défense du pluralisme de la presse et des médias. Il s'agirait d'éviter qu'un pouvoir adjudicateur ne puisse faire pression sur une entreprise de médias candidate à l'attribution d'un marché de travaux et ainsi s'assurer d'une certaine bienveillance dans la présentation qu'elle donne de sa politique; ou encore, comme cela a été soutenu par le gouvernement grec, il s'agirait de prévenir le fait pour une entreprise de médias, candidate à l'attribution d'un marché de travaux de chercher, par l'engagement ou la pratique d'une présentation bienveillante de la politique des pouvoirs publics, au sacrifice de l'indépendance et du pluralisme de la presse, à influer sur la décision finale d'adjudication du marché. Mais en vérité, dans le contexte particulier de l'attribution des contrats publics, cet objectif proclamé de défense du pluralisme de la presse ne présente qu'un caractère subsidiaire qui n'a pas de réelle autonomie par rapport au but de garantie de la transparence et de l'égalité de traitement. Ce n'est en effet que si et dans la mesure où l'entité adjudicatrice ne respecterait pas, dans le processus de sélection des candidats, des critères objectifs, transparents et non discriminatoires qu'elle pourrait se servir de son pouvoir d'attribution du marché, soit pour exercer une influence sur la politique éditoriale d'une entreprise de médias candidate à l'attribution d'un marché de travaux, soit pour "récompenser" la politique éditoriale de cette entreprise.

28. En d'autres termes, les motifs d'exclusion prévus par le droit grec tendent à prévenir des conflits d'intérêt entre les entités adjudicatrices et les entreprises de médias qui pourraient encourager des pratiques de corruption active et passive de nature à fausser le processus de sélection des adjudicataires de marchés de travaux. Il apparaît donc que des dispositions telles que celles en cause dans l'affaire au principal participent du respect de l'égalité de traitement nécessaire à l'objectif de développement d'une concurrence effective poursuivi par la réglementation communautaire des marchés publics. Il apparaît aussi qu'elles répondent à un besoin en la matière, qui n'était pas couvert par les dispositions de la directive 93/37. En atteste le fait que la directive 2004/18, qui s'est substituée à la directive 93/37, a ajouté de nouveaux cas d'exclusion de la participation aux procédures d'attribution des marchés publics, notamment celui de corruption (33), qui couvrent partiellement l'hypothèse visée par la Constitution grecque.

29. La reconnaissance de cette finalité à l'incompatibilité générale entre le secteur des médias et celui des travaux publics prévue par la Constitution grecque a été contestée par l'une des parties intervenantes au principal dans le cadre de ses observations présentées lors de l'audience. De l'avis de cette dernière, on ne saurait a priori considérer par principe que l'exercice d'une activité économique dans son ensemble puisse menacer la transparence et l'égalité de traitement dans le cadre des procédures de passation des marchés publics. Si l'on devait admettre la légitimité de l'analyse défendue par les autorités grecques, selon laquelle l'exercice de l'activité de médias est susceptible d'influencer la décision d'attribution du marché, un reproche similaire pourrait être adressé à nombre d'autres activités économiques. Notamment une banque, qui serait par ailleurs actionnaire d'une entreprise de travaux publics serait tout autant à même, par le biais de son activité de souscription d'emprunts publics, de faire pression sur l'entité adjudicatrice et d'influer sur sa décision d'attribution du marché.

30. Toutefois, il convient de reconnaître à chaque État membre, sous le contrôle de la Cour, une certaine marge d'appréciation dans la définition des cas d'exclusion appropriés aux fins de garantir la transparence et l'égalité de traitement dans les procédures d'attribution des contrats publics. L'État membre concerné est le mieux à même de mesurer quels sont, dans le contexte national, les conflits d'intérêts les plus susceptibles de surgir et de menacer les principes de transparence et d'égalité de traitement dans le respect desquels les contrats publics doivent être passés. L'appréciation effectuée par les pouvoirs publics grecs les a conduit à craindre, dans le contexte propre à la Grèce, l'existence de conflits d'intérêt qui pourraient conduire au développement de pratiques de corruption active et passive de la part des entités adjudicatrices, s'ils n'excluaient pas les entreprises de travaux liées à des entreprises de médias des procédures de marchés. D'où l'incompatibilité prévue à l'article 14, paragraphe 9 de la Constitution grecque. Dans cette appréciation spécifique de ce que leur paraît devoir requérir le respect, en Grèce, des principes communautaires de transparence et d'égalité de traitement dans l'attribution des contrats publics, les pouvoirs publics grecs font donc, en quelque sorte, valoir une appréciation constitutionnelle nationale. Il ressort alors des motifs de la décision de renvoi qu'un débat est né sur le point de savoir si cette circonstance était de nature à influer sur le jugement de compatibilité avec le droit communautaire de ladite cause d'exclusion.

31. Il est vrai que le respect de l'identité constitutionnelle des États membres constitue pour l'Union européenne un devoir. Ce devoir s'impose à elle depuis l'origine. Il participe, en effet, de l'essence même du projet européen initié au début des années 1950, qui consiste à avancer sur la voie de l'intégration tout en préservant l'existence politique des États. Preuve en est qu'il fut énoncé pour la première fois explicitement à l'occasion d'une révision des traités dont les avancées sur la voie de l'intégration qu'elle prévoyait ont rendu nécessaire aux yeux des constituants son rappel. C'est ainsi que l'article F, paragraphe 1 du traité de Maastricht, devenu l'article 6, paragraphe 3 du traité sur l'Union dispose: «l'Union respecte l'identité nationale de ses États membres». L'identité nationale visée comprend à l'évidence l'identité constitutionnelle de l'État membre. Le confirmerait, s'il en était besoin, l'explicitation des éléments de l'identité nationale tentée par l'article I–5 de la Constitution pour l'Europe et par l'article 4, paragraphe 2 du traité sur l'Union tel qu'issu du traité de Lisbonne. Il appert, en effet, du libellé identique de ces deux textes que l'Union respecte l' «identité nationale (des États membres), inhérente à leurs structures fondamentales politiques et constitutionnelles».

32. De cette obligation imposée à l'Union européenne par les textes fondateurs de respecter l'identité nationale des États membres, y compris dans sa dimension constitutionnelle, la jurisprudence a déjà tiré certaines conséquences. À la lire attentivement, il apparaît qu'un État membre peut, dans certains cas et sous le contrôle bien évidemment de la Cour, revendiquer la préservation de son identité nationale pour justifier une dérogation à l'application des libertés fondamentales de circulation. Il peut d'abord l'invoquer explicitement comme motif légitime et autonome de dérogation. La Cour a, en effet, expressément reconnu que la sauvegarde de l'identité nationale «constitue un but légitime respecté par l'ordre juridique communautaire» (34), même si elle a jugé la restriction en l'espèce disproportionnée, l'intérêt invoqué pouvant être utilement préservé par d'autres moyens. La sauvegarde de l'identité constitutionnelle nationale peut aussi permettre à un État membre de développer, dans certaines limites, sa propre acception d'un intérêt légitime de nature à justifier une entrave à une liberté fondamentale de circulation. Ainsi, à un État membre qui se prévalait de la protection due au principe de la dignité de la personne humaine garantie par sa constitution nationale pour justifier une restriction à la liberté de prestation de services, la Cour a, certes, répondu que la dignité de la personne humaine est protégée dans l'ordre juridique communautaire en tant que principe général du droit. Elle a cependant reconnu à l'État membre une grande liberté pour en déterminer le contenu et la portée selon la conception qu'il se faisait de la protection due à ce droit fondamental sur son territoire, compte tenu des spécificités nationales (35). En conséquence, le fait que la conception du droit fondamental retenue par un État membre ne soit pas partagée par les autres États membres n'interdit pas audit État membre de s'en prévaloir pour justifier une restriction à la libre prestation de services.

33. Si le respect dû à l'identité constitutionnelle des États membres peut ainsi constituer un intérêt légitime de nature à justifier, en principe, une restriction aux obligations imposées par le droit communautaire, a fortiori peut-il être invoqué par un État membre pour justifier son appréciation des mesures constitutionnelles qui doivent compléter la législation communautaire pour garantir le respect, sur son territoire, des principes et règles qu'elle énonce ou qui la sous-tendent. Faut-il néanmoins le préciser, ce respect dû à l'identité constitutionnelle des États membres ne saurait être compris comme une déférence absolue à l'égard de toutes les règles constitutionnelles nationales. S'il en était ainsi, les constitutions nationales pourraient devenir un instrument permettant aux États membres de s'affranchir du droit communautaire dans des domaines déterminés (36). Bien plus, il pourrait en résulter des discriminations entre États membres en fonction du contenu donné par chacun d'eux à leurs constitutions nationales. De même que le droit communautaire prend en compte l'identité constitutionnelle des États membres, de même le droit constitutionnel national doit s'adapter aux exigences de l'ordre juridique communautaire. En l'espèce, les règles constitutionnelles nationales peuvent être prises en considération, dans la mesure où elles relèvent de la marge d'appréciation dont disposent les États membres pour garantir le respect du principe d'égalité de traitement imposé par la directive. L'exercice de ladite marge d'appréciation doit néanmoins rester dans les limites fixées par ce principe et par la directive elle-même. La règle constitutionnelle nationale est donc pertinente, en l'espèce, pour identifier le contexte national dans lequel le principe d'égalité de traitement entre candidats à un marché public doit s'appliquer, pour déterminer, dans ce contexte, quels sont les risques de conflit d'intérêts et, enfin, pour évaluer l'importance à accorder, dans l'ordre juridique national, à la prévention de ces conflits d'intérêts et, donc, le niveau normatif auquel elle doit intervenir.

34. Le droit communautaire ne s'oppose donc en principe pas à ce qu'un État membre exclue les entrepreneurs de travaux liés aux entrepreneurs de médias des procédures de passation des marchés de travaux aux fins de garantie des principes communautaires de transparence et d'égalité de traitement entre soumissionnaires. Encore faut-il néanmoins que l'incompatibilité ainsi instaurée entre le secteur des travaux publics et celui des médias soit conforme au principe de proportionnalité. Il faut donc qu'elle soit nécessaire et proportionnée à l'objectif de garantie de l'égalité de traitement et, partant, de développement d'une concurrence effective. Si, au contraire, la cause d'exclusion ajoutée par le droit national est définie de telle manière qu'elle englobe un nombre de prestataires potentiels excessif par rapport à ce qui serait nécessaire pour garantir l'égalité de traitement entre soumissionnaires, elle dessert en réalité l'objectif de la directive de développement d'une concurrence effective qu'elle prétend servir. Là encore, une certaine marge d'appréciation doit être concédée à l'État membre pour déterminer l'étendue de l'incompatibilité qui lui semble, dans le contexte national, satisfaire aux exigences du principe de proportionnalité. La nécessité et la proportionnalité du dispositif retenu ne sauraient donc être exclues, au seul motif que ledit dispositif n'aurait pas été adopté par les autres États membres (37).

35. Il reste que cette liberté d'appréciation ne saurait être sans limites. Son exercice est soumis au contrôle du juge. Si c'est en principe au juge national en charge du litige au principal et non à la Cour saisie sur la base de l'article 234 CE d'effectuer pareil contrôle, il apparaît qu'en tout état de cause une incompatibilité d'une étendue telle que celle instaurée par l'article 14, paragraphe 9 de la Constitution grecque n'est pas conforme au principe de proportionnalité. Il en est notamment ainsi, en ce qu'elle englobe tous les entrepreneurs de travaux liés à des entrepreneurs de médias, quelle que soit l'importance de la diffusion desdits médias. Pareille incompatibilité dépasse, en effet, la mesure nécessaire au respect de l'égalité de traitement et, donc, à la sauvegarde d'une concurrence effective, dans la mesure où il semble difficile de soutenir qu'un entrepreneur de médias d'information de diffusion régionale dispose d'un pouvoir médiatique qui lui permettrait de faire pression sur une entité adjudicatrice localisée dans une autre région ou, qu'à l'inverse celle-ci soit encline à faire pression sur un tel entrepreneur. Il en est également notamment ainsi, en ce qu'elle touche tous les entrepreneurs de travaux qui ont un lien de parenté quelconque avec un entrepreneur de médias. Il paraît, en effet, improbable qu'un pouvoir adjudicateur puisse faire pression sur un entrepreneur de médias dont le lien de parenté avec l'entrepreneur de travaux serait éloigné ou qu'à l'inverse un tel entrepreneur de médias fasse pression sur le pouvoir adjudicateur.

36. Il convient donc de répondre à la deuxième question préjudicielle que l'ajout par le droit national d'une cause d'exclusion à la liste figurant à l'article 24 de la directive 93/37 est compatible avec le droit communautaire, dès lors qu'elle tend à garantir la transparence et l'égalité de traitement nécessaires au développement d'une concurrence effective et qu'elle soit conforme au principe de proportionnalité. Une disposition qui prévoit une incompatibilité générale entre la qualité de propriétaire, d'associé, d'actionnaire majeur ou de cadre dirigeant d'une entreprise de médias et celle de propriétaire, d'associé, d'actionnaire majeur ou de cadre dirigeant d'une entreprise qui, vis–à–vis de l'État ou d'une personne morale du secteur public au sens large, se voit confier l'exécution de travaux ou de fournitures ou la prestation de services, méconnaît le principe de proportionnalité.

37. Compte tenu de la réponse apportée à la deuxième question, il n'y a pas lieu de répondre à la troisième question préjudicielle.

V – Conclusion

38. Au vu des considérations qui précèdent, je suggère à la Cour de répondre de la manière suivante aux questions préjudicielles posées par le Symvoulio tis Epikrateias (Conseil d'État grec):

– La liste des causes d'exclusion d'entrepreneurs de travaux figurant à l'article 24 de la directive 93/37/CEE du Conseil, du 14 juin 1993, portant coordination des procédures de passation des marchés publics de travaux n'est pas exhaustive.

– L'ajout par le droit national d'une cause d'exclusion à la liste figurant à l'article 24 de la directive 93/37 est compatible avec le droit communautaire, à la condition qu'elle tende à garantir la transparence et l'égalité de traitement nécessaires au développement d'une concurrence effective et qu'elle soit conforme au principe de proportionnalité. Une disposition qui prévoit une incompatibilité générale entre la qualité de propriétaire, d'associé, d'actionnaire majeur ou de cadre dirigeant d'une entreprise de médias et celle de propriétaire, d'associé, d'actionnaire majeur ou de cadre dirigeant d'une entreprise qui, vis–à–vis de l'État ou d'une personne morale du secteur public au sens large, se voit confier l'exécution de travaux ou de fournitures ou la prestation de services, méconnaît le principe de proportionnalité.
